A. LIFE.

I. CONTRACT.

Nature of.]—The contract of life assurance is a contract to pay a certain sum of money upon the death of a person in consideration of the due payment of certain annual premiums during his life. Dalby v. India and London Life Assurance Co., 15 C. B. 365; 3 C. L. R. 61; 24 L. J., C. P. 2; 18 Jur. 1024; 3 W. R. 116—Ex. Ch. And see India and London Life Assurance Co. v. Dalby, 4 De G. & Sm. 462.

It is not a contract of indemnity. Ib.

Validity.]—A condition that policies effected on persons' own lives, who should die by duelling or by their own hands or by the hands of justice, would become void so far as regards the personal representatives of the person so dying, but would remain in force only to the extent of any bonâ fide interest which might have been acquired by any other person under assignment by deed for consideration or by way of security or indemnity, or by virtue of any legal or equitable lien as a security for money, upon proof of the extent of such interest, does not render such policies void on the ground that it holds out an inducement to the assured to commit suicide. Moore v. Woolsey, 4 El. & Bl. 243; 3 C. L. R. 207; 24 L. J., Q. B. 40; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 468; 3 W. R. 66.

Powers, Appointment, &c., of Directors.]—A person who effects a policy with a life assurance company in the ordinary course of business is not bound to inquire whether the persons signing the policy as directors have been legally appointed directors, or are empowered to use the seal of the company. It is sufficient if the policy appears on the face of it to be consistent with the articles of association of the company, and the acts of parliament under which it is incorporated. County Life Assurance Co., In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 471; L. R. 5 Ch. 288; 22 L. T. 537; 18 W. R. 390.

—— By Friendly Societies.] — A society inrolled under 10 Geo. 4, c. 56, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 40, cannot legally grant assurances on lives, notwithstanding rules authorising them to do so have been certified and allowed. Kelsall v. Tyler, 11 Ex. 513; 25 L. J., Ex. 153.

A person under 10 Geo. 4, c. 56, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 40, effected a policy on his life in 499*l.* 19*s.*, payable on his decease to his widow; and if none, to his executors, administrators, or assigns. All previous acts relating to friendly societies were repealed and consolidated by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 115, s. 2, and assurances, in favour of relations, were limited to 100*l.*, but the rights of parties under former acts were preserved. The assured paid the premiums till his decease, and died indebted, leaving his widow surviving:—Held, that the policy was good, though it exceeded 100*l.*, and that the widow was entitled to the sum assured. Owen, In re, 31 Beav. 285; 31 L. J., Ch. 825; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1117; 6 L. T. 802; 10 W. R. 770.

Indisputable Policies.]—Where an assurance company holds out to the public that its policies shall be indisputable, and a policy is effected upon the faith of that representation, the company is barred in equity from saying that the proposal for the particular policy stipulated that if it contained any untrue statement the policy should be void, and that it did contain an untrue statement. Wood v. Dwarris, 11 Ex. 493; 25 L. J., Ex. 129; 4 W. R. 262.

To a count on a policy of assurance, in which, after reciting that the plaintiffs, being interested in the life of J., had caused to be delivered to the company, with whom the policy was made, a proposal for assurance, whereby it was declared that J. had not had any fit since childhood. Plea, that the declaration in the policy, that J. had not had any fit since childhood, was untrue. There was a replication, on equitable grounds, to the plea, that before the policy was entered into, the company circulated a prospectus, whereby they undertook that their policies should be unquestionable except on the ground of fraud, and that the plaintiffs were induced to enter into the policy on the faith thereof. On the trial, it appeared that such a prospectus was issued, but no express proof was given that the plaintiffs saw it, or were induced by it to make the policy. The jury found for the plaintiffs:—Held, that there was no sufficient evidence to warrant this finding. On this part of the judgment the Exchequer Chamber pronounced no opinion. Wheelton v. Hardisty, 8 El. & Bl. 232; 26 L. J., Q. B. 265; 5 W. R. 784.

Reference to Foreign Law—Effect of.]—A reference to foreign law in an English contract does not incorporate the foreign law, but merely affects the interpretation of the contract. Dever, Ex parte, Suse, In re, 56 L. J., Q. B. 552; 18 Q. B. D. 660—C. A.

Construction of.]—Where there is ambiguity in the terms of a policy of insurance, the maxim "Verba chartarum fortius accipiuntur contra proferentum" applies as a rule of construction. Notman v. Anchor Assurance Co., 4 C. B. (N.S.) 476; 27 L. J., C. P. 275; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 712; 6 W. R. 688.

As to Right of Assignee.]—See Cook v. Black, infra, col. 55.

Construction of Suicide Clause—Assignment.]—See City Bank v. Sovereign Life Assurance Co., infra, col. 48.

Benefit Society—Payment of Death Allowance—Right of Administrator to Recover.]—The deceased, a member of an unregistered friendly society, had, upon making his application for admission to the society, signed a declaration agreeing to be bound by the rules of the society, and authorising the deduction from his wages of the sum specified in the rules for securing to himself, or to his representatives in case of his death, the benefits of the society. The rule relating to the payment of death allowances empowered and authorised the committee to pay the allowance to such person or persons as in their discretion they might think fit; and it further provided that the allowance should be paid to certain specified relatives in such proportions as the committee should determine, unless otherwise bequeathed by will, when it was to be paid to the person to whom it had been bequeathed; that, where there were no surviving relatives and no special bequests, only the funeral expenses should be defrayed by the society, and that where the allowance had been once paid, neither the committee nor the society should be liable to any further claim in respect of it. Upon the death of the member intestate the society paid the amount of the death allowance to the defendant, his sister. The plaintiff, an administrator of the deceased, having brought an action against the defendant, to recover the money so paid to her:—Held, that the rule constituted the contract between the member and the society as to the payment of the money; that the death allowance was not the property of the member during his life, and in the absence of a bequest by will was not assets for the payment of his debts, and that therefore the plaintiff could not recover. Ashby v. Costin, 57 L. J., Q. B. 491; 21 Q. B. D. 401; 59 L. T. 224; 37 W. R. 140; 53 J. P. 69.

Time within which Notice to be given.]—See Gamble v. Accident Assurance Co., Ir. R. 4 C. L. 204, infra, col. 82.

—— Notice of Accident within Seven Days—Omission to give.]—A policy was made subject to a condition that in case of fatal accident notice thereof must be given to the insurers within seven days. It was impossible to give notice within the seven days:—Held, that notice was not a condition precedent to the right to recover. Stoneham v. Ocean, Railway and General Accident Insurance Co., infra.

—— Notice of Death — Medical Report—Instantaneous Death.]—A policy of insurance against accident was made subject to the condition inter alia that in the event of any accident to the assured he, or his representatives, should give notice thereof in writing to the company within ten days after its occurrence, stating the number of the policy, nature and date of the injuries, place where, and manner in which they were received, extent of disablement, and name, address, and occupation of the person injured, and also within fourteen days of the accident, forward to the head office a written report from the assured's medical attendant, who should be a duly qualified and registered medical practitioner, of the facts of the case, and nature and extent of the injuries received and the condition, provided, that unless it were complied with, as to time and otherwise (time being of the essence of the contract) no person should be entitled to claim under the contract:—Held, that the omission to give notice of death within the prescribed time, even when death was instantaneously caused by an accident, was an answer to a claim made upon the policy. Gamble v. Accident Assurance Co. (supra) followed. Patton v. Employers' Liability Assurance Co., 20 L. R., Ir. 93.

Held, also, that it was not necessary that the notice should be given by the legal personal representatives of the assured, but might be effectually given by any person appointed by the assured for the purpose, or (per Murphy, J.) by any person acting on behalf of the persons interested in the policy. Ib.

Held, also, that any excuse for not forwarding the medical report as, e.g., that there was no one in medical attendance on the assured, should be specially pleaded and proved, when the company rely on the condition. Ib.

Conditions—Onus Probandi—Duty of Insurance Agent—Payment by Notes.]—The conditions of policies of life assurance were—first, that a policy should not be in force until the first premium was paid; and secondly, that if a note were taken for a premium, and such note were not paid when due, the policy should become void at and from default. A proposal was received by the appellants, and notes given to an agent for premiums. The agent indorsed the notes, and appended his personal guarantee, waiving protest. The notes were discounted by the agent, but dishonoured at maturity. The agent wrote to the appellants' manager that he had mailed a note for these and other premiums, and the manager acknowledged the letter, stating that he would hold the note as requested. The company subsequently cancelled the policies, and refused to register assignments to the respondent, on the ground that the policies were not in force. The agent deposed that, according to the usual course of business, his note sent to the manager was not in discharge of premiums, but evidence that the premiums were due. On the death of the assured the respondent sued the appellants for the policy-moneys:—Held, that though the notes were accepted by the agent in payment of the premiums, the condition applied on their non-payment and the policies became void; that the onus of proof that the notes were placed in the hands of the agent, as agent for the assured, to raise money by negotiating them, lay with the respondent and had not been discharged; and that, according to the principle of Acey v. Fernie (10 L. J., Ex. 9; 7 M. & W. 151), the dealings between the company and their agent as regarded the assured were res inter alios, and afforded no presumption of an intention to treat the agent as acting not for his true principles, but as representing the assured. London and Lancashire Life Assurance Co. v. Fleming, 66 L. J., P. C. 116; [1897] A. C. 499—P. C.

Condition against Assignment.]—See Turcan, In re, infra, col. 51.

—— Suicide Clause—Assignment.]—See City Bank v. Sovereign Life Assurance Co., post, col. 48.

II. POLICY.

Nature of.]—Policies of insurance are securities for money within 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 12. Stokoe v. Cowan, 29 Beav. 637; 30 L. J., Ch. 882; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 901; 4 L. T. 695; 9 W. R. 801.

Authority to Effect.]—B. and S. having been directed by the defendant to effect an insurance on his life in his own name or in the names of B. and S., to whom he was indebted, effected an insurance in the names of B., S. and a third person, whom they had taken into partnership :—Held, that they had no authority for effecting the insurance in the three names; and the defendant having never acknowledged the transaction, that they could not recover from him the amount of the premiums paid on the policy. Barron v. Fitzgerald, 6 Bing. (N.C.) 201; 8 Scott, 460; 9 L. J., C. P. 153; 4 Jur. 88.

Mistake.]—If upon a proposal and an agreement for a life insurance, a policy is drawn up by the insurance office in a form which differs from the terms of the agreement, and varies the rights of the parties assured, equity will interfere, and deal with the case on the footing of the agreement, and not on that of the policy. Collett v. Morrison, 9 Hare, 162; 21 L. J., Ch. 878.

An erroneous statement was made to a company by or through their agent, as to A.'s interest in his son's life: upon which the company granted a policy to A. After the son's death the company discovered the error, and refused to pay the sum insured. A bill filed in equity by A. to have the mistake rectified was dismissed, because the evidence did not shew distinctly whether the mistake arose from the agent's inadvertence, or from his having been misinformed by A. Parsons v. Bignold, 13 Sim. 518; 15 L. J., Ch. 379; 7 Jur. 591.

—— Repayment of Premiums.]—R. and K. entered into negotiations with C., the London agent of a Scottish company, for effecting a policy on the life of H., a merchant; and it was verbally agreed between R. and K. and C. that the policy should be granted, authorising the assured to make voyages to the ports of Morocco and other ports in the Mediterranean, Africa and Asia. A written proposal, in the handwriting of one of the partners R. and K., was communicated by C. to the company in the following terms, differing by mistake, as R. and K. alleged, from the agreement they had previously made with C.: "H. to be at liberty to visit on business Tangiers, or any other port within the Mediterranean, without subjecting himself to any extra premium, or having to apply for a licence; but it is understood that he is not to reside out of Europe, at any place in the Mediterranean, beyond the period of three months, or to go to the interior of Asia and Africa; the above memorandum to be indorsed on the policy." A policy was accordingly granted, whereby 2,000*l*. was assured to R. and K. after the death of H., with a proviso that in case H. should depart beyond the limits of Europe the policy should be void. A memorandum was indorsed on the policy to the effect that, notwithstanding the restriction contained in it, H. should enjoy such liberty as mentioned in the proposal. H., in the course of his business, visited Casa Blanca, on the Atlantic coast of Morocco, south of Tangiers, and died there before he had resided three months. The court refused to rectify the policy as against the company, so as to express the true agreement between R. and K. and C., but declared the policy to be not binding on either R. and K. or the company, and ordered the premiums which they had paid to be refunded, as having been paid by mistake, and the policy to be delivered up to the company. Fowler v. Scottish Equitable Life Insurance Society, 28 L. J., Ch. 225; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1169; 7 W. R. 5. And see VII. PREMIUMS, infra, col. 30.

Delivery up of—No Interest.]—See infra, IV. col. 8, INTEREST.

III. RE-INSURANCE.

Life dropping before Policy completed.]—An insurance company offered to another, by way of re-insurance, a part of a larger policy, stating that another part would be retained. The offer was accepted by the second company without investigation into the life, but before the re-insurance was completed the first company had parted with all the remainder of the policy. The life fell soon afterwards:—Held, that the first company would be relieved in equity against the re-insurance. Trail v. Baring, infra, col. 21.

Payment of Premiums on.]—See Prince of Wales Assurance Co. v. Harding, El., Bl. & El. 183; 27 L. J., Q. B. 297, infra, col. 32.

Interest—First Policy cancelled.]—A director of the A. assurance company effected on behalf of that company a cross insurance with the B. company on a life as an indemnity against one effected with the A. company. Afterwards, the policy with the A. company was cancelled, but the director continued to keep up the other until the life dropped:—Held, that a bill filed by the B. company to have the policy effected with that company delivered up, and to stay an action upon the policy, was not demurrable. India and London Life Assurance Co. v. Dalby, 4 De G. & Sm. 462; 15 Jur. 982.

Custom as to Representations on Re-Insurance.]—See Foster v. Mentor Life Assurance Co., infra, VI. REPRESENTATIONS AND DECLARATIONS, col. 20.

IV. INTEREST.

Name of Parties.]—By 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 2, a life policy in which there is or are not inserted the name or names of the person or persons interested therein, or for whose use, benefit, or on whose account the policy is made, is unlawful. A husband, whose wife was a minor and entitled to a sum of money on attaining her majority, applied to her trustees for an advance, which they agreed to make upon having the repayment of it secured by J. in the event of the wife dying before attaining twenty-one. J. having consented to become security upon condition that an insurance was effected on the life of the wife, a policy was executed by an insurance company which was expressed to be made between them and the wife, who was described as a married woman. Neither the name of the husband nor that of any other person besides the wife was inserted in the policy as being interested in it:—Held, that the policy was void, as not containing the name of the husband or other person interested in it. Evans v. Bignold, 38 L. J., Q. B. 293; L. R. 4 Q. B. 622; 20 L. T. 659; 17 W. R. 882.

The 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, does not prohibit a policy from being granted to one person in trust for another, where the names of both persons appear upon the face of the instrument; nor does the effecting of such an insurance in any way contravene the policy of the statute. Collett v. Morrison, 9 Hare, 162 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 878.

Under 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 2, in every policy on the life of another, whether bonâ fide, or a gaming or a wager policy, the name of the person interested in such policy must be inserted therein at the time of making, as that of the person interested ; otherwise the policy is void. Hodson v. Observer Life Assurance Society, 8 El. & Bl. 40 ; 26 L. J., Q. B. 303 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1125 ; 5 W. R. 712.

What is Sufficient.]—Every man is presumed to have an interest in his own life, and in every part of it ; therefore an executor suing on a policy effected by his testator on two years of his life, is not bound to shew that such testator had any special reason for making such limited insurance. Wainwright v. Bland, 1 M. & Rob. 481 ; 1 Tyrw. & G. 417 ; 1 Gale, 406 ; 1 M. & W. 32 ; 5 L. J., Ex. 147.

Where A., having no interest in the life of B., induces him to cause a policy to be effected in his (B.'s) name ; A. finding the funds for the premiums, and intending, by assignment or otherwise, to get the benefit of the policy himself, so that it is substantially the policy of A., such policy is void, as a fraudulent evasion of the statute. Ib.

To an action by the executrix of J. S., on a policy, by which a company agreed with him to pay to his executors 2,000*l.* on his death, a plea that the policy was made by T. S. in the name of J. S., but for the use and benefit of T. S. and not for the use or on account of J. S. ; that T. S. had not any interest in the life of J. S. ; and that the policy was a wagering policy, whereby the policy was void, is a good plea. Shilling v. Accidental Death Insurance Co., 2 H. & N. 42 ; 26 L. J., Ex. 266 ; 5 W. R. 567.

Although where an insurance is really effected by the party insured, the mere circumstance that another party pays the premiums may not be conclusive, or even per se sufficient evidence to warrant a jury in finding that the interest was not in the insured ; yet where the insurance is effected by the party nominally insured, at the instance and for the benefit of another who is to pay the premiums, and in pursuance of an arrangement between them, under which he immediately secures the sole benefit of it (by assignment or bequest), the evidence will be so conclusive that the interest is really in the third party (so that the policy is void for not having been in his name), that the court will set aside a verdict for the plaintiff in an action by him or his representatives upon it. Shilling v. Accidental Death Insurance Co., 27 L. J., Ex. 16.

An insurance against death by accident is within the statute as to interest. Shilling v. Accidental Death Insurance Co., post, col. 82.

A wife making an insurance on her husband's life, need not prove that she was interested therein. Reed v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., Peake's Ad. Cas. 70.

Policy on Life of Husband—Trust for Wife and Family.]—See cases infra, col. 62.

By Father on Son.]—A father effected a policy in the name and on the life of his son, in which he had no insurable interest, under circumstances which satisfied the court that he intended it for his own benefit. The son died intestate and the father took out administration to his estate, and the insurance company paid the money assured by the policy to him :—Held, that although as between the insurer and the company the policy was illegal and void under 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, yet, as between the father and the estate of the son, the father was entitled to retain the money for his own benefit. Worthington v. Curtis, 45 L. J., Ch. 259; 1 Ch. D. 419; 33 L. T. 828; 24 W. R. 221—C. A.

In order to render a policy valid within the meaning of the act, a party for whose benefit it is effected must have a pecuniary interest in the life or event insured ; and therefore a policy effected by a father on the life of his son, he not having any pecuniary interest therein, is void. Halford v. Kymer, 10 B. & C. 724 ; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 311.

Debtor and Creditor.]—A creditor may insure the life of his debtor to the extent of his debt. Godsall v. Boldero, 9 East, 72.

But where a policy effected by a creditor on the life of his debtor is valid at the time it is entered into, the circumstance of the interest of the assured in such life ceasing before the death happens does not invalidate it, by reason of the provisions of the 14 Geo. 3, c. 48. Dalby v. India and London Life Assurance Co., 15 C. B. 365 ; 3 C. L. R. 61 ; 24 L. J., C. P. 2 ; 18 Jur. 1024 ; 3 W. R. 116—Ex. Ch.

A. being entitled to stock contingent upon his attaining thirty, assigned his interest to B., who proposed to effect a policy with a mutual assurance company upon the life of A., then in his twenty-ninth year, at the same time declaring that his object was to insure against a twenty months' contingency. The company advised a policy for two years as sufficient to cover the risk, to which B. assenting, a policy for this period was granted, and the premium paid. A. attained thirty, and died within the two years :—Held, that the policy was not void within 14 Geo. 3, c. 48. Law v. London Indisputable Life Policy Co., 3 Eq. R. 338 ; 1 Kay & J. 223 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 196 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 178 ; 3 W. R. 154.

An army agent, to whom an officer was largely indebted on the balance of their account, effected in his own name policies on the life of the officer, and in the books kept by the army agent the account of the officer was charged with the premiums paid and with interest on the balances, including the premiums. The officer was aware that the policies had been effected, but there was no evidence that the account had ever been shewn to him, or that he knew that he was in the account charged with the premiums :—Held, that the army agent was, under the circumstances, entitled to retain the sums received upon the policies after the death of the officer, and was not liable to account for them to his representatives. Bruce v. Garden, 39 L. J., Ch. 334 ; L. R. 5 Ch. 32 ; 22 L. T. 895 ; 18 W. R. 384.

—— Option of Debtor to Purchase.]—A debtor arranged with his creditors for payment of his debts by instalments, to be further secured by a policy on his life to be effected by the creditors, who were to pay the premiums and to assign the policy to the debtor on payment of their debts and all premiums paid with interest. All the instalments except the last having been paid, and another premium on the policy being about to become due, the creditors offered to assign it to the debtor on being repaid the premiums paid by them with interest, but the offer was declined, and the creditors paid the premium, and the debtor paid the last instalment of his debts. Shortly afterwards the debtor died, and his executrix filed a bill claiming to be entitled to the sum assured on payment to the creditors of the money paid by them for premiums with interest. A demurrer for want of equity was overruled by Malins, V.-C., but allowed on appeal. Lewis v. King, 44 L. J., Ch. 259; 31 L. T. 571—L JJ.

—— Amount of Interest.]—A promise by a creditor to a debtor that payment of the debt shall not be enforced during his (the creditor's) lifetime, is not sufficient (without any consideration or circumstance to make such promise binding) to confer upon the debtor an insurable interest in the life of the creditor. Hebden v. West, 3 B. & S. 579; 32 L. J., Q. B. 85; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 747; 7 L. T. 854; 11 W. R. 422.

A contract between a master and a servant for seven years' service, at a fixed salary, is sufficient to create such an interest, but to the extent only of so much of the period of seven years as remained at the time of the effecting of the policy. Ib.

Where a person, having an insurable interest in the life of another, insured such life to the full extent of his interest in more than one company, from one of which, at the falling of the life insured, he received payment of the amount for which the policy was effected:—Held, that he was precluded by the terms of s. 3 of 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, from recovering or receiving more from the others. Ib.

If A., being indebted to B., dies, and C. agrees to pay the debt by instalments in five years, A. has an insurable interest in the life of C. for those five years. Von Lindenau v. Desborough, 3 C. & P. 353; 8 B. & C. 586; 3 M. & Ry. 45; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 42.

—— Debtor's Wife.]—A debtor and wife joined in an assignment of a chose in action of the wife to a creditor of the husband to secure 300*l.*, owing by the husband. The creditor afterwards insured the life of the wife for 200*l.* The chose in action was not reduced into possession in the lifetime of the wife. The wife died, and the creditor received from the insurance office the 200*l.*:—Held, that, if the creditor had no insurable interest in the life of the debtor's wife, the debtor could have no claim to the application of the sum assured towards the payment of his debt; that here the creditor had such insurable interest, but the risk ceased at the death of the wife, and that the money afterwards paid by the insurance office, being paid in their own wrong, the debtor was not entitled to have it applied in reduction of his debt. Henson v. Blackwell, 4 Hare, 434; 14 L. J., Ch. 329.

—— Executor.]—An executor has a sufficient interest to enable him to make assurance in his own name, on the life of a person who has granted an annuity to the testator. Tidswell v. Ankerstein, Peake, 151.

—— Step-sister—Maintenance.]—In an action to recover the amount of a policy of insurance upon the life of a child, the plaintiff's step-sister, evidence was given of promise made by the plaintiff to the mother of the child to take care of the child and help to maintain it. No objection was taken on behalf of the defendants that the plaintiff had not in fact incurred any expenditure in respect of the child:—Held, that the plaintiff had an insurable interest in the child's life, and was entitled, in the absence of any objection as to the amount in fact expended by her, to recover the amount of the policy. Barnes v. London, Edinburgh and Glasgow Assurance Co., [1892] 1 Q. B. 864.

Grantee of Annuity.]—The grantee of an annuity, covenanted to be paid to him in consideration of a sum of money advanced by him to the grantor, insured in his own name the life of the grantor, the annuity having apparently been calculated so as to cover the amount of premium for such insurance if effected. The grantor, in pursuance of the contract, duly repurchased the annuity, and extinguished by payment all his obligations to the grantee:—Held, that the policy effected on the life of the grantor, and the bonuses thereon, were the property of the grantee of the annuity. Knox v. Turner, 39 L. J., Ch. 750; L. R. 5 Ch. 515; 23 L. T. 227; 18 W. R. 873.

The grant of an annuity with a right of repurchase on payment of the consideration-money and all arrears of the annuity, does not create the relation of debtor and creditor so as to give the grantor, upon repurchase of the annuity, the right to a policy effected by the grantee on the life of the grantor as a security or indemnity; or, after the death of the grantor, to entitle his representatives to the surplus proceeds of the policy after satisfaction of the consideration-money, and all arrears of the annuity. Preston v. Neele, 12 Ch. D. 760; 40 L. T. 303; 27 W. R. 642.

In 1822, in consideration of 600*l.*, A. and B., his wife, granted to C. an annuity of 64*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* for ninety-nine years if B. should so long live. By the same deed the rents of copyhold property to which B. was entitled, were granted during her life to C., with a covenant to surrender from and after B.'s death to the use of C., and power to C. to sell in case the annuity should be in arrear. The deed contained provisions that any extra premiums to become payable at the office where B.'s life should be insured, should be paid by A., and a power to A. to repurchase the annuity at any time after three years on payment to C. of 600*l.* and all arrears of the annuity. On the day before the date of the deed by which the annuity was granted, C. insured B.'s life for 600*l.* at an annual premium of 16*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* The copyholds were surrendered, and C. by himself or his representatives since his death, had been in possession since 1828. A. died in 1858, and B. in 1869:—Held, as between the representatives of C. and B., that the surplus proceeds of the policy effected by C. on B.'s life after satisfaction of the 600*l.* and all arrears of the annuity, belonged to the representatives of C. and not of B. Ib.

Trustee.]—An equitable interest is insurable; and both the trustee and the cestui que trust have an insurable interest, the former in respect of his legal interest, and the latter in respect of the equitable interest. Houghton, Ex parte, 17 Ves. 258; 11 R. R. 73.

Surety on Co-Surety.]—A. and B. jointly executed a bond as a collateral security for the repayment of 300*l.* and interest. A. effected a policy of insurance on B.'s life:—Held, that the policy was not void within 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, B. being, for the purposes of the policy, A.'s debtor to the extent of half the debt secured by the bond. Branford v. Saunders, 25 W. R. 650.

Loan by Insurance Company.]—To an action against a surety on a bond, he pleaded that the obligees were members of an insurance company, and that it was agreed between them and the principal in the bond, that the former should advance 350*l.*, the moneys of the company, to be repaid by instalments, with interest and costs; and that the latter should effect a policy on his own life in the company, in 800*l.* at the annual premium of 26*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*, to be payable thereon, being for the benefit of the company; the 800*l.* being greater by 200*l.* than was necessary for securing to the obligees, as trustees for themselves and the other members of the company, the repayment of the 350*l.*, and should deposit the policy with the obligees as a collateral security for the repayment of the 350*l.*, and that the party borrowing, with his sureties, should enter into the bond to the obligees, as trustees for themselves and the company, in the penalty of 700*l.*, subject to a proviso limiting the amount ultimately recoverable thereon to 500*l.*:—Held, that the policy was not a wagering policy within 14 Geo. 3, c. 48. Downes v. Green, 12 M. & W. 481; 13 L. J., Ex. 159; 8 Jur. 899.

Benefit of Wife and Children—Appointment of Trustee—Title of Petition.] — A petition (presented since the coming into operation of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882), for the appointment of trustees of the proceeds of a life policy effected by a husband under the provisions of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, for the benefit of his wife and children, ought to be entitled in the matter of the act of 1882. Soutar's Policy Trust, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 256; 26 Ch. D. 236; 32 W. R. 701.

—— Appointment of Trustees—Direction to Trustee to exchange Policy.]—The defendant effected a policy on his life for the benefit of his wife and children under s. 10 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870. He became bankrupt and mentally deranged, and was unable to pay the premiums. By the rules of the insurance society the policy could be exchanged for a fully paid-up policy of smaller value, and thus preserved from lapsing. The wife and only child of the defendant brought this action, claiming the appointment of a trustee of the policy, and that such trustee might be authorised to exchange the policy for one fully paid-up:—Held, that the court under its general jurisdiction had power to appoint two trustees; and judgment was given to that effect, and otherwise as claimed. Schultze v. Schultze, 56 L. J., Ch. 356; 56 L. T. 231.

Ireland—29 & 30 Vict. c. 42.]—Before the 29 & 30 Vict. c. 42, it was not necessary for a party insuring in Ireland to have any interest in the life assured. See British Assurance Co. v. Magee, Cooke & Alcock, 182. S. P., Anon., 3 Law Rec. (N.S.) 108.

Creditor Insuring Life of Debtor—Right of Debtor's Representatives.]—If A. effects a policy of assurance upon the life of B., to cover a debt due to him from B., or if A. effects a policy in the name of B., in whose life he has no interest, the representatives of B.'s estate can have no claim upon it. Lea v. Hinton, 19 Beav. 324.

But where there is a presumption, from the dealings and transactions between the parties, that the policy was effected with the privity and concurrence, and on account of B., for the purpose of securing a debt due by B. to a third party for which A. is security, the onus is thrown upon A. of rebutting that presumption. Ib.

One of the makers of a joint and several promissory note, who was a surety for the other, effected an insurance on the life of the latter, with his privity and concurrence, for an amount equal to that secured by the note. The principal died, having appointed the surety his executor, and the surety received the insurance money:—Held, that to the extent to which it was not required for indemnifying the surety it ought to be applied in payment of the debt. S. C., on appeal, 5 De G. M. & G. 823.

Satisfaction of Debt—Policy Moneys.]—Payment to a creditor by an assurance company of the amount of a policy on the life of the debtor, is not pro tanto, a satisfaction of the debt of the latter. Humphrey v. Arabin, Ll. & G. 318.

Re-insurance — Original Policy Cancelled.]—See India and London Life Assurance Co. v. Dalby, ante, col. 8.

Friendly Society—Insurance by one having no Interest.]—See Brown v. Freeman, 4 De G. & Sm. 444.

Delivery up of Policy—No Interest—Equitable Jurisdiction.]—Semble, that a court of equity will not entertain a bill for the delivery up of a policy of insurance on the ground of want of insurable interest. Desborough v. Curlewis, 3 Y. & Coll. 175; 1 Jur. 740.

Proof in Bankruptcy—Deduction of Policy Moneys received.]—Contingent interest assigned to secure in part a debt exceeding the value of the interest. The assignee insures against the contingency; and upon its taking effect receives the sum insured:—Held, upon the bankruptcy of his debtor, that the sum so recovered must be deducted from his proof. Andrews, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 410; 1 Madd. 573; 16 R. R. 263.

Purchase—Contingent Title.] — Action on a deed for non-payment by the defendant, as surety, of certain annual premiums in respect of a policy effected on the life of G. F., and assigned by him to the plaintiff. Pleas, first, that before the assignment, and in the lifetime of G. S., it was, by an agreement in writing between G. F. and the plaintiff, after reciting that G. F. was in expectation of becoming devisee in fee-simple, under the will of G. S., of a messuage and premises, agreed that in consideration of 500*l.* then paid, and 1,500*l.* to be paid on the 11th of October then next, G. F. would within three calendar months after the decease of G. S., in case he should become the devisee of the messuage and premises, convey and assure the same to the plaintiff, his heirs, and assigns, subject only, &c., and in case G. F. should not become such devisee in fee simple, or should not be able to make out a sufficient title to the messuage and premises within three calendar months, the 2,000*l.* was to be repaid by G. F. without interest. That, as a further security for such repayment, the policy was assigned to the plaintiff, subject to an agreement by the plaintiff to re-assign the same to G. F., in case the conveyance contracted for should be perfected; that G. F. further agreed to pay the premiums becoming due on the policy, and to procure the defendant and another to enter into a sufficient assurance for the payment of such premiums; that afterwards and in the lifetime of G. S. the defendant G. F. and another executed the assignment in the declaration mentioned, in pursuance and part performance of the agreement, whereby the agreement and deed in the declaration were void. The defendant's third plea stated an agreement and deed in the same terms as the first plea, and concluded by alleging that at the time of making the contract the defendant was not the heir-at-law of G. S., nor had he then or at any time any interest in the event, or in the life and death of G. S., whereby and by force of the 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, the agreement policy and assignments were each of them void:—Held that the pleas were bad. Cooke v. Field, 15 Q. B. 460; 19 L. J., Q. B. 441; 14 Jur. 951.

Wagering Policy—Return of Premiums.]—See Howard v. Refuge Friendly Society, infra, col. 41.

Insurance of Debtor's Life—Amount receivable under Policy.]—One who insures his debtor's life for his debt and pays the premiums, is not entitled to more than he expends, unless an intention to that effect is shewn. Simpson v. Walker, 2 L. J., Ch. 55.

V. RISK INSURED.

Period.]—On an insurance on a man's life for a year, if, some short time before the expiration of the term, he receives a mortal wound, of which he dies after the year, the insurer will not be liable. Lockyer v. Offley, 1 Term Rep. 260; 1 R. R. 194.

Capital Punishment—Liability of Insurers.]—See Amicable Society v. Bolland, infra, col. 75.

In the policies effected by the Amicable Society, there is no exception as to death by the hands of justice; a person insuring his life in that office, afterwards suffered death for a criminal offence, the policy was not thereby avoided. Bolland v. Disney, 3 Russ. 351.

"Effects of Injury caused by Accident."]—The assured under a policy granted by the defendant company against "death from the effects of injury caused by accident," fell and dislocated his shoulder. He was at once put to bed and died in less than a month from the date of the accident, having been all the time confined in his bedroom. In a case stated in a reference under the defendants' special act the umpire found that the assured died from pneumonia caused by cold, but that he would not have died as and when he did had it not been for the accident, that as a consequence of the accident he suffered from pain and was rendered restless, unable to wear his clothing, weak, and unusually susceptible to cold, and that his catching cold and the fatal effects of the cold were both due to the condition of health to which he had been reduced by the accident:—Held, that the death of the assured was due to the "effects of injury caused by accident" within the meaning of the policy. Isitt v. Railway Passengers Assurance Co., 58 L. J., Q. B. 191; 22 Q. B. D. 504; 60 L. T. 297; 37 W. R. 477.

Exceptions—Accident caused by "Exposure of the Insured to Obvious Risk."]—See Cornish v. Accident Insurance Co., 58 L. J., Q. B. 591; 23 Q. B. D. 453; 38 W. R. 139—C. A.; infra, col. 87.

Death occasioned by Poison taken Accidentally.]—By a policy of insurance the company agreed to pay 1,000*l.* to the representatives of the person insured if "the insured shall sustain any personal injury caused by accidental, external and visible means within the intention of this policy and provisions and conditions thereof, and the direct effects of such injury shall occasion the death of the insured within three calendar months from the happening of such injury." The policy also contained the following proviso: "The insured shall not be entitled to make any claim under this policy for any injury from any accident, unless such injury shall be caused by some outward and visible means. . . . And that this insurance shall not extend to death by suicide, whether felonious or otherwise, or to any injury caused by or arising from natural disease or weakness, or exhaustion consequent upon disease, or by any medical or surgical treatment, or operation rendered necessary by disease, although such death may have been accelerated by accident, or to any death or injury caused by duelling or fighting, or any other breach of the law on the part of the insured, or by poison or intentional self-injury." While the policy was in force the insured, by accident, drank some poison in mistake for medicine, which he was in the habit of taking, and died from the effects:—Held, that the accident came within the proviso, and that the representatives of the insured were not entitled to recover. Cole v. Accident Insurance Co., 61 L. T. 227.

—— "Within the United Kingdom."] — A policy of insurance covered death caused by accident happening within the United Kingdom. The assured was accidentally drowned in Jersey. In an action on the policy:—Held, that the accident happened within the United Kingdom. Stoneham v. Ocean, Railway, and General Accident Insurance Co., 19 Q. B. D. 237; 57 L. T. 236; 35 W. R. 716; 51 J. P. 422.

Suicide.]—A party covenanted "to do and perform all such acts, matters, and things as should be requisite for continuing and keeping on foot a policy":—Held, that this covenant could not be read negatively, as if he had covenanted to do no act whereby it would become void; and therefore, that the covenant was not broken by the suicide of the covenantor, whereby the policy became forfeited. Dormay v. Borrodaile, 10 Beav. 335. S. C., 5 C. B. 380; 11 Jur. 231.

An office stipulated that the policy should be void, if the assured should "die on the seas or go beyond the limits of Europe, or enter into the naval or military service, or die by his own hands, or by the hand of justice, or by duelling." The insured had been observed for some time to be labouring under dejection of spirits, though he performed his various duties as usual. Without any apparently direct cause, he flung himself from Vauxhall bridge into the Thames, and was drowned. The office refused to pay the policy which had attached; defending that the case came within the terms of the proviso which released them if the insured died by his own hands. The jury found specially these facts following:—First, the death under the circumstances; secondly, that the deceased leaped from the bridge voluntarily, knowing that the result of his act would be his death, and intending that result; but, thirdly, that, at the time he did so, he was not in a state of mind capable to distinguish good from evil:—Held, by Coltman, Erskine and Maule, JJ., that, if the deceased was labouring under no delusion as to the physical effect of the act which he was committing; if he knew that it was water into which he was about to throw himself, and that in so throwing himself off the bridge he would be drowned; and if he voluntarily threw himself into the river for the purpose of being drowned—then, the subsequent finding, that, at the time of the act committed, the deceased could not distinguish between good and evil, though it cleared the act from being felonious, yet did not take it out of the proviso which relieved the company from liability. Borradaile v. Hunter, 5 Scott (N.R.) 418; 5 Man. & G. 639; 12 L. J., C. P. 225; 7 Jur. 443.

Tindal, C.J., dissentiente, thought that the company was liable to pay the insurance, and that the act was taken out of the proviso by the finding of the jury, and covered by the policy itself: because, from the context with the other two kinds of death subsequently mentioned, this "dying by his own hands" meant an act of felonious self-destruction; and the jury had negatived any felony, by saying, that the deceased at the time was incapable of distinguishing between good and evil. Ib.

A. effected a policy on his own life, subject to the following conditions: that the policy should become void if the assured should die on the high seas, or should go beyond the limits of Europe, or enter the military or naval service, except with the permission of the assurers; and that every policy effected by a person on his or her own life should be void, if such person should commit suicide, or die by duelling or the hands of justice. He died in consequence of having voluntarily, and for the purpose of killing himself, taken sulphuric acid, but under circumstances tending to shew that he was at the time of unsound mind. In an action by his administratrix upon the policy, the company pleaded that A. did commit suicide, whereby the policy became void: and at the trial the judge directed the jury, "that in order to find the issue for the company, it was necessary that the jury should be satisfied that A. died by his own voluntary act, being then able to distinguish between right and wrong, and to appreciate the nature and quality of the act that he was doing, so as to be a responsible moral agent: that the burthen of the proof as to his dying by his own voluntary act was on the company, but, that being established, the jury must assume that he was of sane mind, and a responsible moral agent, unless the contrary should appear in evidence": — Held, that his direction was erroneous, for that the terms of the condition included all acts of voluntary self-destruction; and therefore, that, if A. voluntarily killed himself, it was immaterial whether he was or was not at the time a responsible moral agent. Clift v. Schwabe, 3 C. B. 437; 2 Car. & K. 134; 17 L. J., C. P. 2—Ex. Ch.

A policy contained a proviso, that if the insured should commit suicide the policy should be cancelled by the return of the premiums, except the policy should have been legally assigned:—Held that "commit suicide" was equivalent to "die by his own hand," without reference to the moral state of mind of the deceased. Dufaur v. Professional Life Insurance Co., 25 Beav. 599; 27 L. J., Ch. 817; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 841.

A policy is not rendered void by the suicide of the insured while in a state of insanity. Horn v. Anglo-Australian and Universal Family Life Insurance Co., 30 L. J., Ch. 511; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 673; 4 L. T. 142; 9 W. R. 359.

The condition avoiding a policy in the event of the assured dying by his own hand applies to all cases of self-destruction, and it is immaterial that at the time of committing the act the assured was of unsound mind. White v. British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Co., 38 L. J., Ch. 53; L. R. 7 Eq. 394; 19 L. T. 306; 17 W. R. 26.

When there is a condition in a life policy that in the event of the assured dying by his own hand, the policy shall be void, except to the extent of any bonâ fide interest which, at the time of his death, shall be vested in any other person or persons for his or their own benefit, the exception applies as much when that interest is vested in the assurers themselves as when it is vested in a third party. Ib.

A condition that policies effected on persons' own lives, who should die by duelling or by their own hands, or by the hands of justice, would become void so far as regards the personal representatives of the persons so dying, but would remain in force only to the extent of any bonâ fide interest which might have been acquired by any other person under assignment by deed for consideration or by way of security or indemnity, or by virtue of any legal or equitable lien as a security for money, upon proof of the extent of such interest, does not render such policies void upon the ground that it holds out an inducement to the assured to commit suicide. Moore v. Woolsey, 4 El. & Bl. 243; 3 C. L. R. 207; 24 L. J., Q. B. 40; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 468; 3 W. R. 66.

Licence to go or reside Abroad.]—If a person insuring his life with a company, a condition of whose policies forbids the insured going beyond the limits of Europe without licence of the directors, pays, at the time of the execution of the policy, an extra premium for permission to proceed to and reside at B. (a place out of Europe), for a year, stating that he was then about to proceed to B., but does not proceed to B. for some years, and then goes there, and dies there within a year after his arrival, having never paid any extra premium except the above, but paying all the ordinary premiums down to his death, the company is liable for the sum insured. Notman v. Anchor Assurance Co., 4 C. B. (N.S.) 476; 27 L. J., C. P. 275; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 712; 6 W. R. 688.

A declaration stated, that the defendant covenanted that he would at any time appear at an insurance office within London or the bills of mortality and answer questions respecting his age, &c., in order to enable the plaintiff to insure his life, and would not afterwards do any act whereby such insurance should be avoided or prejudiced; and it then alleged that the defendant appeared at the office of the Rock Life Insurance Company, and did answer certain questions, and that the plaintiff insured the defendant's life with that company by a policy containing a proviso, that if he went beyond the limits of Europe, the policy should be null and void. Breach, that the defendant went beyond the limits of Europe, to wit, to Canada:—Held, that the declaration was bad for not averring that the defendant had notice that the policy was affected. Vyse v. Wakefield, 7 M. & W. 126; 8 D. P. C. 611—Ex. Ch. Affirming 9 L. J., Ex. 274.

External Cause—Suffocation whilst Insensible.]—A policy against any injury from accident or violence contained a proviso "that no claim should be payable in respect of death by accident unless the same should be occasioned by some external or material cause operating upon the insured person." The claim made by the executors of an insured, stated that he went to bathe, and, while in a pool one foot deep, he became insensible from some internal cause and fell with his face downwards; soon after he was so found, and water escaped from his lungs in such a manner as to prove that he had breathed after falling in the water. The immediate cause of death was suffocation by water, but such suffocation would not have taken place had he not been incapable of helping himself in consequence of the insensibility:—Held, that the death was caused by accident within the meaning of the policy. Reynolds v. Accident Insurance Co., 22 L. T. 820; 18 W. R. 1141.

Death by Drowning while in an Epileptic Fit—Construction.]—W. effected an insurance with the defendants against accidental injury, and by the terms of the policy the defendants agreed to pay the amount insured to W.'s legal representatives, should he sustain "any personal injury caused by accidental, external and visible means," and the direct effect of such injury should occasion his death. The policy also contained a proviso that the insurance should not extend "to any injury caused by or arising from natural disease or weakness or exhaustion consequent upon disease." During the time the policy was in force, and whilst he was crossing and fording a stream, W. was seized with an epileptic fit and fell into the stream, and was there drowned whilst suffering from the fit, but he did not sustain any personal injury to occasion death other than drowning:—Held, that W.'s death was occasioned by an injury within the risk covered by the policy, and to which the proviso did not apply. Winspear v. Accident Insurance Co., 50 L. J., Q. B. 292; 6 Q. B. D. 42; 43 L. T. 459; 29 W. R. 116; 45 J. P. 110—C. A.

Under Influence of Drink at Time of Injury.]—In a policy of life assurance it was provided that the assurance should not extend to any death or injury happening while the assured was under the influence of intoxicating liquor, or occasioned by his wilfully exposing himself to any unnecessary danger or peril. The assured, while in such a condition that there was a conflict of evidence as to the fact of his being or not being, more or less, affected by the liquor he had taken, accosted a woman in the street, persisting in doing so in the face of remonstrances, and was knocked down by the man in whose company she was at the time, receiving injuries from which he died:—Held, that, to enable the company to take advantage of the above proviso, it was not necessary that the assured should be under the influence of intoxicating liquor at the time of his death, as well as at the time when the injury was sustained, but that it was sufficient to shew that he was under such influence when he met with the injury from which death afterwards resulted. Mair v. Railway Passengers Assurance Co., 37 L. T. 356.

Under the influence of intoxicating liquor means under such influence as to disturb the quiet equable exercise of a man's intellectual faculties. Ib.

The latter part of the proviso, with regard to wilful exposure to peril, should be limited to dangers ejusdem generis with those recapitulated in the earlier part of the clause, and does not extend to the exceptional circumstances under which the assured met his death. Ib.

VI. REPRESENTATIONS AND DECLARATIONS.

a. GENERALLY.

Material Concealment, what is.]—In a proposal by M. to an assurance office for an assurance on his life, in answer to the question, "Has a proposal ever been made on your life at any other office or offices? If so, where? Was it accepted at the ordinary premium, or at an increased premium, or declined?"—his answer was, "Insured now in two offices for 16,000*l.* at ordinary rates. Policies effected last year." The proposal was accepted, but the office having subsequently ascertained that the life of M. had been declined by several offices:—Held, that there had been a material concealment, and that the office was entitled to have the contract set aside. London Assurance v. Mansel, 48 L. J., Ch. 331; 11 Ch. D. 363; 41 L. T. 225; 27 W. R. 444.

If the assured, at the time of effecting a policy, conceals anything material for the insurer to know, the policy is void; and it matters not whether or not the assured considered it material or not; and what amounts to a misrepresentation or to a material concealment is a question for the jury; the fact that, on a life policy, an unusually high premium was paid, is quite immaterial, and therefore not to be taken as a proof that the office considered the party to be a bad life. Von Lindenau v. Desborough, 3 M. & Ry. 45; 8 B. & C. 586; 3 Car. & P. 350; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 42.

Suppression of Facts.]—D. applied, through an insurance agent, to an office to insure an invalid life, informing them of the fact. The office wrote asking if the life had been refused by any office, and if so, to name it. There had been numerous refusals, and negotiations with other offices were pending, which afterwards resulted in refusals. The agent replied that he had been and still was corresponding with other offices, as the amount to be insured was large. The office granted the policy :—Held, to be such an intentional suppression of the facts as to vitiate the contract. General Provincial Life Assurance Co., In re, Daintree, Ex parte, 18 W. R. 396.

A suppression or a false representation of facts material to be known by the insurers, vitiates a policy, although it is in answer to a parol inquiry, and the policy is, by the articles of the insurance office, to be void on false answers to be given to certain written inquiries. Wainwright v. Bland, 1 M. & W. 32 ; 1 Gale, 406 ; 1 M. & Rob. 481 ; 5 L. J., Ex. 147.

Fraud—Cancellation of Policy.]—A life assurance society re-assured a portion of its risk on one of its policies with a second society, stating that a third society had re-assured part of the risk, and that the remainder, beyond what it was proposed that the second society should take, would be retained by itself, the first society. This was the intention of the first society at the time, but in the interval between the proposal to the second society and the completion of the re-assurance with it, the first society, for reasons connected with its own business, but without the intervention of any new fact, or new information, or change of opinion as to the value of the life ultimately assured, changed its prior intention and re-assured the whole of the risk beyond what was to be taken by the second society with the third society. The first society, however, did not communicate its change of intention to the second society, but allowed them to complete their re-assurance. The life having dropped and the risk having become a claim, and the second society having learnt the above facts, and having declined to pay the amount of their own re-assurance, the first society brought an action against them on the policy. Upon a bill filed by the second society against the first, alleging, as by evidence was proved to be the fact, that the retention by the first society of a portion of the risk was a material element in inducing the second society to take a share in it without further investigation than they actually made, and praying to have it declared that the policy had been fraudulently obtained, and ought to be delivered up to be cancelled, and seeking an injunction to restrain the action and any other proceedings :—Held, first, that the second society was entitled to the relief sought. Traill v. Baring, 4 De G. J. & S. 318 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 521 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 377 ; 12 W. R. 678.

Held, secondly, that the case made by the bill was one for equitable relief, and that there was consequently jurisdiction in equity to deal with it, even if it might have been dealt with at law also. Ib.

Two actions were brought by the same plaintiff against an insurance company upon two policies. After issue had been joined an order was made staying one action until the other had been tried, on the terms of the defendants being bound in both by the result of the one which should be tried. But the plaintiff was not to be bound. The company, who resisted payment upon the allegation that the policies had been obtained by fraud, afterwards filed a bill in equity to restrain the actions, and to have the policies delivered up and cancelled. No injunction was moved for. An order was made in the suit staying the proceedings until after the decision of the action. Ultimately the action which was tried was decided in favour of the company, on the ground that the policy had been obtained by fraud. The plaintiff at law then delivered up both policies to the company. Upon the suit coming on for hearing :—Held, that a decree must be made for cancellation of both policies ; and that the defendants must pay the costs of the suit. London and Provincial Marine Insurance Co. v. Seymour, 43 L. J., Ch. 120 ; L. R. 17 Eq. 85 ; 29 L. T. 641 ; 22 W. R. 201.

A bill in equity will lie at the suit of a life assurance office to have a policy delivered up to be cancelled on the ground of fraud in effecting the insurance, where the instrument is not void on the face of it ; and in such case the plaintiffs have a better equity if they bring their bill in the lifetime of the assured, than if they wait till after his decease. Fenn v. Craig, 3 Y. & Coll. 216 ; 3 Jur. 22.

Re-insurance—Custom as to Statements made to re-insuring Company.]—Declaration on a policy on the life of D., effected by the plaintiffs' office in the defendants' office. Plea, that the plaintiffs untruly stated that D. was in good health. The plaintiffs re-assured the life of D. in the office of the defendants for part of the sum for which they had previously assured his life. The clerk of the defendants filled in the answers to questions as to age, health, &c., and the others were included in a circumflex, opposite to which was written a memorandum signed by the resident director of the plaintiffs' office—"For these particulars, see copies of Britannia (the plaintiffs' office) papers attached." Neither the plaintiffs nor D. signed a declaration as to health, &c., which was submitted by the plaintiffs' office, and blanks were left in for the signatures. This document was returned to the defendants with copies of the papers delivered to the Britannia Office on the original assurance attached. The defendants forwarded to the plaintiffs a policy, which recited that the plaintiffs had delivered to the defendants a declaration signed by them, setting forth the age and state of health of the person on whose life the assurance was effected, which declaration was to be the basis of the contract ; and that it was provided that if anything averred in it was untrue the policy should be void. When the re-assurance was executed, D. was affected by a disease likely to shorten life, but this fact was not known to the plaintiffs or to the defendants.

It is the practice for an office re-assuring in another office to hand over to it the papers on which the original assurance was effected, as an answer to the questions in the proposal sent by the latter office, and for that office to accept or decline such re-assurance on the statements contained in those papers. The judge directed the jury to say upon the evidence and on inspection of the documents, whether the signature of the resident director of the plaintiffs' office was understood between the parties to apply to the declaration or only to the particular questions in the proposal to which it was attached. The jury gave a verdict for the plaintiffs :—Held, by Lord Campbell, C.J., Coleridge and Wightman, JJ., that it was a question for the jury whether a declaration as to the health of D. was intended to be, and was understood to have been, signed by the plaintiffs. And by Lord Campbell, C.J., evidence of the usage was admissible to shew that no such declaration was signed by the plaintiffs ; Coleridge, J., doubting, and Erle, J., dissenting. But held, by Erle, J., that the plaintiffs could not give parol evidence to contradict the statement contained in the policy, that the plaintiffs had delivered such declaration. Foster v. Mentor Life Assurance Co., 3 El. & Bl. 48 ; 2 C. L. R. 1404 ; 23 L. J., Q. B. 145 ; 18 Jur. 827.

Held, also, by Lord Campbell, C.J., and Coleridge, J., that the direction to the jury was right, Erle, J., dissenting ; and held, by Wightman, J., that the circumstance of the plaintiffs having accepted the policy with the recital was not sufficiently pressed upon the attention of the jury. Ib.

Knowledge of Person Insuring.]—By a declaration and statement as to health, signed by the assured previously to effecting a policy on a life, it was agreed that if any untrue averment was contained therein, or if the facts required to be set forth in the proposal (annexed) were not truly stated, the premiums should be forfeited, and the assurance be absolutely null and void. The statement as to the health of the life was untrue in point of fact, but not to the knowledge of the party making it :—Held, that the premiums were forfeited, and could not be recovered back. Duckett v. Williams, 2 C. & M. 348 ; 4 Tyr. 240 ; 3 L. J., Ex. 141.

At the time of effecting a policy the insured signed a declaration in writing, which was to be the basis of the contract, and in which he stated that he had not had certain specified diseases, that he was in good health, and that he was not aware of any circumstance or disorder tending to shorten his life, or to render an insurance on his life more than ordinarily hazardous :—Held, that to make the declaration untrue, so as to vitiate the policy granted, the insured must not only have known, when he signed the declaration, that he had had some circumstance or disorder tending to shorten his life, or to render an insurance on his life more than ordinarily hazardous, but he must also have known that such circumstance or disorder was of a character to shorten his life, or to render an insurance on his life more than ordinarily hazardous. Jones v. Provincial Insurance Co., 3 C. B. (N.S.) 65 ; 26 L. J., C. P. 272 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1004 ; 5 W. R. 885.

A policy on the life of another person, who, at the time of the insurance, is in a good state of health, is not vitiated by the non-communication by such person of the fact of his having a few years before been afflicted with a disorder tending to shorten life, if it appears that the disorder was of such a character as to prevent the party from being conscious of what had happened to him while suffering under it. Swete v. Fairlie, 6 Car. & P. 1.

A policy of insurance was granted by a company to the plaintiff on the life of T., containing a proviso that "if the declaration under the hand of the plaintiff delivered at the company's office as the basis of the insurance is not in every respect true, and if there has been any misrepresentation, &c. . . . then the insurance shall be void" :—Held, that an inaccurate statement of a material fact contained in the declaration avoided the policy, though the statement was made bonâ fide, and was not untrue to the knowledge of the plaintiff. Macdonald v. Law Union Fire and Life Insurance Co., 43 L. J., Q. B. 131 ; L. R. 9 Q. B. 328 ; 30 L. T. 545 ; 22 W. R. 530. S. P., Thompson v. Lambert, Ir. R. 2 Eq. 433 ; 17 W. R. 111.

Tendency of Disorder.]—It is not to be concluded that a disorder with which a person is afflicted before he effects an insurance on his life is a "disorder tending to shorten life," within the meaning of the declaration required by the Equitable Insurance Office, from the mere circumstance that he afterwards dies of it, if it is not a disorder which generally has that tendency. Watson v. Mainwaring, 4 Taunt. 763.

—— Epileptic Fits.]—Where a policy contains a warranty, that the assured "has not been affected nor subject to gout, vertigo, fits," &c., such warranty is not broken by the fact of the assured having had an epileptic fit in consequence of an accident. To vacate such policy, it must be shewn that the constitution of the assured was naturally liable to fits, or by accident or otherwise had become so liable. Chattock v. Shawe, 1 M. & Rob. 498.

—— Blood-Spitting.]—The expression in a policy, that the assured "has not had any spitting of blood," does not mean that he has, in fact, never spit blood, but that he has not spit blood either from unascertained causes or from a disease tending to shorten life. Geach v. Ingall, 14 M. & W. 95 ; 15 L. J., Ex. 37 ; 9 Jur. 691.

By a policy, it was stipulated that it should be void, if anything stated by the assured in his declaration to the directors should be untrue. In his declaration he stated, that he was at that time in good health, and not afflicted with any disorder, nor addicted to any habit tending to shorten life ; that he had not at any time been afflicted with insanity, rupture, gout, fits, &c. ; that he had not any spitting of blood, consumptive symptoms, asthma, cough, or other affection of the lungs ; and that W. was at the time his usual medical attendant. Four years before the policy, the assured had spit blood ; he had since evinced consumptive symptoms, and he ultimately died of consumption three years after the making of the policy. The judge directed the jury to say whether the assured, when he made his declaration, had such a spitting of blood, and such affection of the lungs and inflammatory cough, as tended to shorten his life : —Held, that this was a misdirection, as the assured was bound to state to the company the fact of a single spitting of blood, to enable them to ascertain whether it proceeded from the disorder called by that name. Ib.

—— Gout.]—A person proposing to insure his life was asked, "Have you ever been afflicted with gout?" and answered "No"; and being asked, "Has your life been proposed at any other office, and if so, has it been accepted, and at what rate?" answered, "It has been proposed and accepted at the ordinary rate." The life had been proposed at one office and declined, and at another office, where he had been examined and approved by the medical man, but nothing further had been done. Before the proposal he had a slight attack of suppressed gout:—Held, that this answer was not untrue if he had not been sensibly afflicted with gout, but merely had some symptoms which a medical man could detect as denoting the presence of gout in the system. Fowkes v. Manchester and London Life Insurance Co., 3 F. & F. 440.

Change of Health.]—In July, 1863, A. negotiated for the insurance of his life in an office, and in filling up the usual declaration as to his health and habits of life, stated that he could not remember when he was last ill, and that he was then and always had been enjoying good health. After examination by the medical officer of the company, he was accepted as a first-class life. In August preceding the completion of the contract, he became alarmed about his health, and went to consult a physician other than his ordinary medical attendant, who warned him that he was in a dangerous state of health, and prescribed for him. He never communicated this circumstance to the company. In September the premium was paid, and the policy effected. On the receipt for the premium was indorsed a condition that if any variation should have taken place in the health of the assured since the date of the medical examination, and before actual payment of the premium, the receipt should be void. Eight months after the assured died; it was not proved satisfactorily of what disease:—Held, that the non-communication to the company of his change in health and visit to the physician was fraudulent, and vitiated the policy. British Equitable Insurance Co. v. G. W. Ry., 38 L. J., Ch. 314; 20 L. T. 422; 17 W. R. 561—L.JJ.

Description—Residence.]—In a proposal for insurance against accidents, the "name, residence, profession or occupation of the person whose life is proposed to be insured" were stated thus: "I. T. P., Esq., Saltley Hall, Warwickshire." The policy contained a proviso, "that if any statement or allegation contained in the proposal be untrue, or if this policy has been obtained through any misrepresentation, concealment or untrue averment whatsoever, this policy shall be void." I. T. P. was an ironmonger at D., but resided at Saltley Hall:—Held, that there was no untrue though an imperfect statement in the proposal within the meaning of the proviso. Perrins v. Marine and General Travellers' Insurance Society, 2 El. & El. 317; 29 L. J., Q. B. 242; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 627; 2 L. T. 633; 8 W. R. 563—Ex. Ch.

The conditions of an insurance required a declaration of the state of the health of the assured, and the policy was to be valid only if the statement was free from all misrepresentation and reservation; the declaration described the assured as resident at Fisherton Anger; she was then a prisoner in the county gaol there:—Held, that it was a question for the jury whether the imprisonment was a material fact, and ought to have been communicated. Huguenin v. Rayley, 6 Taunt. 186; 16 R. R. 599.

Medical Attendant.]—On an action on a policy, based upon answers by the assured to certain questions, as follows: "If of sober and temperate habits?" "If aware of any disorder or circumstance tending to shorten life?" "Is there any other and what information touching the past or present state of health which the company ought to be made acquainted with?" "Name and address of ordinary medical attendant." The assured had in the year preceding that in which the policy was effected, and in the very same year, been attended for the effects of severe drinking; on the last occasion (a month or two before the policy) for delirium tremens, of which he in two years' time died; and the medical man who had attended him for several years before the policy, and down to his death, was not mentioned as the ordinary medical attendant:—Held, that this justified a verdict for the company, even though the answer to the last question was bonâ fide. Hutton v. Waterloo Life Assurance Co., 1 F. & F. 735.

In effecting a policy on the life of a party, the phrase, "usual medical attendant," means the person who is best acquainted by experience with the constitution of the individual; and, therefore, if a person has been attended by a medical man for several years in serious disorders, and afterwards takes another, who has only seen him once or twice, the giving the name of the latter as his usual medical attendant, without mentioning the circumstances under which he was attended by the other, is a wrong answer, and will vitiate the policy. Huckman v. Fernie, 3 M. & W. 505; 1 H. & H. 149; 7 L. J., Ex. 163; 2 Jur. 444.

Question for Jury—Materiality or Truth.]—F. applied to an insurance office to effect a policy on his life. He received a form of proposal containing questions requiring to be answered. Among these were the following: "Did any of the party's near relations die of consumption or any other pulmonary complaint?" and "Has the party's life been accepted or refused at any office?" To each of these questions F. answered "No." The answers were false. F. signed the proposal, and a declaration accompanying it, by which he agreed "that the particulars mentioned in the proposal should form the basis of the contract." The policy mentioned several things which were warranted by F. The subject of these two answers was not included in such warranty. The policy also contained a proviso, that "if anything so warranted shall not be true, or if any circumstance material to this insurance shall not have been truly stated, or shall have been misrepresented or concealed, or any false statements made to the company in or about the obtaining or effecting of this insurance," the policy should be void, and the premiums paid should be forfeited:—Held, that it was a misdirection to leave it to the jury to say whether the answers to the questions were material as well as false, and if not material, that the plaintiff was entitled to the verdict. The representation being part of the contract, its truth, and not its materiality, was the question. Anderson v. Fitzgerald, 4 H. L. Cas. 484; 17 Jur. 995.

It is a question of fact for the jury whether a fact not communicated was, under the circumstances, one which the assured ought to have communicated. Rawlins v. Desborough, 2 M. & Rob. 328.

—— Intention to Deceive.]—If a policy is granted on the life of A., subject to the condition that if any fraudulent or untrue statement is contained in any of the documents addressed to the insurers in relation to the insurance by A., then the policy to be void; and A. gives, in one of the documents required by the insurers, written answers to questions respecting his bodily health amounting to a negation of his ever having had any serious disorder requiring confinement, except one particularised as being of a week's duration, when, in fact, he had had, subsequently to this, another attack of illness, under which his life was in danger, he makes an untrue statement within the meaning of the condition, and so avoids the policy, although the jury finds that there was no intention to deceive, and no material information withheld. Cazenove v. British Equitable Insurance Co., 29 L. J., C. P. 160; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 826; 1 L. T. 484; 8 W. R. 243—Ex. Ch. See Foster v. Mentor Life Assurance Co., supra, col. 23.

Reading Policy and Declaration together.]—A policy was entered into with a company on the life of H. F., which was founded on a written declaration of the assured, agreed to be the basis of the contract between the parties, and contained a proviso that "if any statement in the declaration (which declaration should be considered as much a part of the policy as if the same had been actually set forth therein) was untrue, or if the assurance by the policy should have been effected by or through any wilful misrepresentation, concealment, or false averment whatsoever, or if the assured should go to any place beyond the limits of Europe, the policy should be void, and all moneys paid in respect thereof should be forfeited to the company." The proposal and declaration contained the usual particulars, and proceeded as follows: "I declare that the above written particulars are correct and true throughout, and I agree that this proposal and declaration shall be the basis of the contract between me and the Manchester and London Life Assurance Association, and if it shall hereafter appear that any fraudulent concealment or designedly untrue statement be contained therein, then all the money which shall have been paid on account of the assurance made in consequence shall be forfeited, and the policy granted in respect of such assurance shall be absolutely null and void":—Held, that the policy and declaration must be read together, and so reading them the policy was not avoided by an untrue statement in the declaration, unless designedly untrue. Fowkes v. Manchester and London Assurance Association, 3 B. & S. 917; 32 L. J., Q. B. 153; 8 L. T. 309; 11 W. R. 622.

Proposal and Acceptance—Alteration of Risk.]—A proposal was made to an insurance company for an insurance on the life of the proposer, who made, on a form issued by the company, statements as to his state of health and other matters, and a declaration that the statements were true, and were to be taken as the basis of the contract. The proposal was accepted at a specified premium, but upon the terms that no insurance should take effect till the premium was paid. Before tender of the premium there was a material alteration in the state of the health of the proposer, and the company refused to accept the premium or to issue a policy:—Held, that the nature of the risk having been altered at the time of the tender of the premium, there was no contract binding the company to issue a policy. Canning v. Farquhar, 55 L. J., Q. B. 225; 16 Q. B. D. 727; 54 L. T. 350; 34 W. R. 423—C. A.

Quære, whether, if there had been no alteration in the risk, the company would have been legally entitled to refuse to accept the premium, and to issue a policy. Ib.

Form of Proposal—"Residence."]—In a form of proposal to an assurance office for a policy of life insurance, the residence of the proposer was stated to be "191, Great Ancots Street, Manchester." The proposer was at the time temporarily staying at the address given, and really resided in Ireland, whither he returned three months afterwards. The proposer agreed that if anything contrary to the truth were stated in the proposal, the policy to be granted in pursuance thereof should be absolutely void:—Held, in an action on a policy issued in accordance with the proposal, that the declaration of the assured as to residence was not, according to the true construction of the word in the form of proposal, untrue so as to render the policy void. Grogan v. London and Manchester Industrial Assurance Co., 53 L. T. 761; 50 J. P. 134.

Bill to Rectify—Mistake or Misrepresentation.]—See Parsons v. Bignold, supra, col. 7.

Warranty of Truth of Answers—"Strictly Temperate."]—A. applied to an insurance office to effect a policy on his life. He received a printed form of proposal containing questions. Among these was the following: Question 7 (a). Are you temperate in your habits? (b) and have you always been strictly so? A. answered, (a) "Temperate"; (b) "Yes." Subjoined to the printed questions was a declaration, which A. signed, to the effect that the foregoing statements were true, and that the assured agreed that this declaration should be the basis of the contract, and that if any untrue averment, &c., was made the policy was to be absolutely void, and all moneys received as premium forfeited. The policy recited the above declaration as the basis of the contract. After A.'s decease the insurance company refused payment of the policy on the ground that the above-mentioned answer was false in fact. In an action on the policy:—Held, that the declaration of A., taken in connection with the policy, constituted an express warranty that the answer to question 7 was true in fact; and as the evidence clearly proved that A.'s averment as to his temperance was untrue, the policy was absolutely null and void. Thomson v. Weems, 9 App. Cas. 671—H. L. (Sc.)

—— Consideration of Contract.]—In the proposal to an insurance company for an insurance on his life, the assured had made certain statements as to his health and previous applications for insurance, and had also agreed that these statements were by him "warranted to be true, and were offered to the company as a consideration of the contract." A policy was afterwards issued by the company in consideration of the application for the policy, which was thereby made a part of the contract, and of the payment of the premium. In an action upon the policy by the administrator of the assured :—Held, that, by the agreement in the proposal, the truth of the statements, therein warranted, was a condition precedent, and that, the statements being in fact untrue, the defendants were not liable under the policy. Hambrough v. Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, 72 L. T. 140—C. A.

Conditions Precedent binding on Representative.]—A policy of assurance against injury and death by accident after reciting that A., thereinafter called the assured, was desirous of effecting an assurance, witnessed that the insurers accepted the risk, subject nevertheless to the several provisions thereinafter contained, and to the conditions and stipulations indorsed thereon which were to be conditions precedent to the right of the assured to sue or recover thereunder :—Held, that the conditions were conditions precedent to the right not only of the assured but of his legal personal representatives, to recover thereunder. Cawley v. National Employers' Assurance Association, 1 Cab. & E. 597.

Death accelerated by Disease or Infirmity.]—One of the conditions provided that no claim should be made under the policy in respect of any injury, unless the same should be occasioned directly or solely by external or material causes visibly operating upon the person of the assured, whereof proof satisfactory to the insurers should be furnished, and that the policy did not insure against death, &c., accelerated or promoted by any disease or bodily infirmity, or any natural cause arising within the system of the assured, whether accelerated by accident or not. A. met with an accident, upon which death ensued, but death would not have ensued had he not at the time of the accident been suffering from gallstones : — Held, that the insurers were not liable. Ib.

b. Agents and Referees.

Fraud of Referees.]—Acting upon a policy sealed by the defendants, which recited that the plaintiff had made a proposal, whereby it was declared that J. had not had any disease tending to shorten life, and that they "had thereupon undertaken the proposed insurance, subject to the terms and conditions therein and thereunder expressed." The conditions contained no further warranty than the above declaration. Pleas alleged that the policy was obtained by fraud, false statements, and false concealment of material facts. A fourth plea, that the declaration in the policy, "that J. had not had any disease tending to shorten life," was not true. On the trial it appeared that the proposal referred to the answers of J. and two referees, rendered to another insurance company, and that it concluded with a declaration, "that we believe the above particulars and statements are true." The jury found that the statements made by J. and the referees were false, and that there was fraud on their part against the defendants, but no fraud on the part of the plaintiff :—Held, that the life insured and the referees were not the agents of the person effecting the insurance so as to make their fraud that of the person effecting the insurance. Wheelton v. Hardisty, 8 El. & Bl. 232 ; 27 L. J., Q. B. 241 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 14 ; 6 W. R. 539—Ex. Ch.

Held, also, that the fourth plea referred to the statement recited in the policy, and was proved. Ib.

Held, also, that there was no warranty of the truth of the matters recited in the policy to have been declared in the proposal, nor anything in the nature of a contract, shewing an intention that the truth of those matters should be the basis of the contract. Ib.

Representation of Medical Man.]—A female upon whose life it was proposed to effect an insurance was represented to the insurers, in December, 1822, by A., a medical man, as enjoying ordinarily a good state of health. The representation was repeated by A. in March, and the insurance was effected in April, 1823. Between December, 1822, and March, 1823, she had been ill with a pulmonary attack, and was attended by B. ; but no disclosure of these circumstances was made to the insurers. In April, 1824, she died of a pulmonary disease :—Held, on motion for a new trial, that the jury ought to have been called on to consider whether the illness in 1823, and the attendance of B., ought to have been disclosed to the insurers ; and that it was not sufficient to direct them generally to consider whether or not there had been any misrepresentation. Morrison v. Muspratt, 4 Bing. 60 ; 12 Moore, 231 ; 5 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 63.

Life of A. insured for Benefit of B.—Representations by A.]—A party whose life is insured is not the general agent for the assured ; and, therefore, the policy is not void by reason that such party failed to communicate a material fact, as to which he was not interrogated by the insurers, unless he was aware of the materiality of the fact, and studiously concealed it. Rawlins v. Desborough, 2 M. & Rob. 328.

Where an insurance was effected on the life of A. for the benefit of B., and the insurance office acted upon A.'s own representation as to the state of his health, and it turned out that he was not an insurable life :—Held, that B. could not maintain an action on the policy although he was not privy to the representation. Maynard v. Rhodes, 5 D. & R. 266 ; 1 Car. & P. 360.

In an insurance upon the life of another, the life insured, if applied to for information, is, in giving such information, impliedly the agent of the party insuring who is bound by his statements, and must suffer if they are false, although he is unacquainted with the life insured, and the servant of the insurance office undertakes to do all that is required by his office. Everett v. Desborough, 5 Bing. 503 ; 3 M. & P. 190 ; 7 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 223 ; 30 R. R. 709.

VII. PREMIUMS.

a. Stipulations as to Payment.

Time for.]—Where one, as a member of a life insurance society for the benefit of widows and female relations, entered into a policy with the society for an annuity to his widow after his death, in consideration of a quarterly premium to be paid to the society during his life ; and the society covenanted with him and his executors, that if he should pay to their clerk the quarterly premiums on the quarter-days during his life, and if he should also pay his proportion of contributions, which the members of the society should, during his life, be called on to make, in order to supply any deficiencies in their funds; then, on due proof of his death, the society engaged to pay the annuity to his widow: and by the rules of the society, if any member neglected to pay up the quarterly premiums for fifteen days after they were due, the policy was declared to be void, unless the member (continuing in as good health as when the policy expired) paid up the arrears within six months, and five shillings per month extra:—Held, that a member insuring, having died, leaving a quarterly payment overdue at the time of his death, the policy expired; and that a tender of the sum by the executor, though made within fifteen days after it became due, did not satisfy the requisition of the policy and the rules of the society, which required such payment to be made by the member in his lifetime, continuing in as good health as when the policy expired. Want v. Blunt, 12 East, 183; 11 R. R. 340.

—— Continuance—From Year to Year.]—A policy was headed, "The annual premium 33*l.* whole term, payable by quarterly instalments of 8*l.* 5*s.* each." The policy was dated the 2nd of August, 1856, and recited a payment up to the 2nd of November of that year, and declared that if the life insured should die "before the expiration of twelve calendar months from the date hereof," and the assured should "on or before that period, or on or before the expiration of every succeeding twelve calendar months, pay the annual amount of premium," the insurance office should be liable. If the life should die before the whole of the quarterly payments were payable, the directors might deduct from the sum insured what would be sufficient to satisfy the whole of the premiums for that year. If the life died before having been assured fifteen months and made two annual payments, the policy was to be void. The life died within twelve months after the third quarterly payment became due, but before it was paid:—Held, that the policy must be construed to have become void on nonpayment of any quarterly premium, the payment of all the quarterly instalments being a condition precedent to the continuance of the policy for the current year. Phœnix Life Assurance Co. v. Sheridan, 8 H. L. Cas. 745; 31 L. J., Q. B. 91; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 174; 3 L. T. 564. Cf. Stobell v. Heywood, col. 89.

—— Option to Refuse. — Estoppel.] — See Simpson v. Accidental Death Assurance Co., 2 C. B. (N.S.) 257; 26 L. J., C. P. 289; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1079; 5 W. R. 307, infra, col. 82.

—— Receipt after Death.]—By a policy on the life of J., the sum insured was to be paid after his death if the plaintiff should, "on or before the 13th October in every succeeding year during the natural life" of J., pay to the company a certain annual premium; and the insurance was subject to conditions on the back of the policy, by which the policy was to be void if the premiums were not paid within certain limited times after they became due, viz. yearly premiums within thirty days; but the policy might be revived within three months on proof of the health of the party on whose life the insurance was made, and the payment of a fine. After the thirty days from the last 13th October when the premium became due, but within the three months, the plaintiff paid the premium, which was received by the company, for the revival of the policy to the next ensuing 13th October. At the time such premium was paid J. was dead, but neither the plaintiff nor the company was then aware of such death:—Held, that it was essential to the revival of the policy that J. should be alive at the time of such revival, and that the company had not waived this by the receipt of the premium in ignorance of his death. Pritchard v. Merchants' and Tradesmen's Mutual Life Insurance Society, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 622; 27 L. J., C. P. 169; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 307; 6 W. R. 340.

—— Re-Insurance — Accounts.]—Two life assurance companies, P. and A., were in the habit of re-assuring to each other in respect of policies granted to third persons by the re-assured. By the course of business, as any premium became due from one company to the other, the company entitled to the premium gave to the company owing it a receipt for the amount: on periodical settlements of account between P. and A. the premiums due on each side were taken into account, and the balance struck and paid by the party against whom it stood. No other payments passed between P. and A. A premium being due from P. to A., A. gave P. a receipt for the amount. At this time A. was indebted to P.; the amount of the premium went into the account in the usual course of business, and at the next settlement a balance was due from and paid by A. to P.:—Held, that the premium was paid at the time when the receipt was given. Prince of Wales Assurance Co. v. Harding, El. Bl. & El. 183; 27 L. J., Q. B. 297; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 851.

—— Nonpayment of Premiums — Dropping of Policy — Renewal.]—One of the conditions indorsed on a policy was, that no insurance would be held in force until the premium was paid, nor would any policy be valid beyond fifteen days after the expiration of any year unless the premium for its renewal was paid. Insurances might be renewed within three months on satisfactory proof of the health of the life insured. In the directions of the company to their agents every policy was to be renewed within fifteen days after the premium became due; and if any policy was not renewed within fifteen days the agent was to give notice thereof to the secretary, and the policy could not afterwards be renewed without a fine and subject to the conditions of the company; and all receipts for premiums for the renewal of policies not paid within a month from the expiration of the policies were to be returned at the end of that period. A policy was effected with an agent, who took bills for the amount of the premiums, debiting himself with the amount of the premiums without communicating the transaction to the company. The bills not having been paid, he took a security for them. A subsequent premium having accrued due in December, 1846, the usual receipt in blank for the premium was forwarded to the agent. The premium was not paid, nor did the agent at the time it was due debit himself with the premium by any entry in a book or account; but in his next quarterly account, in March, 1847, he debited himself therewith, and shortly afterwards paid the account at the request of the treasurer without communicating to the company. Similar transactions took place in 1847 and 1848; the life died in 1849. The receipts for the premiums still in blank were handed back to the company. Shortly afterwards a correspondence took place between the secretary and the agent, the agent claiming the amount of the policy; but as he had no assignment nor possession of the policy the company declined to pay unless the insurer joined in the receipt for the amount; and a report was prepared by the solicitor of the company and sent to the agent, suggesting that he or that the agent should proceed against the insurer to ascertain their rights. The insurer having declined to join in the receipt, the company refused to give credit for the amount of the insurance against the balance by the agent, for which they brought an action, and recovered a verdict without giving credit for the three premiums of the disputed policy paid by the agent. The amount was demanded and paid by the agent to the company:—Held, first, that the policy had dropped:—Held, secondly, that the forfeiture of the policy was not waived by the report and correspondence relating to it:—Held, thirdly, that supposing the policy to be set up by retention of the premiums, the agent had a lien on the policy enforceable in equity for the amount of them. Busted v. West of England Fire and Life Assurance Co., 5 Ir. Ch. R. 553.

Creditor and Debtor.]—A creditor by bond cannot stand his own insurer, and charge the premium to his debtor. Hutchinson v. Wilson, 4 Bro. C. C. 488.

Deduction of Premiums—Income Tax.]—See post, REVENUE.

b. PARTIES.

Discount, to whom belonging.]—The 10 per cent. discount usually allowed by insurance companies on punctual payment of the premiums belongs, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, not to the insurance agent, but to his principal. Spain (Queen) v. Parr, 39 L. J., Ch. 73; 21 L. T. 555; 18 W. R. 110.

The plaintiff mortgaged her life interest in a fund to the defendants, it being part of the agreement that a policy should be effected on her life, and the premiums be secured on the mortgaged property. In an action for redemption the chief clerk found that 173*l.* 19*s.* 1*d.*, "premiums paid on policies," was due from the plaintiff to the defendants. L., a solicitor and agent to all the parties, paid the premiums to the insurance offices, receiving from them 5 per cent. commission. On summons to vary the chief clerk's certificate by the amount of the commission, on the ground that the "premiums paid on policies" only amounted to 165*l.* 5*s.*:—Held, that after the premiums had been paid to the insurance offices, the mortgagor had no interest in them. The insurance offices received the premiums, and paid the commission out of them to their own agent. Leete v. Wallace, 58 L. T. 577.

On Winding-up of Company.]—When there is a covenant to pay the premiums on a policy of assurance in an assurance company, and the company has been ordered to be wound up since the date of the covenant, the covenantee has no equity to sustain a bill praying that the amount of the premiums may in future be paid to him. Garniss v. Heinke, 40 L. J., Ch. 306.

Bankrupt.]—The mortgagor of a policy became bankrupt, but, notwithstanding his bankruptcy, continued to pay the premiums on the policy:—Held, that the premiums so paid were in the nature of salvage moneys, and ought to be repaid with interest at 4 per cent. out of the policy moneys. Shearman v. British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Co., 41 L. J., Ch. 466; L. R. 14 Eq. 4; 26 L. T. 570; 20 W. R. 620.

Mortgagees.]—A policy on the life of G. granted to a trustee for her, was assigned to trustees, to invest the proceeds at her death for the benefit of C. for life, for her separate use, without power of anticipation, and after her death upon trusts as she should appoint, and in default of appointment for the persons who would be entitled to her personal estate. The trustees had power to pay the premiums. Notice was given to the assurance company of the assignment. C. subsequently, by a deed to which G. was a party, appointed the policy and the moneys to become due thereon to the plaintiffs to secure the repayment of moneys with interest at 5 per cent. advanced to G. for the benefit of herself and C. and children. Notice was given to the surviving trustee of the settlement and to the assurance company. The plaintiffs had, in consequence of the trustee and others interested in the policy refusing to pay them, paid the premiums and kept the policy on foot. On the death of G. the assurance company paid the policy moneys to the trustees, who refused to pay the plaintiffs the sums due to them. The policy moneys were afterwards paid into court. On a bill filed by the plaintiffs:—Held, that they were entitled to be repaid at once the moneys which they had advanced for the payment of the premiums with interest at 4 per cent., and 1 per cent. more on the death of C. Gill v. Downing, L. R. 17 Eq. 316; 30 L. T. 157; 22 W. R. 360.

When a policy was deposited to secure a simple contract debt, without any agreement as to interest, and the creditor paid the premiums down to the death of the debtor:—Held, that the policy was charged not only with the original debt and the amount of the premiums, but also with interest on both sums at 4*l.* per cent. Kerr, In re, 38 L. J., Ch. 539; 17 W. R. 989.

Mortgagees of a policy receiving after the death of a mortgagor a sum exceeding the amount due to them for principal and interest in respect of the mortgage debt, held entitled to retain the balance in respect of other unsecured debts due to them from the mortgagor. Hazelfoot, In re, Chauntler's Claim, 41 L. J., Ch. 286; L. R. 13 Eq. 327; 26 L. T. 146. And see sub tit. ASSIGNMENT OF POLICY, infra.

Where a decree in a foreclosure and redemption suit directed an account of principal, interest and costs, including premiums paid on a life policy, which had been delivered to a trustee for the mortgagee as a further security, and proceeded in a common form, "on the plaintiff paying what shall be found due for principal, interest and costs":—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to charge interest at 4*l.* per cent. on the premiums so paid by him or his trustee, within six years before the certificate. Bellamy v. Brickenden, 2 John. & H. 137.

A policy was charged with two debts pari passu. One of the mortgagees paid the premiums to keep it up till his death, after which his legal personal representative continued to pay them till the policy fell in :—Held, that the premiums paid by the legal personal representative, together with interest (but not those paid by the mortgagee himself), must be repaid out of the policy moneys in priority to the debts secured. Norris v. Caledonian Insurance Co., 38 L. J., Ch. 721 ; L. R. 8 Eq. 127 ; 17 W. R. 954 ; 20 L. T. 939.

P., being tenant for life of real estate, with remainder to his first and other sons by his then wife in tail male, remainder to himself in fee, applied to a life insurance company for a loan of 12,500*l.* ; and the company having agreed to lend the same, a mortgage was entered into between P. and four persons, who were the trustees of the company. The trustees were not so named in the mortgage, which recited that there was no probability of the mortgagor having issue by his then wife ; that a policy had been effected with the company, whereby the company insured to the four trustees 13,900*l.* in case of the death of P., leaving male issue by his then wife, and in case he should keep up the annual premiums. The indenture then witnessed, that in consideration of 12,500*l.*, the life estate, and also the reversion in fee, of P. were conveyed to the four trustees by way of mortgage ; and that in case P. should neglect to pay the premiums, it should be lawful for the mortgagees to pay them, and that all such sums so paid by them should be charged on the hereditaments conveyed. Subsequently another mortgage was entered into between the same parties by way of further charge, accompanied by a similar policy. P. paid the premiums on the policies for four years ; the directors then, at his request, reduced the amount of the premiums, and he continued to pay the reduced amounts for three years longer. P. then ceased to pay the premiums. The company debited his account with the annual amounts, and added them to their mortgage debt. P. died without leaving issue male, and, on taking the accounts in a mortgagee's suit against the estate, the chief clerk disallowed to the company the amounts with which they had debited the estate on account of the premiums ; but the court, on motion to vary the chief clerk's certificate, held that the company was to be allowed the sums with which they had so debited P.'s estate. Fitzwilliam (Earl) v. Price, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 889.

A mortgage was executed of a reversionary interest in land to secure money alleged to be due by the mortgagor, with a covenant by the mortgagor to keep up policies on his own life, which were assigned by way of collateral security. The mortgagor did not pay the premiums, but they were paid by the mortgagee, who subsequently let some of the policies drop, and others he sold. A bill was filed by the assignees of the mortgagor to set aside the deed, and a decree was made setting it aside as fraudulent and void, upon the terms of the repayment of the money actually advanced, with interest, with a direction, inserted at the instance of the plaintiff, that an account should be taken of the payments and receipts in respect of the policies of insurance, and that if it should be found that the creditor had received more than he had paid, he should pay over the balance to the plaintiff ; and if it should be found that the contrary was the case, he should be paid the difference. Upon taking the accounts it was found that the payments in respect of the policies were in excess of the receipts. Upon a petition of rehearing to amend the decree :—Held, that the direction as to the policies had been erroneously inserted, and ought to be struck out ; that the deed having been set aside as fraudulent and void, the covenant for the payment of the premiums was consequently void also ; and therefore that the creditor was not entitled to be credited for any payments which he had made in excess of the receipts. Pennell v. Millar, 23 Beav. 172 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 699 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 850 ; 5 W. R. 215.

Tenant for Life.]—The tenant for life of an estate, the investments of which the trustees had power to continue, paid the premiums for thirty-three years on a policy which was included in the estate. Soon after the insured life fell in the tenant for life died :—Held, that the policy money must be paid to the trust estate, the tenant for life having no lien. Waugh's Trusts, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 629 ; 25 W. R. 555.

Trustees.]—When funds were given to trustees of a marriage settlement upon trust to pay premiums on a policy on the life of the husband if the latter did not observe his covenant to pay them, and the trustees paid premiums accordingly, and on the husband's death received the sum secured by the policy :—Held, that they were entitled to receive from the insolvent husband's estate, out of a dividend which had been declared, the amount of the premiums paid by them, together with banker's interest and costs. Miller, In re, Wardley, Ex parte, 6 Ch. D. 790 ; 37 L. T. 38 ; 25 W. R. 881.

Held, also, that proof by the trustees in respect of the estimated value of the husband's covenant at the date of the liquidation was not impeachable on the ground that the receipt by the trustees of the policy moneys, coupled with the proof, would cause them to receive more than 20*s.* in the pound. Ib.

Trustees of a settlement of a policy being without funds to pay the premiums, assigned the policy to a creditor, and afterwards assigned the trust property to new trustees appointed in their room ; but the policy was not mentioned in the assignment to the new trustees :—Held, that the new trustees were not entitled to the policy as against the creditor. Johnson v. Swire, 3 Giff. 194 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 670 ; 4 L. T. 677.

Executors.]—An executor, without a special authority, applied the testator's assets for several years in insuring the life of a debtor to the estate. He then dropped the policy, without consulting the parties beneficially interested, and without applying for the direction of the court in a suit for administration of the estate then pending :—Held, that he was liable for the whole sum which would have been recovered if he had kept up the policy. Garner v. Moore, 3 Drew. 277 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 687 ; 3 W. R. 497.

—— Payment of Debt.]—Where the relation of debtor and creditor subsists, and a policy is effected by the creditor directly or indirectly at the expense of the debtor, under circumstances which shew that it was intended as a security or an indemnity to the creditor, he is bound, on payment of the debt, to deliver up the policy. Courtnay v. Wright, 2 Giff. 337 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1283 ; 3 L. T. 433 ; 9 W. R. 153.

A tradesman insured the life of his debtor, in his own name ; he charged the debtor with the premiums, but they were never paid by him. On the death of the debtor :—Held, that his representatives were entitled to the produce of the policy after payment of the debt and premiums.

Morland v. Isaacs, 20 Beav. 389; 24 L. J., Ch. 753; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 989; 3 W. R. 397.

Where a policy has been effected on the life of a debtor, as a security to the lender of money, and the lender charges the premiums to the account of the debtor, who pays them, if the principal is afterwards paid, the debtor or his representative is entitled to the policy. Holland v. Smith, 6 Esp. 11; 9 R. R. 801.

A money-lender agreed to advance a sum at 8*l*. per cent. per annum, and the premiums on the insurance of the borrower's life. The borrower executed a bond with sureties, conditioned for payment of an annuity during his life equal to the above aggregate sums, and any increase in premiums by reason of the grantor being abroad; and the condition provided for the cessor of the annuity on notice and payment of the original sum advanced, and all arrears of the annuity up to that time, but said nothing as to the policy:—Held, that, on redemption, the borrower had no equity to have the policy delivered to him. Gottlieb v. Cranch, 4 De G. M. & G. 440; 22 L. J., Ch. 912; 17 Jur. 704.

Principal and Surety.]—A debtor deposited a policy with his creditor as a security. Afterwards the debtor, with a surety who did not know of the deposit, covenanted with the creditor for payment of the debt, and contemporaneously the debtor executed a deed of counter-security to the surety, neither deed referring to the deposit of the policy. Subsequently the debtor assigned the policy to the creditor as a security:—Held, that the surety, on paying the debt, was entitled to the policy. Lake v. Bratton, 8 De G. M. & G. 440.

A debtor and a surety entered into a bond to secure payment by instalments of a debt, and the expenses of effecting a policy on the debtor's life in the creditor's name as a collateral security. The policy was effected, but after a time neither the debtor nor his surety paid the premiums on the policy, though required to do so by the creditor, who paid them himself:—Held, on the death of the debtor, that he and his surety had not abandoned the policy, but that it was redeemable by the surety on repayment of the premiums paid by the debtor. Drysdale v. Piggott, 8 De G. M. & G. 546; 25 L. J., Ch. 878; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1078; 4 W. R. 773.

One of the makers of a joint and several promissory note, who was a surety for the other, effected an insurance on the life of the latter, with his privity and concurrence, for an amount equal to that secured by the note. The principal died, having appointed the surety his executor, and the surety received the insurance money:—Held, that to the extent to which it was not required for indemnifying the surety, it ought to be applied in payment of the debt. Lea v. Hinton, 5 De G. M. & G. 823—L.JJ.

Voluntary Payment.]—The voluntary payment of premiums on a policy confers on the payer no interest in the policy. Burridge v. Row, 13 L. J., Ch. 173; 9 Jur. 299.

Lien—Salvage.]—When a person, not the sole beneficial owner, pays the premiums to keep up a policy of life insurance, he is entitled to a lien on the policy of its proceeds in the following cases: (1) By contract with the beneficial owner; (2) By reason of the right of trustees to an indemnity out of their trust property for money expended by them in its preservation; (3) By subrogation to their right of some person who, at the request of trustees, has advanced money for the preservation of the property; (4) By reason of the right of a mortgagee to add to his charge any money paid by him to preserve the property. In no other cases can a lien on a policy for premiums paid be acquired either by a stranger or by a part owner of the policy. Tharp, In re (2 Sm. & Giff. 578, n.), Swan v. Swan (8 Price, 518; 22 R. R. 770), and Hamilton v. Denny (1 Br. & B. 199; 12 R. R. 14), commented on. Leslie, In re, Leslie v. French, 52 L. J., Ch. 762; 23 Ch. D. 552; 48 L. T. 564; 31 W. R. 561.

Proof of Interest.]—Where A. effects a policy, in his own name, upon the life of B., declaring he is interested in B.'s life, such policy, primâ facie, belongs to A., and the mere proof that some of the premiums were paid by B. does not rebut that presumption. Triston v. Hardey, 14 Beav. 232.

Where A. pays the premiums upon a policy on his life, but the benefit of it is claimed by B., the onus of proof lies on the latter, though the policy is in his name. Pfleger v. Browne, 28 Beav. 391.

A. being unable to pay the premiums of policies effected by him on his own life, gave B. a post-obit bond for 14,000*l*., payable on the death of A.'s father, if A. survived him, and if B. had in the meantime kept up the policies. In paying that sum, regard was had not only to the amount of premiums required to keep the policies on foot, but also to the amount of premiums to be paid for keeping the life of A. insured in 14,000*l*., to be paid in the event of his dying in his father's lifetime. This was known to A., who knew also that B. intended to effect this latter insurance, but there was not any agreement that B. should do so. B. did effect the insurance. A. died in his father's lifetime, appointing B. one of his executors:—Held, that no contract for B. to insure being proved, he, and not the estate of A., was entitled to the benefit of the policy which A. had effected. Freme v. Brade, 2 De G. & J. 582; 27 L. J., Ch. 697; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 748; 6 W. R. 739.

Held, also, that if the transactions as to the post-obit bond were a fraud upon A., then B. had no insurable interest in A.'s life, the insurance office was not liable on the policy, and the sum insured could not, if paid by the office, be claimed by A.'s estate. Ib.

Payment of Premiums by Stranger—Lien.]—A., the owner of land, and also of a policy of life assurance on his own life in the office of the B. company, mortgaged both these properties to the B. company. It was provided that the mortgage debt should be reduced by instalments, and the mortgage deed contained a covenant by A. to pay the premiums on the policy, and a power of sale was given to the mortgagees (inter alia), if there should be a breach of the covenant, to keep up the policy. A. sold the land subject to the mortgage to C., but retained the policy, and agreed to pay the premiums. He afterwards failed to pay the premiums. The B. company thereupon called upon C. to pay the premiums, and threatened to call in the mortgage and exercise their power of sale if he failed to do so. C. accordingly paid the premiums, and claimed to have it declared that he was entitled to a lien on the policy for the premiums so paid:—Held, that C. was not under the circumstances entitled to any lien on the policy. Held further (per Lindley, L.J.), that C. might have been entitled to a lien if the terms of the agreement between him and A. had not by implication excluded it, and that the list of persons in Leslie, In re (23 Ch. D. 552), who may obtain a lien on a policy is not exhaustive. Strutt v. Tippett, 62 L. T. 475—C. A.

A., the owner of land and also of a policy of life assurance for 5,000*l.* in the office of the B. company, mortgaged both those properties to the B. company. The mortgage deed contained a covenant that the B. company should not call in the mortgage on the land so long (amongst other things) as the premiums on the policy were being duly paid, and also a covenant that if the premiums were not regularly paid by A. they might be paid by the B. company, and added to their security. A. sold the land subject to the mortgage to C., but retained the policy, and afterwards failed to pay the premiums. Thereupon the B. company gave notice to C. that, unless he paid the premiums, they would at once call in the mortgage deed. C. accordingly paid the premiums, and, in an action brought by him against A., sought to have it declared that he was entitled to a lien on the policy for the sums he had so paid:—Held, that C. was under these circumstances not entitled to any lien. Leslie, In re, Leslie v. French (23 Ch. D. 552), considered. Ib.

Under the provisions of a private estate act the trustee of a term of years in certain settled estates of which W. had been tenant for life, was bound to apply the rents of the estates, first, in the payment from time to time of the interest upon certain incumbrances existing before the passing of the act, and subject thereto in the payment from time to time of the interest on sums to be raised by W. by mortgages created under the powers conferred by the act, and of the premiums on policies of life assurance, constituting the collateral security for the repayment of those sums, the equity of redemption being reserved to W. The rents having become insufficient, the trustee, in order to save one of the policies from lapsing, paid a premium out of his own moneys. He did this without any request from the mortgagee or from the owner of the equity of redemption of the policy. The life insured having dropped, and the proceeds of the policy having been received by the mortgagee:—Held, that the trustee was not entitled to any lien on the proceeds in respect of the premiums which he had paid, he not being a trustee of the policy. Winchilsea (Earl) Policy Trusts, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 20; 39 Ch. D. 168; 59 L. T. 167; 37 W. R. 77.

By a deed, A. agreed that B. should insure her life, and that the costs of such insurance, and the payments for keeping the same on foot, should be paid out of the property charged, and she directed the trustees to make the necessary payments for effecting and keeping on foot the policies. The trustees did not make the payments, but the policy was kept on foot by B.:—Held, that he was entitled to interest thereon, at 4 per cent. Hodgson v. Hodgson, 2 Keen, 704; 7 L. J., Ch. 5.

A testator, by his will, bequeathed "one half of the property he left to his executrix, to be disposed of at her death to his nearest relation in law, provided he or she professed the established religion," and appointed his widow his executrix, and bequeathed to her all his worldly substance of, what nature and kind soever, except such part as was before devised for her own sole use and purpose. At his death, a part of the testator's property consisted of two annuities and two policies of insurances, effected by him on the lives of the cestui qui vies named in the deeds of annuity. The executrix having regularly received the annuities, and paid the premiums on the policies, on the dropping of the lives received from the insurance offices the sums insured on each life:—Held, on a bill filed after the decease of the executrix and tenant for life of the property of the testator, by the testator's nearest relation in law, and a professing Protestant, to recover the moiety of the property so bequeathed, that the tenant for life being a specific legatee of those annuities, which were freehold, was not bound to keep up the insurances, but that having done so she was entitled to be repaid out of the plaintiff's share a moiety of the sums so advanced, with interest; and as the moiety to which the plaintiff would be otherwise entitled was thereby exhausted, that the bill should be dismissed, and from the manner in which the cause had been conducted by the plaintiff, with costs. Money v. Gibbs, 1 Dr. & Wal. 394.

Payment by Person not sole Beneficial Owner—Lien—Salvage.]—E. mortgaged a policy of life assurance to F., and afterwards filed a petition for liquidation. Resolutions of the creditors were passed, under which E.'s friends were to pay 2*s.* in the pound on the unsecured debts, and the trustee was to assign to a nominee of the friends all E.'s property except the equities of redemption in the securities held by secured creditors. The terms of these resolutions were carried out, and E. obtained his discharge. Shortly after this, in 1883, E. agreed with D., who professed to be F.'s agent, for the purchase of F.'s interest in the policy, but no such purchase was ever carried out. Shortly after this agreement D. informed E. that none of the incumbrancers would pay the premium for that year, and E. paid it on the faith, as he deposed, of his interest under the agreement. There was no evidence that D. had any authority to enter into any agreement on behalf of F., or that F. had any knowledge of the contract, or of the payment by E. F.'s representative, Mrs. F., brought action to enforce her security, and the policy was sold for much less than the amount of the mortgage debt:—Held, that E. was entitled to be repaid out of the proceeds of sale the premiums for 1883 which he had paid, and that the residue must be paid to Mrs. F. But held, on appeal, that E.'s payment of a premium in his character of owner of the equity of redemption could not give him a lien in priority to the mortgage debt; that E.'s belief that he had a valid contract for purchase, when he had not, could not give him any advantage as regarded the premium, there being nothing to shew that F. knew of the alleged contract or of the payment of the premium; that, in the state of the evidence, no request from F. to pay the premium could be inferred, and no equity could be held to have arisen against F. on the ground of acquiescence or lying by; and that the fact that the policy had been preserved by E.'s payment did not give him a right to have the premium repaid nor give him a lien on the policy for it; and that, therefore, the whole proceeds of sale must be paid to Mrs. F. without deducting the premium. Semble, the maritime doctrine of salvage has no application to the payment of premiums on a policy. West v. Reid (2 Hare, 249); Burridge v. Row Return of—Purchase of Reversion set aside.]—The purchaser of a contingent reversionary interest insured the life of the vendor and paid premiums for some years. The sale was subsequently set aside as an unconscionable bargain:—Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to repayment of the premiums. Fry v. Lane, 58 L. J., Ch. 113; 40 Ch. D. 312; 60 L. T. 12; 37 W. R. 135.

—— Wagering Policies.]—J. H. effected with the defendant company two policies of insurance on the life of his father, J. H., in which he had no insurable interest. According to the policies the premiums were to be paid weekly. J. H., the son, continued to make these weekly payments for some years. J. H., the father, had at first no knowledge of the insurances effected on his life; but when he became aware of them he objected to their being continued, and gave notice to that effect to the company. J. H., the son, then gave notice to the defendants that the policies were at an end, and claimed the return of the amount of the premiums. The defendants refused to pay, and J. H., the son, brought his action for their recovery, and the county court judge gave judgment for the plaintiff:—Held, that under the circumstances of the case the policies were wagering policies, and consequently the premiums paid in respect of them could not be recovered. Howard v. Refuge Friendly Society, 54 L. T. 644.

Trustee of Policy unable to pay Premiums.]—A husband, by his marriage settlement, covenanted to keep up policies on his life for the benefit of himself, wife, and children. He became wholly unable to pay the premiums. The court authorised the trustees to surrender the policies. Beresford v. Beresford, 23 Beav. 222.

And, in another case, under similar circumstances, the court authorised the trustees to sell the policy, and accumulate the produce. Hill v. Trenery, 23 Beav. 16.

Where a trustee is or ought to be in possession of funds to pay the premiums of a policy of insurance, he cannot give a lien on the policy to another party for money advanced by such party to pay the premiums. Clack v. Holland, 19 Beav. 262; 24 L. J., Ch. 13; 18 Jur. 1007; 2 W. R. 402.

c. Covenants to Pay.

Absolute or Conditional Breach—Damages.]—By a Scotch marriage settlement dated the 18th of August, 1873, the husband assigned to trustees two policies on his life for 5,000*l.* each, expiring respectively on the 2nd and 3rd of July, 1875; and he covenanted "on or before the 2nd of July, 1875," to insure his life in the names of the trustees in the sum of 10,000*l.*; the existing and future policies to be held upon trusts for his wife and children. The husband took no steps towards effecting a new policy until the 1st of July, 1875, shortly before which date his health, which had previously been good, had become so bad that he was unable to effect an insurance, and in September following he died:—Held, that the life having become uninsurable on the 1st of July, 1875, did not relieve the husband from the obligation to insure or pay damages, and that accordingly his estate was answerable in damages to the trustees of the settlement. Arthur, In re, Arthur v. Wynne, 49 L. J., Ch. 556; 14 Ch. D. 603; 43 L. T. 46; 28 W. R. 972.

The defendant assigned to the trustees of an assurance society, and as collateral security for a mortgage for advances made by the office, a policy in the society, and covenanted with the trustees to keep it alive; and in case he should not do so, that it should be lawful for them to pay the premiums and keep it alive, and that all sums so paid by them should be charged on the land in the same way as the original mortgage money; but there was no covenant on the part of the defendant to repay any such sums to the trustees. The defendant made default in paying the premium for several years, and such premiums were placed to the credit of the company in their books, in an account kept by them for that purpose, and were yearly debited by them to the mortgage account of the defendant, all which was according to the usual practice of the office. The trustees then sued the defendant for a breach of covenant, and he paid into court 1*s.*:—Held, that assuming the facts to shew that the trustees had paid the annual premiums to the office, they were not entitled to recover more than nominal damages. Brown v. Price, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 598; 27 L. J., C. P. 290; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 882; 6 W. R. 721.

The plaintiff lent to the defendant 600*l.* on the security of a deed, whereby two policies were charged with the payment of the principal and interest. The deed contained a covenant by the defendant to pay the premiums of the policies. By their terms the policies only remained in force provided the premiums were paid every year. The defendant paid the first year's premium only, and the plaintiff having sued him on his covenant for non-payment of the three subsequent years' premiums:—Held, that as it did not appear that the plaintiff had sustained any loss by the defendant's neglect to keep up the policies the measure of damage was not the amount of the three years' premiums, but the plaintiff was entitled to nominal damages only. National Assurance Co. v. Best, 2 H. & N. 605; 27 L. J., Ex. 19; 6 W. R. 78.

—— Forfeiture.]—A debtor having assigned to his creditors a policy on his own life, and covenanted to pay the annual premiums, and not to do anything by which the policy should be forfeited, caused a forfeiture of it by going beyond the limits of Europe without the licence of the assurers, contrary to a condition in the policy:—Held, that the measure of damages for such a breach of covenant was the present value of the policy at the time of forfeiture, taking into consideration that the debtor had covenanted to pay, and taking it as if he would have paid the annual premiums. Hawkins v. Coulthurst, 5 B. & S. 343; 33 L. J., Q. B. 192; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 876; 12 W. R. 825.

Satisfaction.]—D. and P. joined in a covenant in a mortgage deed (as sureties) to pay the premiums on life policies, forming part of the security, and by a contemporaneous instrument, to which they were not parties, the equity of redemption was assigned for the benefit of the creditors of the mortgagor. D., who signed the trust deed as a creditor, being called upon to pay the premium on one policy, applied to B. to do so for him, and assigned to B. the policy; and B. covenanted to pay future premiums. The mortgage was paid off; B. paid the premiums, and the policy was sold by the trustee of the creditors' deed, under a power contained in it. A creditors' suit being instituted, on the question whether D. and P. were entitled as against the other creditors to a lien upon the produce of the policy:—Held, that as between D. and B., and B. and the creditors, such creditors were not entitled to take the money, without making payment in satisfaction of the premiums paid by B. Aylwin v. Witty, 30 L. J., Ch. 860; 9 W. R. 720.

Covenant to Pay — Bankruptcy — Proof — Value.]—Where, in an arrangement matter, a creditor held policies of insurance which the arranging debtor had covenanted to keep up:—Held, that the value of the creditor's interest in the covenant was the sum which the insurance company would accept as a present payment, by way of commutation of the annual premiums, to keep the policies subsisting. Bank of Ireland, Ex parte, S., In re, 17 L. R., Ir. 507.

Action on.]—A deed of assignment of a life policy contained a covenant by the assignor, that he would pay to the company, with whom it was effected, the annual premium and other moneys which should be required to keep the policy on foot, when and as the same should become due and payable; and that, if he should neglect or refuse to pay the annual premium within seven days after the 5th June in every year, it should be lawful for the plaintiff to pay the annual premium, and sue for and recover the same from the defendant in an action, as for money paid by him to and for the use of the defendant, and at his request:—Held, that an action of debt lay on the deed, to recover an annual premium paid by the plaintiff upon default of the defendant in paying the same. Barber v. Butcher, 8 Q. B. 863; 15 L. J., Q. B. 289; 10 Jur. 814.

A loan was granted by an insurance company upon a bond with sureties, and a policy on the life of the borrower, as a collateral security. The premiums were not paid within the days of grace, but were demanded by the company, who brought actions against the sureties of the bond; they refused to pay, and pleaded non est factum and payment. Upon a suit instituted in equity to restrain such actions, and it being contended that the demand by the company, after the policy was actually void, had revived it:—Held, that such revival was neutralised by the fact of refusal to pay, and the bill was dismissed with costs. Edge v. Duke, 18 L. J., Ch. 183.

Pleading.]—A declaration stated, that by deed between the plaintiffs and defendant, reciting that he had effected with the plaintiffs an insurance on his life, he paying the annual premium of 49*l*. 8*s*. 4*d*. on or before the 24th of June in each year, the defendant covenanted with the plaintiffs to pay them the premiums and all other sums of money that should become due in respect of the policy, at the proper times for that purpose, and to do every other matter or thing which would be necessary for keeping on foot the policy. First breach, that the defendant did not pay the premiums which became due in respect of the policy, according to his covenant; but on the contrary, although afterwards, to wit, on the 24th June, 1847, a premium of 49*l*. 8*s*. 4*d*. became due, yet the defendant did not then, or at any other time, pay it. Second breach, that the defendant did not do all such matters and things as were necessary for keeping on foot the policy, but on the contrary, although afterwards, to wit, on the 24th June, 1847, it was necessary in order to keep the policy on foot, that an annual premium should be paid within twenty-one days from that day, yet the defendant did not, within that period, or any other time, pay it:—Held, that both breaches were bad. North British Insurance Co. v. Riky, 2 Ex. 687.

Return of Premiums.]—See Fowler v. Scottish Equitable Life Insurance Society, supra, col. 7.

d. Receipts by Agents.

Authority.]—Upon a policy on the life of A., the premium became due on the 15th March, but was not paid until the 12th April, when the country agent of the company, through whom the insurance had been effected, gave a receipt for the amount of the premium. The instructions given by the company to the agent were, that the premium on every life policy must be received within fifteen days from the time of its becoming due; if not paid within that time, that he was to give immediate notice to the office of that fact, and in the event of his omitting to do so, that his account would be debited for the amount, after the fifteen days had expired. No notice was given to the company of the nonpayment of the premium within the fifteen days; it was therefore entered in their books as paid on the 15th March, and the agent was debited for the amount:—Held, first, that the mere debiting the agent with the premium could not be considered as a payment to the company by the assured; and secondly, that as the agent had no authority to contract for the company, the fact of his receiving the money after the expiration of the fifteen days, and the entry in the company's books debiting him with the amount, were no evidence of a new agreement between the company and the assured. Acey v. Fernie, 7 M. & W. 151; 10 L. J., Ex. 9.

—— After Forfeiture.]—Indorsed upon a policy was a condition that it should be void, and the money secured thereby forfeited to the use of the company, if the insured should go beyond the limits of Europe without the licence of the directors. The condition was infringed by the insured going to reside in Canada, where he died; but, after the breach, the local agent of the company at the place where the policy had been effected continued to receive the usual premiums upon the policy, with notice of the breach of the condition, which he represented as not invalidating the policy, provided the premiums were regularly paid:—Held, that the notice of the breach of the condition given to the agent of the company was constructive notice to the company; and that the latter, whether they had express notice of the breach or not, were precluded by the conduct of their agent from insisting upon the forfeiture upon the death of the insured. Wing v. Harvey, 5 De G. M. & G. 265; 2 Eq. R. 533; 23 L. J., Ch. 511; 18 Jur. 394; 2 W. R. 370.

e. EXTRA OR ADDITIONAL.

Liability.]—An insurance company purchased an annuity, and took as a security an assignment of the whole equitable interest of the grantor in a trust fund, which produced much more than enough to pay the annuity, with a proviso that in case the company should insure any sum not exceeding the price of the annuity, and should pay an additional rate of insurance by reason of the grantor going beyond sea, all sums so paid for additional premiums should be returned out of the life interest and the surplus be held on trust for the grantor. No policy of assurance was, in fact, effected, except that the company became their own insurers by making a policy in a separate branch of their own company:—Held, that though the grantor did in fact go beyond sea for several years, the company was not entitled to charge the premiums for extra risk which had in fact been incurred, no additional premiums having in fact been paid. Grey v. Ellison, 1 Giff. 438; 25 L. J., Ch. 666; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 511; 4 W. R. 497.

—— Enforcing Reduction.]—If an assurance society takes an extra premium upon an increased risk, and promises to reduce it upon being satisfied that the risk has ceased, such promise is not an agreement which a court of equity can carry into effect. Manby v. Gresham Life Assurance Co., 29 Beav. 439; 31 L. J., Ch. 94; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 383; 4 L. T. 397; 9 W. R. 547.

Where, therefore, the directors of a society, upon re-examination of a life assured, and upon medical evidence subsequently sent to them, "considered the risk existing," and declined to reduce an extra premium:—Held, that they were sole judges of the fact, and that the court could not interfere with their discretion. Ib.

VIII. MORTGAGE, ASSIGNMENT AND SALE.

a. VALIDITY GENERALLY.

Stamp.]—An assignment of a policy of insurance to secure a debt, is an assignment by way of mortgage within 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, and requires an ad valorem stamp as such. Caldwell v. Dawson, 5 Ex. 1; 14 Jur. 163.

Voluntary Assignment.]—A debtor, during his last illness, assigned two policies on his life, for 500*l.* and 300*l.*, to a creditor, in consideration of a debt of 174*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.* He died within a month afterwards intestate. The policies were paid to the assignee:—Held that the policies were securities for money within 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 12, that the assignment was voluntary, and void under 13 Eliz. c. 5, and that the deed could only stand as a security for the debt due to the party who obtained the assignment. Stokoe v. Cowan, 29 Beav. 637; 30 L. J., Ch. 882; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 901; 4 L. T. 69; 9 W. R. 801.

—— Subsequent Mortgage.]—A. voluntarily assigned a policy on his life to trustees for his infant son, if he attained twenty-five; but if he died under that age, and A. should think proper to keep up the policy, upon trust for B. A. covenanted to pay the premiums during the life of his son only; and in the event of A. ceasing to pay the premiums, he should be at liberty to sell the policy and retain the money. The son died under twenty-five, and A. mortgaged the policy, covenanting to pay the premiums, which he did:—Held, on the death of A., that the produce of the policy belonged to the mortgagees, and not to B. Pedder v. Mosely, 31 Beav. 159; 7 L. T. 205.

Lien — Bankruptcy, Abroad—Assignment in England.]—In 1833, A., domiciled in Jersey, deposited with B., domiciled in England, a policy effected in Jersey, upon A.'s life, for 499*l.* as security for 210*l.* advanced by B. to him. This transaction took place in England; no notice of the deposit was given to the office, who afterwards, upon a false representation of the loss of the policy, delivered to A. a duplicate of the policy, which, in 1853, he by deed assigned to his wife (from whom he had obtained a judicial sentence of separation de biens), in consideration of 400*l.* alleged to have been paid by her to him; notice of this assignment was given to the office. A., or his wife, paid the premiums till his death. In 1838 A. became insolvent, and made a cessio bonorum of his property, but no proof of B.'s debt was registered by him under A.'s insolvency. On an action brought in Jersey by A.'s wife against the insurance office to recover the amount of the policy, B. intervened and claimed a lien under the deposit with him by A. of the original policy:—Held, first, that as B.'s domicil was English, and the contract made in England, B. had by the English law a lien upon the policy. Le Feuvre v. Sullivan, 10 Moore, P. C. 1.

Held, secondly, that the cessio bonorum made by A. in Jersey did not affect such lien. Ib.

Bond — Intended Assignment.]—Declaration by executors, on a policy containing conditions—first, that policies effected by persons on their own lives, who should die by their own hands, would become void, so far as regarded the executors or administrators of the person so dying, but would remain in force only to the extent of any bonâ fide interest which might have been acquired by any other person under an actual assignment by deed for a valuable consideration in money, or by way of security or indemnity, or by virtue of any legal or equitable lien as a security for money, upon proof of the extent of such interest being given to the directors to their satisfaction; and, secondly, if a person who should have been insured on his own life for at least five years, or should have paid a sum equivalent to at least five years' premiums, should die by his own hands, the directors should be at liberty, if they thought proper so to do, but not otherwise, to pay for the benefit of the family. Plea, that the insured died by his own hand. Replications, first that before the death of the insured, K. acquired a bonâ fide interest in the policy by actual assignment by way of security for money within the meaning of the conditions, and proof of the extent of such interest was before action given to the directors to their satisfaction; and, secondly, that before the death, K. acquired a bonâ fide interest in the policy by virtue of an equitable lien as a security for money, and proof of the extent of such interest was before action given to the directors to their satisfaction :—Held, that the first replication was bad for not shewing that the alleged assignment was by deed. Moore v. Woolsey, 4 El. & Bl. 243 ; 3 C. L. R. 207 ; 24 L. J., Q. B. 40 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 468 ; 3 W. R. 66.

Held, that the second replication was proved by evidence that the insured had before marriage given a bond conditioned to secure 5,000*l*. to his intended wife, and that subsequently, not being able to do so, an agreement was made among different members of the family, by which the insured was to insure his life for the benefit of his wife, and she was to keep up the premiums out of her private income ; and that in pursuance of such agreement he did insure, and handed over the policy to K. as trustee for the wife, intending to assign regularly, but that he did not so assign, but died by his own hands, which facts were made known to the directors. Ib.

Held, also, that such evidence was sufficient to shew that the policy was in the hands of K. an equitable lien, and that the directors ought to be satisfied, it not being necessary to shew that they were, in fact, satisfied. Ib.

Second Pledge—Negligence.]—In detinue by the executor of N. against M., a banker, for a policy on the life of S., M. pleaded that the policy was not the property of N., and also that N. fraudulently permitted S. to hold the policy, and represent that he was entitled to the money secured by it. Replication, denying the fraudulent permission. S. insured his own life in 1831, and by deed assigned the policy to N. in 1832, who gave notice of the assignment to the office, and paid all the premiums afterwards. S. retained the policy till he deposited it with M. on a loan of money in 1843 :—Held, first, that the property in the policy passed to N. by the deed of 1831, although he had no possession of the policy. Neale v. Molineux, 2 Car. & K. 672.

Held, secondly, that though N. had been guilty of negligence in allowing S. to retain the policy, the defendant had not proved his plea, unless the jury was satisfied that N. intended that S. should borrow money of some one, and left the policy in S.'s hands, in order that he might cheat some one by borrowing money on it. Ib.

Felony — Consideration.] — A clerk having robbed his employers of money, gave them, upon the discovery of his frauds and before his prosecution, an equitable security on policies on his life and lands for the amount. He was afterwards prosecuted and convicted :—Held, that the debt was a good consideration for the securities, and that they were valid. Chowne v. Baylis, 31 Beav. 351 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 757 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1028 ; 8 L. T. 39 ; 11 W. R. 5.

Suicide after Assignment.]—A man insured his life, and afterwards mortgaged the policy and other property. He afterwards committed suicide. The policy contained a provision that if the insured should die by his own act the policy should become void, except to the extent of any interest acquired by assignment :—Held, that the office was bound to pay to the mortgagee the sum insured, and could not come upon the other property mortgaged either for repayment or for contribution. Solicitors' and General Life Insurance Society v. Lamb, 2 De G. J. & S. 251 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 426 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 739 ; 10 L. T. 792 ; 12 W. R. 941.

—— Collateral Security—Marshalling.] — A policy of assurance contained a condition that, if the assured should die by his own hand the policy should become void, and all moneys paid in respect thereof should be forfeited to the company. But in case the beneficial interest in the policy had been vested in any other person for a valuable and pecuniary consideration, the policy should remain valid to the extent of the interest of such person, subject to a specified notice in writing having been given of the transaction transferring the interest. The assured deposited the policy with the plaintiffs to secure a debt owing from his firm and further advances, the deposit being accompanied by a memorandum stating that the policy was deposited by way of equitable mortgage as collateral security. The required notice was given to the assurance company, and the assured subsequently committed suicide, the plaintiffs holding at the time of his death other securities for the debt besides the policy :—Held, that the suicide clause was undistinguishable from that which was under decision in Solicitors' and General Life Assurance Co. v. Lamb (supra), and that the plaintiffs were entitled to be paid out of the policy moneys the amount of the debt due to them at the date of the death of S. Held, further, that notwithstanding that the estate of the assured might thereby be benefited, the assurance company were not entitled to have the debt paid, either primarily or ratably, out of the other securities held by the plaintiffs. City Bank v. Sovereign Life Assurance Co., 50 L. T. 565 ; 32 W. R. 658.

An assurance company advanced money to W. on a mortgage of real security, and on his effecting a policy on his life in their office for the amount of the loan, which was deposited with the company as collateral security. The policy contained a condition that if the assured died by his own hands, by the hands of justice, or by duelling, the policy should be void, except to the extent of any bonâ fide interest therein which at the time of such death should be vested in any other person or persons for a sufficient pecuniary or other consideration. The assured committed suicide under temporary insanity while the policy was in the hands of the company :—Held, that the company and the assured stood in the same position as if the policy had been mortgaged to any third person ; that the company came within the exception in the condition ; and therefore that the policy was valid to the extent of the mortgage debt due to them at the death of the insured. White v. British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Co., 38 L. J., Ch. 53 ; L. R. 7 Eq. 394 ; 19 L. T. 306 ; 17 W. R. 26.

—— After Bankruptcy.]—A policy contained a condition that it should be void if the life insured died by suicide ; but if any third party had acquired a bonâ fide interest therein by assignment, or by legal or equitable lien for a valuable consideration or as security for money, the policy should, to the extent of such interest, be valid. On the 9th July the life insured, who was a merchant at Valparaiso, became bankrupt according to the law there, and all his estate and effects became vested, by operation of law, in the escribano, or notary officially attached to the court. On the 14th July he committed suicide. On the 15th a meeting of creditors was held, and assignees were appointed :—Held, that the assignment by operation of law was not within the exception in the policy, and therefore the assignees were not entitled to recover. Jackson v. Forster, 1 El. & El. 463 ; 29 L. J., Q. B. 8 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1247 ; 7 W. R. 578—Ex. Ch.

Equitable Assignment by Letter.]—A letter expressed to be a binding assignment upon trusts by way of voluntary settlement of certain policies of life assurance (before such policies were at law assignable) and accompanied with delivery of those of the policies which were in the assignor's possession :—Held, to be an effectual equitable assignment, although the writer expressed his intention of subsequently executing a deed to vest the policies in the assignee jointly with another person not yet selected as trustees, and although some of the policies (being in mortgage to the office) were not handed over, and no notice of the assignment was given to the office. King's Estate, In re, Sewell v. King, 49 L. J., Ch. 73 ; 14 Ch. D. 179 ; 28 W. R. 344.

It was the duty of the assignee, not of the assignor, to give notice to the office. The letter contained an undertaking by the assignor (which was not performed) to discharge the mortgage : —Held, that the assignment could be given effect to independently of this undertaking. Ib.

One of the conditions of a policy was, that it should be void if the assured died by his own hand, except it should have been assigned to other parties, for valuable consideration, six months before his death :—Held, that a letter to A., charging it with a floating balance due to him, and made three years previously to the death of the assured by his own hand, was within the exception. Jones v. Consolidated Investment Assurance Co., 26 Beav. 256 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 66 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 214.

A., having assured his life, wrote to the company, "Please to take notice that I wish to transfer my interest in the policies to B." The letter was delivered to the company and noted in their books :—Held, that this was a good equitable assignment, as against a subsequent assignee of the policies, who had, in addition, obtained possession of them. Chowne v. Baylis, 31 Beav. 351 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 757 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1028 ; 8 L. T. 739 ; 11 W. R. 5.

Assignment by Deposit.]—A policy was to become void in certain cases, except it should have been legally assigned :—Held, that this meant "validly and effectually assigned" ; that an equitable charge by mere deposit came within the exception, and that notice of it to the office was unnecessary. Dufaur v. Professional Life Assurance Co., 25 Beav. 599 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 817 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 841.

Where a husband gave a policy on his life to his wife on condition that she paid the premiums but made no assignment in writing :—Held, that the policy-moneys passed under a subsequent will to the executrix and sole devisee. Howes v. Prudential Assurance Co., 49 L. T. 133.

A. being indebted to C., placed in his hands a policy of insurance upon his (A.'s) life. No written document accompanied the deposit, but it was understood between them to be as a collateral security for the debt then due, and for any further advances from C. to A. A. died, having received further advances, and being still in debt to C. :—Held, that the equitable deposit of the policy, and the circumstances attending it, would be sufficiently proved by an affidavit of C. Maugham v. Ridley, 8 L. T. 309.

—— Payment to Equitable Owner—Interest.] —In 1847 A. deposited a policy on his own life with B. as security for an advance of money, and died in 1874 insolvent, and no administration was taken out to his estate. In 1875 B. proved A.'s death to the satisfaction of the assurance company, and demanded payment of the policy-moneys, which were insufficient to pay his debt, but the company refused to pay him without the consent of the legal personal representative of A. In 1878 B. died, and on action brought by his executors against the company claiming a declaration that they were entitled to the policy-moneys, and payment with interest from the time when the demand of payment was made, Jessel, M.R., held (1) that the company was justified in refusing to pay over the policy-moneys without the consent of A.'s legal personal representative ; (2) dispensed with the legal personal representative of A. under the Chancery Amendment Act, 1852, s. 44 ; and (3) ordered payment of the policy-moneys, with interest at 4 per cent. from the date when demand of payment was made. On appeal on the question of interest :—Held, that as the default or delay in payment of the policy-moneys had been caused, not by the company, but by B.'s neglect to clothe himself with a legal title to the money, interest did not commence to run till the order for payment of the principal was made. Crossley v. City of Glasgow Life Assurance Co. (4 Ch. D. 421) overruled on this point. Webster v. British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Co., 49 L. J., Ch. 769 ; 15 Ch. D. 169 ; 43 L. T. 229 ; 28 W. R. 818—C. A.

It was the duty of the assignee, not of the assignor, to give notice to the office. The letter contained an undertaking by the assignor (which was not performed) to discharge the mortgage : —Held, that the assignment could be given effect to independently of this undertaking. Ib. See also Curtius v. Caledonian Assurance Co. (19 Ch. D. 534), post, col. 74.

S. having effected two policies on his life for the purpose, as he expressly informed the assurance company, of enabling him to give C. a security for a debt which exceeded the amount of the policies, deposited them with C., at the same time asking him by letter to instruct his, C.'s, solicitor, to prepare the necessary assignment. C., however, never took any assignment. S. died insolvent, having made a will appointing executors, but no representation was taken out to his estate. C. then gave the company notice in writing of the death, and that he held the policies as security for his debt, and the company acknowledged the receipt of the notice in the terms of the Policies of Assurance Act, 1867, s. 6. Proper evidence of S.'s death having been subsequently produced to the company, they wrote to C. that the claim under the policies would be paid at the expiration of three months, but that the assent of S.'s legal personal representative would be required before settlement. After the expiration of the three months C., being unable to obtain payment of the policy-moneys (although his debt was admitted by S.'s executors, and he offered the company an indemnity), brought an action for that purpose against the company, insisting that S.'s deposit and letter constituted an equitable assignment of the policies within the Policies of Assurance

Act, 1867, and therefore enabled him to give a valid discharge for the moneys:—Held, that there had been no equitable assignment of the policies within the act, and that the company was justified in refusing to pay him in the absence of S.'s legal personal representative. Crossley v. City of Glasgow Life Assurance Co., 46 L. J., Ch. 65; 4 Ch. D. 421; 36 L. T. 285; 25 W. R. 264. But see supra.

Held, also, that the court had power to order payment without a legal personal representative of the deceased, under the Chancery Procedure Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 86), s. 44, and that the plaintiff was entitled to interest at 4 per cent. on the sum assured under 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 42. Ib.

Condition against Assignment — Beneficial Interest.]—A policy was subject to a condition that it should "not be assignable in any case whatever," and there was a separate proviso that the insurance company should not be bound to recognise any equitable dealings with the policy:—Held, that the effect of the condition against assignment was merely to make the policy which was subject to it non-assignable at law as it would have been prior to the Policies of Assurance Act, 1867, and did not prevent a policy-holder dealing with the beneficial interest in it (e.g. by a declaration of trust), or a court of equity from enforcing such a transaction. Turcan, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 101; 40 Ch. D. 5; 59 L. T. 712; 37 W. R. 70—C. A.

Customs Annuity and Benevolent Fund—Power to Bequeath.]—The Customs Annuity and Benevolent Fund was established for the benefit of the widows, children, or other relatives of officers of the Customs, by act of parliament, which gave power to frame rules for its management. By the rules it was provided that the fund should be raised by subscriptions on the principle of life insurance, and should form a fund for the benefit of widows, children, relatives, and nominees of the subscribers. It was provided that the admission of a nominee by the directors should take place during the life of the subscriber; that the capital money forthcoming at a subscriber's death under his insurance should, subject to the regulations thereinafter contained, be appropriated according to the directions contained in his will or in any instrument deposited with the directors; that the widow's share should not be less than one-third, or a life interest in two-thirds, and that the remainder should be applied according to the directions of the subscriber for the benefit of his widow, children, blood relations, or his nominees who had been duly admitted by the directors; that if the widow was otherwise provided for the whole money should be subject to the directions of the subscriber in favour of his widow, children, blood relations, or nominees; that if the widow received the income of two-thirds, the capital of the two-thirds should be held, subject to the directions of the subscriber, to take effect at the death of the widow, and the remaining capital, subject to the directions of the subscriber, to take effect at his own death; that if the widow was provided for, or if there was no widow, then the whole capital should be "subject to the directions of the subscriber as aforesaid"; that if a subscriber died leaving issue without having by will or other instrument directed the application of the capital placed at his disposal, it should go to his children and the issue of deceased children, and if none, to his next of kin. A subscriber died a widower, leaving children. No nominee had been accepted by the directors in his lifetime. By his will he bequeathed the fund coming from his insurance to a stranger in blood:—Held, by Bacon, V.-C., that the legatee was entitled; but held by the Court of Appeal that the subscriber had no property in the fund, but only a limited power of appointment over it, and that this power could only be exercised in favour of his widow, children, blood relations, and nominees admitted by the directors in his lifetime; that he had no power to bequeath the fund to a stranger in blood who had not in his lifetime been accepted by the directors as a nominee, and that the fund therefore belonged to the children. Phillips' Insurance, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 441; 23 Ch. D. 235; 48 L. T. 81; 31 W. R. 511—C. A.

Mortgage or Assignment—Right to Redeem—Terms of Redemption.]—The plaintiff entitled to an annuity of 200*l.* a year for life out of L.'s estate, being a prisoner in the Fleet, sold to R. three-quarters of the annuity for 1,050*l.*, and in the deed there was a proviso that if the plaintiff should at any time desire to purchase back the said three-fourths, and give six months' notice in writing to R., his executors, &c., and pay the 1,050*l.*, then R., his executors, &c., should re-assign to the plaintiff. At the time the parties met for the execution of this deed, R. insisted upon an indorsement on the back of it, signed by the plaintiff, that if the plaintiff should re-purchase or redeem the three-fourths of the annuity, it should be upon the payment of 1,050*l.* and 75*l.*, and all arrears. The plaintiff being in perfect health and under the age of twenty-two years when he executed the assignment, brought his bill to be relieved, and, upon payment of what shall be due for principal and interest, the defendant may be decreed to re-assign the annuity. Lord Hardwicke was of opinion that the plaintiff was entitled to a redemption, and that the annuity he granted ought to be re-conveyed on his payment of 1,050*l.* with legal interest, to be computed from the 1st of June, 1737, the date of the deed, but directed, if any sums were advanced for the insurance of the plaintiff's life, they should be added to the 1,000*l.*, and carry 5 per cent. interest from the respective times of paying the same. Lawley v. Hooper, 3 Atk. 278.

Annuity secured by bond and a trust of rents and dividends being void, the memorial omitting a clause of redemption and the trust, and stating the consideration untruly, a general account was decreed of the purchase-money from the actual payment, which was subsequent to the date of the deeds and of the premiums paid by the grantee for insuring the grantee's life, and an account of all sums received under the annuity with interest respectively, on payment of the balance and the costs by the plaintiff, the securities to be delivered up, &c., the bill offering to pay principal and interest, and by any other fair and reasonable demands. A letter from the grantor, written prior to the grant, in the course of another negotiation between the parties, which did not take place, was admitted as evidence (but no farther) that he had upon that occasion proposed the insurance of his life as a reasonable term. Hoffman v. Cooke, 5 Ves. 623.

An annuity being void, the memorial not containing a clause of re-purchase, the grantee was not allowed in the account the premiums of insurance of the life of the grantor and costs incurred in supporting the annuity. Shaw, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 620.

A., for an expressed consideration of 144*l.*, by deed of assignment, absolute in its form, assigned to B. a life-policy of assurance for 999*l.* This deed did not contain any clause authorising B. to sue upon the policy, which was of doubtful validity, in the name of A. Contemporaneously with the assignment A. executed to B. a bond, conditioned for the payment of the sum of 144*l.* with interest. The actual consideration of the assignment and bond was the same sum of 144*l.*, and consisted partly of a prior debt due by A. to B. in respect of some bills of exchange discounted for A. by B., amounting to a sum of nearly 119*l.*, and the residue consisted of 25*l.* cash, of which 20*l.* were repaid by B. to A., and the remaining 5*l.* were retained by B., and handed by him in payment of the costs of the assignment and bond to the person who prepared the same. From the time of the assignment, B. paid the premiums on the policy into a savings' bank, with notice thereof to the company, who had refused to receive them when tendered by B. On the death of the insured, B., with the consent of A., sued the company in his (A.'s) name, and eventually compromised the action on payment of 600*l.* to himself (B.):—Held, on a bill by A. against B., that the assignment of the policy operated by way of mortgage, and not absolutely, and that, therefore, A. was entitled to an account in respect of the proceeds, but that B. should have his costs as in an ordinary redemption suit, and also the costs of the proceedings against the company. Murphy v. Taylor, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 92.

—— Advances or Costs—Subsequent Assignment for Advances only.]—A solicitor took a deposit of a policy from his client, under a parol agreement that it was to secure his then existing costs. Afterwards he made advances, and took an assignment of the policy to secure them, the deed saying nothing about the costs:—Held, that the deed expressing no agreement that it was to include the costs, the possession under it merged the possession under the deposit, and the policy was only a security for the advances. Vaughan v. Vandersteyen, 2 Drew. 289; 2 W. R. 293.

Substituted Policy—Right to Redeem.]—A mortgage comprised two policies on the life of the mortgagor, which the mortgagee was authorised but not compelled to keep on foot. The mortgagor sold his equity of redemption at an undervalue, and an assignee of the purchaser substituted for them another policy on the mortgagor's life in lieu of the original ones, which were dropped, and assigned the same to the mortgagee. The assignee of the purchaser paid off the mortgage, and continued to pay the premiums. The sale of the equity of redemption was afterwards set aside at the instance of the executors of the mortgagor:—Held, that the substituted policy formed part of the equity of redemption, and that the executor of the mortgagor was entitled to redeem such substituted policy in the same way that he could have redeemed the original policies. Nesbitt v. Berridge, 4 De G. J. & S. 45; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 53; 9 L. T. 588; 12 W. R. 283.

Agreement for Mortgage—Rectification.]—A. being the holder of several policies of insurance on the life of B., and being unable to keep them up, entered into an agreement with C. for the purpose of C. keeping them up. The agreement consisted of three instruments: first, a letter, by which it was stated that he was to pay the premiums, and to have his advances and interest secured by a deposit of the policies, a bond, and an equitable mortgage of certain estates. No time was specified for the payment of the advances and interest. Secondly, a bond for 6,000*l.*, referring to the letter for repaying the advances and interest, at the expiration of six months from the death of B. Thirdly, an agreement, also referring to the letter and to the deposit of the policies, to secure the payment of the advances and interest, at the expiration of six calendar months from the death of B., by which agreement the advances and interest were secured, to be paid at six months after the death of B., upon certain estates. A. died, during the life of B., leaving a considerable amount of advances and interest unpaid, having, before his death, assigned the policies to trustees for his creditors. C. now filed his bill, claiming to have all his advances and interest paid, and that the agreement might be varied and made to conform to the letter; and that, if necessary, the policies might be sold:—Held, first, that upon the true construction of the three instruments, C. had no security on the policies available till after the expiration of six months from the death of B.; secondly, that the agreement could not be rectified, there being nothing to rectify it by except the letter itself, the letter and agreement being incorporated in effect into one instrument, and the letter not specifically pointing out the time when the security was to be available. Brougham v. Squire, 1 Drew. 151.

Agreement to execute Mortgage—Assignment.]—An agreement in writing to execute on request an effectual mortgage of a policy of insurance deposited at the time of the agreement as security for a loan, is not an assignment of such policy within the meaning of the Policies of Assurance Act, 1867. Spencer v. Clarke, 47 L. J., Ch. 692; 9 Ch. D. 137; 27 W. R. 133.

Payment—Receipt of Assignor's Representative.]—Payment of policy refused by insurance office to assignee without the signature of executor of deceased:—Held, bound to pay. Ottley v. Gray, 16 L. J., Ch. 512.

An assignment of a policy to A. contained no declaration that A.'s receipt would be a sufficient discharge to the office:—Held, no reason for refusing payment to A.'s executor. Glynn v. Locke, 2 Con. & L. 21; 3 Dr. & War. 11; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 61.

The circumstance that a mortgage assignment of a policy did not contain a clause making the receipt of the mortgagee a good discharge for the sum assured, but did contain the ordinary power of attorney to sue in the name of the mortgagor, did not entitle the assurance office to call for the insolvent assignee of the mortgagor to join in the receipt. Desborough v. Harris, 5 De G. M. & G. 439; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 986; 3 Eq. R. 1058; 4 W. R. 2.

Authority to Mortgage—Power of Attorney.]—A. gave to B. a power of attorney to receive A.'s rents and official salary, and to act generally in his affairs as fully as he himself could:—Held, that this power, taken together with a certain correspondence, authorised a mortgage of policies. Parry v. Holt, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 661; 8 W. R. 578.

Agreement to Assign.]—Where a policy was effected, with a condition that if assigned bonâ fide the assignee should have the benefit of it, notwithstanding the assured should commit suicide, and the assured did afterwards deposit it with a creditor as a security, together with a letter binding himself to assign it when requested, and he afterwards did commit suicide:—Held, that this was a sufficient assignment as against the assurers, within the terms of the condition. Cook v. Black, 1 Hare, 390; 11 L. J., Ch. 268; 6 Jur. 164.

Assignment of Policy Abroad—Lex Loci.]—The plaintiff sued the trustees of an English life assurance company as assignee from her husband of a policy of life insurance granted by the company. The assignment to the plaintiff was made in Cape Colony, the assignor being then domiciled in that colony, where he remained till his death. By the law of Cape Colony, such an assignment was void by reason of the alleged assignee being the wife of the assignor:—Held, that the law of Cape Colony applied to the assignment of the policy, and therefore that the defendants were entitled to judgment. Lee v. Abdy, 17 Q. B. D. 309; 55 L. T. 297; 34 W. R. 653.

Debtor and Creditor—Nomination—Surplus Policy-Moneys.]—A debtor, at the request and expense of his creditor, insured his life for 400*l*., being less than he then owed the creditor, in a benefit insurance society, and nominated his creditor as the person to receive the amount. The debt was reduced to 314*l*.: the debtor died and the creditor received the 400*l*.:—Held, that the debtor's administrator was not entitled to recover the balance beyond the 314*l*. from the creditor. A claim for this purpose was dismissed, and (on an undertaking by the defendant not to enforce his debt against the debtor's estate) with costs. Brown v. Freeman, 4 De G. & Sm. 444.

Redemption—Right to Assignment of Policy.]—B., in consideration of 2,275*l*., assigned an annuity upon her own life charged upon the estates of X. to A., and covenanted for the payment of it. The deed contained a clause empowering B. to determine and revoke the assignment upon repayment of the principal sum of 2,275*l*., and discharge of all arrears of the annuity, "and all proportion of such annual and increased premium as after-mentioned to be paid by A. to the Hope Assurance Company, if any shall be so paid": provided that whereas A. had assured or agreed to assure the life of B. for the sum of 2,275*l*., the annual premium for which was payable in advance at the beginning of each year, it was agreed that if that above-mentioned redemption should take place at any time after the premium should have been paid for in the current year, then B. would repay to A. at the time of such redemption the full proportion of such premium, which should belong to such part of the current year as should be then unexpired, whether B. should require the policy of assurance to be assigned to her or not; and B. covenanted to repay A. all extraordinary expenses of insurance occasioned by her going beyond Europe. A. effected a policy of assurance on the life of B., for 2,275*l*.:—Held, that B. was entitled upon re-purchase of the annuity to an assignment of the policy. Williams v. Atkyns, 2 Jo. & Lat. 603.

b. NOTICE.

Priorities.]—A policy effected by A. on his life was mortgaged in 1860 without notice to the office. He became bankrupt in 1862, and in 1868 joined in a transfer of the mortgage to B., who had no notice of the bankruptcy. After the death of A., B.'s solicitor gave notice to the office that this and other policies were mortgaged, and that he acted for the mortgagees, not naming them. Subsequently notice of the bankruptcy was given at the office:—Held, that this was sufficient to give priority to B. over the creditors in the bankruptcy of the assured. Russell's Policy Trusts, In re, L. R. 15 Eq. 26; 27 L. T. 706; 21 W. R. 97.

Effect of—Bankruptcy—Order and Disposition.]—A policy on the life of A. was assigned to B. in 1845; and in 1858, before the passing of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 144, s. 3 (which requires notice to the insurance company of assignment of a policy made after that act to be in writing), B.'s attorney wrote to N., who was secretary of the insurance company liable under the policy, stating that as he would have occasion to call on him on a day then named to pay the premium on this policy, the number of which he gave, he would take that opportunity of conferring with him on the subject of a loan from the company to a local board of health, in which he was interested. He accordingly called on that day, and paid the premium, when, during his interview with N., he informed him of the policy having been assigned to B. In 1862, A., the assured, became bankrupt:—Held, that there was sufficient notice to the insurance office of the assignment of the policy to take the policy out of the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Alletson v. Chichester, 44 L. J., C. P. 153; L. R. 10 C. P. 319; 32 L. T. 151; 23 W. R. 393.

On the 28th June, 1873, M. H. by deed agreed to assign for value a policy, effected with the Reliance Assurance Society on his own life, to his father, who, on the same day, by a separate deed assigned it to D. by way of equitable mortgage to secure a present loan and future advances. The parties were all resident in Ireland, and a memorandum at foot of the policy which had been issued from the Dublin branch office, directed that notice of assignment should be given at the head office in London. Immediately upon the execution of the deeds of the 28th June, D. prepared a formal notice of the assignment to the father, in whose name and at whose request it was signed by him and addressed and posted in Dublin to B., the society's secretary at the London office. M. H., the son, was adjudicated a bankrupt in January, 1874, and died in the following August, when his assignees in bankruptcy gave notice to the London office, and claimed the proceeds of the policy as having been in his order or disposition at the time of his adjudication, B. desposing that D.'s notice had never reached the London office:—Held, per Ball, C., that the notice having been duly posted, must be presumed to have reached its destination; and per Christian, L.J., that, irrespectively of the question whether the notice was actually received at the office, the mere posting of it was effectual to prevent the policy from being in the order or disposition of the bankrupt at the date of his bankruptcy by the consent and permission of the true owner within the meaning of the Irish Bankrupt and Insolvent Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 60), s. 313. Hickey, In re, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 117—C. A.

Assignees of a policy gave no notice to the insurance offices till after the bankruptcy and subsequent death of the assignor, whose life the policy insured. The assignee in bankruptcy had not then given notice:—Held, that the policy belonged to the estate of the bankrupt. Currie, In re, Caldwell, Ex parte, 41 L. J., Bk. 55; L. R. 13 Eq. 188; 20 W. R. 363.

The provisions of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 144, s. 3, to the effect that on the assignment of a policy of insurance a prescribed notice shall be given, and the date on which such notice shall be received shall regulate the priority of all claims under the assignment, relate only to the liabilities of the insurance office to the assignees, and not to the rights inter se of persons claiming to be interested in the policy-moneys. Newman v. Newman, 54 L. J., Ch. 598; 28 Ch. D. 674; 52 L. T. 422; 33 W. R. 505.

Bankruptcy—Mortgage—Subsequent Assignment—No Notice of Bankruptcy.]—A person insured his life, mortgaged the policy, and became bankrupt, but never entered the policy in his schedule, and paid the premiums and received bonuses. Shortly after his death his mortgagee gave notice to the insurance office of the assignment, but the assignee in bankruptcy gave no notice to the office of the bankruptcy, and the commissioner in bankruptcy ordered a sale of the policy. The office paid the proceeds into court under the Trustee Act:—Held, that the assignee in bankruptcy was entitled. Webb, In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 341; 16 L. T. 89; 15 W. R. 529.

Definiteness of Notice — Action Pending — Maintenance.] — Policy-holders, whose claims for payment were disputed by the insurance company, deposited the policy as a security. The depositees brought an action, in the name of the depositors, against the company, and, pending the action, sub-mortgaged the policy with other securities. Afterwards the depositees gave notice to the sub-mortgagee to hold at the disposal of a bank any balances which might be due from the sub-mortgagee to the depositees, and the bank at the same time wrote a letter to the sub-mortgagee, who sent an answer, and both the letter and the answer referred to the policy-moneys as being part of the balances mentioned in the notice:—Held, that the notice created a valid security on the insurance money in favour of the bank, being, with the letters, sufficiently definite, and the pendency of the action not creating any objection on the ground of maintenance. Myers v. United Guarantee and Life Assurance Co., 7 De G. M. & G. 112.

—— Verbal.]—A verbal notice to an insurance company of an assignment of a policy is sufficient to give priority over subsequent assignees. North British Insurance Co. v. Hallett, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1263; 9 W. R. 880.

Where verbal notice was given by the assignor of a policy to the resident director of the company as such, the priorities of the parties will not be affected by the fact of his having made no entry of it in the books, or any communication respecting the notice to the company. Ib. See also King's Estate, In re, ante, col. 49.

—— Agreement to Execute Mortgage.]—An agreement in writing to execute on request an effectual mortgage of a policy of assurance deposited at the time of the agreement as security for a loan, is not an assignment of such policy within the meaning of the Policies of Assurance Act, 1867. Therefore, notice to the assurance company of such an agreement does not give under that act any priority over a prior equitable mortgagee who has given no notice, but has possession of the policy. Spencer v. Clarke, 47 L. J., Ch. 692; 9 Ch. D. 137; 27 W. R. 133.

Constructive Notice of Existence of Prior Assignment.]—The holder of a policy of assurance on his own life deposited it with A. by way of equitable mortgage to secure a loan. A. retained the policy, but gave no notice to the company. B. afterwards, in ignorance of this prior mortgage, agreed to lend money to the policy-holder upon a deposit of the same policy, and the policy-holder, alleging that he had left the policy at home by mistake, and promising forthwith to deliver it to B., took the loan and signed a memorandum that he had deposited the policy with B. and that he undertook on request to execute to B. an effectual mortgage of it. B. gave to the company notice of his loan and memorandum of deposit, and frequently applied to the policy-holder for the policy, but the policy-holder made various excuses for not handing it over, and died leaving it in the possession of A.:—Held, that the circumstances of the case were such as to put B. on inquiry at the time of the loan, and to fix him with constructive notice of A.'s security, and that the title of A., as in possession of the policy, must prevail over that of B., although B. did and A. did not give notice to the company. Ib.

Solicitor's Lien.]—The general rule that the assignee of a chose in action takes subject to all the equities is in no way altered by the Policies of Assurance Act, 1867, or by the Judicature Act, 1873. It is not necessary for a solicitor who has a lien for costs on a policy of assurance to give notice of it to the insurance company in order to preserve his lien against subsequent mortgagees of the policy who give such notice. West of England Bank v. Batchelor, 51 L. J., Ch. 199; 46 L. T. 132; 30 W. R. 364.

Mortgagee without Notice—Mortgagor holding Policy without Title.]—A sale by auction of a policy of insurance by a client to his solicitor, in whose possession the policy was, was set aside; but the claim of a mortgagee without notice, with whom the policy had been deposited by that solicitor to secure the payment of money, was established. Lawrence v. Galsworthy, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1049.

Administration—Estate of Assignor Insolvent.]—L., at the time of his decease, was indebted to H., to whom and to another he had assigned a policy of insurance, the proceeds of which were received by H., and in part applied in liquidation of his debt. In administering the estate of L., which was insolvent, H. claimed to retain the money which he had received, but the chief clerk refused to allow the claim. On application to vary his certificate, the court declared that the sum received by H., and applied in liquidation of his debt, was assets for the benefit of all the creditors. Law, In re, Beyer v. Adams, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 710; 5 W. R. 795.

By Solicitor—Bankruptcy—Order and Disposition.]—In 1816 D. assigned a policy of insurance on his life to a trustee to secure a sum of money owing to W., and, soon afterwards, the solicitor of W. caused a memorandum to be entered in the office of the insurance company, directing that all letters were to be sent to such solicitor, and the premiums were thenceforth paid by W., through the hands of such solicitor; but the insurance company were not informed on whose behalf the solicitor acted. In 1826 D. became bankrupt, and his assignees declined to interfere respecting the policy. The premiums continued to be paid by W. through his solicitor during his life, and by the executors of W. through their bankers after his death. D. died in 1839:—Held, that the policy was in the order and disposition of the bankrupt, and that there was not any notice given to the insurance office of the assignment of the policy to take it out of such order and disposition, and that the conduct of the assignees did not amount to an abandonment of any right which they had to the benefit of the policy. West v. Reid, 2 Hare, 249; 12 L. J., Ch. 245; 7 Jur. 147.

—— To Local Agent of Insurers.]—A trader who was local agent of a Scotch insurance company, having their principal place of business in Edinburgh, and having an agent in Dublin for all Ireland, by whom the local agents were appointed, and with whom they communicated, effected an insurance with the company upon his own life, and assigned it to a bank, to secure a debt due by him. The agent of the bank formally required him to take notice of the assignment, to which he replied that he would, and that no written notice was necessary. No further notice of the assignment was given to the insurance company, and he subsequently became a bankrupt, and died. There was nothing on the face of the policy to shew where or through whom it had been effected:—Held, that as there was nothing to shew that the insurance was a local transaction, there was not sufficient notice of the assignment of the policy, and the assignee of the bankrupt was entitled to the money. Hennessey, In re, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 259; 1 Con. & L. 559; 2 Dr. & War. 555.

Onus of Proving.]—On a deposit of a policy of assurance, by way of equitable mortgage, the onus does not lie on the mortgagee to shew that notice of the deposit was given to the office before the act of bankruptcy, but with the assignees, to shew that it was not. Stevens, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & C. 117.

Sufficiency.]—A party to whom the bankrupt had assigned a policy of assurance sends an agent to the office for the purpose of paying the annual premium, who, in course of conversation with one of the clerks in the office, tells him of the policy having been so assigned:—Held, that this was not sufficient notice to the insurance office. Curbis, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & C. 354.

An equitable mortgagee of two policies of assurance, which the bankrupt had effected on his own life, writes to the insurance office, saying, "I am holder of the undermentioned policies," stating the particulars of the policies in question, and inquiring what sum the office would give, if they were delivered up to be cancelled:—Held, that this was a sufficient notice to the office of a change of ownership. Stright, Ex parte, Eyles, In re, 2 Deac. & C. 314; Mont. 502; 2 L. J., Bk. 12. See Tennyson, Ex parte, Mont. & Bli. 67.

c. Rights of Mortgagees.

Foreclosure on Non-payment.]—A. and B., being jointly interested in a policy on a debtor's life, agreed with each other that A. should keep up the policy, and B. contribute a share of the premiums:—Held, that A. was entitled to foreclose B. for non-payment of his share of the premiums. Parker v. Anglesey (Marquis), 25 L. T. 482; 20 W. R. 162.

Where there are no funds to keep up mortgaged policies of insurance, the mortgagee has a right to have them sold. Ford v. Tynte, 41 L. J., Ch. 758; 27 L. T. 304.

Abandonment of Security.]—A deed of assignment provided that the debtor's affairs should be administered as in bankruptcy, and provided that it should not affect any surety or security which any of the creditors might have: but that if such security should be enforceable against the debtor or his estate, then the creditor, unless he consented to abandon his security, should be entitled to receive dividends upon so much only of his secured debt as might remain after such security should have been realised, or after credit should have been given for the full value. A creditor held a policy upon the life of the debtor, which at the time of the assignment was of no appreciable value, and he proved for and received a dividend upon the whole amount of his secured debt without taking credit for the policy:—Held, that he had not abandoned his security. Ib.

Sale of Equity of Redemption set aside.]—The sale of an equity of redemption in a reversionary interest belonging to the mortgagor, and in two policies of assurance on his life, was set aside on the ground of undervalue. The two mortgaged policies of assurance having in the purchaser's hands been allowed to lapse, and a new policy having been substituted for them by the purchaser:—Held, that the vendor was at liberty to adopt what the purchaser had done in the matter of the substitution of the new policy, and was, on redeeming, entitled to the substituted policy as part of the equity of redemption. Nesbitt v. Berridge, Butler v. Berridge, 4 De G. J. & S. 45; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 53; 9 L. T. 588; 12 W. R. 283; 3 N. R. 53.

Balance—Unsecured Debts.]—The mortgagees of a policy of assurance, mortgaged to them by a deceased testator to secure a sum of money, received after his death, under the policy, a sum exceeding the amount due to them for principal and interest in respect of the mortgage debt. They were also creditors of the testator for other debts not secured:—Held, that they were entitled to retain the balance in their hands in discharge of their unsecured debts. Haselfoot or Hazlefoot, In re, Chauntler's Claim, 41 L. J., Ch. 286; L. R. 13 Eq. 327; 26 L. T. 146.

Marshalling.]—A mortgagee of a life estate and policies of assurance had also obtained subsequent judgments, being charges under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, on the life estate. There were intervening incumbrances on the life estate only. On his first mortgage being discharged out of the life estate:—Held, that the next incumbrancer was entitled, on the principle of marshalling, to be paid out of the policies, and that the first mortgagee could not, by consolidating his securities, throw his subsequent charges on the policies so as to prevent this. Ford v. Tynte, 41 L. J., Ch. 758; 27 L. T. 304.

H. was surety to an insurance company for a loan secured on policies on the life of the debtor. The office held another policy as security for another loan for the same debtor. The debtor became bankrupt, and the company sued the surety. He paid part of the debt:—Held, that on the falling in of the policies, the surety was entitled to have the securities marshalled so as to be paid in full, including the costs of defending the action. Heyman v. Dubois, 41 L. J., Ch. 224; L. R. 13 Eq. 158; 25 L. T. 558.

The debtor's wife had paid the surety part of the money he had paid as surety out of her separate estate:—Held, she was not a necessary party to a suit by the surety to obtain the benefit of his security. Ib.

Set-off.]—The money payable on a policy on the life of A. deposited with the insurance company as a security for a loan to B. is to be paid to the surety of B., satisfying the loan, and cannot be set off against a debt due by A. to the company of which B.'s surety had no notice. Jeffery's Policy, In re, 20 W. R. 857.

Production of Deed in Action.]—See Carter v. Hubback, infra, col. 75.

Premiums — Lien — Costs — Land Agents' Charges.]—A testator assigned policies of assurance on his own life to his solicitor as trustee, to secure to mortgagees the repayment of a loan. On a claim against the testator's estate of a lien on the policy-moneys (a) in respect of solicitor's costs, (b) in respect of premiums paid by the solicitor on the policies, and (c) in respect of work done as a land agent:—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to be repaid the premiums and to a lien in respect of his solicitor's costs, but that land agency charges were not the subject of a lien. Walker, In re, Meredith v. Walker, 3 R. 455; 68 L. T. 517.

See further as to premiums, supra, col. 30, PREMIUMS.

Married Woman—Policy created for purpose of Mortgage—Chose in Action of Wife.]—A married woman, entitled to income for her separate use, agreed to assist her husband in obtaining a loan from an assurance company. A policy was accordingly effected with the company, by which a sum of money was assured to the survivor of the husband and wife upon the death of the one first dying. By a mortgage deed of the same date, reciting an agreement for a loan by the office at the request of husband and wife, the wife assigned her separate income, and the husband the policy, by way of mortgage for securing the sum advanced by the company. By the same deed the husband and wife, the wife joining for the purpose of binding her separate estate, covenanted that the husband would pay the premiums, and there was a declaration by the husband alone that if he did not pay them the mortgagees might pay them out of income, and a declaration by all parties that if the policy-moneys became payable before the mortgage debt was paid, the company might pay it out of those moneys. After the death of the husband the wife claimed the moneys payable under the policy:—Held, that although the policy, if taken alone, created an interest in the wife not capable of being assigned so as to bar her right by survivorship, yet as it had been created for the purpose of the mortgage, and as a part of the same transaction, and in pursuance of a contract that it should be a security to the company, the wife's interest was included in the security. Winter v. Easum, 2 De G. J. & S. 272; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 759; 12 W. R. 1018.

Policy effected as part of Mortgage Transaction—Annuity granted by Mortgagor—Rights to Policy-Money.]—A., a tenant for life, granted an annuity to B. for B.'s life, in consideration of 500*l.*, and a policy of insurance on A.'s life was assigned absolutely to B. in order the more effectually to secure the payment of the annuity and the repayment of the 500*l.*; and it was agreed that as soon as A. should give unexceptionable security for the annuity, it should be decreased by amount of the annual premium of the policy, which was to be paid by B. out of the annuity until such security should be given. No other security was given for the annuity, and the premiums were paid by B. until her death:—Held, that the representatives of B. were entitled to the policy, although several annual premiums had been paid by A. after the death of B. Kavanagh v. Waldron, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 279; 3 Jo. & Lat. 214.

Equitable Relief—Personal Decree against Mortgagor.]—An assignment of a policy by way of mortgage contained no covenant to pay the debt secured; and the mortgagee in consideration of a sum equal to the debt delivered to the plaintiff as security the assignment, the policy, and a promissory note of the mortgagor for the amount of the debt. The plaintiff filed a bill against the mortgagor and mortgagee, praying the ordinary relief; and the mortgagor before answer served the plaintiff with notice offering all the equitable relief to which he was entitled. The cause having come to a hearing:—Held, that, even supposing the mortgage contained an implied covenant to pay the debt, the court could not pronounce a decree against him or grant more than the ordinary equitable relief. Hinds v. Blacker, Ir. R. 11 Eq. 322.

Without Assignment.]—R. having insured his life, handed the policy over to his mother, telling her that she might keep it, and he subsequently handed over to her two receipts for premiums paid by him on the policy. There was no assignment of the policy, but his mother retained it in her possession and had it in her possession at the time of his death. In an action by R.'s administratrix for the recovery of the policy and receipts:—Held, that though the gift passed no right to the mother to recover the money secured by the policy, the administratrix nevertheless could not maintain detinue or trover against her for the documents. Rummens v. Hare, 46 L. J., Ex. 30; 1 Ex. D. 169; 34 L. T. 407; 24 W. R. 385—C. A.

H. insured his life for 100*l.* and gave the policy to his wife on condition that she paid the premiums. He afterwards devised all his property to the plaintiff, who was his sole executrix, upon trust for his children. The wife took possession of the policy, and paid all the premiums out of her separate estate:—Held, that the policy passed under the will to the plaintiff, as there was no assignment in writing. Howes v. Prudential Assurance Co., 49 L. T. 133.

Where a man effects an insurance on his own life, but in his daughter's name, and pays the premiums himself:—Held, that though he retains the policy in his own possession, it is a complete gift to the daughter, and she is on his death entitled to the insurance moneys. Richardson, In re, Weston v. Richardson, 47 L. T. 514.

Donatio Mortis Causâ.]—A policy of life insurance may be the subject of a donatio mortis causâ. Witt v. Amiss, 1 B. & S. 109; 30 L. J., Q. B. 318; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 499; 4 L. T. 283; 9 W. R. 691. S. P. and S. C., Amiss v. Witt, 3 Beav. 619.

Voluntary Assignment — Sale by Assignee—Title.]—A. insured his life, and afterwards assigned the policy to B. for a nominal consideration. B.'s executors then sold and assigned the policy to D. for valuable consideration, and then D.'s executors sell it to E.:—Held, that they could make a good title to the policy, and that E. was bound to complete his purchase. Ashley v. Ashley, 3 Sim. 149.

Effect given to voluntary assignment of a policy of assurance containing an irrevocable power of attorney. Pearson v. Amicable Assurance Office, 27 Beav. 229. And see, supra, col. 45, as to voluntary assignment.

e. SALE.

Misrepresentation.]—A policy on the life of A. had been assigned to the plaintiff; the defendant having privately ascertained that A. was dangerously ill, treated with the plaintiff for the purchase of the policy for a small sum, representing it as the then value of the policy, the plaintiff not being aware of A.'s illness:—Held, that the sale was void, and that the plaintiff might recover the value of the policy in an action of trover. Jones v. Keene, 2 M. & Rob. 348.

A sale by auction of a policy of assurance on the life of a third person cannot be invalidated on the ground of fraud, because the particulars of sale did not mention that the vendor had only a redeemable interest in the life of the party insured, although that interest is afterwards redeemed, if the practice of the office is to pay such policies without inquiring into the continuance of the interest, and if there is no misrepresentation or improper concealment of facts by the vendor. Barber v. Morris, 1 M. & Rob. 62.

Incumbrances.]—A. agreed to assign a life policy to B. When the policy was effected, it was agreed that the payment of one-third of the annual premiums should be deferred until the death of the person insured, and be a charge on the policy:—Held, that this was an incumbrance on the policy, which the assignor was bound to discharge. Gatayes v. Flather, 34 Beav. 387.

Assignees for value of a life policy hold subject to the equities affecting the same. The 30 & 31 Vict. c. 144, has not altered their position in this respect. British Equitable Insurance Co. v. G. W. Ry., 38 L. J., Ch. 132; 19 L. T. 476; 17 W. R. 43.

f. OPERATION OF BANKRUPTCY.

Order and Disposition.]—As to what is necessary to take a life policy out of the order and disposition of the bankrupt. See BANKRUPTCY, ORDER AND DISPOSITION.

Payment of Premiums.]—The 154th section of the Bankruptcy Act of 1861 discharges a bankrupt from liability as a surety in respect of payments of premiums on a policy of insurance becoming due subsequently to the date of the adjudication. Saunders v. Best, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 731; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1204; 11 L. T. 421; 13 W. R. 160.

A. borrowed money of B., and executed a deed of assignment, by way of mortgage, to B., of a policy on his own life, with a covenant to keep up the annual payments for premiums:—Held, that this was not a liability to pay money upon a contingency provable under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 178. Metcalfe v. Hanson, 35 L. J., Q. B. 225; L. R. 1 H. L. 242.

A defendant covenanted to pay a sum by instalments, and to pay the premiums on a policy effected on the life of B., so that his life might be continually insured in 1,000*l.*, and to produce the receipt for the premium. In an action on this covenant, the declaration alleged two breaches—non-payment of the premiums, and non-production of the receipt for the premium. The defendant pleaded a certificate of conformity, under an adjudication of bankruptcy. The plaintiff new assigned that the action was brought for the non-payment and non-production of a premium which became due after filing the declaration of insolvency, and after the allowance of the certificate. The defendant pleaded an equitable plea, that after filing the petition for adjudication, the plaintiff proved part of the debt, and elected to take the benefit of the petition with respect to the whole debt:—Held, that the plea to the new assignment was a good equitable answer. Elder v. Beaumont, 8 El. & Bl. 353; 27 L. J., Q. B. 25; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 23; 6 W. R. 57.

Policy is Chose in Action—Bankruptcy Act, 1869.]—A life policy is a "thing in action" within the exception to the reputed ownership clause of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 15, sub-s. 5. Ibbetson, Ex parte, Moore, In re, 8 Ch. D. 519; 39 L. T. 1; 26 W. R. 843—C. A.

The second mortgagee of a policy of life assurance gave no notice of his mortgage to the first mortgagee or to the insurance company till after the mortgagor had filed a liquidation petition, and a trustee had been appointed under it:—Held, that the policy being a thing in action, and as such excepted from the reputed ownership clause of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, the second mortgagee was entitled to the policy subject to the rights of the first mortgagee. Ib.

Order and Disposition of Assignor.]—Assignees of policies gave no notice to the insurance offices till after the bankruptcy and subsequent death of the assignor whose life the policies insured. The assignee in bankruptcy had not then given notice:—Held, that the policies belonged to the estate of the bankrupt. Currie, In re, Caldwell, Ex parte, 41 L. J., Bk. 55; L. R. 13 Eq. 188; 20 W. R. 363. And see cases, ante, cols. 56, 59.

A policy on the life of a bankrupt, who was then manager of a branch of the insurance company, was subject to a condition that all notices of assignment or cheques should be given in writing at the principal place of business of the company. The bankrupt, whilst manager, assigned the policy; and no notice was given at the head office:—Held, that the policy was in the bankrupt's order and disposition with the assent of the true owner. Young, In re, 25 L. R., Ir. 372.

A mortgagee of a policy of insurance effected in the name of a deceased person does not, by giving notice to the executors, without giving notice to the company, take the policy out of the order and disposition of the mortgagor. Thompson v. Tompkins, 2 Dr. & Sm. 8; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 185; 6 L. T. 305; 10 W. R. 310.

Executors transferred a fund, part of their testator's estate, into court, under the Trustee Relief Act. One of the residuary legatees mortgaged his share, and the mortgagee gave notice to the executors, and did not obtain a stop order. The mortgagor became bankrupt, and his assignees obtained a stop order:—Held, that the previous notice was sufficient to take the mortgagor's share of the fund out of his order and and disposition. Ib. See also as to NOTICE, supra, col. 56.

—— Right of Assignees.]—A policy of insurance on the life of the bankrupt passes to his assignees. Schoudler v. Wace, 1 Camp. 487. But see Grant v. Hill, 4 Taunt. 380. Wills v. Wells, 2 Moore, 247; 8 Taunt. 264.

—— Policy Effected by Insolvent to Secure Debt—Payment.]—Assignees in insolvency held to be entitled to a policy of assurance on the life of an insolvent, effected to secure a sum of money borrowed by the insolvent, but afterwards paid off, the policy having been effected at the expense of the insolvent, and mentioned in his schedule as one of the securities for the debt. Storie's Trust, In re, 1 Giff. 94; 28 L. J., Ch. 888; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1153.

g. TRUST FOR WIFE AND CHILDREN.

Effect of.]—A husband effected a policy for the benefit of his wife and children under the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, and died insolvent. His wife and one child of the marriage predeceased him. Upon a petition by his surviving children, under the 10th section of the act, for the appointment of a trustee of the policy-money and for a declaration as to the rights of the petitioners:—Held, that the court had, under that section, no jurisdiction to do more than make the order appointing a trustee; but since under the policy there was a trust either for the wife for life with remainder to the children, or, in the alternative, for the wife and children as joint-tenants, the order was directed to be prefaced with an expression of opinion that the wife took no interest and that the surviving children took as joint-tenants. Mellor's Policy Trusts, In re, infra, not followed. Adams' Policy Trusts, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 642; 23 Ch. D. 525; 48 L. T. 727; 31 W. R. 810.

Semble, a policy effected by a husband under s. 10 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, "for the benefit of his wife and children," should be read in conjunction with that section, and should, by virtue of the words "separate use" in the section, be construed as giving the wife a life interest only, with remainder to the children. Ib.

In a similar case widow and children held entitled as joint-tenants to the policy-moneys. Dictum in Adams' Policy Trusts, supra, not followed. Davies' Policy Trusts, In re, 61 L. J., Ch. 650; [1892] 1 Ch. D. 90; 66 L. T. 104.

A husband effected a policy for the benefit of his wife and children under the Married Women's Property Act, 1870. The husband died insolvent, and the wife being in poor circumstances, so that the income of the policy-moneys was not sufficient to support her and the children, the moneys were distributed as if the husband had died intestate. Mellor's Policy Trusts, In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 246; 7 Ch. D. 200; 26 W. R. 309.

Where a husband surrendered a policy on his life which was of no value and received in substitution a similar policy which provided that the sum insured should be paid to the wife in case she survived her husband, and the wife paid all the premiums until the death of her husband, who died insolvent:—Held, that the transaction was protected by s. 10 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, and that the widow was entitled to the policy-money. Holt v. Everall, 45 L. J., Ch. 433; 2 Ch. D. 266; 34 L. T. 599; 24 W. R. 471—C. A.

A married man insured his life under a policy which, after reciting that he was desirous of assuring his life under the provisions of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, for the benefit of his wife and children, stated that his wife and children, and failing them, his heirs, administrators or assigns, would be entitled after his death to the policy money:—Held, that the wife and children took the policy-money as joint-tenants. Adams' Policy Trusts, In re (23 Ch. D. 525), not followed. Seyton, In re, Seyton v. Satterthwaite, 56 L. J., Ch. 775; 34 Ch. D. 511; 56 L. T. 479; 35 W. R. 373.

Contingent Interest—Possibility—Interest for Benefit of Wife.]—A policy of insurance on the life of a husband for the benefit of his wife, was in 1876, effected with an insurance company which carried on business at New York, through their branch office in London. The application for the policy was made by him on behalf of his wife. The premiums were made payable in London. By the policy the company promised to pay the amount assured to the wife for her sole use, if living, and, if she were not living, to the children of the husband, or, if there should be no such children, to the executors or assigns of the husband, at the London office. The policy also provided that, on the completion of a period of ten years from its issue, provided it should not have been previously terminated by lapse or death, the legal owner should have the option of withdrawing the accumulated reserve and surplus appropriated by the company to the policy. The husband paid the premiums until July, 1883, when he filed a liquidation petition under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. In 1884 he obtained his discharge. After 1883 the wife paid the premiums out of her separate estate. In 1866 the wife exercised the right of withdrawal, and the company paid 2,959*l.* in respect of the policy:—Held, that even if the sum thus paid did not by virtue of the policy belong to the wife for her separate use, the husband's contingent interest in it at the time when he obtained his discharge was a mere possibility, and that, consequently, it did not pass to the trustee in the liquidation. Dever, Ex parte, Suse, In re, 56 L. J., Q. B. 552; 18 Q. B. D. 660—C. A.

Conviction of Wife for Murder of Husband—Resulting Trust in favour of Husband's Estate.]—A husband insured his life for the benefit of his wife under the provisions of s. 11 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75). He died, and his wife was tried for and convicted of his murder:—Held, that the effect of s. 11 was to create a trust in favour of the wife in respect of the sum insured, but that inasmuch as it was against public policy for the wife to benefit by her own criminal act, the trust in her favour failed, and a resulting trust arose in favour of the deceased husband's estate, in respect of which his executors were entitled to recover the sum insured from the insurance company. Cleaver v. Mutual Reserve Fund, 61 L. J., Q. B. 128; [1892] 1 Q. B. 147; 66 L. T. 220; 40 W. R. 230; 56 J. P. 180—C. A.

h. SETTLEMENTS.

Covenant to Insure—Liability of Trustees for not compelling Assignment of Policy.]—A husband covenanted to insure his life for 1,200*l*., and assign the policy to trustees, and confessed a judgment to them for that amount to be called in if the policy was not so assigned and kept up. Another sum of 800*l*. vested in them by same settlement on similar trusts, was lent by trustees to husband on security of assignment of a policy for 800*l*. on his life. No other policy was assigned to them, and no steps taken to enforce judgment or covenant:—Held, that proceeds of policy might be applied to purpose for which policy was really assigned, and that liability of trustees for not compelling husband to insure depended on his ability. Ball v. Ball, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 370.

Liability of Policy — Covenant to Pay a Sum after Death.]—The rule of equity which prevents a party from receiving any interest under a settlement until he has discharged obligations or covenants, to which he is liable under it, applied to the case of a policy of assurance assigned to the trustees as a security for the payment of a sum which the husband had covenanted that his representative should pay after his death, and against a purchaser of the husband's interest under the settlement from his assignees under a fiat in bankruptcy. Burridge v. Row, 13 L. J., Ch. 173; 9 Jur. 299—L.C.

Ultimate Trust—Assignee of Husband and Wife.]—Among the trusts of a settlement (the subject of the settlement being property limited to the separate use of wife), it was provided that the trustees should effect a policy of assurance to the amount of 3,000*l*. on the life of the wife, and annually pay the premium out of the trust-money during the life of the wife, and stand possessed of the insurance in trust after the decease of the wife to invest the 3,000*l*. and pay the interest to the husband for life, if he should survive the wife, and after his decease to pay the 3,000*l*. to such persons as the wife should by will appoint; and in default of such appointment, to the persons entitled under the Statute of Distributions. There were no children of the marriage, and the wife having survived her husband, joined with the surviving trustee of the settlement in making a voluntary assignment of the policy to her cousin, who paid the annual premium during his life, and by his will appointed G. his executor and residuary legatee. G. continued to pay the premium, and on the death of the assured received the value of the policy:—Held, on a bill filed by the next of kin of the wife against G. and against the executor and residuary legatee of the wife, that the assignment was valid, and that G. was entitled to the value of the policy. Godsall v. Webb, 2 Keen, 99; 7 L. J., Ch. 103.

Voluntary Settlement—Subsequent Assignment by Settlor.]—J. B. made a voluntary assignment by deed of a policy of assurance upon his own life for 1,000*l*. to trustees upon trust for the benefit of his sister and her children, if she or they should outlive him. The deed was delivered to one of the trustees, and the grantor kept the policy in his own possession. No notice of the assignment was given to the assurance office, and J. B. afterwards surrendered, for a valuable consideration, the policy and a bonus declared upon it to the assurance office. Upon a bill filed by the surviving trustee of the deed to have the value of the policy replaced, the court held that upon the delivery of the deed, no act remained to be done by the grantor to give effect to the assignment of the policy, and that he was bound to give security to the amount of the value of the policy assigned by the deed. Fortescue v. Barnett, 3 Myl. & K. 36; 2 L. J., Ch. 98.

Renewable Leaseholds — Surplus Policy-moneys—Who entitled.]—A testator being possessed of leaseholds for lives insured each of the lives, and by his will directed the policies to be kept up and the leases renewed from time to time. He gave his real and personal estate upon trust, subject to a life interest for A. in tail:—Held, that the trust for renewal was valid, but that, subject to such trust, the moneys received by virtue of the policies were part of the personal estate of the testator, and vested absolutely in the tenant in tail. Meller v. Stanley, 2 De G. J. & S. 183; 12 W. R. 780.

Assignment by Settlor—Assignee held to be Trustee.]—B. by a deed executed in 1830, for a nominal consideration, assigned a policy of assurance upon his own life to trustees for his children, of whom A. was one; and the entire interest in the policy became vested in S. and A. No notice of this deed was ever given to the assurance company. S. married; and by a deed executed in 1854, reciting that she was entitled to a moiety of the policy, this moiety was put in settlement. C. acted as solicitor in preparation of this deed. In 1854, B., by deed without consideration, professed to assign the residue of the policy to C. On the preparation of this deed, B. stated that he had led A. to believe that he should have 100*l*. out of the produce, and directed that he should be made a party to the assignment, and a deed was so prepared accordingly. A. declined to execute this deed, which was therefore abandoned, and another was prepared; but he did not, during the life of B., expressly allege that he had any claim upon the policy. C. gave to the company notice of the assignment of 1854, and after the death of B., obtained the policy from the trustee, and was paid the sum due:—Held, that C., having obtained the policy from the trustee, must be treated as a substitutionary trustee. Justice v. Wynne, 12 Ir. Ch. R. 289.

Policy in Wife's Name—Voluntary Settlement of—Payment of Premiums.]—On 5th November, 1844, a policy of insurance for 2,000*l.* was effected upon the life and in the name of B., the wife of A. By a post-nuptial settlement dated 27th November, 1844, reciting that B. was desirous of making provision for her husband and children, and that A. had agreed to join in the deed for the purpose of assuring "all his interest, if any," in the policy, A. and B. assigned to C. and D. the policy and all sums payable thereunder upon trust to invest the same and pay the income to A. and his assigns during his life and after his decease to divide the trust funds equally among the children of A. and B. The settlement contained no power of revocation. A. predeceased his wife, having paid all premiums during his lifetime. Upon the death of B., the question arose whether the policy-moneys were subject to the trusts declared by the settlement:—Held, that the policy was intended by the husband to be and was the separate property of the wife at the date of settlement, in which the husband concurred only for conformity and to bind such interest, if any, as he had; that the settlement was valid and that the policy moneys were bound by the trusts of the settlement. Winn, In re, Reed v. Winn, 57 L. T. 382.

Trustees unable to Pay Premiums.]—See VII. PREMIUMS, ante, col. 41.

i. RIGHT OF POLICY-MONEYS.

Power to appoint Sum assured — Express Reference—Assets—Will—Special Contract.]—The rules of a life assurance society provided that the assured might nominate a person to receive the sum assured, and that in case of no nomination the sum should be paid to his assigns under any disposition or charge specifically affecting the same, either by express reference thereto or by reference generally to sums due on assurances, by deed, will or other instrument. If no nomination, disposition or charge, the sum was to be paid to his widow; if no widow, to his children living at his death; if no children, to his executors. The assured made no nomination. By his will, after exercising certain powers of appointment, he gave all his residuary estate in trust for his three daughters, and the widow and children of a deceased son, but made no express or general reference to the sum assured. He left no widow:—Held, that although the testator might have made the sum assured assets by expressly referring thereto, he had not done so, and that there was nothing illegal as against creditors in the contract made when the assurance was effected, and that under this contract his three children were entitled to the fund. Davies, In re, Davies v. Davies, 61 L. J., Ch. 595; [1892] 3 Ch. 63; 67 L. T. 548; 41 W. R. 13.

Policy taken out before Loan Advanced.]—M., having obtained from the W. Company one loan on the security of a policy effected with them on his own life, and a charge on funds, in which he had an interest contingent on his surviving S., applied to the company for a further advance, to be secured by a further charge on the premises comprised in the first transaction, and also by an insurance to be effected by M. on his own life against the life of S., for the amount of the new advance; no distringas to be placed on the trust fund. The directors of the company, by resolution communicated to M., "entertained" the proposal, with the alteration that there was to be a distringas for both loans, and the new policy was to be for 500*l.* more than the amount of the proposed fresh advance. The deed for securing the fresh advance was accordingly prepared on the footing that the new policy was to be taken out in M.'s name, and assigning and dealing with it accordingly. M. appeared before the medical officer of the K. Company, with whom this counter-insurance was effected, and the distringas was placed upon the stock for the amount of both loans; but it was found impossible to serve the trustee of the fund with notice of the transaction. The loan was never actually advanced, M. dying in the lifetime of the tenant for life. The secretary of the W. Company, who had undertaken to complete the policy with the K. Company, had taken it out not in M.'s name but in the name of the trustees of the W. Company, who accordingly received the whole amount:—Held, that the W. Company were trustees of the amount so received for the benefit of M.'s estate. Martin v. West of England Life and Fire Insurance Co., 4 Jur. (N.S.) 158.

Policy effected to Secure Debt—Payment of Debt.] — See Courtenay v. Wright, supra, col. 36.

On Redemption—Dropped Policy—Surrender.]—Where the grantor of an annuity covenanted to facilitate the effecting any insurance on his life, and to pay extra premium to a certain amount, and on electing to repurchase the annuity by giving a certain notice pursuant to the grant, the grantee covenanted, upon the grantor electing to take it, to assign any policy then vested in him in respect of the annuity, but that it should not be incumbent on the grantee to keep any policy on foot. The grantor gave the notice to redeem, and his election to take the policy: — Held, that although the grantee might have allowed the policy to drop, he could not surrender it for his own profit. Hawkins v. Woodgate, 7 Beav. 565; 8 Jur. 743.

Policy kept up by Purchaser of Reversionary Interest—Purchase set aside.]—The purchaser of a reversionary interest at an undervalue (the purchase being set aside), kept up policies on the life of the vendor:—Held, that he was entitled to the policy-moneys. Foster v. Roberts, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 400.

Premiums Paid by Mortgagee.]—Upon the execution of a mortgage to secure an annuity to the mortgagor, the mortgagee insured the life of the mortgagor, and informed the latter by letter that the policy would be assigned to him on payment of arrears and expenses. The premiums were paid by the mortgagee until the mortgagor's death:—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to the policy-moneys. Bashford v. Cann, 11 W. R. 1037.

Policy kept up by Bankrupt.]—A bankrupt, after his bankruptcy, kept up the premiums on policies which he had mortgaged previously to his bankruptcy and which his assignees had disclaimed:—Held, that his representatives were entitled to the policy-moneys, subject to the mortgage debt. In re, Learmouth, 14 W. R. 628.

Mutual Assurance Society—Member's Claim to Benefit of Policy.]—Where by the deed of settlement of a mutual assurance society the grantees of policies were the only assured members, and a claim entitling the grantee to the benefit of his policy was to make him no longer an assured member:—Held that the claim must be a claim for the full value of the policy. Stevens v. Mutual Life Assurance Society, 5 W. R. 236.

Mortgage or Assignment—Fetter on Redemption.]—Trustees of an insurance society advanced 10,000*l*. to C. on the security of a reversionary interest to which C. was entitled contingently on his surviving his father. As part of the loan transaction the trustees insured the life of C. against that of his father for 34,500*l*. in the society of which they were trustees, and paid the premiums till C.'s death. C. executed a bond charging the reversion with principal, premiums and interest on principal and premiums. By written agreements the interests and premiums were to accumulate at compound interest for five years. The agreements contained special clauses providing (inter alia) to whom the policy in certain specified events should belong, and declared that in the event of C. paying the whole sum due before the death of his father the trustees should be bound to assign the policy to C., and that if C. should predecease his father without having paid all principal moneys, interest and costs, the policy should belong absolutely to the trustees, they being bound in that event to impute to the debt all moneys they might receive in respect of the policy. C. died in his father's lifetime, having never paid anything:—Held, that upon the true construction of the documents the contract was, not that the policy should be effected for the trustees' protection only and for their sole benefit, subject to an option for C. to make it his own in the event of his paying off the debt in his lifetime, but that the policy was mortgaged to the trustees and was the property of C. subject to the charge; therefore that in accordance with the equitable doctrine against fettering a mortgagor's right of redemption, C.'s representatives were entitled to the policy-moneys after deducting all sums due. Salt v. Northampton (Marquess), 61 L. J., Ch. 49; [1892] A. C. 1; 65 L. T. 765; 40 W. R. 529—H. L. (E.)

Interpleader.]—A life insurance company received notice of an assignment by an insurer of a policy, which the company had granted, and the insurer afterwards became insolvent. Soon after the death of the person whose life was insured, the assignee for value applied for payment of the sum due upon the policy; and the company inquired of the provisional assignee of the insolvent whether he would consent to payment being made to the assignee for value. The provisional assignee said he could not give such consent, but that it must be sought for from the Court of Insolvent Debtors. The insolvent himself gave notice to the company not to pay over the policy-moneys to his assignee for value, on the ground that the debt for which it was assigned as a security was satisfied. In the meantime an action was brought upon the policy by the assignee for value, in the name of the insolvent, against the company:—Held, that it was not a case in which the company was entitled to file a bill of interpleader against the plaintiff in the action, the insolvent and his provisional assignee, the insolvent having no title, and the title of his provisional assignee being subordinate to that of the assignee for value. Fenn v. Edmonds, infra, overruled. Desborough v. Harris, 5 De G. M. & G. 439; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 986; 3 Eq. R. 1058; 4 W. R. 2.

A life insurance company received notice of an assignment by an insurer of a policy which the company had granted, and the insurer afterwards became bankrupt. Soon after the death of the person whose life was insured, the party to whom the assignment had been made applied for the payment of the sum due upon the policy, and the company inquired of the assignees of the bankrupt whether there was any objection to payment being made to the claimant. The assignees did not assent to the payment, but made no positive claim to the policy. In the meantime an action was brought upon the policy by the claimant, in the name of the bankrupt, against the company:—Held, that it was a case in which the company were entitled to file their bill of interpleader against the plaintiff in the action, the bankrupt and his assignees, and that the assignees, who had in the suit shewn no title to the policy, must pay the costs. Fenn v. Edmonds, 5 Hare, 314.

IX. BONUSES.

Who Entitled to.]—By the deed of settlement of a life assurance society a fund, to be composed of surplus profits, was created, of which part was to be divided amongst the shareholders at intervals of five years:—Held, that "special" dividends arising from this fund, and also "extraordinary" dividends upon shares in a similar company, declared out of surplus profits at the discretion of the managers, were income, and, as such, the property of a tenant for life entitled to the "dividends, interest and income" of the shares. Hopkin's Trusts, In re, 43 L. J., Ch. 722; L. R. 18 Eq. 696; 30 L. T. 627; 22 W. R. 687.

By a marriage settlement the husband covenanted to effect a policy on his life, in the names of trustees, for the sum of 2,500*l*., and to settle "the said sum of 2,500*l*." upon certain trusts:—Held, that the trustees were entitled to the bonuses which accrued upon the policy. Gilly v. Burley, 22 Beav. 619; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 897; 4 W. R. 769.

Bequest—"The Residue."]—The testator, after reciting that he was entitled to a policy of insurance on his life for 2,000*l*., bequeathed 400*l*., part thereof to E.; 100*l*. and 100*l*., other parts thereof, to two other legatees; and he left "the residue" to J. H. C. At the time of the testator's death considerable sums by way of bonus were added to the policy:—Held, that the gift of "the residue" of the moneys, payable on foot of the insurance, was residuary and not specific, and that J. H. C. took the entire residue of the proceeds of the policy, including the bonuses, but subject to any liability for the satisfaction of which the policy could be resorted to, and that such liabilities were to be borne primarily by the legatee of such residue in exoneration of the specific legatees of the insurance. Corballis v. Corballis, 9 L. R., Ir. 309.

New Policy taken out on Lapse of Old.]—W. insured his life in 1812, and paid the premiums till 1816, when, owing to removing to another house, he omitted to pay it. But in 1817 he got a new policy for the same amount at the same premium as his policy of 1812, and this premium was duly paid till 1854, when he died. Bonuses attached to policies of 1812. W.'s executor filed a bill, praying that the company might be ordered to pay all bonuses as if the policy had been dated and continued since 1812, but no direct evidence was given beyond the above facts, and W. had made no similar application till 1839 :—Held, that the bill shewed no right to any equity against the company, for there was nothing to shew that the policy of 1812 had not been forfeited. Windus v. Tredegar (Lord), 15 L. T. 108—H. L.

X. LOST POLICIES.

Sums secured by life policies alleged to have been lost, or destroyed in the lifetime of the insurer, ordered to be paid to his administratrix by the company, without any other indemnity than the decree of the court. Crokatt v. Ford, 25 L. J., Ch. 552 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 436 ; 4 W. R. 426.

An insurance company paying money under a decree of the court upon a policy which has been lost, is not entitled to any further indemnity. England v. Tredegar (Lord), 35 L. J., Ch. 386 ; L. R. 1 Eq. 344 ; 35 Beav. 256.

Interest on Lost Policy.]—See infra, col. 81.

XI. VALUATION OF POLICIES.

Rules.]—The rules of the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1872, for valuing policies, do not apply where, under the contract of insurance, a stated sum is at the winding-up payable on the policy. British Imperial Insurance Corporation, In re, Farr's and Whittall's Claims, 47 L. J., Ch. 318.

Company in Liquidation.]—In estimating the value of a current policy in a life assurance company in course of liquidation, the measure of proof is the sum which would be required in each particular case to purchase a policy of the same amount at the same premium in a solvent office. English Assurance Co., In re, Holdich's Case, 42 L. J., Ch. 612 ; L. R. 14 Eq. 72 ; 26 L. T. 415 ; 20 W. R. 567.

XII. ACTIONS ON POLICIES.

Parties—Assignment—Personal Representative of Person insured.]—In an action by an equitable mortgagee of a policy of insurance against the insurance company for payment of the policy-money, the court has jurisdiction under the s. 44 of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, to dispense with a legal personal representative of the assured where none exists. In a case where the mortgage debt was larger than the policy-money, and the estate of the insured was insolvent :—Held, that the jurisdiction to dispense with a personal representative was rightly exercised. The dicta of James and Cotton, L.JJ., in Webster v. British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Co. (supra, col. 50) commented on. Curtius v. Caledonian Fire and Life Insurance Co., 51 L. J., Ch. 80 ; 19 Ch. D. 534 ; 45 L. T. 662 ; 30 W. R. 125—C. A.

—— Trustees.]—A policy was effected by A. upon her own life with an insurance company ; it was by deed, and executed by three trustees of the company : A. afterwards assigned it to B. and died. The money due on the policy was paid to B. by a cheque drawn by the trustees on the bankers of the company, and he gave an acknowledgment of having received the money from the trustees. By the deed of trust the board of directors was to cause all moneys belonging to the company to be deposited with the bankers in the name of the trustees, and such moneys were not to be withdrawn but for the purposes of the company, and by cheques signed by the trustees, or by three or more directors under some authority to be given to the trustees. After the payment to B. it was discovered that the policy was void on account of fraud :—Held, that, under these circumstances, the three trustees were the proper plaintiffs to recover back the money so paid to B. Lefevre v. Boyle, 3 B. & Ad. 877 ; 1 L. J., K. B. 199.

When a policy is assigned to a trustee who, either by express terms or by fair construction, has a power to give receipts, the company ought not to refuse payment to the trustee. Curtin v. Jellicoe, 13 Ir. Ch. R. 180.

—— Holder of Dishonoured Bill of Exchange.]—If an insurance company discharges by bill of exchange a liability upon a policy which limits the claim to the capital of the company, and the bill is not paid, the holder has a clear right to sue, or prove in a winding-up upon the bill, and not merely in respect of the original contract. State Fire Insurance Co., In re, Meredith, Ex parte, 32 L. J., Ch. 300 ; 8 L. T. 146 ; 11 W. R. 416.

Inspection of Medical and Confidential Reports.]—An insurance office in accepting a proposal to insure the life of a person acted on reports as to his health and habits made by his private friends, a report by his own medical officer on his examination of such person, and a statement by such person written on the back of the medical report. The private friends' reports consisted of replies to printed questions, with a notice by the office that the replies would be considered strictly private and confidential. The medical report was headed with the words "confidential medical examination." In an action against the office to recover the amount insured, in which the question was whether the policy had been obtained by untrue statements as to the health and habits of the person whose life was so insured, the court allowed the plaintiffs to have inspection of the reports, as well those of the private friends as of the medical officer. Mahony v. National Widows' Life Assurance Fund, 40 L. J., C. P. 203 ; L. R. 6 C. P. 252 ; 24 L. T. 548 ; 19 W. R. 722.

See DISCOVERY.

Production of Deed in Action.]—In a suit by assignees in trust from T. of two policies of assurance (which formed part of a trust estate in T.'s hands as surviving executor of J.) to impeach an alleged prior mortgage of the policies by T. to the company which issued them, the bill, in effect, alleged (though the answer denied) that the giving of the prior mortgage was a breach of trust on T.'s part of which the company was aware at the time. The bill also alleged, and the answer admitted, that the company intended to surrender the policies or sell them by auction. On summons by the plaintiffs for production of documents:—Held, that the plaintiffs had not shewn sufficient interest in the mortgage deed to entitle them to its production. Carter v. Hublack, 24 W. R. 354—C. A.

Capital Punishment.]—F. assured his life in January, 1815, and paid premiums regularly till 1824. In June, 1815, he committed a felony, of which he was convicted in October, 1824, and for which he was executed in November, 1824. A bill was filed in 1825 by his representatives claiming under him and in his right, for payment of the sum alleged to be due on the insurance, and decree in favour of the representatives; but the judgment was reserved, on the ground that, by the general policy of the law, the insurance became void as to those claiming under and in right of F., in consequence of the death being occasioned by his own criminal act. Amicable Society v. Bolland, 2 Dow & Cl. 1; 4 Bligh (N.S.) 194.

Particulars—Disease.]—In an action on a policy, a condition of which was that the person whose life was insured had not been afflicted with certain specified disorders or any other complaint, the company pleaded that the assured, at the time of the policy, had symptoms of disease of the stomach:—Held, that the company must deliver particulars under this plea. Marshall v. Emperor Life Assurance Society, 6 B. & S. 886; 35 L. J., Q. B. 89; L. R. 1 Q. B. 35; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 293; 13 L. T. 281.

Restraining Action on.]—A bill having been filed by an insurance company to cancel a life policy as obtained by misrepresentation, a motion was made to restrain an action upon the policy which was commenced immediately after the filing of the bill:—Held, that the court had complete jurisdiction, but that the question would be more suitably tried before a jury; and motion refused accordingly. Hoare v. Bremridge, 42 L. J., Ch. 1; L. R. 8 Ch. 22; 27 L. T. 593; 21 W. R. 43.

The declaration made by the insured in a proposal to effect a life policy, which it was agreed should be the basis of the contract, stated that if any untrue averment was made in the answers to the questions contained in the proposal or put by the company's medical officer, the policy should be void. The company filed a bill to set aside the policy, alleging, as distinct grounds of fraud, first, a suppression of the fact that other companies had declined to insure the life; and secondly, an untrue answer to a question as to the habits of the deceased. After the bill was filed, and before the time for answering had expired, the assignee of the policy commenced an action upon it. The court refused with costs an interlocutory injunction to restrain the action, holding that the question whether the assured was of sober habits was one for a court of law with the aid of a jury. Life Association of Scotland v. McBlane, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 176.

In 1812 an insurance society granted a policy for 5,000*l.* to W. on his life, which was forfeited in 1816 for nonpayment of premiums. A fresh policy was granted to W. in 1817 on the same terms as the forfeited policy. In the meantime a by-law of the society had been passed, whereby the holders of policies granted in 1817 were prevented from participation in certain bonuses to which holders of policies granted in 1812 were entitled. After the death of W., in 1855, his executors accepted payment of 8,000*l.* as due on the policy of 1817. In 1860 one of the executors filed a bill alleging that the policy of 1817 was accepted on condition that the assured should be entitled to the same rights as he would have been under the policy of 1812, and praying for an order for the payment of the further bonuses. The bill was dismissed, and the executor brought an action against the society to recover the further bonuses. The society filed a bill to restrain the action:—Held, that the former suit having been brought on the footing that the policy of 1812 was void, the defendant could not be allowed to bring an action on that policy. Tredegar v. Windus, 44 L. J., Ch. 268; L. R. 19 Eq. 607; 32 L. T. 596; 23 W. R. 511.

Held, also, that the right of the society to plead the decree in equity in the action did not prevent the court from granting the injunction. Ib.

An assignee of a policy brought an action against an assurance company under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 144, for the purpose of recovering the moneys secured by the policy. The company filed a bill in equity in order to have the action restrained and the policy brought into court to be cancelled, on account of the fraud alleged to have been practised upon them in obtaining it:—Held, that the company was not entitled to an injunction, inasmuch as the facts alleged were a complete answer to the action, and that granting the injunction would neutralise the act of parliament. Scottish Amicable Society v. Fuller, Ir. R. 2 Eq. 53; 16 W. R. 274. But see now Judicature Act, 1873, s. 24, sub-s. 5.

Bill in Chancery—Demurrer.]—To a bill brought to recover a sum of money upon a policy of insurance, the defendants demurred, because the plaintiff's remedy was at law. Demurrer allowed. Ghettoff v. London Assurance Co., 4 Bro. P. C. 436.

—— Parties to—Secretary and Manager.]—The secretary and manager of a mutual insurance company is properly made a defendant to a bill to enforce a claim against the company where the rules provide that claims are to be paid by means of cheques countersigned by him, and that the money to pay the claims is to be raised by bills of exchange to be drawn by him on the members of the association, notwithstanding that he is not a member of the association and not personally liable to pay any part of the claim. Pepper v. Green, 2 Hem. & M. 478.

A bill can be sustained against the secretary and manager of a mutual insurance company under similar circumstances, notwithstanding his bankruptcy, and his assignees are not as such necessary parties to the suit. Pepper v. Henzell, 2 H. & M. 486; 13 W. R. 962.

—— Parties to—Different Classes of Insurers.]—Some persons insured in a company for sums of money payable at death, some for an allowance during sickness, some for annuities :—Held, that all these classes could be properly represented by plaintiffs some of whom were of each class of insurers. Evans v. Coventry, 25 L. J., Ch. 489 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 557 ; 4 W. R. 466.

Payment of Policy-Moneys into Court.]—An assurance company having its principal office in Edinburgh, and a branch office in London, issued a policy on which was indorsed a memorandum that the moneys to become payable thereunder should be payable to the executors, administrators or assigns of the assured at the office of the company in London. On the death of the assured, the policy-money being claimed by the executor of the assured who had proved the will in Scotland, and by the equitable mortgagees of the policy, the company commenced an action in the Court of Session in Scotland, in order to have the conflicting claims adjudicated upon, and subsequently they filed a bill against the company and the executor of the assured. On a summons taken out by them that the company might pay the policy-money into court :—Held, that the company having admitted they had no interest in the money, must pay it into court without being indemnified from having to pay it into court in Scotland, although the practice of the Scotch courts might be to require this to be done, notwithstanding the payment of the same sum into an English court. Cook v. Scottish Equitable Life Assurance Society, 26 L. T. 571.

A. assured his life, and in March, 1852, assigned the policy to B. absolutely. B. in December, 1869, assigned the policy to C. absolutely. In March, 1875, A. died. The office admitted C.'s title to the policy-money, subject to production of evidence that an assignment by way of mortgage made by A. in March, 1851, of which the office had notice, but on which no claim had ever been made, was satisfied ; and on C.'s declining to comply with the requisition, in July, 1875, paid the money into court under the Trustees Relief Act :—Held, that the Trustees Relief Act, until extended by the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 6, did not enable an assurance society having notice of conflicting claims to pay policy-moneys into court, unless the moneys were the subject of a trust ; but that the objection could not be entertained on a petition praying payment out of court of moneys so paid in. Haycock, In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 247 ; 1 Ch. D. 611 ; 24 W. R. 291.

Held, also, that the requisition was proper, inasmuch as, if the mortgage had not been satisfied, the mortgagee might, by virtue of the Policies of Assurance Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 144), have sued the office in his own name on his assignment. Ib.

Held, also, that the assurance society was entitled to its costs as between solicitor and client, but not to its charges and expenses. Ib.

By a marriage settlement alleged to have been made in consequence of false representations by the husband, a policy of assurance on the life of the wife's mother was settled on the usual trust, giving the husband a life interest after the death of the wife. The marriage was dissolved soon after its celebration on the ground of the husband's adultery and desertion. There was no issue. The trustees of the settlement, having no funds to keep up the policy, assigned it absolutely to the wife, who paid the premiums from the date of such assignment. On the death of the assured, the assurance society, after some delay, paid the money due on the policy into court on the ground that the wife could not give a discharge :—Held, that, under the special circumstances, the husband had no claim on the fund. Rosier, In re, 37 L. T. 426.

Held, also, that the society was nevertheless justified in paying the money into court, but that it must pay interest from the time when the money became payable till it was paid into court, though there was then no legal hand to receive it. Ib.

An insurance company is not a trustee, but a debtor, and is not justified in paying policy-moneys into court under the Trustees Relief Act, nor is it discharged by such payment. Matthew v. Northern Assurance Co., 47 L. J., Ch. 562 ; 9 Ch. D. 80 ; 38 L. T. 468 ; 27 W. R. 51.

Therefore, where M. had become entitled, by assignment (of which the statutory notice had been given to the company), to certain policy-moneys, and the company had paid the moneys into court, not being satisfied as to his title thereto, the fund being also claimed by the executors of the assured, the company was held not to be discharged by such payment, and was ordered to pay to M. the amount of the policy with interest, and the costs of the action. Ib.

A banking company having received notice in writing of conflicting claims to moneys placed with them on deposit, paid such moneys into court under the Trustees Relief Act, after first deducting therefrom their costs of payment in. Upon petition by one of the claimants for payment out :—Held, that the proviso in s. 25, sub-s. 6, of the Judicature Act only applied to debts of which there had been an absolute assignment in writing ; and that the banking company, not being trustees within the Trustees Relief Act, were not entitled to pay the deposit moneys in court thereunder :—But held, that the petitioner must be taken to have submitted to the jurisdiction under the Trustees Relief Act by petitioning the court, and upon the principle of Haycock, In re (supra), the bank were entitled to their taxed costs of the payment in and of the petition, and such costs were directed to be taxed accordingly. Sutton's Trusts, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 350 ; 12 Ch. D. 175 ; 27 W. R. 529.

Where adverse claims are made to moneys payable under a policy of insurance, the company may pay the money into court under the Trustees Relief Act. United Kingdom Life Insurance Co., In re, 34 Beav. 493 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 424 ; 12 L. T. 441 ; 13 W. R. 645.

On the death of a party whose life has been insured in an insurance office, if disputes arise as to the parties entitled to the amount of the insurance, the company may pay the amount due from them into court, under the Trustees Relief Act. Hall, In re, 5 L. T. 395 ; 10 W. R. 37.

When conflicting claims are made on an assurance company in respect of policy-moneys, but one of the claimants offers an indemnity, the company ought not to institute an interpleader suit, but should (if not satisfied with the indemnity) pay the money into court under the Trustees Relief Act. Chapman v. Besnard, 17 W. R. 358.

Proof of Death of Assured.]—A policy on the life of Nutt was granted in 1863. An action was brought upon it in 1874, and the question was whether Nutt was then alive or dead. He had been absent from his former home for more than seven years, having left it in 1867. His sister and brother-in-law, who lived where he had formerly lived, gave evidence as to his absence, and said that they had not heard of him for more than seven years. On cross-examination they said that a niece of his had said that when she was in Melbourne in December, 1872, or January, 1873, she saw a man whom she believed to be her uncle Nutt, but he was lost in the passing crowd before she could get to speak to him. No effort appeared to have been made to find him at Melbourne, and the other relatives believed the niece to have been mistaken. The jury expressed a similar opinion. The judge directed the jury that they "could not say that the man had not been heard of during the last seven years when one of his relatives declared that she had seen him alive and well within the last three years, and still less could they say that he had never been heard of, when all the members of his family stated that they had heard of what she had stated," and "that the ground for the presumption of death from a man having been absent for seven years was entirely removed by the direct evidence that every relative had heard that he was alive." And lastly, the judge said to the jury: "Under these circumstances, unless you are prepared to find that he was dead in April, 1875, and find it upon evidence which tends to prove exactly the contrary, and in the absence of that evidence upon which alone the presumption should be raised of his death, your verdict ought to be for the defendant." The Court of Appeal considered this to be a misdirection, and ordered a venire de novo. On appeal, the Lords were equally divided, and so the decision of the Court of Appeal stood affirmed. Prudential Insurance Co. v. Edmonds, 2 App. Cas. 487.

Evidence of Death—Cestui qui vie.]—Money was payable to a tenant pur autre vie under a policy, after proof, to the satisfaction of directors, of the cestui que vie. An order was made under 6 Anne, c. 72, that the cestui que vie ought to be deemed and taken to be dead under the statute, and the remainderman entered:—Held, that the directors might reasonably require further evidence of the death of the cestui que vie. Doyle v. City of Glasgow Life Assurance Co., 53 L. J., Ch. 527; 50 L. T. 323; 32 W. R. 476; 48 J. P. 374.

Presumption of Death.]—See EVIDENCE, II.

Pleadings.]—To an action on a policy on the life of H., conditioned that if he went out of Europe all claim to any interest in the funds of the society should cease, with a proviso that he should be at liberty to visit Tangiers, or any other port within the Mediterranean: the company with whom the policy was effected pleaded that he departed beyond the limits of Europe, otherwise than by visiting Tangiers, or any other port within the Mediterranean. The court refused to allow an equitable replication, that at the time of making the policy it was expressly stipulated that the policy should not be vitiated by reason that H. visited ports and places out of Europe, and that the policy was entered into on the terms of such stipulation; but the court allowed a replication of leave and licence. Reis v. Scottish Equitable Life Assurance Society, 2 H. & N. 19; 26 L. J., Ex. 279; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 417; 5 W. R. 592.

In an action to recover the amount of a life policy, where the rules of the society stipulate that the insured shall be of sober and temperate habits, it is sufficient upon a plea denying the sober and temperate habits of the insured, for the company to shew that his habits were intemperate; and it is no answer to prove the intemperance not to have been to such a degree as to injure the health of the insured, or to shorten his life. Southcombe v. Merriman, Car. & M. 286.

Right to Begin.]—In an action on a policy, to be cancelled in case of suicide, by return of the premiums, on a plea that the deceased died by suicide, and that the premiums were ready to be returned, the defendant is entitled to begin. Stormont v. Waterloo Life Assurance Co., 1 F. & F. 22.

Evidence as to Suicide.]—In an action on a policy, on a plea of suicide, the onus being upon the defendant to prove that the death was by suicide, and he having put in the deposition of the widow and executrix, given upon the coroner's inquest, to the effect that the day before his death the deceased had unaccountably gone out of his bedroom very early in the morning, and immediately afterwards had been found in peril of falling over the banisters; that, later in the day, after he had complained of giddiness and pains in the head, he had been seen falling out of a window, his wife being in the room at the time and not being able to say how he came to fall out:—Held, that there was a scintilla of evidence to support the plea; that the question upon it was, not merely whether the deceased threw himself out of the window, but whether, if so, he did it voluntarily, and not through confusion of his senses. Ib.

Power of Arbitrator to state Special Case.]—The defendants' special act provided for the reference to arbitration of any question arising on any of their contracts of insurance, and that the "submission to any such arbitration" might be made a rule of court:—Held, that the umpire in a reference under the act had power to state a special case for the opinion of the court under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 5. Isitt v. Railway Passengers' Assurance Co., 58 L. J., Q. B. 191; 22 Q. B. D. 504; 60 L. T. 297; 37 W. R. 477.

Prohibition—Court of Assurance.]—Prohibition refused to the court of policies of assurance in a case of insurance of a man's life. Bendir v. Oyle, Style, 166.

Authority of Directors—Contract—Seal—7 & 8 Vict. c. 110.]—In an action against an insurance company established under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, it is sufficient for the plaintiff to produce a contract signed by three directors, although not under seal of the company, and to shew by receipt of premiums and otherwise that the contract has been acknowledged by the company. It lies on the company to shew that formalities required by the deed of settlement have not been observed.

Interpleader.]—See Desborough v. Harris, supra, col. 72.

Costs.]—Costs of an insurance company, paying into court moneys in respect of a life policy on which there were various claims, allowed as between solicitor and client. Webb, In re, 35 L. J., Ch. 850; L. R. 2 Eq. 456; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 595; 14 L. T. 89; 14 W. R. 857.

An insurance company having been served with a petition for the payment out of court of the proceeds of a policy, is entitled to the costs of appearance. Cobb, In re, 15 W. R. 29; 15 L. T. 170.

An insurance company paid the amount of a policy, the right of which was disputed, into court, under the Trustees Relief Act:—Held, that the company was entitled to their costs from the person wrongfully claiming the fund. United Life Assurance Co., In re, 34 Beav. 493; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 424; 12 L. T. 441; 13 W. R. 645.

The solicitors who gave notice to an assurance company of possible claims on the proceeds of a life policy, whereby a portion of the moneys was paid into court, ought not to be made respondents to a petition for payment of the fund out of court, or to pay any costs of such petition, or of the payment into court, but they will not be allowed their costs of appearance in full. Moseley, Ex parte, Provident Clerks' Mutual Life Assurance Association, In re, 21 L. T. 384; 18 W. R. 126.

XIII. INTEREST ON POLICY-MONEYS.

Before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, interest was not recoverable in an action upon a policy on the life of A., by which a certain sum was made payable six months after due proof of his death, although the money insured was not paid at the time stipulated for that purpose. Higgins v. Sargeant, 3 D. & R. 613; 2 B. & C. 348; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 33; 26 R. R. 379.

Interest is not payable on a sum recovered, on a lost policy, from a life insurance company. Bushman v. Morgan, 5 Sim. 635.

B. AGAINST ACCIDENT, INJURY OR DISEASE.

Contract—Misdescription.]—As to residence and occupation, see Perrins v. Marine and General Travellers' Insurance Society, ante, col. 25.

—— Health.]—An insurance having been effected in the name and on the life of a pauper dependent on his son for support, ruptured, and subject to fainting fits:—Held, that there was nothing in the life insured which falsified a declaration that the insured had not been subject to epileptic or other fits; and that "there was not any circumstance or information touching his occupation or habits of life, with which the directors ought to be made acquainted, as rendering him peculiarly liable to accident"; nor was his being driven out in a vehicle a voluntary exposure to obvious risk, within the meaning of an exception on those terms. Shilling v. Accidental Death Insurance Co., 1 F. & F. 116.

—— Time within which Notice to be Given.]—The provisions of a policy issued by an assurance company, making it a condition precedent to the right to recover that a notice, specifying the particulars of the accident, should be delivered at the chief office of the company, in London, within seven days after its occurrence, applies to cases where owing to the sudden character of the accident, and its resulting in instantaneous death, there was nobody capable of giving the required notice. Gamble v. Accident Assurance Co., Ir. R. 4 C. L. 204.

The provision is not discharged by reason of the fact that owing to the act of God the accident was of so sudden and fatal a character that it was impossible to have given the required notice within the specified time. Ib.

Interest.]—An insurance against death by accident is within the 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 2, as to interest. Shilling v. Accidental Death Insurance Co., 1 F. & F. 116. S. P., 2 H. & N. 42; 26 L. J., Ex. 266; 5 W. R. 567.

Premiums—Expiration of Policy.]—A. on the 22nd of January, 1852, effected with a company an insurance against death or injury from accident, the premium on which was payable on the 22nd of January in each year. By one of the conditions indorsed on the policy (the 1st), the premium was to be paid "within twenty-one days from the day on which the same should first accrue or become due," and "provided the same should be from time to time paid within such space of twenty-one days, the policy should not be void notwithstanding the happening before the expiration of such space of twenty-one days of the event or events, upon the happening whereof the amount secured by the policy should, according to the terms thereof, become payable." By another condition (the 2nd), "if the premium should be unpaid for twenty-one days next after it should become due, the policy should be absolutely void, and the assured should forfeit all claim thereunder." And (by the 4th condition), "in every case when a new premium should become payable, the directors should be at liberty to terminate the risk, by refusing to accept such premium." A. duly paid the premiums down to 1855. On the 27th of January, 1856, an accident happened to him, which caused his death on the 1st of February following. On the 4th of February the company had notice of his death, and a correspondence took place between their secretary and the attorney of A.'s executors respecting the cause of the death, and their claim on the policy, neither party at first knowing that the premium which became due on the 22nd of January, 1856, was unpaid. On the 8th of February, the secretary for the first time became acquainted with the fact of the nonpayment of the premium, but did not communicate it to the executors, or their attorney, until the 13th (the day after the expiration of the twenty-one days allowed by the first condition for payment of the premium), when he informed the latter by letter that the directors had considered and rejected the claim:—Held, first, that there was nothing in the conditions to enable the executors to pay the premium after his death, and that if they had tendered it within the twenty-one days, the company would not have been bound to accept it. Simpson v. Accidental Death Insurance Co., 2 C. B. (N.S.)

257; 26 L. J., C. P. 289; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1079. See S. C., 5 W. R. 307.

Held, also, that the company not being estopped from denying the payment, the plea was a good answer to the action. Ib.

Held, also, that the policy expired on the 22nd January, 1856, and that neither the executors nor the insured (had he been living) had an absolute right to keep the policy alive by payment or tender of the premium within the twenty-one days after that date. Ib.

Risks—Sun-stroke.]—By a policy effected by S. with a company for granting assurance against loss of life and personal injury arising from accidents at sea, it was agreed that in case S. should sustain any personal injury from or by reason or in consequence of any accident which should happen to him upon any ocean, sea, river, or lake during the continuance of the policy, the company should pay to him a reasonable compensation, and that if he should die from the effects of the injury, the company should pay to his executors 100*l.* At the time of effecting the policy he was about to sail on a voyage to Aden. He proceeded on his voyage and arrived in the Cochin River on the south-west coast of India, where he was struck down by a sun-stroke while attending to his duty in the ship, and died the same day from the effects of the sun-stroke:—Held, that the death could not be said to have arisen from accident within the meaning of the policy, and therefore that he could not recover. Sinclair v. Maritime Passengers' Assurance Co., 3 El. & El. 478; 30 L. J., Q. B. 77; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 367; 4 L. T. 15; 9 W. R. 342.

—— Disability from following Pursuits.]—A policy against accident contained a proviso, "that in case such accident shall not cause the death of the insured immediately, but shall cause any bodily injury to the insured of so serious a nature as wholly to disable him from following his usual business, occupation, or pursuits, the company will pay to the insured a compensation in money at the rate of 5*l.* per week during the continuance of such disability." An insured, a solicitor and registrar of a county court, sprained his ankle severely, and was confined to his bedroom for some weeks, being unable to get down stairs. He was prevented from passing his accounts as registrar, and from attending at various places at which he was required to complete purchases for his clients:—Held, that inasmuch as the insured was so disabled as to be incapable of following his usual occupation, business, or pursuits, he was "wholly disabled from following his usual occupation, business, or pursuits" within the meaning of the policy. Hooper v. Accidental Death Insurance Co., 5 H. & N. 557; 29 L. J., Ex. 484; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 74; 8 W. R. 616—Ex. Ch.

—— Secondary Cause of Death.]—By one of the conditions of a policy against accidental death or injury, it was provided that the policy insured against cuts, stabs, concussions, &c., "when accidentally occurring from material and external cause, where such accidental injury is the direct and sole cause of death to the insured, or disability to follow his avocations"; and then followed this exception: "but it does not insure against death or disability arising from rheumatism, gout, hernia, erysipelas, or any other disease or cause arising within the system of the insured before, or at the time, or following such accidental injury, whether causing death or disability directly or jointly with such accidental injury":—Held, that death from hernia caused solely and directly by external violence, followed by a surgical operation performed for the purpose of relieving the patient, is not within the exception. Fitton v. Accidental Death Insurance Co., 17 C. B. (N.S.) 122; 34 L. J., C. P. 28.

Under a similar policy the insured cut his foot accidentally against the broken side of an earthenware pan; a few days later erysipelas supervened, and of that disease he died shortly afterwards. The erysipelas was caused by the wound, and but for that he would not have suffered from it. In an action by his executrix to recover the amount assured:—Held, that the insurers were protected by the condition and were not liable. Smith v. Accident Insurance Co., 39 L. J., Ex. 211; L. R., 5 Ex. 302; 22 L. T. 861; 18 W. R. 1107.

—— Railway Accident.]—A company entered into a contract of insurance with a party whereby it undertook to pay 1,000*l.* to his legal representatives in the event of death happening to the assured from railway accident whilst travelling in any class carriage on any line of railway of Great Britain or Ireland, a proportionate part of that sum to be paid to the assured himself in the event of his sustaining any personal injury by reason of such accident. The assured travelled in a railway carriage to a certain place, and in getting out of the carriage after the train stopped, met with an injury, without any negligence on his part, and in consequence of the step of the carriage being accidentally slippery:—Held, first, that this was a railway accident within the meaning of the policy. Theobald v. Railway Passengers' Assurance Co., 10 Ex. 45; 2 C. L. R. 1034; 23 L. J., Ex. 249; 18 Jur. 583; 2 W. R. 528.

Held, secondly, that the assured could only recover for the personal expense and pain occasioned to him by the injury, and was not entitled to damages for loss of time or loss of profit occasioned by it. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that it was not a true measure of damage to assume 1,000*l.*, the sum insured, as the value of life, and estimate a proportionate sum for the injury sustained. Ib.

—— External Causes.]—On an insurance against bodily injury by accident or violence, provided that the accident operated by external causes, insurers are liable for an injury to the spine caused by lifting a heavy burden in the course of business. Martin v. Travellers' Insurance Co., 1 F. & F. 505.

—— "Sole Cause of Death."]—A policy of insurance against death from accidental injury contained the following condition: "This policy insures payment only in case of injuries accidentally occurring from material and external cause operating upon the person of the insured, where such accidental injury is the direct and sole cause of death to the insured, but it does not insure in case of death arising from fits . . . or any disease whatsoever arising before or at the time or following such accidental injury, whether consequent upon such accidental injury or not, and whether causing such death directly or jointly with such accidental injury." The insured, while at a railway station, was seized with a fit and fell forwards off the platform across the railway, where an engine and carriages which were passing went over his body and killed him :—Held, that the death of the insured was caused by an accident within the meaning of the policy, and that the insurers were liable. Lawrence v. Accidental Insurance Co., 50 L. J., Q. B. 522; 7 Q. B. D. 216; 45 L. T. 29; 29 W. R. 802; 45 J. P. 781.

—— Death by Drowning while in an Epileptic Fit.]—By a policy of insurance defendants agreed to pay to the representatives of W. 1,000*l.* if "the insured shall sustain any personal injury caused by accidental, external, and visible means within the intention of this policy and the provisions and conditions thereof, and the direct effect of such injury shall occasion the death of the insured." The policy provided "that the insured shall not be entitled to make any claim under this policy for any injury by any accident unless such injury shall be caused by some outward and visible means, of which proofs satisfactory to the directors can be furnished, and that this insurance shall not extend to any injury caused by or arising from natural disease or weakness, or exhaustion consequent upon disease . . . . or to any death arising from disease, although such death may have been accelerated by accident." The insured, whilst crossing a stream, was seized with an epileptic fit, fell in, and was drowned. He did not sustain any personal injury to occasion death other than drowning. In an action by his executrix on the policy :—Held, that the death was within the words of the policy, and that defendants were not protected by the proviso, and therefore were liable. Trew v. Railway Passengers' Assurance Co. (6 H. & N. 839) discussed and followed. Winspear v. Accident Insurance Co., 6 Q. B. D. 42; 43 L. T. 459; 29 W. R. 116—C. A.

—— Evidence.]—A policy against accidents or violence contained a proviso that no claim should be made by the insured, in respect of any injury, unless caused by some outward and visible means, of which satisfactory proof could be furnished to the directors of the company :—Held, that death by drowning, where the insured had gone into the sea for the purpose of bathing only, was a death by external violence within the meaning of the policy. Trew v. Railway Passengers' Assurance Co., 6 H. & N. 839; 30 L. J., Ex. 317; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 878; 4 L. T. 833; 9 W. R. 671—Ex. Ch.

An insured was twenty-six, and a clerk in the service of an ironmonger, when he effected the policy; he had been under medical treatment in consequence of having strained himself, and for five or six weeks was unable to attend to his duties at his employer's; he returned to his duties shortly before his death, which was alleged to have happened at Brighton, whither he had gone down, by leave of his employer, in order to have sea-bathing; he left his lodgings there in the evening, about seven o'clock of the day after he arrived, going towards the sea, but was never subsequently seen alive, though some clothes, identified to be his, were found, about eight o'clock, on the top of the steps of a bathing machine; and some time after this a naked body was washed up at a place on the coast about 200 miles from Brighton, which there was evidence to identify as the body of the insured, but the coroner's jury found that it was the body of a person unknown :—Held, sufficient to go to a jury to enable them to find that the insured met his death by drowning. New trial ordered. Ib.

A policy was entered into with a company against bodily injury from any railway accident directly affecting the assured while travelling on any line of railway in Great Britain or Ireland by a passenger train propelled by steam. One of the conditions in the deed of settlement of the company, which by the terms of the policy was incorporated with it, provided that before payment of the sum insured by any policy, proof of the death or accident, satisfactory to the directors of the company, should be furnished by the claimant, together with such further evidence or information, if any, as the directors should think necessary to establish the claim :—Held, that this must be understood to mean such evidence or information as the directors might reasonably, and not such as they might unreasonably and capriciously, require. Braunstein v. Accidental Death Insurance Co., 1 B. & S. 782; 31 L. J., Q. B. 17; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 506; 5 L. T. 550.

A policy of assurance against injuries caused by accident or violence contained a proviso, that no claim should be made under it in respect of any injury unless the same should be caused by some outward and visible means, of which satisfactory proof could be furnished to the directors :—Held, that this must be understood to mean such proof as a court of justice would determine ought to be satisfactory to the directors. Trew v. Railway Passengers' Assurance Co., 6 Jur. (N.S.) 759.

Reference to Arbitration or Action.]—A policy was entered into with a company, against bodily injury from any railway accident directly affecting the assured while travelling on any line of railway by a passenger train. There was a condition indorsed on the policy, that in case of difference of opinion as to the amount of compensation payable in any case, the question should be referred to the arbitration of a person to be named by the secretary for the time being of the Master of the Rolls, and all expenses and costs should be subject to the decision of such arbitrator; and the award made on such arbitration was to be taken as a final settlement of the question, and might be made a rule of court :—Held, that a reference to arbitration in the manner prescribed was rendered a condition precedent to an action for an injury within the policy. Ib.

Exception—Accident caused by "Exposure of the Insured to Obvious Risk."]—A policy of insurance against accidental death or injury excepted from the risks insured against accidents happening "by exposure of the insured to obvious risk of injury." The insured met his death through attempting in broad daylight to cross the main line of a railway in front of an approaching train by which he was run over and killed. There was no evidence that he was short-sighted or deaf. At the place where the accident happened there was no station, or proper crossing; and there was no obstruction to prevent a person about to cross from seeing an approaching train. There was no ground for imputing negligence to the servants of the railway company :—Held, that the risk incurred by the insured being one which either was obvious to him, or would have been obvious to him if he had been paying reasonable attention to what he was doing, the case came within the exception in the policy. Cornish v. Accident Insurance Co., 58 L. J., Q. B. 591; 23 Q. B. D. 453; 38 W. R. 139; 54 J. P. 262—C. A.

Accident—Policy—Time, Computation of—Insurance "from" a Date.]—The plaintiffs, a tramway company, effected with the defendants an insurance against accidents for twelve calendar months from November 24, 1887. An accident happened on November 24, 1888:—Held, that the effect of "from" in the expression "for twelve calendar months from November 24, 1887," was to exclude November 24, 1887, and to include November 24, 1888, in the period of the insurance, and that the defendants were therefore liable. South Staffordshire Tramways v. Sickness and Accident Assurance Association, 60 L. J., Q. B. 47; [1891] 1 Q. B. 402; 63 L. T. 807; 55 J. P. 168.

Specified Sum payable in respect of any one Accident.]—The plaintiffs, a tramway company, effected with the defendants an insurance against "claims for personal injury in respect of accidents caused by vehicles" to the amount of "250*l.* in respect of any one accident." One of the plaintiff's tramcars was overturned, forty persons were injured, and the plaintiffs became liable to pay claims to the amount of 833*l.*:—Held, that "accident" in the policy meant injury in respect of which a person claimed compensation from the plaintiffs, and that the liability of the defendants was consequently not limited to 250*l.*; but the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount of 833*l.* on the policy. South Staffordshire Tramways v. Sickness and Accident Assurance Association, 60 L. J., Q. B. 260; [1891] 1 Q. B. 402; 64 L. T. 279; 39 W. R. 292; 55 J. P. 372—C. A.

Accident—"Injury caused by violent, accidental, external and visible Means."]—By a policy of insurance against accident the defendants agreed to pay the plaintiff compensation if he should sustain "any bodily injury caused by violent, accidental, external and visible means." The policy contained a proviso that the insurance should not cover injury arising from natural disease or weakness. The plaintiff sustained injury by breaking a ligament in his knee while he was in the act of stooping:—Held, that such injury was covered by the policy; the words "external means" must be construed as the antithesis of internal means—e.g. disease or weakness. Hamlyn v. Crown Accidental Insurance Co., 62 L. J., Q. B. 409; [1893] 1 Q. B. 750; 4 R. 407; 68 L. T. 701; 41 W. R. 531; 57 J. P. 663—C. A.

Construction of Policy—Loss of Sight—Knowledge of Agent imputed to Principal.]—B. effected an insurance with the defendant company through their agent against accidental injury. The proposal for the insurance contained a statement by the assured that he had no physical infirmity, and that there were no circumstances that rendered him peculiarly liable to accidents, and it was agreed that the proposal should form the basis of the contract between him and the company. By the terms of the policy, the company agreed to pay the insured 500*l.* on permanent total disablement, and 250*l.* on permanent partial disablement—the policy stating that by permanent total disablement was meant, inter alia, "the complete and irrecoverable loss of sight to both eyes," and by permanent partial disablement was meant, inter alia, "the complete and irrecoverable loss of sight in one eye." At the time when he signed the proposal for the insurance the assured had lost the sight of one eye, a fact of which the defendant's agent was aware, though he did not communicate it to the defendants. The assured during the currency of the policy met with an accident, which resulted in the complete loss of sight in his other eye, so that he became permanently blind:—Held, that it must be taken, first, that the assured had sustained a complete loss of sight to both eyes within the meaning of the policy; secondly, that the knowledge of the defendants' agents was under the circumstances the knowledge of the defendants, and that they were liable on the policy for 500*l.* Bawden v. London, Edinburgh, and Glasgow Assurance Co., 61 L. J., Q. B. 792; [1892] 2 Q. B. 534; 57 J. P. 116—C. A.

Insurance against Disease — Whether a "Policy" within 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 2.]—The defendants, the proprietors of a certain medical preparation called "The Carbolic Smoke Ball," issued an advertisement in which they promised to pay 100*l.* to any person who contracted the influenza after having used one of their smoke balls, in a certain specified manner and for a certain specified period. The plaintiff, upon the faith of the advertisement, purchased one of the defendants' smoke balls, and used it in the manner and for the period specified, but nevertheless contracted the influenza:—Held, that the above facts established a contract by the defendants to pay the plaintiff 100*l.* in the event which happened; and that such contract was not a policy within 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 2; and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Carlill v. Carbolic Smoke Ball Co., 62 L. J., Q. B. 257; [1893] 1 Q. B. 256; 4 R. 176; 67 L. T. 837; 41 W. R. 210; 57 J. P. 325—C. A.

Railway Passengers' Assurance Company—Arbitration—Stay of Proceedings.]—Sects. 3 and 16 of the Railway Passengers' Assurance Company's Act, 1864, provide that questions of differences arising shall, if either the company or the persons claiming require it, be referred to arbitration. By s. 33, where an action has been commenced, the court or a judge, "upon being satisfied that no sufficient reason exists why the matters cannot and ought not to be referred to arbitration, and that the company were at the time of the bringing of the action or suit, and still are, ready and willing to concur in all acts necessary and proper for causing the matters to be decided by arbitration, may make an order staying all proceedings in the action." A claim was made against the company, which they disputed, but they did not give notice before the commencement of the action that they required to have the question referred to arbitration. After an action had been commenced the company took out a summons to stay all proceedings in the action:—Held, that as the company had not given notice before the commencement of the action that they required to have the question referred to arbitration, ss. 3 and 16 did not apply, and that, under the circumstances of the case, the court were not satisfied that no sufficient reason existed why the matters could not or ought not to be referred to arbitration, or that the company were at the beginning of the action ready and willing to concur in all acts necessary and proper for causing the matters to be decided by arbitration, and therefore no order ought to be made under s. 33. Fox v. Railway Passengers' Assurance Co., 52 L. T. 672—C. A.

"Accident"—Shock caused by Fright.]—A shock to the nerves of an employee caused by fright sustained in the discharge of his duty, and incapacitating him from employment, is an "accident" within the meaning of a policy issued by a railway company to such employee, under which a weekly allowance is to be paid by the company in case of such employee "being incapacitated from employment by reason of accident sustained in the discharge of his duty in the company's service." Pugh v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 65 L. J., Q. B. 521; [1896] 2 Q. B. 248; 74 L. T. 724; 44 W. R. 627—C. A.

Renewal of Policy by Consent—New Contract Year by Year—Assignment to Trustees for Creditors.]—An accident policy of assurance with a company which provides for the payment of a premium for one year from the date thereof, and which is capable of being renewed only by consent of the company, is not a continuing policy for all purposes, but upon each renewal a new contract is entered into year by year. When, therefore, the person assured has assigned all his property, "credits, estate, and effects whatsoever" to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, and died two year afterwards from an accident, while the renewed policy was subsisting, the moneys payable thereunder do not pass to the trustees under the deed, but belong to the executors of the assured. Stokell v. Heywood, 65 L. I. CONTRACT.

Contract of Indemnity.]—Assurances against fire are contracts of indemnity. Dalby v. India and London Life Assurance Co., 15 C. B. 365; 3 C. L. R. 61; 24 L. J., C. P. 2; 18 Jur. 1024; 3 W. R. 116—Ex.Ch.

A policy against fire is, in its nature, a contract of indemnity, and the insured is not entitled to recover more than such an amount as will indemnify him against the actual loss or damage sustained according to the real quantity and value of the goods at the time of the fire. Chapman v. Pole, 22 L. T. 306.

A policy of insurance against fire is a contract of indemnity. Darrell v. Tibbitts, 50 L. J., Q. B. 33; 5 Q. B. D. 560; 42 L. T. 797; 29 W. R. 66; 44 J. P. 695—C. A. See also Rayner v. Preston, 50 L. J., Ch. 472; 18 Ch. D. 1; 44 L. T. 787; 29 W. R. 546.

Reference to Printed Proposals.]—If a policy refers to certain printed proposals, the proposals will be considered as a part of the policy. Worsley v. Wood, 6 Term Rep. 710; 2 H. Bl. 574; 3 R. R. 323. And see Oldman v. Bewicke, 2 H. Bl. 577, n.

By the proposals of an insurance company it was stipulated that "persons insured shall give notice of the loss forthwith, deliver in an account, and procure a certificate of the minister, churchwardens, and some reputable householders of the parish, importing that they knew the character of the assured, and believe that he really sustained the loss and without fraud":—Held, that the procuring such a certificate was a condition precedent to the right of the assured to recover, and that it was immaterial that the minister, &c., wrongfully refused to sign the certificate. Ib.

A deed-poll, containing an insurance against fire, may refer to conditions in a printed paper, without stamp, seal or signature; and it may be a part of those conditions that the insured shall procure a certificate of his character, and that the loss happened without fraud. Routledge v. Burrell, 1 H. Bl. 254.

Ambiguity—Parol Evidence.]—A policy mentioned a building, oil-mill, of one floor only, with stone and tile, occupied by ——, for crushing of linseed and grinding of dyewood, but no refining of oil therein, 1,000*l.*; on fixed machinery and millwright works, including all the standing and growing gear therein, 1,000*l.*; one engine-house adjoining the mill, 200*l.*; one steam-engine therein, 300*l.*; one logwood warehouse, in which chopping dyewood is performed, communicating with the mill, 200*l.*; one warehouse on the other side of the mill, to the east side, merely for the stowing of goods, 300*l.*:—Held, that there was no ambiguity in the policy, and that evidence was not receivable to shew that it was intended to insure the machinery and gear in the logwood warehouse. Hare v. Barstow, 8 Jur. 928.

Latent Ambiguity—Evidence—Question for Jury.]—In an action upon a policy of fire insurance, if the evidence discloses a latent ambiguity in the policy so that it becomes necessary to go into the consideration of other documents, and to resort to parol evidence to solve that ambiguity, it ceases to be merely a question for the court on the construction of the instrument, and raises a question of fact which must be determined by the jury. Hordern v. Commercial Union Assurance Co., 56 L. J., P. C. 78; 56 L. T. 240—P. C.

Liability of Directors.]—By a policy under seal, three of the directors of a fire association admitted the plaintiff as a member of that society upon the terms and conditions prescribed by the deed of settlement of the association; and he subscribed a certain sum as the consideration money for one year's assurance; and it was declared that he should be entitled to a remuneration out of the society's funds, in case of loss by fire happening to any property therein specified, not exceeding the sums set against each article respectively; and it was further stipulated, that neither of the directors who signed the policy, nor the plaintiff, nor the holder of it, should, as members of the society, be subject or liable to any demand for loss, except under the articles establishing the society, and as was provided by the same. The plaintiff having sustained a loss by fire, brought an action against the directors who signed the policy; and averred in his declaration, that the funds of the association were sufficient to satisfy the amount of such loss; and the jury found a verdict for him:—Held, that such declaration was sufficient; and that the directors were liable by the terms of the policy. Andrews v. Ellison, 6 Moore, 199.

F., W. and M. being trustees and directors of an insurance company, executed a policy to indemnify A. and others from loss by fire, whereby they ordered, directed and appointed the directors for the time being to pay the loss which A. and others should sustain in the event of a fire happening; and the policy went on to recite certain provisions, containing the words "conditions and agreements"; and a loss having happened:—Held, that the policy was not an instrument or an agreement upon which an action of covenant would lie; and consequently, that neither the executing parties, nor the directors for the time being, were liable at law. Alchorne v. Saville, 6 Moore, 202, n. See Gurney v. Rawlins, 2 M. & W. 87; 6 L. J., Ex. 7.

"Policy"—What is.]—Any contract of insurance comes within the word "policy," and there is no statutory or formal document necessary to make a contract of insurance. If a contract of insurance is created by any binding means, that is a "policy" to all intents and purposes. Norwich Equitable Fire Assurance Society, In re, 57 L. T. 541.

Slip of Policy, Effect of.]—The plaintiffs, a firm of merchants in New Zealand, in October, 1886, employed a firm of insurance brokers in London to effect for them insurances against fire upon goods in New Zealand. The brokers instructed B., an insurance broker at Lloyd's, to effect a portion of the insurances, and B. prepared a slip containing particulars of the risk, which was initialled by the defendant and other underwriters at Lloyd's. Owing to a misunderstanding between the insurance brokers no policy was put forward for signature by the defendant and the other underwriters, and in February, 1887, the goods in New Zealand were seriously damaged by fire. No premiums had then been paid, but two days after the fire the insurance premiums were paid by the plaintiffs to the insurance brokers. A policy was then tendered to the defendant for signature, but he refused to sign it or to pay the amount for which he had initialled the slip. In an action to recover the amount:—Held, that the slip formed a complete and binding contract of insurance, that it was not subject to an implied condition that a policy should be put forward for signature within a reasonable time, and that, in the absence of circumstances shewing an intention on the part of the plaintiffs to abandon the insurance, they were entitled to recover. Thompson v. Adams, 23 Q. B. D. 361.

Renewing Lapsed Policy.]—See infra, col. 98, II. PREMIUMS.

Untrue Statements—Partnership.]—The firm of D. & Co. made a proposal in writing for a policy of fire insurance, and to the question "Has the proponent ever been a claimant on a fire insurance company?" they answered "No":—Held, that claims made by a member of the firm before he became a partner in it were not covered by the question, and that the answer was not untrue. Davies v. National Fire and Marine Insurance Co., 60 L. J., P. C. 73; [1891] A. C. 485; 65 L. T. 560—P. C.

Construction—Loss occasioned by "Incendiarism"—Fire spreading from adjoining Premises.]—Goods in a house were insured against fire by a policy containing a condition "that it did not cover any loss or damage occasioned by, or in consequence of, incendiarism." While the policy was subsisting, adjoining premises were set on fire by an incendiary, for whose act the policy-holder was admittedly not responsible; and the fire having spread to the house containing the insured goods, they were destroyed:—Held, that the word "incendiarism" in the policy included any act of incendiarism wherever committed which directly caused the loss; that in the absence of evidence pointing to any other cause, the act of the incendiary must be assumed to be the direct cause of the loss, and that therefore the insurance company was not liable. Walker v. London and Provincial Insurance Co., 22 L. R., Ir. 572.

—— Option of Insurers to terminate Policy on Notice.]—A policy of insurance against fire was issued subject to the conditions, first, that it should not apply to any portion of the subject of insurance which should, by reason of some act done after its date without the consent of the insurers, be exposed to increased risk of fire, or removed to a building or place other than that described in the policy; second, that the insurers might terminate it by notice if "by reason of such change, or from any other cause whatever," they should desire to do so, refunding to the insured a ratable proportion of the premium for the unexpired time of the policy:—Held, that the insurers had, by force of this condition, the option of terminating the policy at will. Sun Fire Office v. Hart, 58 L. J., P. C. 69; 14 App. Cas. 98; 60 L. T. 337; 37 W. R. 561; 53 J. P. 548—P. C.

Policy Destroyed—Indemnity on Payment.]—The court will not direct an indemnity to be given on payment of a policy of insurance accidentally destroyed. Crokatt v. Ford, 25 L. J., Ch. 552; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 436; 4 W. R. 426.

II. PREMIUMS.

Loss before Payment of.]—In a policy against loss by fire, from half a year to half a year, the assured agreed to pay the premium half-yearly, "as long as the insurers should agree to accept the same," within fifteen days after the expiration of the former half-year; and it was also stipulated that no insurance should take place till the premium was actually paid; a loss happened within fifteen days after the end of one half-year, but before the premium for the next was paid:—Held, that the insurers were not liable, though the assured tendered the premium before the end of the fifteen days, but after the loss. Tarleton v. Staniforth, 1 Bos. & P. 471; 5 Term Rep. 695; 3 Anst. 707; 4 R. R. 845. And see Roberts v. Security Co., post, col. 124.

—— Refusal to Pay increased.]—By a policy under seal, referring to certain printed proposals, a fire office insured premises from 11th November, 1802, to 25th December, 1803, for a certain premium which was to be paid yearly on each 25th December, and the insurance was to continue so long as the insured should pay the said premium at the said times, and the office should agree to accept it. And by the printed proposals it was stipulated, that the insured should make all future payments annually at the office, within fifteen days after the day limited by the policy, upon forfeiture of the benefit thereof, and that no insurance was to take place till the premium was paid. And by a subsequent advertisement (agreed to be taken as part of the policy), the office engaged that all persons insured there by policies for a year or more had been and should be considered as insured for fifteen days beyond the time of the expiration of their policies; yet held, notwithstanding this latter clause, the assured having, before the expiration of the year, had notice from the office to pay an increased premium for the year ensuing, otherwise they would not continue the insurance, which the assured refused, that the office was not liable for a loss which had happened within fifteen days from the expiration of the year for which the insurance was made, though the assured, after the loss and before the fifteen days expired, tendered the full premium which had been demanded. The effect of the whole contract taken together being only to give the assured an option to continue the insurance or not, during fifteen days after the expiration of the year, by paying the premium for the year ensuing, notwithstanding any intervening loss, provided the office had not, before the end of the year, determined the option by giving notice that they would not renew the contract. Salvin v. James, 6 East, 571; 2 Smith, 646; 8 R. R. 540. And see Doe d. Pitt v. Shewin, 3 Camp. 134.

Recovery from Tenant.]—Where a lessee of a factory, under a covenant with his lessor to keep the premises insured in the Alliance or such other office as the lessor should appoint, executed an underlease to the plaintiffs whereby they covenanted to pay any sum or sums of money expended in fire insurance, and in the erroneous belief that the premises (which were empty) were used for a hazardous trade, paid 26*l.* 5*s.* per cent. for insurance in another office, and sought to recover the amount at law against the underlessee, a court of equity restrained the action upon the plaintiffs undertaking to pay the amount of premium, which was found to be properly payable, and made the defendants pay the costs of the suit. Leather Cloth Co. v. Bressey, 3 Giff. 474; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 425; 6 L. T. 63; 10 W. R. 370.

—— Agent to Receive.]—A policy contained the following clause:—"It is part of this contract than any person other than the assured who may have procured this insurance to be taken by this company, shall be deemed to be the agent of the assured, and not of this company under any circumstances whatever, or in any transaction relating to this insurance." A broker who effected the insurance for the assured, and received the premium, had frequently effected other insurances with the company, deducting his commission from the premiums and handing over the balance:—Held, that he was the agent of the company to receive the premium. Kelly v. London and Staffordshire Insurance Co., 1 Cab. & E. 47.

Specific Appropriation.]—Where the plaintiffs being agents for an insurance office remitted to it 100*l.* "for premiums," and it appeared that the 100*l.* was to the knowledge of the office in excess of what they owed as agents, and that the terms on which certain lapsed policies should be renewed by the office for their benefit had been ascertained by consent: — Held, that although there was not in the office any specific appropriation of any part of the 100*l.* to the payment of the premiums on the lapsed policies, yet that it must be taken to have been received on account thereof, and that from the date of receipt there was a good contract for the renewal of the old insurance. Kirkpatrick v. South Australian Insurance Co., 11 App. Cas. 177—P. C.

Mortgagee—Right to Insure and Add Premiums to Debt.]—See MORTGAGE.

III. INTEREST.

Insolvent Debtor.]—A person, discharged by the Insolvent Debtors Court as an insolvent debtor, effected an insurance against fire on some property acquired by him before the insolvency. The property having been destroyed by fire, the order for his discharge was afterwards annulled on the ground of fraud, and the insolvent adjudged to undergo twelve months' imprisonment from the date of the vesting order. He then brought an action on the policy, to which the company pleaded that he had no insurable interest in the property:—Held, that the action lay. Marks v. Hamilton, 7 Ex. 323; 21 L. J., Ex. 109; 16 Jur. 152.

An insolvent retains an insurable interest in goods concealed from his creditors. Goulstone v. Royal Insurance Co., 1 F. & F. 276.

Husband and Wife.]—A husband has an insurable interest in goods settled to his wife's separate use, they residing together, and sharing in the use of the property. Ib.

Wharfinger.]—A. effected with a company a policy against fire, in which he was described as a corn and flour factor; the policy was on goods in his warehouses, and on "goods in trust or on commission therein." The company contracted with him to make good any damage by fire to the property insured. A. was a wharfinger and warehouseman; he had in his warehouses goods belonging to his customers, which were deposited with him in that capacity, and on which he had a lien for the charges for cartage and warehouse rent, but no further interest of his own. No charge was made to the customers for insurance, nor were they informed of the existence of the policy. His warehouse was consumed by fire, with all the goods in it. The company paid the value of his own goods, and the amount of his lien on his customers' goods, but refused to pay the value of the customers' interest in the value of the goods beyond the lien:—Held, that the goods of the customers were in trust, within the meaning of the policy, and that he was entitled to recover the entire value. Waters v. Monarch Fire and Life Insurance Co., 5 El. & Bl. 870; 25 L. J., Q. B. 102; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 375; 4 W. R. 245.

Carriers.]—Carriers insured goods against fire, by a policy whereby "goods held in trust or on commission, were to be insured as such, otherwise the policy would not extend to cover such property." The sum of 15,000*l.* was declared to be insured "on goods, their own, and in trust as carriers" in a warehouse:—Held, that to the named amount, the whole value of goods in the warehouse, in their possession as carriers, was insured; and that they were entitled to recover the whole value of such goods destroyed by fire in the warehouse. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Glyn, 1 El. & El. 652; 28 L. J., Q. B. 188; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1004; 7 W. R. 238.

Held, also, that the carriers would be trustees for the owners of the goods of the amount thus recovered, less their charges as carriers in respect of the goods. Ib.

Insurance on goods is sufficient to cover the interest of carriers in the property under their charge; for, in general, if the subject-matter of the insurance is rightly described, the particular interest in it need not be specified. Crowley v. Cohen, 3 B. & Ad. 478; 1 L. J., K. B. 158.

Millers.]—Millers received wheat from different farmers. The wheat, on receipt, was, with the consent of the farmers, mixed with other wheat, and became part of the millers' current stock. The millers could at any time grind or sell the wheat so received. The farmers could at any time claim the price of the wheat delivered by each, according to the market price for wheat of like quality, at the time of payment claimed. They had also the option of claiming an equal quantity of wheat of like quality, instead of the value in money. The millers often made advances to the farmers on the wheat received from them. The farmers, after a certain time, paid a storage charge to the millers. The millers insured the current stock of wheat in their mill. In the proposal for insurance they answered the question whether the insurance was "for self or in trust, and if in trust on account of whom?"—in these words—"for selves." A condition of the policy was that goods held in trust must be insured as such, otherwise the policy would not cover them. The mill and stock were destroyed by fire. To an action on the policy, the insurers pleaded that the statement in the proposal was a misrepresentation, the stock having been held by the millers, "in trust for other persons":—Held, that the description of the subject of insurance was correct, for that this was not a case of possession given subject to a trust, but of property transferred for value upon special terms of settlement. South Australian Insurance Co. v. Randell, 6 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 341; L. R. 3 P. C. 101; 22 L. T. 843.

Tenant from Year to Year.]—A tenant from year to year insuring is not limited in his claim on the insurance company to the extent of his interest in the property insured. Simpson v. Scottish Union Insurance Co., 1 H. & M. 618; 32 L. J., Ch. 329; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 711; 8 L. T. 112; 11 W. R. 459; 1 N. R. 537.

IV. CONDITIONS.

a. As to Other Policies.

Communication of—When Necessary.]—The plaintiffs effected a policy of insurance with the defendant, as chairman of a fire insurance company, for 3,000*l.*, "on wool in bales or fleeces greasy and washed, in all or any shed or store, on station or in transit to Sydney by land only, or in any shed or store, or any wharf in Sydney, until placed on ship." The policy contained a provision as follows:—"No claim shall be recoverable if the property insured be previously or subsequently insured elsewhere, unless the particulars of such insurance be notified to the company in writing." The plaintiffs subsequently effected an insurance with a marine insurance company to cover 16,500*l.* upon wool, the risk being described as "at and from the River Hunter to Sydney per ships and steamers, and thence per ship or ships to London, including the risk of craft from the time that the wools are first waterborne and of transhipment or landing and reshipment at Sydney." The frequent practice at the port of Sydney is that wool arriving there for shipment is not delivered direct to the ship for which it is intended, but is conveyed to the stores belonging to the persons who are acting as the stevedores of the ship, and is there pressed for the purpose of reducing its bulk. By the practice and course of business, the stevedores' receipt is regarded as between the ship and the shippers as equivalent to the mate's receipt, and bills of lading are given in exchange for it. Certain wool belonging to the plaintiffs was forwarded by several consignments by several steamers from the River Hunter to Sydney. The plaintiffs' agent at Sydney had the wool conveyed on its arrival to his own stores, for the purpose of being weighed, and entered into a contract for its conveyance to London on board a ship. The wool was then conveyed from his warehouses to the stores of the stevedores of the ship, who gave the usual receipts for the same. While in the stevedores' warehouses, a portion of the wool was destroyed or damaged by a fire, and the plaintiffs sought to recover such loss upon the policy effected with the defendant company. The company resisted the claim, upon the ground that the policy of marine insurance above mentioned came within the terms of the provision in the fire policy, and ought to have been communicated to them:—Held, that the marine policy did not cover the wool in the stevedores' warehouses, and was not such an insurance as the plaintiffs were bound under the provisions in the fire policy to notify to the defendant company, and that the plaintiffs were therefore entitled to recover. Australian Agricultural Co. v. Saunders, 44 L. J., C. P. 391; L. R. 10 C. P. 668; 33 L. T. 447—Ex. Ch. Cp. Lishman v. Northern Maritime Insurance Co., 44 L. J., C. P. 185; L. R. 10 C. P. 179; 32 L. T. 170.

In a proposal for the re-insurance of a ship in a company, it was stated that she was "insured only for 4,000*l.*" This was the amount of the original insurance. The proposal also contained the amounts of insurances effected in other offices, but from this list, an insurance, effected without the assured's knowledge by a mortgagee, was omitted:—Held, that the words "insured only for 4,000*l.*" must be construed as stating the amount of the original insurance, and not as a representation of the sum total insured in all offices whatever; the occasion on which, and the purpose for which, the words were used suggesting some limitation on their generality. Anderson v. Pacific Fire and Marine Insurance Co., 21 L. T. 408—P. C.

Lloyd's Policy — "Same Rate, Terms and Identical Interest" — Condition Precedent.]—The plaintiff effected with the defendant, a Lloyd's underwriter, a policy of fire insurance, containing the following clause:—"Warranted to be on same rate, terms and identical interest as the U. Assurance Co. 800*l.*, and the G. Assurance Co. 700*l.*, and to follow their settlements." The rate at which the plaintiff had insured with the U. Co. was not, in fact, the same as the rate specified in the Lloyd's policy:—Held, that the clause was one going to the root of the transaction, and therefore a condition precedent to any liability; and that as the condition had not been fulfilled the defendant was not liable. Barnard v. Faber, 62 L. J., Q. B. 159; [1893] 1 Q. B. 340; 4 R. 201; 68 L. T. 179; 41 W. R. 193—C. A.

Average Condition — Sub-tenant Insuring — Covenant to Repair — Laches.]—A. being owner of a house granted a lease to G., containing a covenant by the tenant to repair, but not a covenant to insure. A. insured the premises with the defendant company in the sum of 1,000*l.*, and G. also insured them with another company in the sum of 1,100*l.* A.'s policy was subject to the condition that if at the time of any loss or damage by fire happening, there should be any other subsisting insurance, whether effected by the insured or any other person "covering the same property," the defendants should not be liable to pay or contribute more than their ratable proportion of such loss or damage. The premises being destroyed by fire, G. was paid upon his policy 625*l.*, but did not apply the same in reinstating the premises, and subsequently became bankrupt. In an action by A. on the policy effected with the defendants, they relied in their defence (1) upon the condition as exempting them from liability save as to 62*l.*, which they admitted to be due as their apportionment of the loss; (2) on A.'s neglect and laches in not compelling G. to repair the premises, as disentitling A. to recover from the defendants more than the said sum of 62*l.*:—Held, that neither defence could be sustained; "property" in such a condition means the estate of the insurer in the premises, not the actual building. Andrews v. Patriotic Assurance Co., 18 L. R. Ir. 355.

b. DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.

Goods.]—If a person, who is not a linen-draper, insures his "stock-in-trade, household furniture, linen, wearing apparel and plate," against fire, this will not protect linendrapery goods subsequently purchased on speculation; and the word "linen" in the policy must be confined to household linen by way of apparel. Watchorn v. Langford, 3 Camp. 422.

Profits.]—The profits of a business are insurable, but they must be insured quâ profits. Sun Fire Office, In re, 3 N. & M. 819. S. C., nom. Wright and Pole, In re, 1 A. & E. 621.

Nature of Building.]—Goods insured, described in a policy to be in the dwelling-house of the insured, the insured having only one room, as a lodger, in which the goods were, are correctly described within the condition, that "the houses, buildings or other places, where goods are deposited and kept, shall be truly and accurately described"; such condition relating to the construction of the house, and not to the interest of the parties in it. Friedlander v. London Assurance Co., 1 M. & Rob. 171.

An agricultural building, described in a policy as a barn, though not strictly so, is not such a misdescription as would vacate the policy, as the building, had it been more correctly described, would have paid the same rate of insurance. Dobson v. Sotterby, M. & M. 90; 31 R. R. 718.

It is a first principle of the law of insurance that, when a thing is warranted to be of a particular nature or description, it must be exactly such as it is represented to be, otherwise the policy is void; therefore, where a mill was insured as being of one class, and turned out to have been of another at the time it was insured:—Held, that an action on a policy against a loss by fire could not be sustained, as, whether the misrepresentation was in a material point or not, or whether the risk was equally great in the one class as in the other, was wholly immaterial, the only question being, whether the building was de facto that which was insured. Newcastle Fire Insurance Co. v. Macmorran, 3 Dow, 255. See Hore v. Barstow, ante, col. 90.

Condition of Premises.]—A., abroad, having two warehouses, wrote to this country to effect an insurance upon one of them only, without stating, as was the fact, that a house nearly adjoining it had been on fire on that evening, and that there was danger of the fire again breaking out; and sent his letter after the regular post time. The fire having broken out again on the next day but one following, and consumed A.'s warehouse:—Held, that this was a material concealment, although his letter was written without any fraudulent intention. Bufe v. Turner, 2 Marsh. 47; 6 Taunt. 338; 16 R. R. 626.

Alteration.]—A policy for one year upon a "brick building used as a dwelling-house and store (described in a paper attached to this policy)." The description annexed was that the house was composed of two storeys, of given height and materials, with a given roof, and means of obtaining water. During the year the house was altered by adding to it a storey, but so that the alteration did not increase the hazard or probability of fire, except so far, if at all, as the increase of the area of the building by a third storey may be considered to have necessarily increased such hazard or probability; and afterwards during the year the house was totally burnt:—Held, that the underwriter was not liable; for the description was by reference incorporated into the policy, and the description amounted to a warranty, and not only to a warranty that the building was as described at the time the description was given and at the date of the policy, but that it would not be altered by the assured so as to increase the risk during the year, and that it had been so altered. Sillem v. Thornton, 3 El. & Bl. 868; 2 C. L. R. 1710; 23 L. J., Q. B. 362; 18 Jur. 748; 2 W. R. 524.

Value.]—A contract of fire insurance being a contract of indemnity, on which the assured is only entitled to recover the value of the property destroyed, wilful misrepresentations of the value of the property destroyed will, under the usual conditions against fraudulent claims, defeat and vitiate the whole claim. Britton v. Royal Insurance Co., 4 F. & F. 905; 15 L. T. 872.

Immaterial Omission.]—In a policy against fire, one of the conditions was that "the nature and material structure of the building should be truly described," and another that it should be stated whether any hazardous business was carried on:—Held, that an omission to mention a steam-engine bonâ fide used in the building, but only to grind corn for the horses used on the premises, was not a want of proper description avoiding the policy. Baxendale v. Harding, 4 H. & N. 445; 28 L. J., Ex. 236; 7 W. R. 494.

A fire insurance was effected in respect of property through an agent named Donald, who inspected the premises. One condition of the policy was that any material misdescription of the property would render the policy void. The buildings were described as built of brick and slated, but it turned out that one of the buildings was not roofed with slate, but with tarred felt. The company alleged that Donald was not their agent; but the agent of the insured; and that the misdescription rendered the policy void:—Held, that the misdescription was immaterial, and not sufficient to vitiate the policy; but that, if material, it was made by Donald as the agent of the insurance company, and the insured were not responsible for it. Universal Non-Tariff Fire Insurance Co., In re, Forbes' claim, 44 L. J., Ch. 761; L. R. 19 Eq. 485; 23 W. R. 464.

Construction—Hay in Yard.]—A fire policy, according to its true construction, insured specifically the ricks of hay actually in the assured's hay-yard at the time of effecting the policy:—Held, in an action for loss of hay by fire, that he was not entitled to recover for the loss of any hay that did not answer the above description, i.e. which was not actually in the hay-yard at the time of effecting the policy. Gorman v. Hand-in-Hand Insurance Co., Ir. R. 11 C. L. 224.

Agricultural Machines in certain Place.]—The policy, according to its true construction, insured certain "agricultural machines" then being in a specified place, and provided that, in case of their removal from that place without assent, the risk should cease. In an action on the policy for the loss by fire of the identical machines, it appeared that they were not, at the time of the fire, in the place specified:—Held, that the contract rendered the place material, and that the insurers were not liable for the loss. Ib.

In such cases, however, the policy must receive a reasonable construction; and the risk upon horses or agricultural implements—the contemplated use of which would necessarily render frequent removal from the specified place essential—does not absolutely cease upon such removal; but ceases pro tempore when they leave it, and re-attaches upon their return. Ib.

Steam-Engine.]—A policy on a mill, millwrights' work, standing and going gear, engine-house and steam-engine, recited "that the buildings were brick-built, warmed by steam, lighted by gas, and worked by the steam-engine above mentioned, in tenure of one firm,"—"standing apart from all other mills, and worked by day only":—Held, that the recital did not mean that the steam-engine was not worked by night. Whitehead v. Price, 2 C. M. & R. 447; 1 Gale, 151; 5 Tyr. 825.

In a fire policy upon cotton-mills it was warranted that the mills were brick-built, and stated that they were warmed and worked by steam, lighted by gas, worked by day only:—Held, that the stipulation that the mill should be worked by day only, meant that the usual cotton manufacture carried on by mills in the daytime should not be carried on at night, and that it was consequently no breach of this warranty, that on one occasion, in order to turn machinery in an adjacent building, the steam-engine (which was not in the mill, but in an adjoining building) and certain perpendicular and horizontal shafts in the mill, were at work. Mayall v. Mitford, 1 N. & P. 732; 6 A. & E. 670; W. W. & D. 310.

An insurance against fire was effected on certain premises, the policy containing the following conditions: 1. The persons making insurances to give an accurate description of the buildings, and if there should be used therein any steam-engine, stove, &c., or any description of fire-heat other than common fireplaces, or any process of fire-heat be carried on therein, the same to be noticed and allowed in the policy, otherwise the policy to be void. In case of any circumstance happening after an insurance, whereby the risk should be increased, the assured to give notice in writing to the insurers, and the same, previous to a loss, to be allowed by indorsement on the policy, otherwise the policy to be void. 2. In case of any alteration being made in a building insured, or of any steam-engine, stove, &c., or any other description of fire-heat being introduced, or of any trade, business, process or operation being carried on or goods deposited therein, not comprised in the original insurance, or allowed by indorsement thereon, notice thereof must be given; and every such alteration must be allowed by indorsement on the policy, and any further premium which the alteration may occasion must be paid; and unless such notice be duly given, such premium paid, and such indorsement made, no benefit will arise to the assured in case of loss. The assured, who was a cabinet maker, placed a small steam-engine on the premises, with a boiler attached, and used it in a heated state for the purpose of turning a lathe, not in the course of his business, but by way of experiment. After this engine had been on the premises for several days a fire happened:—Held, that the assured could not recover on the policy, since the terms of the conditions applied to the introduction of a steam-engine in a heated state at any time, without notice to the company. Glen v. Lewis, 8 Ex. 607; 22 L. J., Ex. 228; 17 Jur. 842.

Deposit of Dangerous Goods.]—A policy was on premises "where no fire is kept, and where no hazardous goods are deposited." These words mean the habitual use of fire and deposit of hazardous goods; and, therefore, where a fire happened in consequence of making a fire, and bringing a tar-barrel on the premises to repair them:—Held, that the insured was entitled to recover. Dobson v. Sotheby, M. & M. 90; 31 R. R. 718.

A policy contained the usual conditions of avoidance in case of misrepresentation, or of any alteration in the buildings insured, or in the mode of using them, without notice to the office. A kiln used for drying corn, being part of the premises insured, was used upon one occasion for drying some bark, a more dangerous process, and the premises then took fire and were burned down:—Held, that the conditions had reference to some permanent alteration of the buildings, or of the mode of carrying on business, and not to a single instance. Shaw v. Roberts, 1 N. & P. 279; 6 A. & E. 75; W. W. & D. 94; 6 L. J., K. B. 106; 1 Jur. 6.

A policy against fire was subject to this condition: "In the insurance of goods, the building or place in which the same are deposited is to be described, the quantity and description of such goods, also whether any hazardous trade is carried on, or any hazardous articles deposited therein; and if any person shall insure his goods or buildings, and shall cause the same to be described otherwise than they really are, to the prejudice of the company, or shall misrepresent or omit to communicate any circumstance which is material to be made known to the company, in order to enable them to judge of the risk they have undertaken, or are required to undertake, such insurance shall be of no force":—Held, that this condition was to be referred to the time when the policy was effected, and that, in the absence of fraud, neither by the general law of insurance, nor by such condition, was the policy avoided by the circumstance, that subsequently to the effecting of the policy, a more hazardous trade had, without notice to the company, been carried on upon the premises. Pim v. Reid, 6 Man. & G. 1; 6 Scott (N.R.) 982; 12 L. J., C. P. 299.

—— Reasonableness of Limitation.]—Among the conditions contained in a fire policy, it was provided the policy was to be void if at any time there were more than 56 lbs. weight of gunpowder on the premises, unless specially provided for in the policy. The premises were used for general trade, and the assured sold gunpowder, but no special insurance was made for the assured having more than 56 lbs. weight of gunpowder on the premises:—Held, that the condition limiting the amount of gunpowder was not unreasonable, and was not discharged by the specification of stock-in-trade (including hazardous) in the policy. M'Ewan v. Guthridge, 13 Moore, P. C. 304; 8 W. R. 265.

A policy against fire was effected on a ship. The policy contained a proviso to the effect that the insurance thereby made should be subject to the several conditions thereon expressed, so far as the same were or should be applicable. One of these conditions (all of which were primarily intended to apply to the insurance of houses and buildings, and were in the form used for that purpose) provided, that if more than 20 lbs. weight of gunpowder should be "on the premises" at the time when any loss happened, such loss would not be made good:—Held, that the proviso was applicable to the ship insured. Beacon Life and Fire Assurance Co. v. Gibb, 1 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 73; 1 N. R. 110; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 185; 7 L. T. 574; 11 W. R. 194.

Alteration—Question for Jury.]—Action on a policy effected by varnish makers with a fire insurance society. The declaration stated the insurance to be 100*l.* on the stock-in-trade in the oil store-room marked No. 7 (and which room was warranted as having no manufacturing process carried on therein), and 50*l.* on the stock-in-trade in the open part of the yard, subject to a condition, that if any alteration was made to any building insured, by which the risk of fire to the building, or any insured property, was increased, such alteration must be immediately notified to the society, in order to its being allowed by indorsement on the policy, otherwise the policy would be void. The declaration averred that certain stock-in-trade, in the open yard, was destroyed by fire, and that the society waived the warranty of the oil store-room, No. 7, having no manufacturing process carried on therein, and permitted the assured to carry on the manufacturing process of boiling varnish, and that after the waiver certain stock in the oil store-room was destroyed by fire. Pleas, that an alteration was made in the oil store-room, by which alteration the risk of fire to the room and stock-in-trade therein was increased, and that the alteration was not notified to the society. And that the assured carried on in the oil store-room, No. 7, the hazardous trade of a varnish maker, whereby the risk of fire to the room and stock-in-trade was increased, and that the increase of risk was not notified to the society. With respect to the first issue, the judge directed the jury to consider whether the alteration increased the risk of fire in the room No. 7:—Held, a misdirection, the question being, whether the use of the boilers, in the ordinary way as boilers, and not for boiling varnish, would have increased the risk. Barrett v. Jermy, 3 Ex. 535; 18 L. J., Ex. 215.

Increase of Risk.]—A party effected a policy in which the subject-matter was thus described: "on a range of buildings of three storey," curriers' shop, &c., "part of lower storey of the building being used as a stable, coach-house, and boiler-house; no steam-engine employed on the premises, the steam from the boiler being used for heating water and warming the shops. N.B., the process of melting tallow by steam in the boiler-house, and also the use of two pipe-stoves in the building are allowed; but it is warranted that no oil be boiled, nor any process of japanning leather, be carried on therein, nor in any building adjoining thereto." The description of insurance was four-fold—common, hazardous, doubly hazardous, and special risks; and the policy stated that, when special risks are proposed, the most particular specification of the property, and all circumstances attending the same, will be required, but all which special risks must be particularised in the policy, to render the same valid or in force. One of the conditions indorsed on the policy was, that "if after the assurance shall have been effected, the risk shall be increased by any alteration of circumstances, and the particulars of the same shall not be indorsed on the policy, by the secretary or some other agent of the company, and a proportionate higher premium paid, if required, such insurance shall be of no force." The insurance in question was a special risk. After the policy was effected, the insured, without notice, erected in the stable the machinery of a steam-engine, which was supplied with steam by the boiler mentioned in the policy. By the terms of the policy, mills, and manufactories having mill, steam or engine work, were special risks. No notice of the erection or use of the steam-engine was given to the company. The premises were afterwards destroyed by accidental fire, not attributable to the erection or use of the steam-engine. At the trial, it was agreed that the jury should find, and the jury did find, that the risk of fire or damage thereby, was not increased by the erection or use of the steam-engine, nor by the alterations in the insured premises :—Held, that the policy was not avoided by the introduction of the steam-engine, and the use of the steam generated in the boiler to work it. Stokes v. Cox, 1 H. & N. 533 ; 26 L. J., Ex. 113 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 45 ; 5 W. R. 89—Ex. Ch.

Construction of Policy—"Stock-in-Trade."]—Under a policy on a corn-dealer and seedsman's "stock-in-trade, consisting of corn, seed, hay, straw, fixtures and utensils in business," the value of hops and malting cannot be recovered, although these articles form an ordinary part of the stock-in-trade of such a business. Joel v. Harvey, 5 W. R. 488.

V. EXTENT OF PROTECTION.

Burning by Mob.]—The burning of a house by a mob is not within a proviso of a policy which provides that the insurers shall not be liable in case the same be burnt by reason of any invasion, foreign enemies or any military or usurped power. Drinkwater v. London Assurance Co., 2 Wils. 363.

What is Resulting Damage.]—A policy contained a recital, that it was agreed that plate-glass in which the insurer was interested should be insured "from loss or damage originating from any cause whatsoever, except fire, breakage during removal, alteration or repair of premises, . . . none of the glass being horizontally placed or movable," and then insured the owner from all damage or loss "from any cause whatever, except only as above specified, according to the exact tenor" of the printed conditions indorsed on the policy. A fire broke out on premises adjoining the shop of the insured, who thereupon opened the shop door, and admitted neighbours to save his property ; during the removal the mob, which had been attracted by the fire, broke down the shutters and destroyed the glass, for the purpose of plunder :—Held, that the damage to the glass did not originate from fire, or from breakage during removal, within the meaning of the exception in the policy. Marsden v. City and County Insurance Co., 1 H. & R. 53 ; 35 L. J., C. P. 60 ; L. R. 1 C. P. 232 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 76 ; 13 L. T. 465 ; 14 W. R. 106.

Distant Explosion.]—By a policy premises were insured against loss or damage by fire. An explosion of gunpowder, at the distance of half a mile from the premises, caused them to be so shaken that the windows were broken and other damage was sustained :—Held, that the loss was not a damage by fire within the policy. Everett v. London Assurance Co., 19 C. B. (N.S.) 126 ; 34 L. J., C. P. 299 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 546 ; 13 W. R. 862.

Explosion by Gas.]—A policy contained the following exception :—"Neither will the company be responsible for loss or damage by explosion, except for such loss or damage as shall arise from explosion by gas." In the premises of the assured, who carried on the business of extracting oil from shoddy, an inflammable and explosive vapour evolved in course of the process escaped and caught fire, setting fire to other things ; it afterwards exploded and caused a further fire, besides doing damage by the explosion :—Held, first, that the word "gas" in the policy meant ordinary illuminating coal. Stanley v. Western Insurance Co., 37 L. J., Ex. 73 ; L. R. 3 Ex. 71 ; 17 L. T. 513 ; 16 W. R. 369.

Held, secondly, that the exemption of liability for loss by explosion was not limited to cases where the fire was originated by the explosion, but included cases where the explosion occurred in the course of a fire ; and that it exempted the company in respect both of the damage from the explosion itself and of the damage done by the further fire caused by the explosion. Ib.

Damage by Heat.]—A policy was effected against loss or damage by fire, on the stock of a sugar-house, the different storeys of which were heated by a chimney running up to the top. The insured negligently lighted the fire without opening the register at the top, by which means the heat was increased to such a degree as to spoil the sugar, but no ignition was produced :—Held, that this was not a loss within the policy. Austin v. Drewe, 2 Marsh. 130 ; 6 Taunt. 436 ; 4 Camp. 360 ; Holt, 126 ; 16 R. R. 647.

Steamer "Lying in Dock."]—See Pearson v. Commercial Union Assurance Co., 45 L. J., P. C. 761 ; 1 App. Cas. 498 ; 35 L. T. 445 ; 24 W. R. 951 ; 3 Asp. M. C. 275. Grant v. Ætna Insurance Co., 15 Moo. P. C. 516 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 705 ; 6 L. T. 735 ; 10 W. R. 772.

Payment of Premium—Risk when Commencing.]—In a policy of fire insurance, in the absence of a provision that the policy is not to attach until payment of the premium, such a provision will not be implied. Kelly v. London and Staffordshire Fire Insurance Co., 1 Cab. & E. 47.

Duration.]—A policy, dated the 14th of February, 1868, and headed "six months ; premium to August 14th, 1868, 225 dollars," and reciting that the assured had paid 225 dollars and had agreed to pay the sum of 225 dollars during the continuance of the policy, was expressed to be in force "from the 14th of February till the 14th of August, and for so long after as the assured should pay the above premium at the time above mentioned" :—Held, that whether the 14th of February was covered or not, the whole of the 14th of August was covered by the policy ; and that the assured was entitled to recover in respect of damage done to the property insured by a fire which occurred at 11.30 p.m. on the 14th of August, although he had not paid premium on that day. Isaacs v. Royal Insur-

VI. ASSIGNMENT OF PROPERTY INSURED.

Right to Insurance Moneys.]—A purchaser of property insured against fire does not, by the mere fact of purchase, acquire a right to the insurance moneys. Poole v. Adams, 33 L. J., Ch. 639 ; 10 L. T. 287 ; 12 W. R. 683.

—— Compulsory Purchase of Premises before Conveyance.]—A party insured his premises in an office by a policy which provided that the capital should be liable to pay to the assured any loss or damage by fire to the buildings not exceeding 1,600*l*. The premises were afterwards required by the Metropolitan Board of Works under their compulsory powers, in order that they might be pulled down for the improvement of a street, and the amount of purchase-money payable to the assured was assessed by arbitration, according to the Lands Clauses Act. After the board had accepted the title of the assured, but before he had executed a conveyance, the premises were destroyed by fire :—Held, that the insurance office was liable to pay the assured 1,500*l*., the full value of the buildings at the time of the fire, and not merely the damage done to the buildings considered as old materials, for the dealings between the board and the assured did not affect the contract. Collingridge v. Royal Exchange Assurance Corporation, 47 L. J., Q. B. 32 ; 3 Q. B. D. 173 ; 37 L. T. 525 ; 26 W. R. 112.

—— Insurance by Vendor—Fire after Contract but before Completion.]—A house insured by the vendor was after the date of the contract for sale, but before completion, partly burnt down, and the vendor received the insurance moneys. There was no provision in the contract as to insurance : —Held, that the purchaser as against the vendor could not recover the insurance moneys either as an abatement of his purchase-money or for the reinstatement of the premises. Rayner v. Preston, 50 L. J., Ch. 472 ; 18 Ch. D. 1 ; 44 L. T. 787 ; 29 W. R. 546 ; 45 J. P. 829—C. A.

Semble, in such a case the insurance company can compel the vendor to refund the money they have paid if he receives the whole of his purchase-money on the ground that the contract of fire insurance is merely a contract of indemnity. Ib.

A vendor contracted with a purchaser for the sale of a house which had been insured by the vendor with the plaintiffs, an insurance company, against fire. The contract contained no reference to the insurance. After the date of the contract, but before the date fixed for completion, the house was damaged by fire, and the vendor received the insurance money from the plaintiffs :—Held, in an action by the plaintiffs against the vendor, that they were entitled to recover back the insurance money from the vendor, either for their own benefit or as trustees for the purchaser. Castellain v. Preston, 52 L. J., Q. B. 366 ; 11 Q. B. D. 380 ; 49 L. T. 29 ; 31 W. R. 559—C. A.

On payment of the moneys secured by a policy of fire insurance, the insurers are entitled to enforce all the remedies, whether in contract or in tort, which the insured has against third parties, whereby the insured can compel such third parties to make good the loss insured against. Ib.

Passing of Property.]—A policy expressed the insurance to be on "merchandise the assured's own, in trust, or on commission for which they are responsible" in or on certain specified warehouses, vaults, cellars, wharves, yards or quays. Whilst the policy was in force certain chests of tea, on a wharf included in the policy, were destroyed by fire. These teas had been deposited in bond by the importer with the wharfinger ; the assured had purchased them from the importer, and the warrants had been indorsed in blank by him to the assured. Before the fire occurred the assured had resold the teas in specified chests to customers, and had been paid for them ; they held, however, the warrants on behalf of the customers, but merely for the convenience of paying, if required, the charges necessary for clearing the teas payable by such customers :—Held, that the policy applied only to goods belonging to the assured, or for which they were responsible, and the property in the teas having, at the time of the fire, passed to the purchasers, they were then at the purchasers' risk, and were consequently not covered by the policy. North British and Mercantile Insurance Co. v. Moffatt, 41 L. J., C. P. 1 ; L. R. 7 C. P. 25 ; 25 L. T. 662 ; 20 W. R. 114.

—— Risk of Purchaser.]—Sugar refiners in the city of London were in the habit of making sales by sample, each sale consisting of one or more fillings or batches of boiled sugar. Upon a sale being effected, a sale-note was delivered to the purchaser which contained the price of the fillings per cwt., and the following words : "Prompt one month. Stored goods at sellers' risk for two months." Each filling comprised a number of specified titlers, or loaves of sugar of a varying weight, and it was the custom to pay for the sugar on the Saturday (called "the prompt") after the expiration of one calendar month from the day of sale, but the whole or portion of the sugar often remained in the warehouse of the refiners after the time for payment when it suited the convenience of the customer to delay the delivery, the customer paying on the prompt an approximate sum to the price, which was only finally ascertained and settled when the sugar was weighed on delivery. A sugar broker purchased four fillings or batches of sugar from the sugar refiners in the manner above stated, and paid an approximate sum to the value. Part of the sugar was removed by the broker ; but after the expiration of two months from the sale a fire occurred on the premises of the sellers, destroying the remainder which had never been weighed. They, without any agreement with the buyers, had effected floating policies upon all stock in their warehouse, making no distinction between goods sold and goods unsold ; but the amount which they received from the insurance office was not sufficient to cover the loss which they actually sustained, exclusive of the purchaser's goods :—Held, first, that the loss by the destruction of the undelivered sugar must fall on the purchaser—by Cockburn, C.J., on the ground that the property had passed to him ; by Blackburn, J., Lush, J., and Quain, J., on the ground that whether this was the case or not, the sugar, after the lapse of two months, was, by the terms of the contract of sale, at the risk of the purchaser. Martineau v. Kitching, 41 L. J., Q. B. 227 ; L. R. 7 Q. B. 436 ; 26 L. T. 836 ; 20 W. R. 769.

Held, secondly, that the purchaser was not entitled to the benefit (by way of set-off or otherwise) of any part of the insurance money received by the sellers. Ib.

Settled Estate—Payment of Premiums out of Rents.]—During the infancy of a tenant in tail of freehold estates devised in strict settlement, part of which consisted of a corn-mill let on lease, the rents were received by his mother on his behalf, and she thereout paid the premiums necessary for keeping up a policy which had been effected in her name for insuring the mill against fire. The will contained no provision for fire insurance. The mill having been burnt down, and it not being considered for the benefit of any person interested in the settled estates that it should be rebuilt :—Held, that the insurance moneys belonged to the infant tenant in tail as his personal estate, and were not to be treated as real estate for the benefit of all persons interested in the settled estates. Warwicker v. Bretnall, 23 Ch. D. 188 ; 31 W. R. 520.

By an order of the Court of Chancery the receiver of real estates was directed to pay fire insurances on them. By a subsequent decree it was declared that H. was tenant in tail in possession of the real estates, and the receiver was directed to pay the balance to the account of H. A fire having taken place :—Held, that H. was entitled to the insurance money. Seymour v. Vernon, 21 L. J., Ch. 433 ; 16 Jur. 189.

On Bankruptcy.]—Covenant in a lease to insure in the name of the lessor, all the premises and all buildings which, during the term, might be erected thereon. The lessee mortgaged the premises for 500*l.*, and in the deed was contained a power for the mortgagees to insure in a sum not exceeding 500*l.*, and out of any moneys to be received by virtue of such insurance, or from the sale of the premises under their power of sale, to recoup themselves principal, interest and costs, and pay the surplus over to the lessee. The lessee insured the premises under the covenant in the lease for 1,000*l.*, and the mortgagees insured for 500*l.* in different offices. The lessee further insured in his own name in the Phœnix for 950*l.*, apportioning the amount in different sums amongst the stock, utensils, trade fixtures, fittings, household goods, furniture, musical instruments, &c., upon the premises, and a club or concert room erected thereon by the lessee. A fire occurred, whereby the whole of the premises was burned down, and all the property therein lost. The company having paid 350*l.* in respect of the insurances upon the stock, furniture, effects, &c., upon the premises at the time of the fire :—Held, that upon the subsequent bankruptcy of the lessee, the remainder of the moneys payable by the Phœnix passed to the assignees. Leney, Ex parte, Barker, In re, 10 L. T. 697.

Insurance by both Landlord and Tenant—Option of Purchase.]—Under the terms of a lease the tenant was bound to insure against fire, and had an option of purchasing the property. He insured in a sufficient sum. The premises were damaged by fire, and it then appeared that the landlord had a policy on the premises in another office, of which the tenant had no notice. The two offices apportioned the amount of loss between the two policies, and the landlord received what was thus payable under the policy effected by him. The tenant shortly after the fire gave notice to exercise his option of purchase, and proposed that the insurance moneys under both policies should go in part payment of the purchase-money. The landlord claimed to retain for his own benefit the money received under the policy effected by him, and insisted on the money under the other policy being applied in reinstating the premises, and on the tenant declining to do this brought ejectment against him :—Held, that the landlord was not entitled to retain for his own benefit the moneys received under the policy effected by him, nor to insist on the moneys being applied in reinstating the property after the tenant had exercised his option of purchase. Reynard v. Arnold, L. R. 10 Ch. 386 ; 23 W. R. 804.

Under the terms of a lease the landlord covenanted to insure, and the tenant had the option to purchase for a fixed sum. Before the time for exercising the option, the buildings demised were burnt, and the landlord received the insurance money. The tenant then exercised his option to purchase, and claimed the insurance money as part of his purchase :—Held, that, under the circumstances, the tenant had no claim to the insurance money. Edwards v. West, 47 L. J., Ch. 463 ; 7 Ch. D. 858 ; 38 L. T. 481 ; 26 W. R. 507.

Annuitant—Devisee subject to Annuity—Insurance by Devisee.]—A testator charged his real estate with an annuity to his widow, and, subject thereto, devised it to S. A., in fee, and appointed her his executrix. The testator had insured a house. Policy had expired a few months after his death, and was then renewed by S. A. Soon afterwards the house, which was the whole of his real estate, was burnt down. The insurance money was ordered to be paid into court, on a motion by the widow, in a suit instituted by her against S. A. for the administration of the testator's estate. Parry v. Ashley, 3 Sim. 97.

Devisee—Right to Policy-moneys.]—J., tenant for life, remainder to W. for life, remainder to J. in fee. During life of J., houses on estate were burnt down, and insurance money paid to J., the insurer, and placed in the Funds in his name. J., by will, devised estate to R. in fee, and his personal estate to W. W. applied part of insurance money in repairing house on estate. Insurance money unapplied remained in J.'s name. W., by will, stated the circumstances as to fund so standing in his brother's name, and bequeathed residue of his personal property :—Held, insurance money passed to R., as devisee of J. Norris v. Harrison, 2 Madd. 268.

Trade Utensils—Bankruptcy—Partnership—Order and Disposition.]—Where trade utensils, the property of one partner, and insured in his name, were left in the order and disposition of the partnership, and a fire happened which consumed them, and afterwards a joint commission issued against the partnership, the insurance money was held not to pass by assignment under joint commission. Smith, Ex parte, 3 Madd. 63 ; Buck. 149.

VII. ASSIGNMENT OF POLICY.

Right of Assignees.]—Where a fire policy has been assigned, the insurers, in the absence of an express contract to do so, are not bound, upon the application of the assignee, to pay him upon the policy. London Investment Co. v. Montefiore, 9 L. T. 688.

In Case of Bankruptcy.]—The defendants assigned machinery by a bill of sale to secure a sum of money advanced by the plaintiff. The deed contained a covenant to insure, but no provision for the application of the policy-moneys in case of fire, in liquidation of the mortgage debt. The machinery was burnt, and the defendants became bankrupts:—Held, that the plaintiff had no claim to the benefit of the policy as against them. Lees v. Whiteley, 35 L. J., Ch. 412; L. R. 2 Eq. 143; 14 L. T. 472; 14 W. R. 534.

After the fire the defendants executed an assignment of their property to their creditors, but the deed was destroyed before any of the creditors signed it. The plaintiff, with the knowledge of the deed, gave the insurance office notice of his claim to the policy:—Held, that the deed of assignment was an act of bankruptcy, and that the policy being in the order and disposition of the bankrupts at the time of the notice to the insurance office, the plaintiff, on this ground also, had no claim to the proceeds of the policy as against the assignees. Ib.

A letter was written by a trader, before his bankruptcy, to the agent of an insurance company, authorising him to retain out of the proceeds of a fire policy the amount of the account due by the trader to a particular creditor; the letter was not acted upon, and the policy remained in possession of the trader up to the time of his bankruptcy, when the policy came to the hands of the assignees, to whom the company paid the full amount:—Held, that the letter did not operate as an assignment pro tanto of the policy, nor create, in favour of the particular creditor, any charge or lien upon the proceeds; although the company had notice of the letter before they paid the money to the assignees. Foster's Policy, In re, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 294.

Hand-in-Hand Office—Heir—Assignment Necessary.]—Under the constitution of the Hand-in-Hand fire office, the heir, to whom upon the death of the insured the property being freehold descended, cannot have the benefit of the policy without assignment. Mildmay v. Folgham, 3 Ves. 471.

Not Assignable without Notice to Office.]—Policies of insurance against loss or damage by fire are not in their nature assignable; nor can the interest in them be transferred from one person to another without the express consent of the office. Lynch v. Dalzell, 4 Bro. P. C. 431.

Policies of assurance not assignable in their nature, nor intended to be assigned from one to another person without the consent of the office. Sadlers' Co. v. Badcock, 2 Atk. 557.

It is necessary the party injured should have an interest or property in the house insured at the time the policy is made out, and at the time the fire happens, and therefore, after the lease of a house expired, the insured's assigning the policy does not oblige the insurers to make good the loss to the assignee. Ib.

Assignment of Policy—Validity.]—A trader insured his stock in trade and other effects. These were destroyed by fire. He assigned the policies to trustees on trust to pay and divide the moneys received thereunder among all his creditors ratably, and to pay the balance, if any, to himself:—Held, that the assignment was not void under 13 Eliz. c. 5, at the suit of a creditor whose debt was under 50*l.* Green v. Brand, 1 Cab. & E. 410.

VIII. REBUILDING PREMISES.

Effect of Statute.]—The 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 83, is of universal and not of locally-circumscribed application, but only applies to insurance moneys upon houses and buildings. Gorley, Ex parte, Barker, In re, 4 De G. J. & S. 477; 34 L. J., Bk. 1; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1085; 11 L. T. 319; 13 W. R. 60.

Moneys paid in respect of insurance of trade fixtures are not within its application. Ib.

Option to Reinstate.]—An insurance company, by the terms of its policies, had the option, in case of fire, of reinstating or paying the money to the assured. A fire having occurred and a claim having been made, the company exercised its option and paid the money. Although there would be no implied promise on the part of the assured to lay out the money in reinstating, as being without consideration, and, therefore, a mere nudum pactum; secus, where he has made an express promise, although only by parol. Queen Insurance Co. v. Vey, 16 L. T. 239.

Application for.]—In order to entitle an owner to the benefit of 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 83, he must make a distinct request to the insurance office to apply the policy-money in rebuilding before they have settled with the tenant insuring; and in no case is the owner entitled to rebuild himself and claim the policy-money. Simpson v. Scottish Union Insurance Co., 1 H. & M. 618; 32 L. J., Ch. 329; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 711; 8 L. T. 112; 11 W. R. 459; 1 N. R. 537.

Where a policy makes the assets of a company liable, excluding personal liability. Semble, that this does not give jurisdiction to a court of equity to interfere in the first instance to enforce the above provision, and that the proper course is first to apply for a mandamus. Ib.

Payment of Rent pending.]—A tenant has no equity to compel his landlord to expend money received from an insurance office, on the demised premises being burnt down, in rebuilding the premises or to restrain the landlord from suing for the rent until the premises are rebuilt. Leeds v. Cheetham, 1 Sim. 146; 5 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 105; 27 R. R. 181.

Use and Occupation—Tenancy—Failure of Plaintiff to Reinstate.]—It is no defence to an action for use and occupation that the defendant was tenant of the premises, and that the premises were not reinstated after destruction by fire, although insured by the plaintiffs by a policy providing for payment or reinstatement in the usual way, and that relying upon such insurance the defendants had been induced not to insure themselves. Lofft v. Dennis, 1 El. & El. 474; 28 L. J., Q. B. 168; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 727; 7 W. R. 199.

Sufficiency of Rebuilding.]—A company, who insured a house from fire with an option to reinstate it in the event of a fire, having elected to reinstate it, employed a builder to reinstate it, who used the old walls so far as they remained; and when he had finished all but a little of the painting, gave one of the insured a small sum of money to complete it and got him to sign a certificate that the work was complete, and received payment from the company. The old walls not bearing the weight of the new work, bulged. The assured sued the company for not duly reinstating the house, and the company defended the action without the defendant's authority, and the assured recovered damages. The company then sued the builder on his contract (the breach being an insufficient and imperfect reinstating), and also for fraudulent representation, and for the costs. The judge told the jury that the defendant was only bound to put the building as nearly as possible in the same state as before the fire; and they found that he had done so, and that the building was not less secure than before. At the close of the case the company relied on the omission of the painting, but the jury found that the value was nominal, and that in getting the certificate there was no fraud. The verdict was entered for the defendant, the judge telling the jury that in the absence of any express authority to defend the former action, the company could not recover costs:—Held, that the direction was right, and that the company was not entitled to a verdict, even for nominal damages. Times Fire Assurance Co. v. Hawke, 28 L. J., Ex. 317; at Nisi Prius, 1 F. & F. 406.

Impossibility of.]—A company executed a policy insuring premises against fire, reserving to themselves the right of reinstatement in preference to the payment of claims. The premises were damaged by fire, and the company elected to reinstate them, but did not do so. To an action for not paying, compensating or reinstating, the company pleaded that they elected to reinstate, and were proceeding to do so, when the commissioners of sewers caused the premises to be taken down as being a structure in a dangerous condition, and that such dangerous condition was not caused by the damage from the fire:—Held, that the plea was bad, inasmuch as the contract to reinstate (which became the one contract under the policy, after election made) being lawful at and ever since the time of contracting, the impossibility of its performance was no defence, and the company was bound, if they could not perform it, to pay damages for not doing so. Brown v. Royal Insurance Co., 1 El. & El. 853; 28 L. J., Q. B. 275; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1255; 7 W. R. 479.

Damages for Erecting on different Site—Building Acts.]—A house which had been erected before the Building Act, being consumed by fire, the officers of the company with whom it was insured, instead of paying the sum at which it was insured, elected to rebuild the premises; the Building Act, however, prevented them from re-erecting the house in exactly the same manner in which it was before the fire, and particularly from making the site and the building project into the street beyond the line of the adjacent houses:—Held, that the insured were entitled to maintain a bill in equity against the directors for the time being of the insurance company, for a compensation for the injury which they had sustained by reason of the inferior value of the premises erected by the insurance office, instead of the old premises. The amount of the damage, in respect of which compensation is due, will be ascertained by means of an issue. Alchorne v. Savill, 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 47.

Rebuilding on Larger Site — Mortgage of Original Site—Right of Mortgagee.]—In 1841 A. mortgaged a wharf to B., and covenanted to lay out the insurance money in rebuilding the premises. A fire occurred in 1844, and A. having in 1845 purchased an adjoining slip of land, laid out the money in building, partly on both parcels. In 1846 A. mortgaged the slip to C., who had notice of the first mortgage. The claim of B. to have the benefit of the expenditure of the insurance money on the slip was rejected by the court. Harryman v. Collins, 18 Beav. 11; 18 Jur. 501.

Mortgagee Rebuilding — Right to Policy-moneys.]—A lessee who had covenanted to insure against fire in the joint names of himself and his lessor, with a proviso that the policy-moneys should be expended in reinstating the premises, assigned them by way of mortgage, with a power of sale, under which the mortgagee sold. The mortgage deed did not notice the policy. The premises were subsequently damaged by fire, and were reinstated by the mortgagee. On a claim filed by the mortgagee and his vendee, the mortgagor was decreed to deliver up the policy, and join with the lessor in signing the receipt to the insurance office, to enable the mortgagee to receive the money payable under the policy. A lessee in possession is not entitled as against his mortgagee to a lien on the policy-moneys for repairs done by him after a fire. Garden v. Ingram, 23 L. J., Ch. 478.

Statute as to — General Enactment — Trade Fixtures.]—The 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 83, by which the governors and directors of insurance offices are authorised, upon the request of any persons entitled to any house or other buildings which may be burnt down or damaged by fire, or upon any grounds of suspicion that the owners or occupiers or other parties effecting the insurance have been guilty of fraud or incendiarism to cause the insurance money to be laid out in rebuilding, is a general enactment, and is not limited in its operation to the metropolitan district. Gorely, Ex parte, Barker, In re, 4 De G. J. & S. 477; 34 L. J., Bk. 1; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1085; 11 L. T. 319; 13 W. R. 60.

Trade fixtures put up by a tenant, being removable by him, are not comprised in the expression "house or other buildings" in the statute. Ib.

Therefore, where such fixtures are separately insured and destroyed by fire during the tenancy, the landlord is not entitled to have the insurance money laid out under the act; and a covenant by the tenant to deliver up the fixtures at the determination of the tenancy, as conferring a mere personal right resting in contract, makes no difference in this respect. Ib.

Interpleader—Lessor of Property and Insuring Company.]—Interpleader may be in favour of an insurance company against the landlord of premises which have been burnt down, but insured by him and the tenant of the premises, under an agreement for a lease, and claiming therefore a right to have the money laid out in rebuilding the premises. Paris v. Gilham, G. Coop. 56.

Option to reinstate or replace Property Damaged or Destroyed.]—A condition in a policy of insurance against fire that, "the company may, if it think fit, reinstate or replace property damaged or destroyed instead of paying the amount of the loss or damage," entitles the company to exercise an option, and in the event of the property insured being wholly destroyed, to reinstate it by other property which is equivalent to that which has been destroyed; or in the event of the property insured being damaged but not destroyed, to reinstate it—that is, to repair and put it, not in the exact place, but in the same state in which it was before the fire occurred, instead of paying the amount of the loss or damage. Anderson v. Commercial Union Assurance Co., 55 L. J., Q. B. 146; 34 W. R. 189—C. A.

Mortgagee—Claim by puisne Bondholder—Payment to prior Bondholders by other Insurers of sufficient Sum to reinstate—Rent of Mortgaged Premises.]—The pursuers having a heritable security by bond on certain premises insured them against fire in the defender's office for 900*l*. Prior securities had been given by the owner upon the same premises to other creditors, and those creditors had insured in other offices. The premises having been in part destroyed by fire, the prior incumbrancers recovered from and were paid by the offices in which they were insured an amount sufficient for the reinstatement of the premises, and for the payment of the rent during the period of reinstatement, but the premises were not in fact reinstated. It appeared that immediately before the date of the fire the value of the premises was sufficient to cover the prior bonds and that of the pursuers, but in consequence of the fire the value of the premises was so reduced that they were not sufficient to meet the balance remaining due to the prior creditors, and the pursuers' bond was left entirely uncovered:—Held, that the pursuers were entitled, notwithstanding the amount paid to the other creditors, to recover to the full extent of their loss, but that the pursuers were not entitled to recover anything in respect of the loss of rent of the premises after they had been damaged by fire. Westminster Fire Office v. Glasgow Provident Investment Society, 13 App. Cas. 699; 59 L. T. 641—H. L. (Sc.)

Semble, that 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 83, relating to the application of insurance money on houses destroyed by fire, does not extend to Scotland—Per the Earl of Selborne and Lord Watson. Ib.

Landlord and Tenant—Liability for Rent and for Reinstatement of Premises.]—See Leeds v. Cheetham, Brown v. Quilter, and cases sub tit. LANDLORD AND TENANT (COVENANTS).

Right of Insurers to sue Hundred.]—As to the right of insurers who have paid for a loss caused by rioters to sue the hundred. See Mason v. Sainsbury, 3 Dougl. 61; London Assurance Co. v. Sainsbury, 3 Dougl. 345, ante, tit. HUNDRED.

IX. RIGHTS OF INSURERS.

To Benefit of Contract entered into by Assured—Landlord and Tenant.] — A policy of fire insurance is a contract of indemnity, and upon payment of the amount of loss the insurer is entitled to be put into the place of the assured; and if at a subsequent time the assured receives compensation from other sources for the loss sustained by him, the insurer is entitled to recover from the assured any sum which he may have received in excess of the loss actually sustained by him. North British and Mercantile Insurance Co. v. London, Liverpool and Globe Insurance Co. (5 Ch. D. 569) commented upon and followed. Darrell v. Tibbits, 50 L. J., Q. B. 33; 5 Q. B. D. 560; 42 L. T. 797; 29 W. R. 66; 44 J. P. 695—C. A.

According to the doctrine of subrogation, as between the insurer and the assured, the insurer is entitled to the advantage of every right of the assured, whether such right consists in contract, fulfilled or unfulfilled, or in remedy for tort capable of being insisted on or already insisted on, or in any other right, whether by way of condition or otherwise, legal or equitable, which can be, or has been exercised, or has accrued, and whether such right could or could not be enforced by the insurer in the name of the assured, by the exercise or acquiring of which right or condition the loss against which the assured is insured, can be or has been diminished. A vendor contracted with a purchaser for the sale, at a specified sum, of a house which had been insured by the vendor with an insurance company against fire. The contract contained no reference to the insurance. After the date of the contract, but before the date fixed for completion, the house was damaged by fire, and the vendor received the insurance money from the company. The purchase was afterwards completed, and the purchase-money agreed upon, without any abatement on account of the damage by fire, was paid to the vendor:—Held, in an action by the company against the vendor, that the company were entitled to recover a sum equal to the insurance money from the vendor for their own benefit. Castellain v. Preston, 52 L. J., Q. B. 366; 11 Q. B. D. 380; 49 L. T. 29; 31 W. R. 557—C. A.

Contribution on Loss.]—By floating policies of insurance effected by B. & Co., wharfingers, they insured against loss or damage by fire, in the sums named, grain and seed, the assured's own or on commission, for which they were responsible, subject to conditions of average, and to this condition, that "if at the time of any loss or damage by fire happening to any property hereby insured, there be any other subsisting insurance or insurances, whether effected by the insured or by any other person, covering the same property, the company shall not be liable to pay or contribute more than its ratable proportion of such loss or damage." While these policies were subsisting a fire destroyed a quantity of grain stored with B. & Co., part of which belonged to R. & Co., who had also effected policies, called merchants' policies, on the grain thus destroyed, including also grain stored elsewhere, which policies contained the like conditions as the wharfingers' policies. B. & Co. were paid in full by the several insurance companies. In a suit to determine the liability of the companies inter se:—Held that the grantors of the merchants' policies were not liable to contribute to the loss; that B. & Co. were primarily liable, but being indemnified by the grantors of the wharfingers' policies, the latter were ultimately liable. North British and Mercantile Insurance Co. v. London, Liverpool and Globe

Insurance Co., 46 L. J., Ch. 537 ; 5 Ch. D. 569 ; 36 L. T. 629—C. A.

Held, also, that the condition as to double insurance only applied to cases where the same property was the subject-matter of insurance, and where the interests were the same. Ib.

Action by Owner for Negligence against Third Party.]—The owner of a building insured it against fire, but not to the full value. The building was burnt by what was alleged to be the negligence of the servants of a corporation ; and the owner brought an action for damages against the corporation :—Held, that the owner undertaking to sue for the whole amount of damage, would be allowed to conduct the action without the interference of the insurers, but would be subject to liability for anything done by him in violation of any equitable duty towards the insurers. Commercial Union Assurance Co. v. Lister, 43 L. J., Ch. 601 ; L. R. 9 Ch. 483.

Puisne Mortgagee—Reinstatement of Buildings.]—See Westminster Fire Office v. Glasgow Provident Investment Society, VIII. REBUILDING PREMISES, supra, col. 113.

Payment by Insurer — Right of Insurer to Benefit Assured might have Recovered.]—A policy of fire insurance being a contract of indemnity merely, the insurer on making good the loss insured against is entitled, even though payment be made with knowledge of a then subsisting contract relating to the subject-matter between the assured and third parties, to stand in the place of the assured, and to recover from him the full value of any rights or remedies which he had renounced, and to which, but for renunciation, the insurer would have a right to be subrogated. West of England Fire Insurance Co. v. Isaacs, 66 L. J., Q. B. 36 ; [1897] 1 Q. B. 226 ; 75 L. T. 564—C. A.

X. AMOUNT AND PROOF OF CLAIM.

Excessive Claim.]—An honest claim is not, under the condition against fraud, invalidated on account of error, or even some degree of exaggeration or over estimate ; and in such a case the insured will be entitled to recover according to the real value and the amount of actual loss sustained. But if the claim is wilfully and intentionally excessive, that will amount to such fraud as will, under the ordinary condition against fraudulent claims, invalidate the claim altogether, and disentitle him to recover at all. Chapman v. Pole, 22 L. T. 306.

Hiring other Premises.]—An innkeeper having insured against fire his interest "in the inn and offices" cannot, upon such inn and offices being partly burnt, recover against the insurers the loss sustained by his hiring other premises while his own were being repaired, and by the refusal of persons to go to the inn while under repair, the insurers having reinstated the premises in proper time. Wright and Pole, In re, 1 A. & E. 621 ; 3 N. & M. 819, sub nom. Sun Fire Office, In re.

Insufficient Salvage—Arbitration.]—A person effected three policies on goods ; one for 6,000*l.* with the A. company, another for 2,500*l.* with the B. company, and a third for 2,500*l.* with the C. company. A fire having happened, his claims against the companies were referred to arbitration. The agreement of reference recited that the value of a specified part of the goods was agreed at a sum named. The arbitrators found that the loss or damage sustained on the whole of the goods exceeded the sums insured, and that the whole salvage and proceeds of the salvage of and from the fire belonged absolutely to the assured :—Held, that in awarding that the assured was entitled to the salvage, which it appeared arose solely from the specified goods, the arbitrators had exceeded their jurisdiction. Skipper v. Grant, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 237.

—— New Trial.]—A plaintiff effected a policy against fire, with a condition that he should forfeit all benefit under the policy if there was any fraud or false swearing in the claim he made ; a fire ensued, and the plaintiff made affidavit of the damage to the extent of 1,085*l.* ; having sued for the amount, and a jury having found a verdict for him with only 500*l.* damages, the court granted a new trial. Levy v. Baillie, 7 Bing. 349 ; 5 M. & P. 208 ; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 108.

Proof in Bankruptcy.]—A., an owner of a saw-mill, received from B. timber to be sawn, and entered into a verbal agreement with him as to insuring it, which the court considered to amount to an agreement by A. to pay to B. the value of the timber if destroyed by fire while on A.'s premises. A fire broke out, by which all B.'s timber on the premises was destroyed. An account of the timber burnt was agreed to between B. and A., but no agreement as to the value was come to. B. commenced an action against A., the declaration containing two counts : the first for breach of an agreement to insure the timber ; and the second for negligence in not taking proper care of it. A. then became bankrupt. B. continued the action against the bankrupt, and obtained judgment, but did not sue out execution. He then applied to prove under the bankruptcy :—Held, that as, upon the happening of the fire, A. became answerable to B. for the value of the timber, and as it appeared that timber had a market price, so that its value could be fixed with certainty, B. was entitled to prove against the estate of A. for the value, there being no such uncertainty about the value as to make the case one of a claim for unliquidated damages. Bateman, Ex parte, 8 De G. M. & G. 263 ; 25 L. J., Bk. 19 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 265 ; 4 W. R. 329.

Evidence of Loss.]—To prove the value of furniture in the possession of the insured at the time of the loss, a former insurance of his furniture, renewed and kept up by him, was received. Goulstone v. Royal Insurance Co., 1 F. & F. 276.

Insurers keeping Possession.]—Semble, that an action may be maintained by a person insured against the insurer for taking and keeping possession, for an unreasonable time, of his premises, and the salvage after a fire. Oldfield v. Price, 2 F. & F. 80.

XI. ACTION ON POLICY.

Condition requiring Notice of Loss and Particulars.]—A policy of insurance against fire was made subject to a condition that, on the happening of any loss or damage to the insured property by fire, the insured should forthwith give notice thereof to the company, and, within fifteen days at latest, should deliver to the company as particular an account as might be reasonably practicable of the property so destroyed, with the estimated value of each article or matter, and in support thereof should give all such vouchers, proofs, and explanation as might be reasonably required, and should also, if required, make a statutory declaration of the truth of the account; and that, in default thereof, no claim in respect of such loss or damage should be payable until such account, &c., should be given and produced. Part of the insured property having been destroyed by fire, the insured gave immediate notice of loss, and delivered the account and particulars required by the policy before action brought, but more than fifteen days after the happening of the loss:—Held, that the delivery within fifteen days of the account was not a condition precedent to the right of the insured to recover. Weir v. Northern Counties of England Insurance Co., 4 L. R., Ir. 689. And see Gamble v. Accident Assurance Co., Ir. R. 4 C. L. 204.

Condition indorsed on a policy: "All persons insured by this company, sustaining any loss or damage by fire, shall, within fifteen days after the fire, deliver in as particular an account of the loss or damage as the nature of the case will admit of. In case any difference or dispute shall arise between the insured and the company, such difference shall be submitted to arbitrators":—Held, that the delivery of a particular within fifteen days was a condition precedent to the right of the insured to recover for the loss; but that the agreement to refer to arbitration was collateral, and not a condition precedent, and therefore could not be pleaded in bar to an action on the policy. Roper v. London, 1 El. & El. 825; 28 L. J., Q. B. 260; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 491; 7 W. R. 441.

A policy against fire contained several conditions, a non-compliance with which it was stated would make the policy void. It contained a condition that whenever a fire should happen, the insured should give immediate notice thereof to one of the secretaries or agents of the society, and within three months deliver to such secretary or agent, under his or her hand, accounts exhibiting the full particulars and amount of the loss sustained:—Held, that the delivery of such particulars was a condition precedent to the right to recover on the policy. Mason v. Harvey, 8 Ex. 819; 22 L. J., Ex. 336.

Discovery.]—A manufacturer effected a policy of insurance against fire upon his factory, machinery, and stock-in-trade. The factory and its contents were burnt down, and soon afterwards the manufacturer became bankrupt. The insurance company disputed the claim on the ground that it was fraudulent and excessive. The trustee in the bankruptcy brought an action against the company on the policy, and the company thereupon filed a bill against the trustee and the manufacturer to obtain discovery and to restrain the action till full discovery had been made:—Held, that the bill could not be sustained, inasmuch as the manufacturer was merely a witness over whom the plaintiff in the action had no control, and as it was not proved that any discovery for the purpose of the defence could be got from the trustee. Manchester Fire Assurance Co. v. Wykes, 33 L. T. 142; 23 W. R. 884—L.JJ.

Incendiary—Onus of Proof.]—A fire policy provided, according to its true construction, that the insurers should be liable for loss by fire, unless the fire was the act of an incendiary; to an action on the policy for loss by fire, the company pleaded that the loss was caused by the act of an incendiary:—Held, first, that the plea was in confession an avoidance, and that, as soon as the assured shewed the loss by fire, the burden of proving that the fire was the act of an incendiary was cast upon the insurers. Gorman v. Hand-in-Hand Insurance Co., Ir. R. 11 C. L. 224.

Held, secondly, that it having been left doubtful, upon the evidence, whether the fire happened through accident or design, the judge was right in refusing to direct a verdict for the insurers upon that plea. Ib.

—— Direction to Jury.]—In an action against a company to recover a loss sustained by fire, the defence was, that the plaintiff had wilfully set fire to the premises. The judge directed the jury, that, in order to find a verdict against the plaintiff, they should be satisfied that the crime imputed to him was as fully and satisfactorily proved as would warrant them in finding him guilty on a criminal charge for the same offence:—Held, that such direction was right. Thurtell v. Beaumont, 8 Moore, 612; 1 Bing. 339; 2 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 4; 25 R. R. 644.

Negligence of the Assured no Defence.]—Loss occasioned by the negligence of the assured is no defence to an action on a policy of insurance against fire. Jameson v. Royal Insurance Co., Ir. R. 7 C. L. 126.

If premises are burned down through the negligence of the assured, yet the policy is an indemnity against that negligence. Shaw v. Roberts, 1 N. & P. 279; 6 A. & E. 75; W. W. & D. 94; 6 L. J., K. B. 106; 1 Jur. 6.

Felonious Act of the Wife of the Assured.]—An insurance company granted a fire policy to S., and during the currency of the policy S.'s wife feloniously burnt the property insured. The company, not admitting any claim on the policy, brought an action against S. and his wife for the damage done by the act of the wife:—Held, first, that the action could not be maintained, as the insurer has no rights other than those of his assured, and can enforce those only in his name and after admitting the claim on the policy. Secondly, that the action for the felony, if it were maintainable, was maintainable without shewing that the felon had been prosecuted. Midland Counties Insurance Co. v. Smith, 50 L. J., Q. B. 329; 6 Q. B. D. 561; 45 L. T. 411; 29 W. R. 850; 45 J. P. 699.

Semble, that a felonious burning by the wife of the assured, without his privity, is covered by the ordinary fire policy. Ib.

Payment of Claim by Bill—Winding Up—Right to sue on Bill.]—If an insurance company discharges by bill a liability upon a policy which limits the claim to the capital of the company, and the bill is not paid, the holder has a clear right to sue, or prove in a winding-up, upon the bill, and not merely in respect of the original contract. Meredith, Ex parte, State Fire Insurance Co., In re, 32 L. J., Ch. 300; 8 L. T. 146; 11 W. R. 416.

Suit in Equity—Demurrer.]—To a bill brought to recover a sum of money upon a policy of insurance, the defendants demurred, because the plaintiff's remedy was at law. Demurrer allowed. Ghetoff v. London Assurance Co., 4 Bro. P. C. 436.

Condition Precedent—Proviso against Suing before Arbitration.]—In an action on a fire policy the defendant pleaded that the policy was made subject to a condition that, if any difference should arise in the adjustment of a loss, the amount to be paid should be submitted to arbitration, and the insured should not be entitled to commence or maintain any action upon the policy until the amount of the loss should have been referred and determined as therein provided, and then only for the amount so determined; that a difference had arisen, and the amount had not been referred or determined:—Held, that the determination of the amount by arbitration was a condition precedent to the right to recover on the policy, and the defence was an answer to the action. Collins v. Locke (4 App. Cas. 674) distinguished. Viney v. Bignold or Norwich Union Insurance Society, 57 L. J., Q. B. 82; 20 Q. B. D. 172; 58 L. T. 26; 36 W. R. 479.

—— Arbitration.]—By a policy against fire, it was declared that the capital of the company should be liable to pay to the assured any loss by fire not exceeding 4,200*l.*, "according to the exact tenor of the articles hereunto subjoined," one of which was as follows: "All persons assured by this corporation are, upon any loss or damage by fire, forthwith to give notice to the office in London, and within fifteen days after such fire to send in as particular account of their loss or damage as the nature of the case may admit, and make proof of the same by their oath, which loss or damage, after the same shall be adjusted, shall immediately be paid in money by the said corporation without any deduction;" and the article concluded with a stipulation that, "in case any difference should arise touching any loss or damage, the same should be referred to arbitration":—Held, by Kelly, C.B., and Martin and Pigott, BB. (dissentiente Bramwell, B.), that the adjustment of the amount was a condition precedent to the right of the assured to bring an action on the policy:—Held, contra, by Bramwell, B., that the contract was a collateral agreement for arbitration, and not a condition precedent to the right to maintain an action, and that the words in the article, "after the same shall be adjusted," pointed not to an adjusted loss, but rather to the time when it was to be paid. Elliott v. Royal Exchange Assurance Corporation, 36 L. J., Ex. 129; L. R. 2 Ex. 237; 16 L. T. 399; 15 W. R. 907. And see ARBITRATION.

Practice—Compliance with Condition in Policy—Non-Suit.]—Where in an action, on a fire policy, the plaintiffs' evidence shewed that they could have complied with the conditions as to giving within fifteen days a detailed account of their loss "as the nature and circumstances of the case will admit" much more fully than they had done:—Held, that they were rightly non-suited; and that, even if the question of non-compliance were for the jury, a verdict could not have been reasonably given in their favour. Hiddle v. National Fire and Marine Insurance Co. of New Zealand, 65 L. J., P. C. 24; [1896] App. Cas. 372; 74 L. T. 204.

D. GUARANTEE AND OTHER POLICIES.

I. GUARANTEE.

For Good Conduct—Warranty.]—An insurance company effected a policy with a literary institution to a certain amount against loss which might be occasioned by the want of integrity, honesty, or fidelity of W., in his employment as secretary to the institution. The basis of the contract was alleged to be a statement in writing, by the treasurer of the institution, containing a declaration of the truth of the answers to certain questions, with a proviso, that any fraudulent mis-statement or suppression should render the policy void. The statement contained the following questions and answers:—First, "Is the applicant at present in your employment, and if so in what capacity, and has he hitherto performed the duties of his situation faithfully and to your satisfaction?"—A. "He is secretary to the —— Literary Institution." Secondly, "Is the applicant personally known to you, or any of your firm, or by whom has he been introduced or recommended to you?"—A. "Only as above." Thirdly, "In what capacity do you intend to employ the applicant; and with reference to this question state, as far as circumstances will permit, (A) the nature of his intended duties and responsibilities?"—A. (A) "He is secretary of the —— Literary Institution, of which I am treasurer." (C) "The checks which will be used to secure accuracy in his accounts, and when and how often they will be balanced, and closed?"—A. (C) "Examined by finance committee every fortnight." (D) "The salary or emolument, and when it will be paid to him, and how and when it will be paid?"—A. (D) "80*l.* a year at present":—Held, that the statement that the accounts of W. would be examined once a fortnight by the finance committee of the institution did not amount to a warranty. Benham v. United Guarantee and Life Assurance Co., 7 Ex. 744; 21 L. J., Ex. 317; 16 Jur. 691.

—— Concealment.]—A. was a collector of taxes, and he effected a guarantee policy with an insurance society. Before the society granted the policy, they put certain questions to him touching the amount of money at any one time to come to his hands, and to be retained by him. In reply to these questions, he stated that "he was to collect and account for the sums collected by him; that the amount of money which he was to receive, and retain in his hands, was from 100*l.* to 200*l.*, and not longer than a week; that his accounts would be checked weekly by the surveyor of taxes; that the balance of each account would, on the occasion of such check, be paid over; and that such balances would be occasionally tested by his employers." The whole amount of taxes receivable by him in a year was 9,000*l.*, and it was by dividing that sum by fifty-two that he was enabled to answer as he had done as to the 100*l.* and 200*l.* He absconded, in default to the amount of 654*l.* On a bill by his sureties against the society, for payment to them on the guarantee policy of the 654*l.*:—Held, that, having regard to the rules appended to the policy, the answer of A. as to the sum to be received by him weekly was incorrect; and as such inaccuracy had not been waived by the society, or communicated to them, the policy was void. Towle v. National Guardian Insurance

—— Condition Precedent to Right of Action—Prosecution for Embezzlement.]—By an agreement and policy of insurance, the defendants agreed to reimburse the plaintiff any pecuniary loss, to the amount of 1,000*l.*, which he might sustain by reason of any fraud or dishonesty of A. in connection with his employment by the plaintiff, as should amount to embezzlement, and should be committed and discovered during the continuance of the policy. The policy provided (among other things) "that the employer shall, if and when required by the company, but at the expense of the company, if a conviction be obtained, use all diligence in prosecuting the employed to conviction for any fraud or dishonesty as aforesaid, which he shall have committed, and in consequence of which a claim shall have been made under this policy, and shall, at the company's expense, give all information and assistance to enable the company to sue for and obtain reimbursement by the employed, or by his estate, of any money which the company shall have become so liable to pay":—Held, by Lords Blackburn and Watson (Lord Selborne, C., dissentiente), that the prosecution of A. for embezzlement was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right of action upon the policy. London Guarantee and Accident Co. v. Fearnley, 5 App. Cas. 911; 43 L. T. 390; 28 W. R. 893; 45 J. P. 4—H. L.

Debenture maturing on Specified Date — Resolution Postponing Date of Payment—Liability of Assurer.]—A policy of insurance containing a recital that the assured is the holder of a debenture which matures on a specified date, and guaranteeing that if the debtor makes default in payment of any principal money "due under the debenture," the assurer will pay the same to the assured, constitutes a contract of insurance against a particular event—namely, the default of the debtor to pay to the assured the amount of his debenture upon the specified date; and upon the debtor making such default the assurer becomes liable to the assured to the amount of the debenture, although payment of the debenture has under a condition indorsed thereon been postponed to a time later than the specified date. Finlay v. Mexican Investment Corporation, 66 L. J., Q. B. 151; [1897] 1 Q. B. 517; 76 L. T. 257.

Against Losses in Trade—Notice.]—A declaration stated that by an agreement between a guarantee company and the defendants, after reciting that they had delivered to the company a declaration stating the amount of their business and losses during the three years preceding, and that they were desirous of being guaranteed by the company in respect of their future sales, it was agreed that if they should pay the sums thereinafter mentioned, and should comply with the provisions of the deed of settlement of the company, the funds of the company should be liable to pay the defendants nine-tenths of their losses in respect of sales during three years and one month from the 1st of December, 1853, unto the 31st of December, 1856, and during any further period the defendants should contribute to the funds of the company, and the company should consent to receive further payments; but subject always to the provisions contained in the deed of settlement, and also to a proviso that every guarantee upon annual returns should, from the expiration of the original term, be treated as a renewed contract, unless either the member interested therein or the directors should give notice of an intention not to renew the same. The declaration then alleged that the defendants agreed to pay the company 43*l.* 15*s.* in each year during the guarantee that the agreement so made was an agreement on gross annual returns within the meaning of the proviso, and that no notice of an intention not to renew the guarantee had been given by either party, and alleged as breach the nonpayment of an instalment of 43*l.* 15*s.*, being the premium for 1857, and 10*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.*, an instalment for 1858. Pleas, first, that the sums are claimed in respect of periods after 31st of December, 1856, and that after such date the defendants refused to contribute to the funds of the company. Secondly, that the company had become dissolved, and was amalgamated with another company. Thirdly, for defence on equitable grounds, a plea stating an agreement to amalgamate, as in the second plea:—Held, that the first plea was bad, for the stipulation for notice was part of the contract, and no notice having been given, the agreement continued for another three years. Solvency Mutual Guarantee Society v. York, 3 H. & N. 588; 27 L. J., Ex. 487.

Held, also, that the second and third pleas were bad, since it did not appear that the company was not empowered by their deed of settlement to amalgamate. Ib.

—— Renewal of Contract.]—By an agreement between a company and the defendants, in consideration of a certain sum, it was agreed that the funds of the company should be subject and liable to make good to the defendants the loss occasioned to them during the term of two years by reason of any of the purchasers of their goods becoming bankrupt within such time, and during any future period in respect whereof the company should consent to receive further payments, but subject to the conditions indorsed on the instrument. One of the conditions indorsed was, that all guarantees, whatever might be the original term, should, from the expiration of such original term, be treated as a renewed contract of the like nature and conditions, unless either the members interested therein, or the board of directors, should give two calendar months' notice of an intention not to renew the same:—Held, that the renewed contract was not itself to be deemed to contain this particular condition as to the renewal, and that therefore, even in the absence of notice, the contract did not extend beyond one renewal. Solvency Mutual Guarantee Co. v. Froane, 7 H. & N. 5; 31 L. J., Ex. 193; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 899.

—— Notice of Withdrawal by Contributory.]—A. effected an insurance against bad debts for a term of three years, the following condition as to withdrawal being indorsed on the policy:—"Every guarantee shall be made for a specified term; but all guarantees upon gross annual returns, floating risks, or rent, whatever may be the original term of the same, shall from the expiration of such original term be treated as a renewed contract of the like nature and conditions, unless either the member interested therein, or the board of directors, shall give two calendar months' notice of an intention to renew the same." The first year's premium was paid by A., and a claim admitted by the office in respect of a bad debt was set off against the remaining premiums, leaving a balance still due from A. A. being dissatisfied at not receiving the actual money, told B., the agent with whom he had effected the policy, that he should withdraw from the society, and have nothing further to do with it. He made no further payments in respect of premiums, nor were any demanded from him by the office:—Held, that there had been sufficient notice of withdrawal in accordance with the condition annexed to the policy to determine the contract at the end of the time, and that A. was not liable as a contributory. Solvency Mutual Guarantee Society, In re, Hawthorne's Case, 31 L. J., Ch. 625; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 934; 6 L. T. 574; 10 W. R. 572.

Held, also, that B. was a sufficient agent of the company for the purpose of receiving such notice. Ib.

Policy effected by Depositor to insure Repayment—Default of Bank—Liquidation—Scheme of Arrangement—Discharge of all Claims by Operation of Statute—Accord and Satisfaction.]—The plaintiff, having deposited with an Australian bank a sum of money for a fixed period at a fixed rate of interest, effected a policy of insurance with the defendant corporation, whereby the corporation contracted to pay the plaintiff the principal sum and interest if the bank made default in payment. The bank failed to pay the principal sum on the due date, and subsequently a scheme of arrangement between the bank and its creditors was sanctioned by the colonial court in accordance with the terms of a colonial statute, whereby certain provisions were made with regard to the claims of the creditors, and the creditors were bound to accept such provisions in satisfaction of their claims. The plaintiff having brought an action against the defendants on the policy:—Held, that the scheme of arrangement afforded no answer to the plaintiff's claim. Dane v. Mortgage Insurance Corporation, 63 L. J., Q. B. 144; 9 R. 96; [1894] 1 Q. B. 54; 70 L. T. 83; 42 W. R. 227—C. A.

Receiver—Security of Guarantee Society.]—The security of a guarantee society may be taken in the case of a receiver in a probate action. Carpenter v. Solicitor to the Treasury, Stokes, In goods of, 51 L. J., P. 91; 7 P. D. 235; 46 L. T. 821; 31 W. R. 108; 46 J. P. 663.

Guarantee Policy—Condition—Notice of Criminal Misconduct.]—Where in a guarantee policy there is a condition that the insurer is to give notice within six days of any liability being incurred, or the policy to be void:—Held, that this means notice of any criminal misconduct whereby it is clear that any liability has been incurred; and therefore that the plaintiff, on receipt of evidence that the person mentioned in the policy has been guilty of embezzlement, was not bound to give notice until he has ascertained that criminal liability had been incurred. Ward v. Law Property Assurance and Trust Society, 4 W. R. 605.

Insolvency of Insurance Company.]—See Mortgage Insurance Corporation v. Pound, 65 L. J., Q. B. 129—H. L. (E.)

II. OTHER POLICIES.

Glass.]—A policy contained a recital, that it was agreed that plate glass in which the insurer was interested should be insured "from loss or damage originating from any cause whatsoever, except fire, breakage during removal, alteration, or repair of premises, ... none of the said glass being horizontally placed or movable," and then insured the owner from all damage or loss "from any cause whatever, except only as above specified, according to the exact tenor" of the printed conditions indorsed on the policy. A fire broke out on premises adjoining the shop of the insured, who thereupon opened the shop door, and admitted neighbours to save his property; during the removal the mob, which had been attracted by the fire, broke down the shutters, and destroyed the glass, for the purpose of plunder:—Held, that the damage to the glass did not originate from fire, or from breakage during removal, within the meaning of the exception in the policy. Marsden v. City and County Insurance Co., 1 H. & R. 53; 35 L. J., C. P. 60; L. R. 1 C. P. 232; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 76; 13 L. T. 465; 14 W. R. 106.

Cattle.]—A policy on the lives of cattle was an insurance on lives, within 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, and liable to duty. Att.-Gen. v. Cleobury, 4 Ex. 65; 18 L. J., Ex. 395.

Burglary—Proviso that no Insurance until Premium paid—Waiver.]—A proposal for insurance against loss by burglary and housebreaking having been made to an insurance company, a policy, which, after reciting that the premium had been paid, contained a proviso that no insurance should be held to be effected until the premium due thereon had been paid, was sealed with the seal of the company and signed by two of the directors and the secretary. The policy remained in the possession of the company, and was never handed to the assured. A loss occurred before payment of the premium, which, in fact, never was paid, though the assured was always ready to pay:—Held, that there was a concluded agreement between the company and the assured, that the company had waived the condition as to payment of the premium, and that the assured was entitled to recover on the policy the amount of the loss less the premium. Roberts v. Security Co., 66 L. J., Q. B. 119; [1897] 1 Q. B. 111; 75 L. T. 531; 45 W. R. 214—C. A. And see Tarleton v. Staniforth, ante, col. 93.

I. POWER AND AUTHORITY OF DIRECTORS.

a. ISSUING POLICY.

Marine.]—The Hull and London Fire Assurance Company was a company completely registered under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110. The deed of settlement gave the company power to transact all the branches of business usually appertaining to marine insurance, and required that in every policy the funds of the company should alone be made liable. The company had a seal, with their name of incorporation on it. For marine insurances the directors appointed an agent to issue policies. The marine policies were headed "Hull and London Marine Assurance Company," and were signed by the agent, by order of the board of directors of the company, and had a stamp upon them with the words "Hull and London Marine Assurance Company." They contained no stipulation that the funds of the company should alone be liable:—Held, first, that the Hull and London Fire Assurance Company was not liable on such policies, because neither the directors nor any one else had authority to enter into such engagements on behalf of the company, as these policies purported to create; and there neither was nor could be any evidence that the signing of such policies by an agent, in a name not that of the company, was in accordance with the usual mode of conducting the business of partnership such as the company's, or within the scope of the ordinary authority of the directors or agents of such companies. Hambro v. Hull and London Fire Assurance Co., 3 H. & N. 789; 28 L. J., Ex. 62.

Held, secondly, that no action lay against the Hull and London Fire Assurance Company, on an adjustment of losses on such policies by the directors. Ib.

Life.]—The deed of settlement of a life assurance society, completely registered under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, provided by the 20th clause of the deed that the common seal should not be affixed to any policies except by the order of three directors, signed by them and countersigned by the manager; and by clause 28, that every policy should be given under the hands of not less than three of the directors, and sealed with the common seal. By clause 101, the books containing the proceedings of the general meetings and of the board of directors were to be open to the inspection of shareholders. A policy was executed, sealed with the common seal, and signed by three directors, one of whom was manager; but there was no previous order made, as required by the 20th clause. The company, in discussion with the assured, treated the policy as effective:—Held, that they could not repudiate their liability on the policy, upon the ground that the execution was not authorised. Prince of Wales Life Assurance Co. v. Harding, El. Bl. & El. 183; 27 L. J., Q. B. 297; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 851.

The deed of settlement of an insurance society, registered under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, after empowering the directors to effect insurances on lives upon such terms and conditions and in such manner as they should think proper, provided that every policy or other instrument required in any of the transactions aforesaid should be given under the hands of not less than three of the directors, and sealed with the common seal of the society; and that there should be contained therein, and in every other contract to be entered into on behalf of the society, in or about the premises (meaning in or about matters connected with assurance), a reference to the deed, and a proviso negativing an unconditional liability. The deed also declared, that it should be competent to a board of directors to exercise certain general powers, and generally where the deed was silent, or did not otherwise provide, to act in the direction of the affairs of the society in such manner as in their absolute discretion they should think most conducive to its interests:—Held, that a memorandum, signed by three of the directors, but not under the seal of the society, stipulating that, on payment of certain premiums, the society would guarantee an assurance therein mentioned, and would issue, when required, a stamped policy, in the form authorised by their deed of settlement, was binding upon the general body of the shareholders, and created a good equitable debt. Athenæum Life Assurance Co., In re, 4 Kay & J. 549; 27 L. J., Ch. 829; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1140; 6 W. R. 779.

b. MATTERS OF DISCRETION.

Voluntary Payments.]—An insurance company expressly excepted from their fire policies loss by explosion, except by the explosion of gas. An explosion occurred accidentally by the blowing up of a vessel laden with powder, by which damage was done to buildings insured by the company. The directors paid for the damage so caused, but they did it ex gratiâ, and for the benefit of the company. On a bill by a shareholder to make them refund the money:—Held, that this was a matter of internal management, and that, having regard to the powers of the directors, and the purposes of the company, the directors were justified in making the payments, the damage being done by something which, though not within, was analogous to, the risk insured against. Taunton v. Royal Insurance Co., 2 H. & M. 135; 33 L. J., Ch. 406; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 291; 10 L. T. 156; 12 W. R. 549.

Reducing Premiums.]—When an insurance company undertook, upon being satisfied that the causes which originally led to the assessment of a higher premium upon the life insured were removed, to reduce the premium to that upon an ordinary life:—Held, that a court of equity could not interfere with the discretion of the directors, exercised bonâ fide, to compel them to perform their contract. Manby v. Gresham Life Insurance Co., 29 Beav. 439; 31 L. J., Ch. 94; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 383; 4 L. T. 347; 9 W. R. 547.

c. INVESTING CAPITAL OR DIVIDING PROFITS.

Securities.] — Directors of a life insurance society, which was constituted by deed of settlement for the purpose of purchasing, selling and re-selling life, reversionary and other personal estates and interests, and of advancing money, by way of loan, on personal security, and generally of carrying on the business of life insurance, and of an annuity, loan, and reversionary interest society, were empowered by such deed of settlement, at their own absolute discretion, and in the usual and ordinary course of the business of the society, to invest, lay out, or advance at interest, on government securities, or on such personal or other security as they should think fit and advantageous, and they lawfully might, such moneys, or such parts of the moneys and funds, of the society as they should think expedient:—Held, that a purchase by the directors of such society of Westminster Improvement Bonds was not within their powers. Athenæum Life Insurance Society v. Pooley, 3 De G. & J. 294; 28 L. J., Ch. 119; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 129; 7 W. R. 167.

Effect of Successive Charters.]—In 1822 a company granted a policy, admitting A. a member of their society, and binding themselves to pay to his executors, administrators, or assigns such proportion or share of the joint stock and fund of the society as should become due on the death of A., according to the charters and by-laws of the society. D. was assignee of the policy, which became a claim on the society in 1858. After making the policy, and before it became a claim, other charters were granted to the society, and acts of parliament were passed relating thereto, which modified and altered the manner of calculating the profits and apportioning them amongst the representatives of the lives insured; these provisions were in their terms general, without distinction as to past or future policies:—Held, that the policy was regulated by the later charters and acts of parliament, and that the distribution of the profits of the society on its becoming a claim must be in accordance therewith. Drake v. Amicable Society, 4 L. T. 439.

Reserve Fund.]—An insurance company, by a deed of settlement, was directed to create a reserve fund, and pay no dividend till a specified amount was realised. This provision was departed from by the consent of the majority of the shareholders, and a bonus was distributed every three years. The company afterwards amalgamated with another company, and it was agreed that 50*l.* per share should be paid upon all shares, and also a proportionate part of the surplus assets. A tenant for life of ten shares in the company claimed the share of the surplus assets which had been paid over to her trustee as part of her annual income:—Held, that these surplus assets, which must be considered as the reserve fund, were capital, and not income. Nicholson v. Nicholson, 30 L. J., Ch. 617; 9 W. R. 676.

Cross Insurance—Mutual Society—Membership.] — Where policies are effected by the manager and secretary of one assurance society in the office of another, being a mutual assurance society, although such policy is expressed to be effected "for and on behalf of the society," the secretary alone is thereby constituted a member, by reason of the sum secured being payable to him and "his successors in office." Where directors of one assurance society have power to effect cross insurances in the office of another, if they do so in a mutual assurance office, that does not constitute their society a member, being ultra vires. Security Mutual Life Assurance Society, In re, Athenæum Life Assurance Society, Ex parte, 6 W. R. 431.

II. AUTHORITY OF AGENTS.

To indorse Memoranda on Policies.]—A memorandum indorsed on a policy for a change of the voyage was signed by an agent of an insurance company. It was proved that the agent had signed similar memoranda on many other policies, and that his habit was to do so, and advise the company of it; though, when a policy was required, he always sent the proposals to the company:—Held, that this was sufficient proof of the agent's authority to sign such memorand; and that the other policies, on which the memoranda had been signed, need not be produced. Brockelbank v. Sugrue, 5 Car. & P. 21.

Local Agent.]—An ordinary local agent of an insurance company is not, without special authority, authorised to bind the company by a contract to grant a policy. Linford v. Provincial Horse and Cattle Insurance Co., 34 Beav. 291; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1066; 11 L. T. 330.

The London agent of a county insurance company received a proposal for an insurance. The party paid the annual premium to the agent, who promised that he should have the policy. The agent retained and misapplied the money, and never forwarded the proposal to the company:—Held, in the absence of proof of special authority to the agent, that the company was not bound to grant the policy. Ib.

A plate glass policy, which had been effected through L., the local agent of the company, was subject to a condition that, "in case of loss or damage, an immediate notice must be given to the manager, or to some known agent of the company." After the making of the policy, and before the loss, the company transferred this branch of its business to another company. The assured (not being aware of this transfer) gave notice of the damage to L., who made his report thereon to the latter company:—Held, that the notice to L. was a sufficient notice within the condition. Marsden v. City and County Insurance Co., 1 H. & R. 53; 35 L. J., C. P. 60; L. R. 1 C. P. 232; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 76; 13 L. T. 465; 14 W. R. 106.

A policy was subject to a condition, making it void if the assured went beyond the limits of Europe without licence. An assignee of the policy, on paying the premium to a local agent of the society at the place where the assurance had been effected, informed him that the assured was resident in Canada. The agent stated that this would not avoid the policy, and received the premiums until the assured died:—Held, that the society was precluded from insisting on the forfeiture. Wing v. Harvey, 5 De G. M. & G. 265; 2 Eq. R. 533; 23 L. J., Ch. 511; 18 Jur. 394; 2 W. R. 370.

Mistake as to Company.]—A person entered into a contract with the agent of an insurance company to insure him, under the impression that he was dealing with the agent of another company:—Held, that there was a contract, and that the company whose agent he dealt with was liable. Mackie v. European Assurance Co., 21 L. T. 102; 17 W. R. 987.

Manager taking Promissory Note for Premiums.]—An assurance company was incorporated by a Canadian statute, by which it was provided that all policies should be subscribed by three directors, countersigned by the secretary and manager, and the seal of the corporation. By a by-law a resolution to the same effect was passed. H. mortgaged a house to R. His representative, being dissatisfied with the security, applied for repayment of the mortgage money, when H. agreed to insure the premises for the benefit of the mortgagee's representative. In pursuance of this arrangement, H. applied to the company through M., their manager, to insure the premises against fire. H. was unable to pay the premium, and proposed to M. that the company should take his promissory note. This was agreed to by M. and a note was given, M. promising to send the policy. The particulars of the policy were entered in the books of the company, but the note being dishonoured when due, the entry was erased. The policy was never issued. Shortly afterwards the premises were burnt down :—Held, first, that the powers of M. as manager, being public, must be taken to have been known to H., the insurer, and that the acts of M. in the transaction were ultra vires and void. Montreal Assurance Co. v. M'Gillivray, 13 Moore, P. C. 87 ; 8 W. R. 165.

Held, secondly, that as such contract was not binding on M.'s principals, it did not become binding upon them by reason of its having been entered into through their agent. Ib.

Preliminary Agreement—Mistake.]—By a verbal agreement between the plaintiff and C., agent in London of an insurance society in Scotland, it was agreed that a policy should be granted to the plaintiff on the life of H., a merchant residing at Gibraltar, and that the policy should not be vitiated by reason of H. visiting ports on the coast of Africa ; and a proposal for the policy was drawn up by the plaintiff at the office of the society in London, and forwarded by the agent to the chief office of the society at Edinburgh. In that proposal it was stated that the policy could not be accepted except on the condition that H. should be at liberty "to visit Tangiers, or any other port within the Mediterranean, without subjecting himself to any extra premium ; but it was understood that he was not to reside out of Europe, at any place in the Mediterranean, beyond the period of three months, or to go into the interior of Asia or Africa." No mention was made in the proposal of ports on the coast of Africa. The policy was effected, with a memorandum endorsed upon it in the terms of the above condition, and the plaintiff paid several premiums. H. went to a port on the Atlantic coast of Africa, and died there within three months of his arrival. The society refused to pay, and an action was brought to recover the amount. The defence was, that the policy had become void by reason of H. having died at a port not within the terms of the agreement. On a bill filed by the plaintiff to have the mistake made in the indorsement on the policy rectified :—Held, that C., the agent in London, had no power to bind the society ; and as the memorandum had been framed under a mistake, the real terms of the agreement never having been communicated to or adopted by the society, the policy was not binding upon either party ; and the court ordered that the society should repay the premiums, and that the plaintiff should thereupon deliver up the policy to the society. Fowler v. Scottish Equitable Life Insurance Society, 28 L. J., Ch. 225 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1169 ; 7 W. R. 5.

Sub-agent.]—A proposal for a life policy, accepted on behalf of a London assurance company by their agent in Australia, who acted in the transaction through the medium of a sub-agent, and the premium being paid is binding on the company, although the agent had no authority to appoint a sub-agent, and although there were some informalities, but of form only. Rossiter v. Trafalgar Life Assurance Association, 27 Beav. 377.

Dissolution of Company—Right to Payment.]—An insurance company covenanted with A. for valuable consideration to appoint him their agent, together with B., and that if B. should be displaced from the agency, the company would pay A. a certain sum ; the company having transferred their business to another company, and wound up their affairs and dissolved themselves :—Held, that this was a displacement of B. within the meaning of the covenant. Stirling v. Maitland, 5 B. & S. 840 ; 34 L. J., Q. B. 1 ; 11 L. T. 337 ; 13 W. R. 76.

Liability of Secretary for False Representations.]—An action lies against a secretary of an insurance company for false representations as to the management and general affairs of the company, whereby a party was induced to effect an insurance with the company, though it does not appear that he had thereby sustained any positive damage. Pontifex v. Bignold, 3 Scott (N.R.) 390 ; 3 Man. & G. 63 ; 9 D. P. C. 860 ; 10 L. J., C. P. 259.

III. ALTERING CONSTITUTION OR BUSINESS.

Life and Marine.]—At an extraordinary general meeting of a company established for granting assurances on lives, it was resolved to extend the business to marine insurances. The resolutions were afterwards confirmed ; a deed embodying them was executed by some, but not all of the shareholders, and in the annual return to the joint-stock companies registry office, the business of the company was stated to include marine assurance. The reports of the directors several times alluded to the extension of the business, and on one occasion a report alluding to such extension accompanied the dividend warrant. The business as extended was carried on for a year and a half, when the company was ordered to be wound up :—Held, that these circumstances were not sufficient to bind the general body of shareholders by acquiescence to the extension of business, which could only be effected by a new deed executed by all the shareholders ; consequently, holders of marine policies could not come in as creditors of the company in respect of losses upon such policies. Phœnix Life Assurance Co., In re, 2 J. & H. 441 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 749 ; 10 W. R. 816.

Held, however, that the holders of such policies might claim in respect of the premiums paid. Ib.

Fire.]—The third clause of the deed of settlement of a provident and life society, after specifying particularly the business of the society, authorised the society "generally to make and effect insurances against all and every kind of risk, special or general, which may be effected according to law," and which might thereafter be determined upon by a special general meeting, "upon such terms and conditions as may seem reasonable and expedient, having due regard to the business of an insurance company." The thirteenth clause empowered the society in special general meeting to amend, add to, or repeal all or any of the clauses of the deed of settlement; and "to alter the objects, business and constitution of the society, or any or either of them," as might be thought proper, provided that no alteration was made in the third clause:—Held, that the above clause enabled the society to carry on the business of fire insurance. Norwich Provident Insurance Society, In re, Bath's Case, 47 L. J., Ch. 601; 8 Ch. D. 334; 38 L. T. 267; 26 W. R. 441—C. A.

Deed of Settlement—Power to alter—Sale of Business.]—The deed of settlement of an unincorporated life assurance company contained no provision for the sale or transfer of its business. But it provided that the proprietors might alter, amend, or repeal the laws, regulations and provisions of the company. Resolutions were passed with due formalities to take power to sell and transfer the business:—Held, that a sale and transfer of the business was intra vires. Argus Life Assurance Co., In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 166; 39 Ch. D. 571; 59 L. T. 689; 37 W. R. 215.

Guarantee Business and Treaty Business—Ultra Vires—Company in Liquidation.]—A fire insurance society being an unincorporated association, had powers of giving to, or taking from other offices policies by way of guarantee for the purpose of dividing the risk of insurance, and also under their powers entered into treaties with other companies appointing them their agents in foreign lands, and agreeing to accept and enter upon the risk of one-eighth of every fire insurance policy of such companies in force at the date of the treaty, or effected or renewed after that date, and agreed to be on all risks simultaneously with the other companies, the other companies agreeing to pay a proportion of the premiums, 20 per cent. commission to be allowed on such premiums to the agent for the expenses of conducting the agency. The fire insurance society having gone into liquidation, the chief clerk allowed the claim of another company for sums due to them in respect of guarantee and treaty business. On summons by the liquidator to vary the certificate:—Held, that guarantee business was insurance business contemplated by the deed of settlement, and within the powers of the society; that the treaty agreements did not constitute an amalgamation between the contracting companies, nor a partnership either inter se or as regarded third persons, but were agreements of agency: the society having had the benefit of these agreements, the burden of proof was upon them to shew that the agreements were invalid; that the treaty business was insurance business, being guarantee business carried on with a very unlimited faith in the agent; it was a re-insurance contract more wide and less prudent than an ordinary contract of re-insurance, but was within the powers of the society, and that the directors had by acquiescence ratified the acts of the manager of the agency department. Norwich Equitable Fire Assurance Society, In re, 57 L. T. 541.

IV. AMALGAMATION AND TRANSFER OF BUSINESS.

a. Powers of Company.

Consent of Policy-holders.]—On petition for the sanction of the court to a scheme for the transfer of the business of one life insurance company to another, it appeared that the holders of two policies, together amounting to much less than one-tenth of the whole amount insured by the company, were resident abroad and could not have received the notices of the scheme which had been duly posted, in time to express their assent or dissent:—Held, that as their remedy against the transferring company was preserved by s. 7 of the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1872, the court would sanction the scheme without waiting for their assent. London and Southwark Insurance Corporation, In re, 42 L. T. 247; 28 W. R. 565.

A policy-holder, by whose policy the funds of a company are made liable to pay the sum insured, and certain shares of profit by way of bonus, is entitled to restrain the company from transferring its business and assets to another company, contrary to the provisions of the deed of settlement, and without making provision out of its own assets for payment of the policy. Kearns v. Leaf, 1 H. & M. 681; 10 L. T. 185; 12 W. R. 462.

Action against Company for.]—A. affected a policy "upon and for twenty years' continuance of the life of himself," with a company. By the policy it was provided that the property of the company remaining at the time of any claim undisposed of, and inapplicable to prior claims and demands, in pursuance of the provisions of the deed of settlement, should alone be liable to answer all claims upon the company; and that no director, officer, or shareholder should be individually or personally liable. The deed of settlement entitled policy-holders to participate in profits; and also contained provisions enabling the directors, in certain events, to dissolve the company. The directors having, not in strict accordance with their powers to dissolve the company, transferred its funds and property to another company, who were to take their liabilities, A. brought an action against the company (his assurers), charging them with having wrongfully alienated and transferred their property, and ceased to carry on business:—Held, first, that there was no implied contract on the part of the company to continue to carry on the business. King v. Accumulative Life Fund and General Assurance Co., 3 C. B. (N.S.) 151; 27 L. J., C. P. 57; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1264; 6 W. R. 12. See Solvency Guarantee Society v. York, 3 H. & N. 588; 27 L. J., Ex. 487.

Held, secondly, that if there was, there was no evidence of any breach of it, inasmuch as, if the transfer was properly made, there was no cause of action, and if not warranted by the deed of settlement, it was ultra vires, and void. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that A. had commenced his action before he had sustained any injury. Ib.

Where no Special Power.]—A life and fire assurance society purchased the business of a life assurance company, taking all the assets, and undertaking all the liabilities:—Held, that, in the absence of any special power in their deed of settlement, the transaction was ultra vires; that securities under the seal of the purchasing company, given in carrying out this arrangement to creditors of the selling company, were void; and that such creditors were not entitled to prove against the purchasing company, which was in the course of winding-up. Era Assurance Co., In re, William, Ex parte, 2 Johns. & H. 400; 30 L. J., Ch. 137; 6 Jur. (N.S) 1334; 3 L. T. 314; 9 W. R. 67.

Where one insurance company, A., transferred all its business, property, effects and liabilities to another company, B., on the terms of A. shareholders being indemnified, on a bill by A. for specific performance of the agreement, the court decreed such indemnity, and the other company, which was ordered to be wound up, having by its official manager filed a cross bill, alleging fraud and misrepresentation, and that such agreement was ultra vires, the company, B., having had the benefit of the agreement:—Held, not to be entitled to object that the agreement was ultra vires and improperly entered into by the managing body. Anglo Australian Life Assurance Co. v. British Provident Society, 3 Giff. 521; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 299; 6 L. T. 68.

An unregistered company which has no power under its deed of settlement to sell and transfer its business to another company may, nevertheless, carry into effect an agreement for that purpose by registering under the Companies Act, 1862, and then passing a resolution for voluntarily winding up, and directing the liquidator to carry out the agreement. Southall v. British Mutual Life Assurance Society, 40 L. J., Ch. 698; L. R. 6 Ch. 614; 19 W. R. 865. Affirming 23 L. T. 682.

A mutual insurance company may be amalgamated with, and its business transferred to, another company under the Companies Act, 1862, s. 161. Ib.

A clause in an agreement for the amalgamation of two companies, providing that part of the purchase-money shall be paid to the directors of the selling company by way of bonus, does not invalidate the amalgamation. Ib.

Deposit—Amalgamation—Repayment of Deposit.]—The E. Life Assurance Society made the deposit of 20,000*l.* required by the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870, s. 3, but did not accumulate a life assurance fund out of premiums as mentioned in the section. The E. society effected an amalgamation with the M. Life Assurance Company, which had accumulated out of premiums previously received a fund exceeding 100,000*l.* There were no creditors of the E. society other than the policy-holders, nearly all of whom had agreed to accept the liability of the M. company. Upon a petition by the E. society and M. company for payment of the deposit to the M. company:—Held, that as there had not been an accumulation of a life assurance fund out of the premiums received by the E. society, the provisions of the section had not been complied with, and the order could not be made. But the court allowed the petition to stand over generally, intimating that it might be brought on again, when the M. company had accumulated out of the premiums to be received on all or any of their policies an additional life assurance fund amounting to 40,000*l.* Scottish Economic Life Assurance Society, Ex parte, 60 L. J., Ch. 14; 45 Ch. D. 220; 62 L. T. 926; 38 W. R. 684; 2 Meg. 271.

Sale or Transfer—S. 14 of Act of 1870.]—Where annuities are secured by the guarantee, under seal, of a life assurance company, to trustees for the annuitants, such trustees are policy-holders within the meaning of ss. 2 and 14 of the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870. Sovereign Life Assurance Co., In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 811; 42 Ch. D. 540; 61 L. T. 455; 38 W. R. 58.

If a life assurance company has, under its deed of settlement, no power to sell or transfer its life assurance business, it cannot, under s. 14 of the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870, enter into any arrangement for the sale or transfer of its life assurance business. Ib.

Transfer of Business—Confirmation by Court—Time for sending Notice.]—When a petition is presented by a life assurance company under the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870, for the confirmation of a conditional agreement to transfer its business to another company, s. 14 of the act will have been sufficiently complied with if all the notices (required by that section to be given to each policy-holder of the transferred company) are given before the hearing (though some of them may have been given after the presentation) of the petition. Briton Life Association, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 988; 35 W. R. 803.

When effected.]—The deed of association of the Waterloo Assurance Company, which bound the policy-holders, contained a power to dissolve, and thereupon the directors were to get from another company an undertaking to pay all future liabilities, and to transfer to such company so much of the funds as should be agreed on between the contracting parties as would be sufficient to enable the latter company to comply with their undertaking:—Held, that the amount to be paid over was a matter of agreement between the two companies, with which the policy-holders had no concern, and that a policy-holder who refused to be transferred had no claim upon the Waterloo Company. Waterloo Life Assurance Co., In re, Carr, Ex parte, 33 Beav. 542.

C. insured his life in the T. company, which afterwards made over its business to the A. company. At the time of this transaction circulars were sent to C., informing him that the A. company would be responsible on the policy, and requesting him to pay future premiums to that company, and to send his policy to the company to be endorsed. C. never sent his policy to be indorsed, but paid the premiums to the A. company, and in 1863 accepted a bonus. The A. company having become insolvent shortly after the death of C., his assignee applied for an order to wind up the T. company:—Held, that C. had accepted the A. company as his debtor in place of the T. company, and that his assignee had no locus standi to petition for the winding-up of the company. Times Life Assurance and Guarantee Co., In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 527; L. R. 5 Ch. 381; 23 L. T. 181; 18 W. R. 559. S. P., Merchant's and Tradesman's Assurance Society, In re, L. R. 9 Eq. 694; 22 L. T. 264; 18 W. R. 725.

The holder of a policy in company A. received a circular stating that it was dissolved, and its business and assets had been transferred to company B., and that he was entitled to have his policy exchanged for a new one in company B., or to have an indorsement by company B. on the old policy, guaranteeing the fulfilment of the old policy. He accepted the latter alternative, and obtained an indorsement, charging the assets of company B. with the payment of the old policy:—Held, that he had accepted the liability of company B. in lieu of, and not as surety for, that of company A. International Life Assurance Society and Hercules Ins. Co., In re, Blood, Ex parte, 39 L. J., Ch. 295; L. R. 9 Eq. 316; 22 L. T. 467; 18 W. R. 370.

A life policy with profits was obtained from the Anchor Company; the Anchor Company afterwards transferred their business to the Bank of London Association under terms which appeared to keep the companies separate; and the association was soon afterwards amalgamated with the Albert Company. Notices of these changes were given to the policy-holders, and the first receipt for a premium paid after the amalgamation with the Albert Company was in a special form; the subsequent receipts were merely receipts by the Albert Company, with the words "Anchor Company" on them. Three years after the amalgamation a bonus was declared by the Albert Company, and a sum of money was received as bonus by the policy-holder:—Held, that there had been a novation of contract with the Albert Company, and that the representatives of the policy-holder could not obtain an order to wind up the Anchor Company. Anchor Assurance Co., In re, L. R. 5 Ch. 632; 18 W. R. 1183.

When the holder of a policy, having notice that the N. assurance office, with which the policy was effected, had transferred its business and assets to the A. assurance office, and had ceased to carry on business, paid the premiums on his policy to the A. office for thirteen years, and upon the dropping of the life sent in a claim upon the policy to that office:—Held, that there had been complete novation of the contract, and that the N. office was released from liability on the policy. National Provincial Life Assurance Society, In re, Fleming, Ex parte, 39 L. J., Ch. 250; L. R. 9 Eq. 306; 22 L. T. 465; 18 W. R. 398.

M. effected a policy upon his life with the British Nation Life Assurance Association. The association subsequently was amalgamated with the European Society, and ceased to carry on business. Some time afterwards a memorandum under the seal of the European Society, and signed by two of its directors, was indorsed on the policy, declaring that the funds of the European Society should be liable for the payment of the policy-money, provided the future premiums were paid to the European Society. The subsequent premiums were accordingly paid to that society:—Held, that there was a complete novation, and that on the winding-up of the two companies, M. had no right of proof against the British Nation Association. Miller's Case, European Society Arbitration, In re, 3 Ch. D. 391—C. A.

A fire assurance company and a life assurance company were amalgamated with the B. assurance company; and a deed of settlement was executed by which the B. company was constituted as a common law partnership. The deed recited the agreement by which the business of the two companies was transferred to the B. company, and the B. company undertook to indemnify them against all liabilities. F. was a policy-holder in the life company and was also a shareholder in the fire company, and as such shareholder executed the deed of settlement of the B. company, and received shares in the B. company in exchange for his shares in the fire company. The B. company and the life company were afterwards ordered to be wound up, and F. claimed to prove as a creditor against the estate of the life company:—Held, that having executed the deed of settlement of the B. company, he had accepted the liability of that company, and could not claim as a creditor against the life company. National Provincial Life Assurance Society, In re, Fleming's Case, L. R. 6 Ch. 393; 19 W. R. 663. Affirming 23 L. T. 770.

S. was holder of a policy of the M. society, and entitled under it to participation in profits. The society amalgamated with the A. company, handing over its assets, and the company undertaking its liabilities, a fund, part of the M. assets, being set apart as a trust fund to guarantee certain policies of the M. society, including S.'s policy. Under the arrangement for the amalgamation proposals were made to S. to cancel his policy, and accept in substitution a policy upon similar terms of the A. company. This S. did not accede to; he simply paid his premiums to the A. company, which company was, according to the arrangement between the companies, authorised to receive the premiums. Two years after the amalgamation a division of profit of the three preceding years was declared by the A. company. A bonus was declared upon S.'s policy, notice of which was given to him. He accepted the bonus in the form of a reduction of the premiums upon his policy, and he subsequently paid the reduced premiums. The M. society being (as well as the A. company) ordered to be wound up, S. claimed to prove as a creditor in respect of his policy:—Held, that he had by taking the bonus accepted the A. company as his debtor in lieu of the M. society, and his claim was disallowed. Medical and Invalid, and General Life Assurance Society, In re, Spencer's Case, 40 L. J., Ch. 455; L. R. 6 Ch. 362; 24 L. T. 455; 19 W. R. 491.

In October, 1868, an agreement was entered into between two insurance companies, A. and B., by which A. sold its business to B., which was to undertake the liabilities and risks upon existing policies, and if required, issue new policies in exchange. A. was to be wound up voluntarily under liquidators nominated by B., and all its assets and property were to be collected by B. and distributed amongst A.'s creditors, with full power for B. to act in and use the name of A. On the 27th of November, 1868, an order was made on the petition of a creditor for compulsorily winding up A. The transferee of a policy on the life of Z. granted by A., paid the annual premium to A. in October, 1868, by whom it was received as agents for B., pursuant to resolution, and in December, 1868, sent the policy to B. for endorsement. Z. died in January, 1869, and in March the policy was indorsed with a memorandum, duly signed and sealed, that the property of B. should alone be liable for payment of the sum assured, and with a further memorandum that the claim of the transferee on the policy was admitted payable by instalments on specified days with interest. These instalments were paid in part, but an order having been made in November, 1869, to wind up B. compulsorily:—Held, that there was good consideration for the memorandum; and there was complete novation; and that the transferee was entitled to prove against B. for the balance due upon the policy. United Ports and General Insurance Co., In re, Evens' Claim, L. R. 16 Eq. 354; 29 L. T. 22.

By the constitution of the A. life insurance company the policy-holders had votes at the meetings of the company, and shared in the profits; power was also given to the company, under resolutions made at meetings of the company to amalgamate with any other company. Under resolutions duly made, the property and liabilities of the company were by a deed, in which the property and liabilities were specified, transferred to the B. insurance company :—Held, that a policy-holder in the A. company whose policy was specified in the deed of transfer had no claim on the A. company. Harman's Case, European Assurance Society, In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 332; 1 Ch. D. 326; 33 L. T. 760—C. A.

By the deed of settlement of the A. insurance company it was provided that the funds and property of the company should alone be answerable for claims on the company; provision was also made for enabling the proprietors to dissolve the company, and thereupon the directors were to obtain from some other company an undertaking to pay the claims on the A. company, and were to transfer to that other company a sufficient amount of the assets of the A. company. The A. company was accordingly dissolved, and a portion of its funds was transferred to the B. company, which covenanted to satisfy the liabilities of the A. company. Full notice of this transaction was sent to the policy-holders of the A. company; and in the policies of that company it had been declared that the funds and property of the company should alone be liable to make good the claims under the policy, and the deed of settlement was also referred to. Both companies were wound up, and came under the European Assurance Society Arbitration Acts :—Held, that the A. company had, without the consent of the policy-holders, a right to dissolve itself and transfer its liabilities to the B. company; and that a policy-holder could claim only against the B. Company. European Assurance Society, In re, Hort's Case, Grain's Case, 45 L. J., Ch. 321; 1 Ch. D. 307; 33 L. T. 766.

In cases of so-called novation of an assurance contract the question for decision is one of fact, namely, with what intent was the premium paid to a different company, or into different hands from those intended in the original policy. Ib.

The deed of settlement of the Industrial Assurance Company gave power to dissolve the company by means of a resolution passed at a general meeting and confirmed at a second general meeting, and provided that thereupon the directors, after satisfying all immediate claims on the company, should obtain from some other company an undertaking to satisfy the remainder of the claims when the time for payment should arrive, and should transfer to such other company so much of the assets as should be agreed upon as sufficient to meet such claims. In accordance with these provisions, the Industrial Company was in 1855 dissolved, and a portion of its funds transferred to the People's Provident Society, which covenanted to satisfy the liabilities of the Industrial Company. In 1851 C. effected a policy of assurance with the Industrial Company on the non-participating scale. This provided that the subscribed capital, funds and property of the company should alone be liable to answer all claims under the policy, which was made subject to the conditions of the deed of settlement. C., though a non-participating policy-holder not entitled to vote at the meetings of members, received notice of the intended amalgamation, but he received no formal notice of the completion of the amalgamation, nor was his policy endorsed by the People's Provident Society. To that society, however, he paid his premiums for fifteen years, and the receipts were made out in its name:—Held, that the amalgamation was valid and binding upon C., and that he was also bound by acquiescence. Industrial and General Life Assurance and Deposit Co., In re, Cocker's Case, 45 L. J., Ch. 822; 3 Ch. D. 1; 35 L. T. 290—C. A.

Held, also, that the deed of settlement did not mean that the assets transferred to the transferee company should be ear-marked and kept separate for the purpose of being applied only to the payment of the liabilities of the transferring company. Ib.

An insurance company, which by its deed of settlement had power to transfer its business to another company, granted an annuity by a policy signed and sealed by three of its directors, which declared that the stocks and funds of the company should during the life of the annuitant be liable to pay the annuity. Fifteen years afterwards the company transferred its business to another company, in accordance with the power contained in the deed of settlement. Both companies being in liquidation, the annuitant claimed to prove against the transferring company :—Held, that the omission from the policy of any reference to the deed of settlement did not distinguish the case from Hort's Case, supra, and that the annuitant could only prove against the transferee company. European Assurance Society, Dowse's Case, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 402; 3 Ch. D. 384; 35 L. T. 653—C. A.

Where original Company liable.]—In 1862 the business and assets of the Manchester Association were transferred to the Western Society, which was afterwards incorporated with the Albert Company. A policy-holder in the Manchester Association paid his premiums at the different offices and took receipts, which mentioned the successive changes, the last receipts being in the name of the Albert Company alone :—Held, that the receipts did not disclose enough to fix the policy-holder with knowledge of what had taken place between the companies, and that his executors were entitled to obtain a winding-up order against the Manchester Association. Manchester and London Life Assurance and Loan Association, In re, L. R. 5 Ch. 640; 23 L. T. 332; 18 W. R. 1185. Affirming 39 L. J., Ch. 595.

A life assurance society granted an annuity, charged upon the assets of the company, to the petitioner. Afterwards the company was dissolved by resolutions of the shareholders, and its assets transferred to company B. By the deed of transfer it was agreed that all the liabilities of company A. should be paid out of the assets of company B., and that company B. should indemnify company A. against them. It was also provided that both companies should use their best endeavours to induce the policy-holders and grantees of company A. to take in exchange policies and grants of company B. The petitioner received his annuity under his grant from company A. before the amalgamation, and afterwards from company B., and gave receipts in the name of company B., until that company stopped payment, but his grant was never exchanged for a grant of company B. :—Held, that he had not accepted company B. as his debtor in place of company A. Family Endowment Society, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 306; L. R. 5 Ch. 118; 21 L. T. 775; 18 W. R. 266.

G. effected three life policies with the M. society, without participation of profit, and it afterwards amalgamated with the A. company, transferring its assets and liabilities to that company. A notice of the amalgamation was sent to G.'s assignees, requesting them to send in their policies to be indorsed by the A. company. To this no reply was made. Afterwards a more specific request was made, asking them to send in the policies to be indorsed. This was done, but upon the company further asking the assignees to sign a memorandum that they agreed to the amalgamation, the assignees refused to do so, and the policies, though they had been sent in to the company, were not indorsed, but returned without any alteration. Meanwhile the premiums were paid to the A. company, which under the terms of the amalgamation was authorised to receive them. The M. company and the A. company having both been ordered to be wound up, the assignees sent in a claim against the M. company in respect of the policies :—Held, that they had not accepted the A. company in place of the M. company, and the claim was allowed. Medical and Invalid, and General Life Assurance Society, In re, Griffith's Case, 40 L. J., Ch. 464; L. R. 6 Ch. 374; 24 L. T. 455; 19 W. R. 491.

An insurance company having transferred its business to another company, a person who had purchased an annuity from the former company, declined to accept the liability of the latter company in lieu of his contract with the former :—Held, that the receipt by him of payments in respect of his annuity from the latter company was not evidence of adoption by him of the transfer, or that he regarded that company in any other light than as the agents of the former company. India and London Life Assurance Co., In re, Dyke's Case, 41 L. J., Ch. 601; L. R. 7 Ch. 651; 27 L. T. 191; 20 W. R. 790.

In 1861, C., a widow, effected a policy on her own life with the W. society "with profits, such profits to be appropriated, so as to make the policy payable during the lifetime of the assured." In 1863, the society (whose deed contained no power to do so) transferred its business to the B. association, and on this occasion a circular was sent to the policy-holders of the W. society, announcing the union of the two companies, and stating that the terms and conditions contained in the policies would remain unaltered by this arrangement; that the union of companies increases business, bonuses, &c., and that it had been arranged that in all future bonuses they should participate on an equality with the other policy-holders in the conjoint companies. The circular further offered an indorsement on the policy or a new policy in exchange. C. took no notice of this circular, but paid her premiums to the B. association, and accepted receipts from them until 1865, when the B. association transferred its business to the E. society. From that time she paid her premiums to the E. society and accepted receipts from them. In 1867 she received a circular from the E. society, announcing that a bonus had been allotted by the E. society, and that a reversionary sum had been added to her policy. She took no notice of this circular. In the winding-up she and her husband claimed on her policy against the W. society, which contended that her only claim was against the E. society :—Held, that she was entitled to rank as a creditor of the W. society. European Assurance Society Arbitration Acts, &c., In re, Conquest's Case, 45 L. J., Ch. 336; 1 Ch. D. 334; 33 L. T. 762—C. A.

V. WINDING UP.

a. Jurisdiction of Court as to.

Petition—Primâ facie Case.]—The 33 & 34 Vict. c. 61, s. 21, allows the winding-up of an insurance company on the ground that it is insolvent, taking into account its prospective liabilities, but provides that no hearing shall be given to the petitioner until a primâ facie case has been established. A petition having been answered by a fiat, the vice-chancellor held that this was equivalent to granting a hearing. On appeal to the Lord Chancellor to withdraw the fiat :—Held, that this was unnecessary, it being still open to the vice-chancellor to consider whether a primâ facie case was made. European Assurance Co., In re, 19 W. R. 881.

The practice in future will be to answer such petitions by a fiat, directing the judge to inquire whether a primâ facie case is made, so as to avoid the advertisement of the petition. Ib.

A petition was presented by two policy-holders to wind up compulsorily an insurance company which was being wound up voluntarily, containing charges of false representations and insolvency :—Held, that where a company was being wound up voluntarily it was unnecessary to consider whether a primâ facie case was stated, or to order security for costs under the Assurance Companies Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 61). British Alliance Assurance Corporation, In re, 9 Ch. D. 635; 38 L. T. 600; 26 W. R. 628.

Held, that policy-holders might present a petition under the act of 1870, although their debts did not amount to 50*l.*; that a statement that under the circumstances the company was "admittedly insolvent" was a sufficient statement that they could not pay their debts; and that the allegations of false representations, and the appointment of the secretary as provisional liquidator, were sufficient to render it just and equitable to make a winding-up order. Ib.

Held, also, that upon demurrer to a petition the counsel for the petitioner must open his case. Ib.

Under Companies Act, 1862.]—The effect of the 20 & 21 Vict. c. 80, was to leave the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110 repealed as to insurance companies formed in the interval between the passing of the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 47, and the passing of the 20 & 21 Vict. c. 80; and therefore such companies were not required to be registered; and they may be wound up as unregistered companies under the Companies Act, 1862. Bank of London and National Provincial Insurance Association, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 562; L. R. 6 Ch. 421; 19 W. R. 484.

An insurance company registered under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, resolved upon a voluntary winding-up, prior to the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, under which the company had never been registered :—Held, that such company was precluded by 25 & 26

Vict. c. 89, s. 209, from presenting a petition to wind up, either solely or in conjunction with a contributory. Waterloo Life Assurance Co., In re, 31 Beav. 586.

Under Companies Acts, 1870.]—The court has, by virtue of s. 2 of the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870, jurisdiction to wind up an unregistered mutual life assurance society under the Companies Act, 1862. Great Britain Mutual Life Assurance Society, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 10; 16 Ch. D. 246; 43 L. T. 684; 29 W. R. 202—C. A.

Liability of Policy-holders.]—But, semble, that the holders of policies in such a society are not liable to contribute to the payment of any debts; and that all that can be done in the winding-up is (after payment of the costs) to distribute the funds of the society among the policy-holders in proportion to the amounts of their respective claims. Ib.

Hearing of Petition.]—When a company, respondents to a winding-up petition, dispute the validity of the petitioner's debt they must adduce on the hearing such evidence as will shew the court that there is a question to be tried. If they fail to do this, a winding-up order ought to be made. Ib.

Scheme of Liquidation and Arrangement.]—The Albert Life Assurance Company had, during the period of its existence, absorbed a number of other similar companies, undertaking their liabilities. This company and several of the absorbed companies were ordered to be wound up. Numerous policies issued by the absorbed companies were still current, some only of the holders of these having accepted the Albert Company in lieu of the absorbed companies. In order to put an end to the liquidation, a scheme of reconstruction was proposed and accepted by large majorities, at meetings held both of the shareholders and creditors of the Albert Company, and also of the policy-holders of the absorbed companies. The outline of the scheme was, that the contributories of the Albert should pay up something more than the full amount of their shares; the contributories of the absorbed companies should pay such an additional sum as would be sufficient to raise the whole fund to the amount of the claims, less 5 per cent., and that the creditors should give up 5 per cent. of their claims. The fund thus raised was to be handed over to the trustees for a new assurance company, which was to take over all the business, and undertake to fulfil all liabilities, the trust fund being held in trust to secure payment:—Held, that as it was practically impossible to ascertain the true amount of the valid claims upon all the current policies, the court could not be judicially satisfied that majorities, in number representing three-fourths in value of the creditors of the several companies, had respectively assented to the scheme, and therefore the court had no power, under the Joint Stock Companies Arrangement Act, 1870, to sanction the scheme. Albert Life Assurance Co., In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 505; L. R. 6 Ch. 381; 24 L. T. 768; 19 W. R. 670.

Held, also, that, as regards the absorbed companies, the 95th, 159th and 160th sections of the Companies Act, 1862, did not apply. Ib.

—— Reduction of Contracts.]—Two petitions having been presented by policy-holders for the winding-up of a mutual life assurance society, the society admitted their insolvency, and a winding-up order was made on the second petition, on the ground that the validity of the first petitioner's debt was disputed. But liberty was given to the first petitioner to apply for the costs of her petition, if her claim should be ultimately established. She appealed, and before the appeal came on for hearing a committee of policy-holders was formed, who desired that the court should exercise the power given to it by s. 22 of the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870, of reducing the amount of the contracts of the society instead of making a winding-up order:—Held, that this power could not be exercised so long as the winding-up order remained, and that the order ought to be discharged, and a meeting of the policy-holders summoned in order to ascertain their wishes. Great Britain Mutual Life Assurance Society, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 10; 16 Ch. D. 246; 43 L. T. 684; 29 W. R. 202—C. A.

And the further hearing of the appeal was adjourned until after the meeting should have been held. Ib.

A petition having been presented for the winding-up of a life assurance company, an order was made under the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870, s. 22, directing a scheme to be prepared for the reduction of the contracts of the company:—Held, that in the absence of special circumstances the contracts to be included in a scheme for reduction are to be ascertained not at the time of settling the scheme, nor at the date of the order directing a scheme, but at the date of the presentation of the winding-up petition, so that no persons whose contracts have not matured into debts until after the presentation of the petition are entitled to be paid in full. Great Britain Mutual Life Assurance Society, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 506; 20 Ch. D. 351; 46 L. T. 73, 616; 30 W. R. 374—C. A.

Winding up—Scheme for Reduction of Contracts.]—On a petition for winding up an insolvent life assurance company, it was suggested that there should be an order for the reduction of the amount of the contracts of the company under s. 22 of the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870, instead of a winding-up order. The matter was referred to chambers, so that steps might be taken, by holding meetings or otherwise, to ascertain what course ought to be adopted, and the petition directed to stand over generally for the meetings to be held, the meetings of the policy-holders and shareholders to be separate. Briton Medical and General Life Assurance Co., In re, 54 L. T. 14.

b. Liability of Contributories.

Shareholders.]—An unregistered assurance society issued policies under which the assets of the company alone were liable. The company, being insolvent, was registered as an unlimited company, under the act of 1862, and immediately afterwards ordered to be wound up:—Held, that the shareholders were liable beyond the amount of their shares for the expenses of the winding-up; but that there was no liability beyond the amount of the shares for any breach of contract involved in ceasing to carry on business. Lethbridge v. Adams, 41 L. J., Ch. 710; L. R. 13 Eq. 547; 26 L. T. 547; 20 W. R. 352.

In the case of an insurance company in liquidation, whose assets are limited as regards policy-holders and unlimited as regards other creditors, s. 38, sub-s. 6, of the Companies Act, 1862, is only intended to protect the contributories as against the claims of the policy-holders, and does not affect the liability of contributories who have not compromised their liabilities, under s. 160, to pay the whole of the costs of the liquidation, although the whole of the nominal share capital has been called up. Accidental Death Insurance Co., In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 396 ; 7 Ch. D. 568 ; 26 W. R. 473.

The deed of settlement of an insurance company registered in 1854 under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, provided that every policy issued by the company should contain a proviso limiting the claims of the policy-holder to the amount of the share capital, but left the liabilities of the shareholders in other respects unlimited. All the policies issued by the company contained the required proviso. In 1868 the company was ordered to be wound up. During the liquidation the whole of the nominal share capital was called up, and several of the contributories compromised their liabilities by agreements with the liquidator in manner provided by s. 160 of the Companies Act, 1862, and rules of 1862, schedule III., form No. 50. The liquidator having, for the purpose of raising a fund for the payment of the past and future costs of the liquidation, made a further call on those contributories who had not compromised :—Held, that those contributories were not entitled to require that the amounts received under the compromises should be marshalled between the liability for costs and the liability under policies ; and that the contributories who had not compromised alone remained liable for the costs of the liquidation. Ib.

By the deed of settlement of an unregistered life assurance company, it was provided that the liability of the shareholders in respect of policies should be limited to the subscribed capital. At the time of the winding-up of the society, which happened in 1869, 9*l.* per share of the subscribed capital remained uncalled up, and in 1870 a call of this 9*l.* per share was made. In 1873 a further call of 12*l.* per share was made, it having been ascertained that a call to that amount would, with the 9*l.* per share, pay the debts of the society. Compromises were entered into by the liquidator with certain of the contributories who were unable to pay the calls in full :—Held, that where the compromise was for 9*l.* per share or less, the whole of the sum received by way of compromise was to be carried to the account of policy-holders, and that where the sum received by way of compromise amounted to more than 9*l.* per share, then a sum equivalent to 9*l.* per share was to be carried to the account of the policy-holders, and the residue was to be applied to the payment of the general creditors of the society. International Life Assurance Society, In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 88 ; 36 L. T. 914.

By a policy issued by a company on the life of an individual, it was expressly provided that no shareholder should be liable to any claims under the policy beyond the amount unpaid of his shares in the capital of the company. The company had been ordered to be wound up, and judgment had been recovered against the official manager in respect of the policy. The official manager then applied for an order for a call on those persons who were on the list of contributories of the company, sufficient to pay the amount of the judgment :—Held, that no call should be made upon any shareholders who had paid up the full amount of their shares in the capital of the company, or upon any other shareholders beyond the amount remaining unpaid upon the shares. Athenæum Life Insurance Society, In re, Prince of Wales Life and Educational Insurance Society, Ex parte, 3 De G. & J. 660 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 335 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 558 ; 7 W. R. 300.

A company granted policies of assurance, by the terms of which the assured had no claim against the shareholders beyond the amount unpaid on their shares. Under the winding-up, the assets of the company, including the full amount payable on the shares, were applied in paying the policy-holders and the general creditors pro ratâ. It was decided by the master of the rolls that the balance remaining due to the general creditors, and the costs of the winding-up, must be raised by a call on the shareholders. On appeal to vary this decision by making the costs of realising the assets a deduction from the assets, so as to throw a share of such costs on the policy-holders :—Held, that the costs of realising the assets, in the course of a winding-up by the court, ought to be treated as part of the costs of the winding-up, and to be borne wholly by the shareholders. Professional Life Assurance Co., In re, L. R. 3 Ch. 167 ; 17 L. T. 631 ; 16 W. R. 295.

Priorities.]—The deed of settlement of the company, formed under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, contained a provision that each shareholder, as between him and the other shareholders, should be liable to the debts of the company in proportion to his interest in the property of the company, but not further or otherwise, and a covenant that if any shareholder should pay a debt due from the company, the debt should be divided into as many parts as there were shares, and each shareholder should pay one or more such parts in proportion to his interest in the capital of the company, such interest to be determined by the number of his shares. It was also provided that if the company was indebted to a shareholder, the directors should pay him as if he was not a shareholder :—Held, that on the winding-up of the company, the shareholders who were creditors of the company, were entitled to be paid in full like other creditors, by means of a call on the shareholders, they being debited with the call in respect of their own shares, and that if any of the shareholders could not pay the call, the deficiency must be made up by the others. Professional Life Assurance Co., In re, supra.

By the terms of the policies granted by a company, the shareholders of the company were not to be liable further than as to their respective shares in the capital of the company. The shareholders had not paid up the full amount of their shares when the company suspended business :—Held, that those who had insured must have a right out of the funds of the company, made up as they ought to be, to receive the value of their present interest in their policies. Evans v. Coventry, 8 De G. M. & G. 835 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 400 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1225 ; 5 W. R. 436.

An assurance society granted policies both in a participating and non-participating form. The former class stipulated that the funds and property of the society should, subject to the deed of settlement, be liable to pay the sum assured, with such further sum as should, pursuant to the rules of the society, be appropriated by way of bonus or addition, with a proviso that the funds of the society should alone be liable, and negativing personal liability. The latter class stipulated that the funds and property of the society should, subject to the deed, be liable to pay the sum assured, with a proviso that the funds of the society, by the deed applicable to the payment of policies, should alone, subject to prior claims thereon, pursuant to the deed, be liable, and negativing personal liability. The deed provided that the actuary should estimate the amount of profits, that this estimate might be rejected or reduced by a meeting of shareholders, and that six-tenths of the divisible profits so ascertained should be apportioned by the actuary, as he thought fair, among the participating policy-holders:—Held, that such policy-holders were not partners. English and Irish Church and University Assurance Society, In re, 1 H. & M. 85; 8 L. T. 724; 11 W. R. 681.

Held, also, that claimants under both classes of policies were entitled to be paid out of the assets (the company being in course of winding-up) pari passu with general creditors, as to whom the liability of the shareholders was unlimited. Ib.

The deed of settlement of an assurance company provided that every policy should contain a reference to the deed, and a proviso that it should take effect only out of the funds which "should, under the provisions of the deed at the time when the liability should accrue, be at the disposal of the directors." It also directed that all sums insured should be paid three months after proof of death, that a capital fund and a life assurance fund should be formed from the subscriptions and the premiums respectively, that the latter was to be applied in payment of management, expenses, and losses on policies, and that any deficiency was to be made up by the capital fund. A policy was granted, stipulating that the funds remaining at the time of any claim or demand unapplied and undisposed of, and inapplicable to prior demands pursuant to the deed, should be liable to answer the demand, and negativing individual liability:—Held, that this constituted a charge on the funds, and that it took priority from the date of proof of death, although not payable until three months later. Athenæum Life Assurance Society, In re, Prince of Wales Life Assurance Society, Ex parte, Johns. 633; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 12.

Individual Liability.]—A policy under the seal of a company contained the following proviso: "That the policy or anything therein contained shall in no case extend or be deemed or construed to extend, to charge or render liable the respective proprietors of the company, or any of them," to any claim or demand whatsoever in respect of the policy, or of the assurance thereby made, beyond the amount of their, his or her individual share or shares in the capital stock of the company; but that the capital stock and funds of the company shall alone be charged and liable to answer all claims and demands by virtue of the assurance, or incident thereto:—Held, that the terms of the policy precluded the assured from any remedy at law against individual shareholders, and consequently, that after using due diligence to obtain satisfaction of a judgment recovered against the company in an action on such policy, by execution against their property, he was not entitled to issue execution against an individual shareholder, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, ss. 66, 68. Halket v. Merchant Traders' Insurance Co., 13 Q. B. 960; 19 L. J., Q. B. 59; 14 Jur. 222. S. P., Hassell v. Merchant Traders' Insurance Co., 4 Ex. 525; 19 L. J., Ex. 183. S. P., Athenæum Life Assurance Co., In re, 4 Kay & J. 517; 27 L. J., Ch. 798; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1137; 6 W. R. 765.

Joint Contract to Pay out of Capital Stock only.]—In an action against five persons on a policy, the declaration alleged that they were shareholders of and partners in the General Maritime Assurance Company; that the plaintiff effected a policy with the company on a ship for twelve months, by which "it was declared and agreed, by and between the company, and the assured, that the capital stock and funds of the company should alone be liable to answer and make good all claims and demands whatsoever under or by virtue of the policy; and that no proprietor of the company should be in anywise subject or liable to any claims, nor in anywise charged, by reason of the policy, beyond the amount of his shares in the capital stock of the company, it being one of the original and fundamental principles of the company that the responsibility of the individual proprietors should in all cases, and under all circumstances, be limited to their respective shares in the capital stock." Averment, that in consideration that the plaintiff paid the premium for the insurance of 1,100*l.*, and undertook to perform all things in the policy on the part of the assured to be performed, the defendants promised him that they would become insurers, and perform all things in the policy on their part as insurers to be performed; and the defendants became insurers, and subscribed the policy. The declaration averred a loss; that the capital stock and funds of the company were sufficient to pay the 1,100*l.*, but that the defendants had not paid. On the trial the plaintiff put in the deed of settlement of the company and the policy, and proved that the defendants were shareholders, and one of them, G., a director in the company. The deed of settlement recited that the company was formed for the purpose of effecting insurances on vessels, and that it was agreed that the capital should consist of 1,000,000*l.* in 100*l.* shares; that the business of the company might be carried on, although the whole of the capital of the company was not subscribed for; that the direction of the affair should be confided to a board of directors, who had power to make calls; that every policy should be signed by three directors, and they should be indemnified out of the funds of the company for all liabilities; that the directors should cause it to be stated in every policy that the subscribed capital of 1,000,000*l.* and the funds of the company should alone be liable to make good all claims upon the company in respect of such policy; that the directors signing the policy should not be responsible to a greater extent than the funds in their hands or power; and that no proprietor should be liable beyond the amount of the unpaid part of his shares. The policy purported to be made between the company and the assured, and was signed by three directors of the company, none of whom were defendants. Evidence was also given that only 75,000 shares had been subscribed for, of which 5,000 were held by the defendants and others at the time of the commencement of the suit, the remainder having become forfeited; that calls had been made to the extent of 25*l.* per share; and that the company had ceased to underwrite policies. On behalf of G. it was proved that the company had not at the time of the loss, nor since, any available funds in their hands wherewith to satisfy the plaintiff's claim:—Held, first, that the policy amounted to a joint contract that the company should pay out of their capital stock. Hallett v. Dowdall, 18 Q. B. 2; 21 L. J., Q. B. 98; 16 Jur. 462—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that the declaration shewed a joint promise by the defendants, and was therefore good. Ib.

Past Shareholders.]—A company compulsorily registered under s. 209 of the Companies Act, 1862, is in the same position as a company voluntarily registered under that act, and has all the benefits and is subject to all the liabilities which other companies have or are subject to under the act, and is therefore affected by the provisions of s. 38. Ramsay's Case, 46 L. J., Ch. 411; 35 L. T. 654; 25 W. R. 279—C. A.

Therefore a shareholder in an insurance company, compulsorily registered under s. 209, who has transferred his shares within a year before the presentation of a petition to wind up the company, is liable to be placed on the B. list of contributories as a past member under s. 38, although that section applies in terms only to companies formed under the act. Ib.

Where Transfer.]—The deed of settlement of an insurance society, originally registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Acts, and established primarily for the purpose of effecting insurances against sickness and infirmity and on lives, after stating the objects of the society, continued as follows: "And generally to make and effect insurances against all and every kind of risk, special or general, which may be effected according to law." The society, after confining its operations to life insurance for twelve years, commenced a fire insurance business in a separate department, the capital of which was raised by the issue of B. shares. Afterwards, under the belief that such issue was ultra vires, the fire business was made over to a new company, the B. shares being cancelled, and shares in the new company being allotted to the B. shareholders in lieu thereof. The new company was subsequently wound up:—Held, that the carrying on of a fire insurance business by the original society was not ultra vires; that the issue of the B. shares was valid; and that the B. shareholders were liable in the winding-up to contribute as past members. Norwich Provident Insurance Society, In re, Bath's Case, 47 L. J., Ch. 601; 8 Ch. D. 334; 38 L. T. 267; 26 W. R. 441—C. A.

Exchanging Shares for those in New Company—Other Shares paid in Cash.]—The deed of settlement of an insurance association, dated in 1856, contained clauses empowering the directors, with the sanction of general meetings, to purchase shares on behalf of the association; and to dissolve the association, and transfer the business to any other insurance company. The association was never registered; and, in 1858, it was resolved that the business should be transferred to a company; each proprietor in the association to have the option, either of being repaid in money the amount he had paid upon his association shares, or to have the company's shares allotted to him in lieu of his association shares. The transfer having been effected by deed, and the company and the association being both afterwards in liquidation:—Held, that a shareholder in the association who had for some of his association shares received the company's shares, and for others cash, was liable to be retained on the list of contributories of the association. Bank of London Assurance Association, In re, Part's Case, L. R. 10 Eq. 622; 23 L. T. 305; 18 W. R. 977.

Inrolment by Company of Persons ceasing to be Members—Non-inrolment.]—In 1844 the European Life Assurance Company obtained an act conferring on it certain powers, and enacting that when any persons should cease to be shareholders of the company, or when any other persons should be admitted as shareholders of the company, the company should within six months from the happening of such event cause to be inrolled in the High Court of Chancery a memorial of the name, residence, and description of every person so ceasing to be a shareholder, and of every person so admitted to be a member of the company, and that until such inrolment the persons whose names should appear in the then last inrolled memorial should be liable to all legal proceedings under the act as existing shareholders of the company, and should be entitled to be reimbursed out of the funds or property of the company for all losses sustained in consequence. In 1858 arrangements were made for the transfer of the business and assets of the European Company to the People's Provident Society, and a deed of amalgamation was executed, whereby, in pursuance of these arrangements, the European Company transferred its business and assets to the People's Society, which covenanted to pay and satisfy the debts and liabilities of the European Company and to indemnify the shareholders of the European Company in respect thereof. Some of the shareholders of the European Company received 8*l.* per share, and the rest (except five) received shares in the People's Society in respect of their shares in the European Company. In consideration thereof they transferred their shares in the European Company to the general manager of the People's Society. D. was one of the shareholders who thus transferred his four shares, for which he received 8*l.* a share. No memorial of the transfer was ever inrolled in chancery, nor was it registered in the books of the company. The European Company was ordered to be wound up, and D.'s name, which appeared in the last inrolled memorial in respect of the four shares, was placed on the list of contributories:—Held, that there was nothing in the act of 1844 which made D. liable to be a contributory in the winding-up of the company, and that he was entitled to have his name removed from the list of contributories. European Assurance Society Arbitration Acts, In re, Doman's Case, 45 L. J., Ch. 801; 3 Ch. D. 21; 34 L. T. 929—C. A.

Company not liable as Shareholder of Company bought up.]—The B. N. company was an insurance company established with 10*l.* shares under a deed of settlement which provided that every instrument whereby the company became liable to pay money should contain a clause limiting the liability of shareholders to the amount payable on their shares. The deed contained a power to the company, with the sanction of an extraordinary general meeting, to purchase the business of any other company of a similar nature, upon such terms as the meeting should think fit. The company resolved to purchase the business of the B. C. company, an insurance company whose capital was divided into 50*l.* shares, on each of which 5*l.* had been paid, and whose deed of settlement contained no power to sell the business. The transaction was completed by purchasing the shares of the B. C. company, which were transferred to various officers of the B. N. company. Subsequently a deed was executed by which these transferees transferred their shares to the B. N. company, and thereupon that company was entered on the register of shareholders of the B. C. company, and remained so registered for some years. This deed was never sanctioned by a general meeting of the B. N. shareholders. An order having been made for winding up the B. C. company :—Held, that the transfer of the shares to the B. N. company was ultra vires and invalid, and that the B. N. company could not be placed on the list of contributories of the B. C. company. British Commercial Insurance Co. v. British Nation Life Assurance Association, 48 L. J., Ch. 118 ; 8 Ch. D. 679 ; 39 L. T. 136 ; 27 W. R. 88—C. A.

Liability of Shareholders and participating Policy-holders inter se.]—The articles of association of an unlimited mutual insurance society provided that the company should at first consist of two classes of members, namely, shareholders, so long as there should be any, and assurance members, who were policy-holders with participation in the profits and registered as members ; and that when the shareholders should be paid off under the scheme provided for, then the company should consist of assurance members only. The shareholders were to have 6*l.* per cent. on their paid-up calls, and every three years the profits were to be calculated, and one-fourth paid to the shareholders, and the other three-fourths carried to the assurance fund and appropriated by way of bonus to the policies of the participating policy-holders who had paid five years' premiums. The company was wound up before the shareholders had been paid off, and the participating policy-holders were declared by the court to be contributories :—Held, that although the participating policy-holders were members and contributories under the special terms of the articles, they could not be called upon to contribute until the shareholders had been exhausted. The presumption of law that in the absence of express stipulation, partners must share losses in the same proportion as they share profits, held not to apply to such a case, the assured members having no direct participation in profits. Albion Life Assurance Society, In re, 16 Ch. D. 83 ; 43 L. T. 523 ; 29 W. R. 109—C. A.

—— Policy-holder who has Assigned.]—Where the constitution of a life insurance society was such that participating policy-holders were liable as contributories after shareholders, it was held on the construction of the articles that a policy-holder who had assigned his policy before the winding-up was not liable as a contributory, although no other person had been made liable to contribute in respect of his policy in his stead. Albion Life Assurance Society, In re, Brown, Ex parte, 50 L. J., Ch. 714 ; 18 Ch. D. 639 ; 45 L. T. 269 ; 30 W. R. 30.

—— Limitation of Liability — Constructive Notice.]—In consequence of a decision that the N. society (now in course of being wound up) had not been acting ultra vires in entering into "treaty" agreements, and that the R. company were entitled to prove for their claim in respect of a transaction of that nature, the official liquidator of the N. society applied by summons for an order that no call should be made in respect of such claim upon any of the contributories of the N. society who had paid up the full amount of their shares, nor upon any of such contributories beyond the amount unpaid of their shares :—Held, that on the face of the contracts no limitation of liability was expressed, neither could it be inferred by intendment of law ; and that the doctrine of constructive notice could not be extended to cover such a case as the present :—Held, also, that the shareholders in the N. society were liable for the full amount of the claim ; and that not only was the capital stock of the N. society liable for those sums, but that the liability was one which, until those sums were paid, must be without limit. Norwich Equitable Fire Assurance Society, In re, 58 L. T. 35.

c. CLAIM AND PROOF OF POLICY-HOLDERS.

Claims—When accruing.]—The policies of a company provided that the funds and property of the company, "after satisfying all assurances granted by the society previously payable, and all other prior charges on such funds on property," should alone be liable for payment of the sum assured, and that no member of the company should be liable for it beyond the amount unpaid on his shares. An order having been made for winding up the company :—Held, that a sum which had become payable on a policy before the commencement of the winding-up, but had not been paid, had no priority over the claims of policy-holders, the moneys assured by whose policies had not become payable. International Life Assurance Society, In re, M'Iver's Claim, L. R. 5 Ch. 424 ; 23 L. T. 38 ; 18 W. R. 794.

The holder of a fire policy issued by a fire insurance company is entitled, upon the company being ordered to be wound up, to prove in the winding-up for the full amount of loss covered by the policy and sustained by him through a fire which has occurred in the course of the winding-up although after the date of the winding-up order, and whether the time limited for sending in claims in the winding-up has expired or not :—A fortiori, a claim on account of a fire which has occurred after the presentation of the petition but before the order to wind up, is entitled to proof. Northern Counties of England Fire Insurance Co., In re, Macfarlane's Claim, 50 L. J., Ch. 273 ; 17 Ch. D. 337 ; 44 L. T. 299.

The winding-up of an insurance company renders it impossible for the company to perform its contract with the policy-holder, who is therefore entitled to claim damages for the breach of such contract ; and such claim is unaffected by the nonpayment on his part of the premiums payable after the presentation of the petition. Albert Life Assurance Co., In re, Cooke and Edwards' Case, 39 L. J., Ch. 257 ; L. R. 9 Eq. 703 ; 22 L. T. 92 ; 18 W. R. 426.

Amount — Terms and Priorities.]— In the winding-up of a life assurance company, a policy-holder will be allowed to prove for such sums as would be charged for the issue of a policy on the same terms as the old policy was held on, by a company whose rates of premium and circumstances are as nearly as possible similar to those of the company in liquidation. Albert Life Assurance Co., In re, Bell's Case, 39 L. J., Ch. 539; L. R. 9 Eq. 708; 22 L. T. 697; 18 W. R. 688. S. P., Warner's Case, 39 L. J., Ch. 736; 18 W. R. 1097.

Participating policy-holders are to have the benefit of any bonus declared before the winding-up; but in estimating the value of their policies, they are not to be considered entitled to future gains. Ib.

The time of claim being sent in is to fix the value of each debt. If an assured life drops after claim sent in, the death of the assured may be used as evidence of the value of the policy at the time of claim. Ib.

A policy-holder whose debt has matured before the winding-up, but has not been paid, is not entitled to priority. Ib.

The liability of the shareholders in an insurance company on the policies they issued was limited by the terms of the policies to the subscribed capital:—Held, that the cessation of business and winding-up of the company was not a breach of contract, so as to make the shareholders liable in full as for damages, for the value of such policies. Ib.

An assurance company having been ordered to be wound up:—Held, that a policy-holder was entitled to prove for the sum which a solvent assurance office, having the same rate of premiums and the same extent of proprietary capital as the company in liquidation, would require him to pay, in order to obtain a policy of the same amount and under the same conditions at the same premium. English Assurance Co., In re, Holdich's Case, 42 L. J., Ch. 612; L. R. 14 Eq. 72; 26 L. T. 415; 20 W. R. 567.

Policy-holders—General Creditors.]—By the policies of an insurance company it was declared that the stock and funds of the company should be subject and liable to pay the sum assured, with a proviso that the stock and funds of the company should be alone liable, and that no member of the company should be individually liable beyond the amount of his share in the capital stock:—Held, that these policies did not give the assured a charge on the funds of the company, so as to entitle them to priority over its general creditors. State Fire Insurance Co., In re, 1 De G. J. & S. 634; 2 N. R. 565; 33 L. J., Ch. 123; 11 W. R. 1011.

Set-off of Policy-holders.]—A policy-holder borrowed from the company in which his life was insured a sum of money, and deposited his policy with the company as security for the amount so borrowed. The company was being wound up, and the policy-holder carried in his claim for the ascertained value of his policy. The claim was allowed, and the policy-holder thereby became an admitted creditor of the company for the amount of his claim:—Held, that the policy-holder could not set off his claim against the company against the sum which he had borrowed from the company. Albert Life Assurance Co., In re, Parlby's Case, 40 L. J., Ch. 340; 19 W. R. 615—L.JJ.

The official liquidators of an assurance company admitted that a certain amount was due from the company on a claim made before the winding-up order upon the loss of a ship insured:—Held, that the policy-holder was entitled to set off against that amount sums due from him for unpaid premiums. Progress Assurance Co., In re, Bates, Ex parte, 39 L. J., Ch. 496; 22 L. T. 430; 18 W. R. 722.

Investment of Premiums to meet Claims.]—A contract by an insurance company with insurers that a certain proportion of their premiums shall be invested and appropriated for payment of their claims in priority to general liabilities of the company is legal and enforceable by the policy-holders upon the company's insolvency. British Imperial Insurance Corporation, In re, Farr's and Whittall's Claims, 47 L. J., Ch. 318.

d. OTHER MATTERS.

Appeal under European Arbitration Act.]—By the European Arbitration Act, 1875, it was enacted, that as regards any determination or order given or made before the passing of the act, no appeal should lie therefrom unless the arbitrator expressly certified in writing that by reason of differences between previous decisions on matters of principle it was desirable that an appeal should be brought:—Held, that a formal certificate from the arbitrator, and not a mere expression of opinion, was necessary to give the Court of Appeal jurisdiction; and that differences between previous decisions referred to decisions before the passing of the act. British Commercial Insurance Co. v. British Nation Life Assurance Association, 48 L. J., Ch. 118; 8 Ch. D. 679; 39 L. T. 136; 27 W. R. 88—C. A.

Amalgamation—Winding-up—Delivery back of Securities.]—By an agreement between three directors of the Albert Company and three directors of the Western Society, it was agreed that the company should take upon itself all the liabilities of the society, and that in consideration of such undertaking the society should transfer to the company all the funds and property of the society. Amongst the latter were a lease which had been taken in the name of a trustee for the society; mortgages which had been made to trustees for the society to secure sums advanced by the society to mortgagors; and re-assurance policies which had been effected by the society with other assurance companies on the lives of their own policy-holders, in order to cover part of their liability. On the execution of the agreement, the lease, mortgage deeds, and re-assurance policies were handed over, but the lease and mortgages were not, and had not since been, assigned to the company. Several policy-holders of the society did not accept the united company as their debtors. In 1869 the company, and afterwards the society, were ordered to be wound up. The indemnity of the company having thus failed:—Held, that the liquidator of the society was not entitled, on the principle of lien for unpaid purchase-money, to have delivered back to him by the liquidators of the company the lease, mortgages, and re-assurance policies which had been handed over to the company. Albert Life Assurance Co., In re, Western Life Assurance Society, Ex parte, 40 L. J., Ch. 166; L. R. 11 Eq. 164; 23 L. T. 726; 19 W. R. 321.

Liquidator not entitled to benefit of Re-insurance.]—Held, also, that the liquidator of the society was not entitled, on any principle analogous to the right of a surety who discharges the debt of his principal, to the benefit of the re-assurance policies. Ib.

Life Insurance Company—Deposit Money—Change of Investment — Jurisdiction.] — The court has power, under rule 4 of the Board of Trade Rules of 1872, to authorise an investment in annuities (class B) of the East Indian Railway Company of moneys deposited in court by an insurance company under the provisions of the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870. Blue Ribbon Life Assurance Co., In re, 59 L. J., Ch. 276; 61 L. T. 660; 38 W. R. 104.

Deposit of Fund in Court—Payment out.]—Where a petition is presented under the Life Assurance Companies Acts, 1870, 1871, and 1872, for payment out of court to the company of the statutory deposit of 20,000*l.*, the petition must contain a statement of rule 6 of the Board of Trade Rules, 1872, which provides for payment out of the deposit money so soon as it is proved to the satisfaction of the court that the life assurance fund of the company, in respect of which the deposit was made, amounts to the sum of 40,000*l.* Le Phénix, In re, 58 L. T. 512.

Letters of Administration—Presumption of Death—Notice to Insurance Company.]—Where the estate of a person whose death the court were asked to presume consisted in part of a policy of assurance on his life, the court ordered that notice of the application should be given to the insurance company. Barber, In goods of, 11 P. D. 78; 56 L. T. 894; 35 W. R. 80.

Income Tax—"Profits and Gains"—Bonuses to Participating Policy-holders.]—A life insurance company issued "participating policies," according to the terms of which any surplus which existed at the end of each quinquennial period in the hands of the company, after payment of policies falling due during such period, and provision for outstanding liabilities, was dealt with as follows: two-thirds of the surplus went to the policy-holders, who received payment thereof either by way of bonus or abatement of premiums; the remaining third of the surplus went to the company, who bore the whole expenses of the business, the portion remaining after payment of expenses constituting the only profit available for division:—Held (by Lords Blackburn and Fitzgerald, Lord Bramwell diss.), that the two-thirds returned to the policy-holders were "annual profits or gains" and assessable to income tax. Last v. London Assurance Corporation, 55 L. J., Q. B. 92; 10 App. Cas. 438; 53 L. T. 634; 34 W. R. 233; 50 J. P. 116—H. L. (E.)

Annual Profits and Gains—Mutual Insurance Company — Bonuses.]—The appellant company carried on the business of a mutual life insurance company. There were no shares or shareholders, and the members of the company were the policy-holders. The premiums paid by them were calculated at a rate which left a surplus after providing for the yearly expenditure, and this surplus was either returned to the assured as bonuses in addition to the sums insured, or was applied in reduction of premiums, or was carried over to the credit of the members of the company:—Held, that this surplus did not constitute profits or gains liable to be assessed to income tax. New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles, 14 App. Cas. 381; 59 L. J., Q. B. 291; 61 L. T. 201—H. L. (E.)

—— "Profits and Gains"—Interest arising from Investments.]—The amount of interest arising from investments made by an insurance company for the purpose of carrying on their business on which income tax had been deducted at its source amounted to more than the profits of the company for the year of assessment, but the company had during the year received interest from investments on which income tax had not been deducted at its source:—Held, that under s. 102 of the Income Tax Act, 1842 (5 & 6 Vict. c. 35), and schedule D. of s. 2 of the Income Tax Act, 1853 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 34), the company were liable to pay income tax on the interest from which income tax had not been deducted at its source. Last v. London Assurance Corporation (10 App. Cas. 438) considered. Clerical, Medical, and General Life Assurance Society v. Carter, 58 L. J., Q. B. 224; 22 Q. B. D. 444; 37 W. R. 346; 53 J. P. 276—C. A.

VI. FOREIGN COMPANIES.

Commencing Business in the United Kingdom—Payment out of Deposit—Accumulation Fund in Foreign Country.]—In the case of a petition presented under the Life Assurance Companies Acts, 1870 and 1872, and the Board of Trade rules made in pursuance of these acts, praying for payment out "to the depositors of 20,000*l.* required to be deposited in court by a foreign life assurance company before commencing business in this country," the court will make the order prayed for, notwithstanding that the Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870, s. 3, enacts that the deposit shall be returned to the company. The life assurance fund of 40,000*l.* required by the section to have been accumulated prior to the return of the deposit may consist of accumulations already existing abroad, and arising from the original business of the company. Colonial Mutual Life Assurance Society, In re, 21 Ch. D. 837; 46 L. T. 282; 30 W. R. 458.

VII. ACTIONS BY.

Disqualification of Company.]—A company registered under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, established for the following purposes:—The granting of policies upon lives or survivorships, the granting of annuities and sums during sickness, and the granting of loans at a limited rate of interest, was not disqualified, by reason of the enactments contained in 20 & 21 Vict. c. 14, ss. 27, 28, from suing either at law or in equity, unless registered under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 47, and 20 & 21 Vict. c. 14. London and Provincial Provident Society v. Ashton, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 709, 723; 7 L. T. 530; 11 W. R. 152—Ex. Ch. Overruling London Monetary Advance Co. v. Smith, 3 H. & N. 543.

Subrogation.]—A vendor contracted with a purchaser for the sale, at a specified sum, of a house, which had been insured by the vendor with an insurance company against fire. The contract contained no reference to the insurance. After the date of the contract, but before the date fixed for completion, the house was damaged by fire, and the vendor received the insurance money from the company. The purchase was afterwards completed, and the purchase-money agreed upon without any abatement on account of the damage by fire, was paid to the vendor:—Held, in an action by the company against the vendor, that the company were entitled to recover a sum equal to the insurance money from the vendor for their own benefit. Castellain v. Preston, 52 L. J., Q. B. 366; 11 Q. B. D. 380; 49 L. T. 29; 31 W. R. 557—C. A.

A. ALLOWANCE OF.

1. IN GENERAL.

The law of England does not allow interest except by statute, or contract, or the law merchant. Gosman, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 624; 17 Ch. D. 771; 45 L. T. 267; 29 W. R. 793—C. A.

Interest is only allowed at common law upon mercantile securities, or where there has been an express promise to pay interest, or where such promise is to be implied from the usage of trade (as in case of bills of exchange), or other circumstances. Foster v. Weston, 4 M. & P. 589; 6 Bing. 709; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 295. S. P., Higgins v. Sergeant, 3 D. & R. 613; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 33.

Interest given at law upon a written undertaking to pay, or notes payable on a day certain: not upon notes payable at a day uncertain, shop debts, &c. Parker v. Hutchinson, 3 Ves. 135. S. P., Page v. Newman, 9 B. & C. 378; 4 M. & Ry. 305; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 267.

No Mention in Contract.] — The contract between a railway company and a contractor provided that payments should be made monthly, as the works proceeded, on the certificates of the company's engineer. There was no stipulation in the contract in reference to the payment of interest to the contractor on any sums due, but not paid to him. The contractor made a demand in writing for a sum as the balance due to him, and claimed interest thereon:—Held, that the contractor was not entitled to interest under the contract, there being no express stipulation on the part of the company to pay any. Hill v. South Staffordshire Ry., 43 L. J., Ch. 566; L. R. 18 Eq. 154.

A. gave a warrant of attorney to confess judgment for 2,000*l.* to B., to secure payment of four bills of exchange drawn the same day by him upon, and accepted by, A., and judgment was entered up and registered the next day. The bills were renewed and deposited by B. with a creditor of his own, to secure 1,200*l.*, with a memorandum stating that the bills were secured by a judgment, but not making mention of interest or the rate of interest. Interest was paid to the creditor by B. for ten years at the rate of 12*l.* 10*s.* per cent. per annum:—Held, that as no interest was mentioned in the memorandum, it was to be taken to refer to the principal money alone, and that the memorandum created a new contract. Hodge, Ex parte, 26 L. J., Bk. 77—L.J.

No Objection to Notice on Contract—Promise to Pay.]—The fact that a customer makes no objection to an account upon which is a notice that interest will be charged after one year's credit, is not sufficient evidence of a promise to pay the interest charged therein. Edwards, In re, Williams v. Trench, 61 L. J., Ch. 22; 65 L. T. 453.

On Instalments.]—A., being indebted to B., in 800*l.* on a stated account, entered into articles for the payment of this debt by instalments of 80*l.* per annum; A., afterwards by deed, created a term of years for the payment of his debts out of the rents and profits of his estate, but not by sale or mortgage; only two of these instalments being paid, a bill was brought for recovering the rest, and on a question whether they carried interest, it was held they did; and they were accordingly decreed to be paid with interest, at 4 per cent. Kildare (Countess) v. Hopson, 4 Bro. P. C. 550.

Interest allowed upon a written agreement to pay by instalments. Parker v. Hutchinson, 3 Ves. 133.

Whether Contract implied.]—There is no rule of law that, upon a contract for the payment of money on a day certain with interest at a fixed rate, down to that day, a further contract for the continuance of the same rate of interest is to be

An implied contract to pay interest may be raised from the dealings between the parties, as where the debtor has been in the habit of paying interest upon such or similar securities. Williams, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 399.

Interest is not allowable by law upon money lent generally, without a contract for it expressed, or to be implied from the usage of trade, or from special circumstances, or from written securities for the payment of the principal at a given time. Calton v. Bragg, 15 East, 223; 13 R. R. 451. S. P., Shaw v. Picton, 7 D. & R. 201; 4 B. & C. 715; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 29; 28 R. R. 455.

A simple contract debt does not carry interest, unless by virtue of some contract express or implied, and, therefore, where one partner was indebted to another for money drawn out of the firm, and there was no evidence of any contract or custom of dealing:—Held, that he could not be charged with interest in a suit for the administration of the latter's estate. Rhodes v. Rhodes, Johns. 653; 29 L. J., Ch. 418; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 600; 8 W. R. 204.

To an action for money lent and for interest, the defendant pleaded, as to the money lent, that originally no interest was payable to the plaintiff's testator, but that afterwards it was agreed that the defendant should pay interest, and should not be required to pay the principal until the expiration of six months' notice by the testator requiring payment, and that no such notice had been given. The defendant and the testator were merchants, and in 1847 the defendant was indebted to the testator in a balance, which was thus stated, in a letter sent by the testator to the defendant in January, 1847:—

"Balance, as by my book	749	8	7
Deduct, as allowed	464	16	6
	£284	12	1

The balance settled as due by you to me payable in the course of the present year, without interest." To this statement the defendant assented. There was evidence of a usage amongst merchants to pay interest upon balances. In June, 1848, the testator agreed not to require payment of the principal until the expiration of six months' notice of payment:—Held, that as by the terms of the testator's letter, and by the mercantile usage, interest was payable at the end of 1847, there was no consideration for the testator's agreement not to require payment until after six months' notice, and that the plea was not supported. Orme v. Galloway, 9 Ex. 544; 2 C. L. R. 480; 23 L. J., Ex. 118; 2 W. R. 263.

The defendant wrote to his receiver and professional agent, "If you will remit the 400*l.*, I can give you a note for it when you come to London"; the money was remitted, but no note given:—Held, that a special contract must be implied, and interest was allowed. Rhoades v. Selsey (Lord), 2 Beav. 359.

—— Acquiescence.]—Interest was decreed on the balance of an account not signed by the party charged, where its correctness appeared to have been acquiesced in, and dealings between the parties had continued without impeaching its accuracy. Dean v. Smith, Wall. Lyn. 261.

—— Forbearance.]—An averment that money was forborne at interest implies an agreement to pay interest for the forbearance. Lawless v. Bryce, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 190.

A declaration against an executor contained, with counts charging him in his representative character, a count which stated that "the defendant, as such executor," "was indebted to the plaintiff in 200*l.* for interest for the forbearance at interest by the plaintiff to the defendant as executor, at his request, of moneys due from the defendant as executor to the plaintiff":—Held, on special demurrer, that the words "at his request" were material, and could not be rejected; that they shewed a personal contract on the part of the defendant with the plaintiff. Bignell v. Harpur, 7 D. & L. 243; 4 Ex. 773.

A widow, being pressed to pay M. a debt owing from her deceased husband to the deceased husband of M., signed and gave to M.'s attorney the following note, addressed to the attorney: "I beg you will not proceed against me for M. for the sum of 100*l.* and interest, which I owe her; and I will pay the interest, amounting to 9*l.*, due on the 23rd of December, and the principal, as soon as I am able":—Held, that this did not support a count for interest upon, and forbearance by M. to the widow, at her request, of moneys owing from her to M. Petch v. Lyon, 9 Q. B. 147; 15 L. J., Q. B. 393.

Effect of Delay.]—Where a pecuniary claim has been left by the creditor for years unascertained and unexamined, the debtor having always been ready and willing to meet the demand:—Held, that the right to interest on the principal sum did not commence until after the debt had been established, and the precise amount settled. Caledonian Ry. v. Carmichael, L. R. 2 H. L. (Sc.) 56.

Interest refused upon a stale demand. Merry v. Ryves, 1 Eden, 1. See Purcell v. Blennerhassett, 3 Jo. & Lat. 24; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 103.

If a creditor had been delayed in the recovery of his debt, by another creditor procuring the appointment of a receiver over the debtor's property, such delay will not give him a right to interest. Stirling v. Wynne, 1 Jones, 51.

Where excessive prices are charged for work, on account of slow and precarious payment, no interest ought to be allowed, for interest is only allowed to supply the want of prompt payment. Marlborough (Duke) v. Strong, 4 Bro. P. C. 539.

Where a creditor, with the view of a speedy payment, agreed to accept 4*l.* per cent. interest:—Held, that mere delay in the payment did not entitle him to charge 5*l.*, the evidence failing to shew that the delay was attributable to misconduct on the part of the debtor. Scott v. Sandeman, 1 Macq. H. L. 293.

An owner of ironworks engaged a manager, and verbally agreed to pay him 7½ per cent. of the profits, to be made up to 500*l.* in any year in which the profits should be less than that sum. For several years he was paid at the rate of 500*l.*, but it turned out that in some of the years the percentage of profits exceeded 500*l.*; and a sum consisting of the total of these overbalances had been found due to him:—Held, that, in the absence of fraud, he was not entitled to interest on each overbalance as from the year in which it was ascertained, but only to interest from the time of demand. Rishton v. Grissell, L. R. 10 Eq. 393; 18 W. R. 821.

Where a claim for interest does not rest on the express contract, as in the case of a bill of exchange not carrying interest on the face of it, diligence to procure payment of the debt seems to be a condition to the claim. Laing v. Stone, M. & M. 229, n. S. P., Cameron v. Smith, 2 B. & Ald. 308; 20 R. R. 444.

Statute-barred Debt.]—If a party is barred from recovering the principal, he is equally barred from recovering interest, which is an accessory only, and must follow the nature of the principal. Clark v. Alexander, 8 Scott (N.R.) 147; 13 L. J., C. P. 133. S. P., Parkes v. Smith, 15 Q. B. 297; 19 L. J., Q. B. 405; 14 Jur. 761.

Payment of a debt barred by the statute does not revive the party's claim for interest thereon. Collyer v. Willock, 12 Moore, 557; 4 Bing. 313; 5 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 181.

By Way of Damages.]—Interest cannot be allowed by way of damages unless it appear on the face of the instrument that interest was intended to be paid, or unless it be implied from the usage of trade, and neither alternative applied to the award. L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., 63 L. J., Ch. 93; [1893] A. C. 429; 1 R. 275; 69 L. T. 637; 58 J. P. 36—H. L. (E.)

When a person borrows money for a certain period, with interest at a certain rate down to the day named, a contract for payment of interest at that rate after the day named is not to be implied. The principal and interest, if not then paid, become a debt, and any allowance for its detention or nonpayment made by any tribunal before which the payment may be sought, is in the nature of damages, not of interest. Cook v. Fowler, 43 L. J., Ch. 855; L. R. 7 H. L. 27.

Interest can be demanded only in virtue of a contract, or where the principal money has been wrongfully withheld. Per Lord Westbury. Caledonian Ry. v. Carmichael, L. R. 2 H. L. (Sc.) 56.

The defendant agreed with the plaintiff, his tenant of a mill, to purchase at a proper valuation at the expiration of the tenancy some machinery which the plaintiff was setting up in the mill, nothing being said about interest on the purchase-money. The tenancy expired at Michaelmas, 1885. The defendant refused to purchase the machinery, and in February, 1887, the plaintiff commenced an action for specific performance, not specifically mentioning in his statement of claim either interest or damages. The action was dismissed, but in November, 1888, the Court of Appeal reversed this decision and gave a judgment directing a reference to an official referee to ascertain the value, and ordering the defendant to pay it when ascertained. The question as to interest was not raised. The plaintiff applied to vary the minutes by directing the defendant to pay the value with interest from Michaelmas, 1885. The court made the order for payment of interest only from the referee's report, and declined to decide anything further on that application, but gave leave to the plaintiff if so advised to apply after the report for payment of prior interest. The report was made in February, 1889, and the plaintiff then applied to the court to order interest from Michaelmas, 1885:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled, by way of damages for delay, to interest at 4*l.* per cent. on the amount of the valuation from Lady Day, 1886, on which day the defendant had taken possession, the plaintiff having up to that time remained in possession rent free as caretaker. Marsh v. Jones, 40 Ch. D. 563; 60 L. T. 610—C. A.

By a decree made in 1871 the defendants were declared to be liable in respect of certain minerals removed by them from under adjoining land of the plaintiffs, and an inquiry was directed as to the quantity of minerals taken, and their value, with an allowance for the cost of carrying to the pit's mouth, but none for working. After the decree the defendants died. The inquiry was continued as against their representatives, and the official referee had reported the value of the minerals taken. On the further consideration of the suit the plaintiffs claimed to be entitled to interest on the sum named in the report, with half-yearly rests:—Held, (1) that the action must be treated as in the nature of an action for money had and received, and interest could not be given as damages under s. 29 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, which did not apply to such an action; (2) that there was no fiduciary relation between the parties upon which the claim could be based; (3) that the claim ought to have been made at the trial, so that directions might have been inserted in the decree as to how the interest was to be ascertained, and it was too late to make it on the further consideration. Phillips v. Homfray, 59 L. J., Ch. 547; 44 Ch. D. 694; 62 L. T. 897; 39 W. R. 45.

Where the court holds that an applicant for shares in a company is entitled to have the contract to take shares rescinded on the ground of misrepresentations in the prospectus, the applicant is entitled to a return of the deposit he has paid with interest at the rate of 4 per cent. Metropolitan Coal Consumers' Association, In re, Wainwright's Case, 59 L. J., Ch. 281; 62 L. T. 30; 1 Meg. 463.

Interest, if it does not arise from contract, can only be awarded as damages for the wrongful withholding of money. Webster v. British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Society, 49 L. J., Ch. 769; 18 Ch. D. 169; 43 L. T. 229; 28 W. R. 818—C. A.

In whatever form a debt accrues, whether on a contract bearing interest or otherwise, if it has been wrongfully withheld from the plaintiff, he using means to obtain it, the jury may give interest upon it in the shape of damages for the unjust detention. Arnott v. Redfern, 11 Moore, 209; 3 Bing. 353; 2 Car. & P. 88; 4 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 89.

In trover for a bill of exchange, the jury may, if they think fit, include the amount of the interest in the damages, and this although there is no mention of interest in the declaration, and no special damage laid. Payne v. Pritchard, 2 Car. & P. 558.

Proceedings were taken under the Indian Insolvency Act, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 21, and the proceeds of certain goods claimed by the official assignee were paid by the assignee into the Bank of Bengal. In a suit in the High Court at Calcutta by A. against the assignee, claiming the proceeds of the goods paid into the Insolvent Court:—Held, on the court making a decree in favour of A., that the High Court, being a court of law and equity, had power to award interest on the amount, as against the official assignee. Miller v. Barlow, L. R. 3 P. C. 733; 8 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 127.

Interest will as a matter of course be given for the time that execution has been delayed by proceedings in error. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. v. Gidlow, 45 L. J., Ex. 625; L. R. 7 H. L. 517; 32 L. T. 573; 24 W. R. 144.

Interest ordered to be paid upon a debt not in its nature bearing interest, vexatiously withheld by a husband from the executor of his deceased wife. Meredith v. Bowen, 1 Keen, 270.

Payment for Goods by Bill of Exchange.]—Where goods are sold and delivered upon an agreement by the vendee to pay for them by a bill at a certain date, as interest would have run upon such bill if given, it may be recovered in an action for the price of the goods brought after the time when such bill would have become due; and it may be recovered as part of the estimated value of the goods upon a count for goods sold and delivered. Marshall v. Poole, 13 East, 98; 12 R. R. 310. S. P., Porter v. Palsgrave, 3 Camp. 472.

If goods are sold to be paid for by a bill of exchange, in an action by the vendor against the purchaser for not giving a bill accordingly, interest will be allowed from the time the bill, if given, would have become due, whether the defendant has or has not accepted the goods. Boyce v. Warburton, 2 Camp. 480.

Where goods are sold and delivered, to be paid for by a bill at a certain date, if the bill is not given, interest on the price, from the time when the bill would have become due, may be recovered as part of the estimated value of the goods, on a count for goods sold and delivered. Farr v. Ward, 3 M. & W. 25; 6 D. P. C. 163; Mur. & H. 274.

Where goods were sold, to be paid for by a bill at a certain date, the price should bear interest from the day when the bill would have been due, and might be recovered as damages on a count for the nondelivery or nonpayment of the bill. Slack v. Lowell, 3 Taunt. 157.

In January, 1837, a carriage was sold and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant. In April following the defendant wrote to the plaintiff as follows:—"The document you have sent me appears to be in the nature of a bill, and being payable to your order, is good in the market; just what I wished to avoid. The document I have wished to give you was simply my promissory note, payable to yourself," &c.:—Held, that this was some evidence to go to the jury of an agreement to pay for the goods by a bill or a note, and therefore that the jury might give interest on the price as part of the damages. Davis v. Smyth, 8 M. & W. 399; 10 L. J., Ex. 473.

The defendant wrote to his receiver and professional agent as follows:—"If you will remit the 400*l*. I can give you a note for it when you come to London." The money was advanced, but no note was signed:—Held, that a special contract must be inferred; and that interest was payable by the defendant. Rhoades v. Selsey (Lord), 2 Beav. 359.

Agreement to Return Goods or Pay Interest.]—Where a defendant, who had contracted for jewellery, agreed to return it in a year, and if he did not do so, to pay a certain price for it, with interest; and the jewellery not having been returned, the plaintiff brought an action for the amount, and the declaration contained counts for goods sold and delivered, and a count for interest on money due and forborne; and the jury found a verdict for the sum demanded, with interest; the court refused to disturb it, or order the damages to be reduced. Harrison v. Allen, 2 Bing. 4; 9 Moore, 28; 1 Car. & P. 235; 2 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 97.

Stakeholder.]—The parties to a suit in equity restrained an insurance company to retain in its possession, during the progress of the suit, moneys due by the company to one of the parties:—Held, that the company was merely acting as stakeholder, and, in such capacity, was not liable to pay interest upon the said sums while so remaining in its possession. Farmer v. Farmer, 15 W. R. 371.

Deposit at Bank.]—A banker was not (before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28) liable to pay interest upon money deposited, although at the time of the deposit it had been declared, that interest should not be payable upon a certain event which did not happen. Edwards v. Vere, 2 N. & M. 120; 5 B. & Ad. 282; 2 L. J., K. B. 190.

If the balance of a banking account remains overdue after the bankruptcy of the banker, his assignees are entitled to recover interest on such balance, as well for the period which has elapsed since the bankruptcy as for that which had elapsed before it. Pott v. Bevan, 8 Man. & G. 604; 8 Scott (N.R.) 319; 13 L. J., C. P. 187; 8 Jur. 560. S. C., at Nisi Prius, 1 Car. & K. 335.

Bank Notes.]—Interest was not allowed on the notes of a banking company where the notes were payable on demand, and no demand for payment had been made before the company was ordered to be wound up. Herefordshire Banking Co., In re, 36 L. J. Ch., 806; L. R. 2 Eq. 250; 17 L. T. 58; 15 W. R. 1056.

No Postponement of Demand.]—A stipulation to pay interest does not postpone the demand; but it is to compel punctual payment, or to obtain compensation for the delay. Frankfort v. Thorpe, 2 Ball & B. 381.

Condition Precedent to Further Credit.]—A plaintiff agreed to supply the defendant with a quantity of bricks upon the following terms: terms of payment four months' account, and at the end of four months a settlement shall be made, and eight months longer will be given on your paying interest on the amount, at the rate of 5*l*. per cent.; and if a further three months is required, it will be given on your paying the current rate of interest on the amount:—Held, that the payment of interest was not a condition precedent to the defendant's having the eight months' and three months' further credit. Dodd v. Ponsford, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 324.

Time of Payment for Goods.]—Though an agreement for the sale of goods, which were afterwards delivered, gives a certain day of payment for the price, interest does not run upon the sum due from that day. Gordon v Swan, 12 East, 419; 2 Camp. 429; 11 R. R. 758, n. But see Chalie v. York (Duke), 6 Esp. 45.

In a contract for the sale of goods, if any particular time is limited for payment of the price, the vendor is entitled to interest on the price from that time. Mountford v. Willes, 2 Bos. & P. 337.

Contract of Indemnity.]—Two persons having jointly and severally granted an annuity, and mutually covenanted that each should pay one moiety, and indemnify the other against all "actions, suits, costs, charges, damages, demands, sums of money and expenses," which might be incurred by reason of the nonpayment thereof, one who on the insolvency of the other had made payments on account of his moiety, is not entitled to interest on such payments. Bell v. Free, 1 Swan. 90 ; 1 Wils. Ch. 51 ; 18 R. R. 153.

A. covenants to indemnify lands settled on B. from certain debts, the interest of which B. is afterwards obliged to pay; B. is entitled under the covenant to come against the estate of A. for the sums so paid for interest, together with interest thereon. Fergus v. Gore, 1 Sch. & Lef. 107.

A surety is entitled to interest upon the sum which he has been compelled by the default of his principal to pay. Petre v. Duncombe, 2 L. M. & P. 107 ; 20 L. J., Q. B. 242 ; 15 Jur. 86.

The plaintiff (as surety) and defendant having covenanted to pay A. an annuity, the defendant, by way of indemnity to the plaintiff, covenanted with him that he would pay A. the annuity, and observe the covenants of the annuity deed, and also conveyed to the plaintiff real estates, with power by sale or mortgage to raise adequate sums to indemnify him against all costs, charges, damages and expenses which he should incur by his being surety. The plaintiff was compelled to pay the annuity, and after several payments, an account containing these was submitted to the defendant, with interest charged upon them at the rate of 5*l.* per cent., and a balance stated, which the defendant acknowledged to be correct, and "recoverable under the trusts of the deed of indemnity." In an action upon the covenant of indemnity, to recover these and subsequent sums paid by the plaintiff :—Held, that interest upon the payments was recoverable as damages. Ib.

It being proved to be the common and almost invariable practice of bill brokers in the city of London, not to indorse each bill of exchange which they have discounted for a customer when they rediscount it with their bankers, but to give to the bankers a general guarantee for all bills which they rediscount with them :—Held, that when an accommodation bill is drawn and accepted for the purpose of raising money for the drawer and the acceptor, the drawer in discounting the bill with bill brokers in the city of London has an implied authority from the acceptor to deal with them in the ordinary course of their business, and, consequently, that the bill brokers have an implied authority from the acceptor to make themselves liable on the bill under their guarantee to their bankers, and are, in the event of the bankruptcy of the acceptor, entitled to prove against his estate for what they have paid to the bankers in respect of the bill under their guarantee. Held, also, that the bill brokers are entitled to prove against the estate of the acceptor for interest upon the amount which they have paid under their guarantee. Petre v. Duncombe (2 L. M. & P. 107) and Hitchman v. Stewart (3 Drew. 271) approved and followed. Bishop, Ex parte, Fox, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 18 ; 15 Ch. D. 400 ; 43 L. T. 165 ; 29 W. R. 144—C. A.

Agreement for Loan.]—An agreement for a loan, provided that the borrower should pay to the lender interest on the sum agreed to be advanced, from a day specified until the completion of the loan, or until it should be broken off and such interest paid ; the loan having been broken off and the interest left unpaid :—Held, that the borrower was only liable for interest down to the day of the breaking off of the loan. Cairnes v. Lambert, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 564.

Account stated.]—In an action to recover the balance of an account, interest will not be allowed, unless it appears from the account itself that interest has been allowed on former balances, which proves the mode of dealing between the parties. Nichol v. Thompson, 1 Camp. 52, n.

Where money due on a balance of accounts, is awarded to be paid on a particular day, at a particular place, if duly demanded there on the day, it carries interest afterwards. Pinhorn v. Tuckington, 3 Camp. 468.

The mere act of striking the balance of an account between two parties, for goods sold, does not entitle the party in whose favour the balance is, to interest from that time, unless the money then was to be paid. Chalie v. York (Duke), 6 Esp. 45.

Interest is due on an account stated for money lent. Blaney v. Hendrick, 2 W. Bl. 761 ; 3 Wils. 205.

In an action upon an account stated between merchant and merchant the jury may give interest from the day the account was stated. Ib.

No interest on the balance of a stated account is provable under a commission, unless by express contract. Furneaux, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 219.

Equity will allow interest upon a gross sum laid out by one merchant for another, though there was an account current between them. Omichund v. Barker, Ridgw. 285.

Work and Labour.]—In an action for work and labour and money paid, the jury may in their verdict calculate interest on the money really advanced, but not on the damages for the work and labour. Trelawney v. Thomas, 1 H. Bl. 303.

Although the jury on the execution of a writ of inquiry cannot give interest in an action for work and labour, yet, where they have deducted on the whole amount of the plaintiff's demand 10*l.* per cent., in conformity with an agreement between the parties that such deduction should be made for ready money, they may reallow the plaintiff a proportional part of that deduction, on the balance found to be due to him, and which had remained for a considerable time unpaid. Milsom v. Hayward, 9 Price, 134.

Money had and received.]—Independently of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, interest is not recoverable in an action for money had and received. Fruhling v. Schroeder, 2 Scott, 143 ; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 77 ; 4 L. J., C. P. 290.

Money Paid.]—Where the plaintiff expends money at the request of the defendant, he cannot recover interest, unless there is a contract to pay it. Carr v. Edwards, 3 Stark. 132. S. P., Hicks v. Mareco, 5 Car. & P. 498. And see Tuppenden v. Randall, 2 Bos. & P. 467 ; 5 R. R. 662.

In Admiralty Division.]—In an action in the Admiralty Division, which could not, prior to the Judicature Acts, have been tried in the Admiralty Court, the defendant made no objection to the jurisdiction, and interest was, according to the practice in the Admiralty registry, allowed on the assessed damages from the time when the plaintiffs' claim arose. In another action transferred by consent, after verdict for the plaintiff, to the Admiralty Division for the assessment of the damages by the registrar and merchants, the same practice was followed in regard to the interest:—Held, that interest on the damages was properly awarded by the registrar on the ground that the parties, in both cases, having proceeded on the understanding that the Admiralty practice should apply, had impliedly consented to abide by such practice. The Gertrude, The Baron Aberdare, 13 P. D. 105; 59 L. T. 251; 36 W. R. 616; 6 Asp. M. C. 315—C. A.

Since the incorporation of the High Court of Admiralty in the High Court of Justice, an award of salvage is a judgment debt, and as such bears interest from the date of entry of judgment, the taxed costs bearing interest from the date of signing of the allocatur. The Jones Brothers, 46 L. J., Adm. 75; 37 L. T. 164.

In a collision action in rem not instituted till twelve years after the collision, the court allowed interest for twelve years on the damages awarded. The Kong Magnus, [1891] P. 223; 65 L. T. 231.

In all cases where the liability of the owner is limited, the court will give interest on the limited amount from the time of the collision. The Northumbria, 39 L. J., Adm. 3; L. R. 3 Adm. 6; 21 L. T. 681; 18 W. R. 188.

2. Under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28.

Written Instrument must be the Contract.]—The written instrument must be itself the contract by which the debt is payable, and, therefore, a written application for a loan till a fixed day, is not an instrument by virtue of which money is payable within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, so as to enable a jury to give interest as damages, though the loan is made on the terms of the application. Taylor v. Holt, 3 H. & C. 452; 34 L. J., Ex. 1; 11 L. T. 347; 13 W. R. 78.

Sums certain Payable at a certain Time—Demand with Notice that Interest will be claimed.]—An award was made by which it was directed that monthly accounts should be made up and completed within a reasonable period and as early as possible; for example, the February accounts were to be exchanged in May, and payment of not less than 75 per cent. of the balance appearing to be due on the face of the accounts so exchanged was to be made as soon after 1st June as possible, and not later than 15th June. The accounts were to be verified by the end of June, and failing verification within two months from the date of the exchange, the payments on account were to cease until such verification was completed:—Held, that interest could not be allowed under Lord Tenterden's Act (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42), s. 28, on the balances appearing to be due on the face of the accounts, as (i.) there was under the award no sum certain payable at a certain time by virtue of a written instrument; (ii.) nothing had been done equivalent to a demand for the amounts with notice that interest would be claimed. L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., 63 L. J., Ch. 93; [1893] A. C. 429; 1 R. 275; 69 L. T. 637; 58 J. P. 36—H. L. (E.)

Interest on sums of money cannot properly be allowed by a jury on the trial of an issue, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, where the sums are not payable by virtue of any written instrument at a certain time, or where no demand of payment in writing within the meaning of the act has been made. Harper v. Williams, 4 Q. B. 219; 12 L. J., Q. B., 227.

Sum Payable at Time certain.]—By charter-party a ship was to load from the charterer's agents, a full and complete lading, and proceed to London, and discharge there, a lump sum freight of 5,000*l.* to be paid after entire discharge and right delivery of the cargo, in cash, two months after the date of the ship's report inwards at the custom-house:—Held, that the shipowner was not entitled to interest, as the principal sum was not payable at a time certain. Merchant Shipping Co. v. Armitage, 43 L. J., Q. B. 24; L. R. 9 Q. B. 99; 29 L. T. 809—Ex. Ch. Reversing 22 W. R. 11. S. P., L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., supra.

In order to entitle a creditor, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, to interest on a debt from the time when the debt was payable, "if such debt be payable by virtue of some written instrument at a certain time," it is not necessary that the day for the payment should be mentioned in the instrument; it is sufficient if a time or event be fixed, the date of which can be ascertained afterwards. Duncombe v. Brighton Club and Norfolk Hotel Co., 44 L. J., Q. B. 216; L. R. 10 Q. B. 371; 32 L. T. 863; 23 W. R. 795.

Therefore, where a person supplied furniture on the written terms one-third in cash, and bills at six and twelve months for the balance:—Held, that the case was within the section, and he was entitled to interest on the one-third from the time the goods were delivered. Ib.

To entitle a jury to give interest as damages under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, it is not necessary that the person claiming interest should have demanded payment of a sum certain at a time certain; it is enough that the demand should be of a sum and at a time which can be reasonably rendered certain. Geake v. Ross, 44 L. J., C. P. 315; 32 L. T. 666; 23 W. R. 658.

The contract between a railway company and a contractor provided that payments should be made monthly, as the works proceeded, on the certificates of the company's engineer. There was no stipulation in the contract in reference to the payment of interest to the contractor on any sums due, but not paid to him. The contractor made a demand in writing for a sum as the balance due to him, and claimed interest thereon. His accounts were disputed, but on a bill filed by him against the company, the result shewed that he was entitled to a balance less than one-half of the sum which he had claimed to be due from the company:—Held, that the contractor was not entitled to interest under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, the demand in writing for payment not being of a sum certain payable at a certain time. Hill v. South Staffordshire Ry., 43 L. J., Ch. 556; L. R. 18 Eq. 154.

An instrument for securing money lent, whereby the borrower promised to pay the creditor 135*l.* in one month after his arrival in England, carries no interest. Page v. Newman, 4 M. & Ry. 305; 9 B. & C. 378; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 267.

A sum certain payable under a written instrument so many days after death is a sum payable at a certain time within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, and therefore carries interest after the period fixed for payment has expired. Horner, In re, Fooks v. Horner, 65 L. J., Ch. 694; [1896] 2 Ch. 188; 74 L. T. 686; 44 W. R. 556.

Demand in Writing—What sufficient.]—In May, 1872, a country solicitor commenced a suit against his London agent, claiming an account and taxation of the bills of costs between them. The defendant filed his answer in October, 1872, and thereby alleged a large balance due to him, and claimed interest thereon. He had also, in 1869, furnished the plaintiff with an account which contained items for interest. In 1875 a copy of the account was inclosed in a letter which referred to the account, but made no formal demand of payment, and which was signed by a firm of solicitors as his agents:—Held, that neither the answer nor the letter inclosing the account was a sufficient demand in writing or notice within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28. Ward v. Eyre, 49 L. J., Ch. 657; 15 Ch. D. 130; 43 L. T. 525; 28 W. R. 712—C. A.

A claim for interest made in a writ for the first time is not such a demand in writing of interest as is required by s. 28 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42. Rhymney Ry. v. Rhymney Iron Co., 59 L. J., Q. B. 414; 25 Q. B. D. 146; 63 L. T. 407; 38 W. R. 764—C. A.

The plaintiff, having for some years supplied coal to an unregistered mining company, wrote a letter to the defendant, who was a shareholder, containing the following passages: "I feel it my duty to write to you about my claim on this company. They owe me, for balance of coal account and interest, over 1,100*l*. . . . Now, I must ask you the plain question, why is not my account paid? . . . I must now give you notice that if my account with this mine be not settled on or before the 1st day of November next, I shall instruct my solicitor to take the necessary proceedings to recover the money this company owes me":—Held, a sufficient demand within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, to justify a jury giving interest from the date of such letter. Geake v. Ross, 44 L. J., C. P. 315; 32 L. T. 666; 23 W. R. 658.

Before action brought, the plaintiff, by letter to the defendant, demanded repayment of the whole of the deposits which he had paid on shares in a company, which afterwards proved an abortive undertaking, adding that he should expect to be paid 5*l*. per cent. interest from a time specified, which was prior to the date of the letter:—Held, a sufficient demand of payment within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, to entitle the jury to give interest from the date of the demand until the time of payment. Londesborough (Lord) v. Mowatt, 4 El. & Bl. 1; 2 C. A notice of a call on a contributory under a voluntary winding-up, under the supervision of the court, stated that, if the call was not paid at the time appointed, interest would be charged thereon at the rate of 5 per cent. The articles provided for interest on calls:—Held, that the notice that interest would be charged came within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28; and the court ordered the contributory to pay the call with interest thereon up to the date of payment. Lintott, Ex parte, Overend, Gurney & Co., In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 510; L. R. 4 Eq. 184; 16 L. T. 228; 15 W. R. 617.

A general intimation upon a tradesman's account that interest would be charged after one year's credit cannot be considered as referring to each item in the account, and is not a sufficient notice claiming interest within s. 28 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42. Edwards, In re, Williams v. Trench, 61 L. J., Ch. 22; 65 L. T. 453.

—— Rate of.]—Interest at 4*l*. per cent. will be allowed on the amount for a demand for work and labour in an administration suit in equity, from the time when the demand for interest was made, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28. Mildmay v. Methuen, 3 Drew. 91.

—— At what Period to be Given.]—A declaration, after reciting an agreement, dated 27th of April, 1840, between the plaintiff and the defendant, and that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 60*l*., to be repaid with interest, stated the agreement thus: That the sum of 60*l*. shall remain in the hands of the defendant from the date hereof, for one whole year; that, at the expiration of that period (if the interest shall be then paid, and no notice be then given to call in the same), the 60*l*. shall continue in the hands of the defendant for another year, and so on from year to year, until notice in writing shall be given by the plaintiff to call in the same; that twelve calendar months' notice in writing shall be given to call in the 60*l*., and that, at the expiration of the notice, the same shall be paid by instalments of 10*l*. every third month, until the whole amount be paid, the first payment of 10*l*. to be made at the expiration of fifteen months from the date of the notice, so that the whole amount of 60*l*. shall be paid by the end of two years and six months from the date of the notice. The declaration stated that, on the 29th of May, 1846, a notice in writing of that date was served upon the defendant, to call in the 60*l*., and alleged that, although twelve calendar months from the date of service of the notice had elapsed before action, and although six months from the expiration of the twelve calendar months had also elapsed before the action, and although two instalments had become due and payable from the defendant, yet the defendant had not paid the two instalments:—Held, that the notice to pay the principal sum might be given at any period of the year, and that the payment of the instalments was to be calculated from the date of the notice, and not from the end of the current year, under the agreement. Brown v. Hartill, 2 Ex. 846; 17 L. J., Ex. 278.

In what Cases.]—By a decree made in 1871, the defendants were declared liable in respect of coal wrongfully removed by them from under the land of the plaintiffs, and an inquiry was directed as to the quantity and value of the coal so taken. After the decree the defendants died, and the inquiry was continued against their representatives. In 1889 the official referee reported the value of the minerals taken. In 1890, on the further consideration of the action, the plaintiffs claimed to be entitled to interest on the amount so found:—Held, first, that the action was not an action for trover or trespass de bonis asportatis, and that interest could not be claimed under s. 29 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42; secondly, that assuming interest might have been awarded by the decree on the theory that this was an equitable action to compel a wrongdoer to account for benefits accruing to his estate by reason of his wrongful act, the plaintiffs' claim was barred by lapse of time. Phillips v. Homfray, 61 L. J., Ch. 210; [1892] 1 Ch. 465; 66 L. T. 657—C. A.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, does not apply to suits on bonds given to secure an annuity. Cross v. Bedingfield, 2 Sim. 35 ; 10 L. J., Ch. 219.

The H. and S. railway company having agreed to let its line to the N. E. company, which had taken possession under the agreement, filed a specific performance bill against it. Rent was due from the N. E. company to the H. and S. company, and the lessee company gave the lessor company notice that the money would be paid into court, whereupon the lessor company gave the lessee company notice that unless the amount were paid, interest would be claimed under the 28th section of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42. The defendants obtained ex parte an order that they might be at liberty to pay the rent into court. The money was paid into court, and the lessor company presented a petition for its payment out, and that the lessee company should pay interest thereupon :—Held, that they thereby obstructed the recovery of interest at law, and that the court had jurisdiction to order payment of interest :—Held, also, that the lessor company was entitled to interest on the amount paid into court, as such payment (which was an abuse of the process of the court) had defeated its right to interest under the statute, the 28th section giving a title to interest in respect of a debt for which an action is brought. Hull and Selby Ry. v. N. E. Ry., 5 De G. M. & G. 872 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 109 ; 3 W. R. 129.

When by a contract a sum of money is payable at a time certain, and upon a sum to be ascertained on a certain date, but a dispute occurs as to the amount which is settled by the court, interest is payable under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42. Mackintosh v. G. W. Ry., 4 Giff. 683.

Upon the winding-up of a company under the direction of the court, interest will be allowed on simple contract debts from the date of the debt, out of calls made upon contributories, in any case where a jury might have given interest in the shape of damages, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42. Times Insurance Co., Ex parte, State Fire Insurance Co., In re, 34 L. J., Ch. 436 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1176 ; 11 L. T. 489 ; 13 W. R. 152.

Courts of equity are not limited by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 42, s. 28, as to allowance of interest. Spartali v. Constadini, 20 W. R. 823 ; 21 W. R. 116.

B. RATE AND COMPUTATION.

Rate — Allowance by Court.] — There is no general rule as to the rate of interest the court will allow on repayment of consideration-money expressed in an absolute assignment, which is treated only as a security for such consideration-money ; and where the assignee of a reversionary interest in a trust fund was the solicitor to the trust estate, and there was evidence of the assignment having been at an under value, the court allowed interest at 5 per cent. Unsworth, In re, 2 Drew. & Sm. 337 ; 13 W. R. 448.

Where default has been made in performance of a covenant to pay a sum of money, the court will allow interest at 5*l.* per cent. Knapp v. Burnaby, 30 L. J., Ch. 844 ; 5 L. T. 52 ; 9 W. R. 765.

The usual rate at which interest ought to be calculated in administration proceedings is now 3 per cent. per annum. The old rate of 4 per cent. ought to be abandoned. Goodenough, In re, Marland v, Williams, 65 L. J., Ch. 71 ; [1895] 2 Ch. 537 ; 13 R. 454 ; 73 L. T. 152 ; 44 W. R. 44. And see Cleveland's (Duke) Estate, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 29 ; [1895] 2 Ch. 542 ; 13 R. 715 ; 73 L. T. 313. S. P., Lambert, In re, Moore v. Middleton, 66 L. J., Ch. 624 ; [1897] 2 Ch. 169 ; 76 L. T. 752 ; 45 W. R. 661.

Interest directed to be computed at 5 per cent., the Lord Chancellor Bacon observing he had always been of opinion that a party withholding money from a person entitled to it ought to pay the person thus injured the interest which he might have made of it if it had been paid before. Burnell v. Brown, 1 Jac. & Walk. 175 ; 21 R. R. 136.

Though by a deed 5*l.* per cent. per annum was agreed to be allowed, yet it appearing that the money had been placed in the government funds, which yielded but 4 per cent., the court reduced the interest to 4 per cent. Lechmere v. Carlisle, 3 P. W. 227.

A debt by covenant in marriage articles, and no mention of interest, the court would not reduce it lower than 5 per cent. Swynfen v. Scawen, 1 Ves. 99 ; Dick. 117.

The testator covenanted to pay a sum of money to trustees, on the trusts of his settlement. He made default :—Held, that his estate was liable to pay 4 and not 5 per cent. interest. Smith v. Copleston, 11 Beav. 482.

Interest decreed to the full amount produced by a fund wrongfully withheld from the proprietor, at 4 per cent. upon a demand, established as a debt against the funds of others. Orford (Earl) v. Churchill, 3 Ves. & B. 59.

Where a creditor, with the view of a speedy payment, agreed to accept 4*l.* per cent. interest : —Held, that mere delay in the payment did not entitle him to charge 5*l.* ; the evidence failing to shew that the delay was attributable to misconduct on the part of the debtor. Scott v. Sandeman, 1 Macq. H. L. 293.

—— Special Rate for certain Time.] — An owner of a vessel mortgaged it as a security for a debt, with a proviso for redemption, on payment of the principal and interest at the rate of 10*l.* per cent. in six months. The principal not having been paid at that time :—Held, that interest continued payable at the rate of 10*l.* per cent. Morgan v. Jones, 8 Ex. 620 ; 22 L. J., Ex. 232.

In an action against the drawer of a bill for 200*l.*, with 10*l.* per cent. interest :—Held, that the holder might recover interest at 10*l.* per cent. from the time when the bill became due, as well as for the time during which it was running. Keene v. Keene, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 144 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 88.

Although the rate of interest agreed on for the time certain is usually adopted as the proper measure of the damages for the subsequent delay, the tribunal may look at all the circumstances of the case, and award such a rate of interest as shall appear fair and reasonable. Cook v. Fowler, 43 L. J., Ch. 855 ; L. R. 7 H. L. 27.

When the holder of a warrant of attorney to enter judgment for a fixed sum on a day named, with interest at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. per month and costs, did not enter up judgment, and did not, the grantor of the instrument having died, make any definite claim against his debtor's estate for the space of four years and upwards :—Held, that the tribunal before whom the claim at last came, was justified in awarding by way of damages such a rate of interest as the holder of the warrant of attorney would have been entitled to, according to the ordinary rule of the Court of Chancery, had he entered up judgment on the day named in the defeasance to the warrant of attorney, namely, at the rate of 4 per cent. Ib.

There is no rule of law that, upon a contract for the payment of money on a day certain, with interest at a fixed rate, down to that day, a farther contract for the continuance of the same rate of interest is to be implied. Ib.

—— Admission of Rate by Debtor.]—Where a surety had been compelled to make certain payments through default of the principal debtor, and an account containing these was submitted to the debtor with interest charged upon them at the rate of 5*l.* per cent., and a balance stated which the debtor acknowledged to be correct and recoverable "under the trusts of the deed of indemnity":—Held, in estimating the damages, that the jury might take into consideration the rate of interest stated in the account approved of by the debtor. Petre v. Duncombe, 2 L. M. & P. 107; 20 L. J., Q. B. 242; 15 Jur. 86.

—— 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28.]—Rate of interest payable under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, discussed. L. C. & D. Ry. v. S. E. Ry., 61 L. J., Ch. 294; [1892] 1 Ch. 120; 65 L. T. 722; 40 W. R. 194—C. A. See S. C., in H. L. ante, col. 165.

Interest at 4 per cent. will be allowed on the amount of a demand for work and labour in an administration suit in equity, from the time when the demand for interest was made, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 28. Mildmay v. Methuen, 3 Drew. 91.

—— Judgment Debt.]—The effect of s. 17 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, is that interest at the rate of 4 per cent. is a debt necessarily attached to every judgment debt, and recoverable at law as a debt; and the judgment creditor is not confined to the remedy by execution mentioned in the section. Therefore, where, in the case of a deceased insolvent debtor who became insolvent before 1869, a sum of money subsequently came to the hands of the assignee, out of which the principal of all the debts entered in the debtor's schedule was paid, it was held that the judgment debts were not satisfied within the meaning of s. 92 (since repealed) of that act until interest was paid, and the assignee was ordered to pay interest before handing over any surplus to the representatives of the insolvent. Lewis, Ex parte, Clagett, In re, 36 W. R. 653—C. A.

From Demand of Debt.]—Under a written contract for a sum of money, payable on demand, or a day certain, interest is in equity, as at law, payable from the time of demand made, or from the fixed period of payment; interest at 5 per cent. under a contract to give promissory notes. Lowndes v. Collens, 17 Ves. 27.

On dividend being withheld, assignees ordered to pay it, with 5 per cent. interest from time of application to them for payment. Story, Ex parte, Johnson, In re, 4 Deac. & C. 504; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 54; 4 L. J., Bk. 11.

Where debt becomes due, and demand is made, and refusal, equity will give interest, although not a penal bill. Anon., 2 Eq. Abr. 470.

An owner of ironworks engaged a manager, and verbally agreed to pay him 7½ per cent. of the profits, to be made up to 500*l.* in any year in which the profits should be less than that sum. For several years he was paid at the rate of 500*l.*, but it turned out that in some of the years the percentage of profits exceeded 500*l.*; and a sum consisting of the total of these overbalances had been found due to him:—Held, that, in the absence of fraud, he was not entitled to interest on each overbalance as from the year in which it was ascertained, but only to interest from the time of demand. Rishton v. Grissell, L. R. 10 Eq. 393; 18 W. R. 821.

A written undertaking to pay at a day certain, or on demand as a promissory note, carries interest from the day, or the demand, as at law, it is given by way of damages. Upton v. Ferrers (Lord), 5 Ves. 801.

Action on Covenant—Date of Writ.]—A. covenanted to pay B. 270*l.* on the 15th December, with interest up to that time. He did not do so, and B. brought an action laying his damages at 10*l.*:—Held, that B. could not recover any more than the principal, the interest up to the 15th December, and 10*l.* more, although the interest up to the time of the action amounted to a larger sum. Watkins v. Morgan, 6 Car. & P. 661.

On Scotch Judgment.]—Where a Scotch decree adjudged interest to be paid but did not fix the time from which it was to run:—Held, that it was payable from the day of citation. Douglas v. Forrest, 1 M. & P. 663; 4 Bing. 686; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 157; 29 R. R. 695.

C. COMPOUND INTEREST.

Contract or Custom.]—There cannot be a title to compound interest without a contract express or implied, or custom. Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Cl. & F. 121.

Validity of Contract.]—By the law of England, a contract for compound interest is not valid, except in mercantile accounts current for mutual transactions. Ib.

Though compound interest cannot be taken under an antecedent contract, accounts may be settled even half-yearly upon that principle, except as to real securities. Bevan, Ex parte, 9 Ves. 223.

An agreement à priori that interest should bear interest, is void; but if made at the end of the year, it is valid. Clancarty v. Latouche, 1 Ball & B. 430.

Course of Business.]—If a party shews in an action for money lent, that it was the course of dealing between him and the defendant to calculate the interest every year and add that to the principal, and the next year to calculate upon the total, he may recover interest calculated in the same way for the years subsequently to the striking of the last balance between the parties. Newell v. Jones, 4 Car. & P. 124.

In an action to recover interest upon moneys advanced to the defendant by a banking-house, it is not sufficient to shew that it was the custom of the house to charge interest calculated upon half-yearly rests, without also shewing that the defendant knew that such was the practice. Moore v. Voughton, 1 Stark. 487. And see Dawes v. Pinner, 2 Camp. 486, n.

An agent who has advanced money for his principal in effecting insurances and other mercantile business is entitled to charge interest; and at the end of every year to make a rest, and add the interest then due to the principal. Bruce v. Hunter, 3 Camp. 467.

In 1847 the customer of a bank gave a mortgage to the bankers to secure with interest at 5*l.* per cent., money due and to become due to them upon a running account, on which it had been usual to make annual rests, and charge compound interest upon the balances:—Held, that the bankers had no right to make rests after the relation of banker and customer had ceased, and that the mortgage was a security only for the balance due at the date of the assignment, with simple interest from that time at 5*l.* per cent. per annum. Crosskill v. Bower, 32 Beav. 86; 32 L. J., Ch. 540; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 267; 8 L. T. 135; 11 W. R. 411.

After an acquiescence in accounts annually furnished by bankers, an agreement, that the balance of principal and interest shall bear interest will be presumed. Clancarty v. Latouche, 1 Ball & B. 429.

The mode of taking bankers' accounts with their customers is by charging interest on their advances, in a separate column up to the day of lodgment made, deducting the lodgment from the principal, and so on to the end of the year, when a rest is made; the balance of principal and interest constituting the first item in the next account; and from the long acquiescence in the accounts thus furnished, the annual balances directed to carry interest. Id. 420.

A Scotchman in Calcutta opened an account with a banking and agency house there in 1786, and died in 1810, having been insane from 1793. A partner in the house, being in Scotland in 1812, enclosed, in a letter to the customer's relatives there, an account current with him from 1787 to 1810, signed by the firm, bringing out annual balances in his favour, composed of annual accumulations of Indian interest, the last balance expressed "to bear interest at 9 per cent. per annum." In 1835 the customer's relatives obtained administration of his estate, and prosecuted actions which had been before commenced in the Scotch courts, on the footing of the account, against another partner who joined the firm in 1793, and continued a partner through several changes till 1820, when he retired to his estates in Scotland, and they claimed interest at 9 per cent. upon the last balance in 1810, and upon the annual accumulations thereof since:—Held, that a debt was sufficiently constituted against the firm by the account rendered by them, together with interest at 9 per cent. on the last balance in 1810, down to final decree, and that one partner was bound by the act of the firm; but that the debt did not carry compound interest. Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Cl. & F. 121.

S. opened an account with a bank and was allowed to overdraw on signing the following agreement:—"In the event of my account being overdrawn it is understood that the account is to be subject to all charges and interest which may be charged by the bank from time to time on such account, and in the event of my death such interest and charges are to continue until the account be paid off." Compound interest was regularly charged by the bank with half-yearly rests and paid by S. for more than nine years until his death, accounts being regularly stated and settled between him and the bank:—Held, that there was an express contract that compound interest should be paid by S.'s executors on the balance due at his death, and that as the accounts were regularly stated and settled by S. with full knowledge of his rights, his executors could not be allowed to open the settled transactions. Stewart v. Stewart, 27 L. R., Ir. 351.

Where a deed is given as security for a fixed and definite sum, at a fixed rate of interest, and not for the general balance of a banking account, it is not open to the bank in the absence of express contract, contained in the deed itself or in some instrument of equal degree, to charge compound interest upon this sum or include it in the general banking account. Mosse v. Salt (32 Beav. 269), followed. Ib.

In the course of accounts taken upon the footing of an agreement allowing interest, a balance was struck of the sum acknowledged to be due, including an item for compound interest:—Held, that this was not sufficient evidence of a settled dealing between the parties to found a charge for compound interest in the subsequent parts of the account. Page v. Broom, 4 Cl. & F. 436.

When allowed by Court.]—B. was a surety for A., in a joint bond to C. and D., for 180,000*l.*, conditioned to pay 90,000*l.*, with interest at 5 per cent. By a counter bond of equal date, A. was bound to B. in a like penalty, with condition to indemnify B., his heirs, executors, &c., from payment of the said 90,000*l.* and interest, and from all damages he might sustain on account of the nonpayment of the said sum and interest. After the deaths of A. and B., the executors of B. were called upon and did pay to C. and D. 22,000*l.*, on account of the principal, and several large sums for interest on A.'s death. In a suit for the administration of A.'s estate, the court allowed the executors of B. to come in as creditors for the several sums so paid by them, and for interest on the 22,000*l.*, but not for interest on the several sums of money paid for interest on the original debt. Rigby v. Macnamara, 2 Cox, 415; 2 R. R. 92.

Interest upon interest not given. Waring v. Cunliffe, 1 Ves. J. 99; 1 R. R. 88.

Compound interest allowed by the court on sums paid by the tenant for life on renewals. Nightingale v. Lawson, 1 Bro. C. C. 440.

Rule as to accumulation of interest upon interest, not to be broken through. Combe v. Acland, Dick. 436.

Interest computed on various sums reported due, and also small arrears (on other sums) and on costs. Bickham v. Cross, 2 Ves. 471. S. P., Neal v. Att.-Gen., Mos. 246.

Where a party holding property subject to a charge had been ordered, with his consent, to pay the amount into court, with the interest, on a certain day, and made default on the day, he was ordered to pay further interest on the principal only. Wilkinson v. Charlesworth, 2 Beav. 470.

Interest not to be allowed upon the interest of a bond debt computed in a report. Turner v. Turner, 1 Jac. & Walk. 39.

The sale of a reversionary interest in chancery considered as the case of an expectant heir, forms an exception to the general rule, that for mere inadequacy of value a contract is not to be set aside. During the continuance of the same situation, acquiescence has no effect; and the value is to be estimated at the time of the transaction, not according to the event. Interest at 5*l.* per cent. upon the money advanced: compound interest refused. Gowland v. De Faria, 17 Ves. 20; 11 R. R. 9.

Creditor's suit proving fruitless, no assets appearing to satisfy his demand, representatives of the executrix held trustees for representatives of assignee of creditor, of personal estate of the testator, consisting of securities taken in her own name, and afterwards received; and decreed to account with interest for more than forty years upon the balance of a settled account, composed partly of interest, without proof being required of any agreement that such balance of principal and interest should carry interest. Browne v. Taite, 1 Moll. 397.

On Legacies.]—The testator gave to each of certain infant nephews and nieces, by name, 400*l.*, "with compound interest at 5 per cent. per annum, from the day of their birth, to be settled on their marrying or attaining twenty-one years, whichever may first happen":—Held, that compound interest at 5 per cent. was to run on each of the legacies from the birthdays of the several legatees till their marriage or majority respectively, and not merely to the day of the testator's death. Arnold v. Arnold, 2 Myl. & K. 365.

Against Accounting Party.] — Compound interest will only be given against an accounting party when he has employed the money in business. Burdick v. Garrick, 39 L. J., Ch. 369; L. R. 5 Ch. 233; 18 W. R. 387.

Mixing the money with the ordinary account of a firm of solicitors at a bankers' is not such employment in business as will render a member of the firm liable to compound interest. Ib.

Under Awards.]—An award is not to be impeached for allowing compound interest, for it may be allowed in case of a contract for it either express, or to be inferred from the nature of the dealings between the parties. Morgan v. Mather, 2 Ves. J. 15; 2 R. R. 163.

Construction.]—Interest at the rate of 1 per cent. per mensem to be calculated at the end of each year, means interest calculated per mensem, but payable per annum without compound interest on monthly receipts. Rajunder Narian Rae v. Bijai Govind Sing, 2 Moore, P. C. 253.

A correspondence took place between a mortgagee and a mortgagor extending over a series of years, in which the mortgagee stated his intention, if the interest upon the mortgage debt was not paid, to add it to the principal, and to charge the same interest upon the amount as the mortgage bore. The mortgagor replied from time to time that he could not pay the interest, and that it must be added to the claim of the mortgagee:—Held, that it did not amount to an agreement to pay compound interest, and the claim of the mortgagee was not allowed. Thompson v. Leith, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1091.

D. BY WHAT LAW GOVERNED.

Lex Loci Contractus.] — Where a bill of exchange drawn at one place on a party at another, and in which no mention is made of interest, is dishonoured, the amount of interest recoverable is to be calculated according to the lex loci contractus, i.e. of the place where the bill was drawn; and the rate of interest to be adopted in such a case is matter of law, for the direction of the judge to the jury. Gibbs v. Fremont, 9 Ex. 25; 22 L. J., Ex. 302; 17 Jur. 820; 1 W. R. 482.

Indian interest for money, when made principal here, carries English interest. Bodily v. Bellamy 2 Burr. 1094; 1 W. Bl. 267.

The rate of interest for loans advanced within the dominions of native and independent Indian sovereigns, by British subjects domiciliated and residing within such dominions, is not limited to 12*l.* per cent. Anon, 3 Bing. 193.

Interest allowed for a ship and cargo wrongfully taken by the defendant, and this being done in the Indies, Indian interest allowed, deducting the charge of the return. Ekins v. East India Co. 1 P. W. 395.

Money charged on estate in Nevis, held to carry only English interest. Stapleton v. Conway, 1 Ves. 427.

Debt contracted in England but secured by a bond executed in Ireland, shall bear Irish interest. Connor v. Bellamont (Earl), 2 Atk. 382.

The East India Company having compelled payment from a surety in India, by their power over him as one of their servants, without an account or proceeding against the principal, though solvent, and otherwise under harsh circumstances, he was restored to the same situation by a decree for re-payment, with interest at 5 per cent. upon giving security for repayment, in case, in a future suit by the company he should be held liable; the court would not, upon the circumstances, give Indian interest. Law v. East India Co., 4 Ves. 825.

A bill of exchange was drawn and accepted in Paris, and made payable in England. The drawer and acceptor were living there. No rate of interest was expressed to be payable on the bill:—Held, that the default being made in England, interest was payable according to the English, and not the French law. Cooper v. Waldegrave (Earl), 2 Beav. 282.

As to the allowance of interest according to the laws of other countries, see Anon., 1 Eq. Abr. 288.

At the time of his death a testator was indebted to a Hindoo banker for advances made for the purposes of the business in India, such advances carrying interest at 12 per cent. In 1861 the testator died, and in 1865 the usual administration decree was made in an administration suit instituted in England by a legatee. The Indian Statute of Limitations provides, that no suit for the recovery of money lent or interest shall be maintained in any court within the British territories in India unless the same be instituted within three years from the time when the debt became due. In 1870 the banker carried in a claim for the balance and principal due to him in 1861, with interest at 12 per cent. On summons to disallow the claim:—Held, that the question must be governed by the lex fori, and that, as the decree had operated as a judgment in favour of creditors to the extent of preventing the time limited by the English statute from running, the claim must be allowed, but with interest only at 4 per cent. Finch v. Finch, 45 L. J., Ch. 816; 35 L. T. 235.

I. SOVEREIGN STATES, THEIR RULERS AND OFFICERS.

a. Sovereign States and Sovereigns.

Sovereignty — Definition.] — In considering what power and jurisdiction is conceded to Great Britain within the territories of a foreign state, it must be borne in mind that in transactions, whether political or mercantile, a difference subsists between oriental and christian states. Papayanni v. Russian Steam Navigation and Trading Co., or The Laconia, 11 Moore P. C. (N.S.) 161 ; 33 L. J., Adm. 11 ; 3 N. R. 219 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1160 ; 9 L. T. 37 ; 12 W. R. 90.

No state can claim jurisdiction as a matter of right within the territorial limits of another independent state. Ib.

Between two christian states all claim to jurisdiction of any kind, or exemption from jurisdiction, must be founded on treaty, or engagements of similar validity ; but the same strict forms would not be required in the intercourse between a christian and an oriental nation. Any mode of proof by which it was shewn that a privilege is conceded would be sufficient for the purpose. Ib.

Consent may be expressed in various ways ; by constant usage, permitted and acquiesced in by the authorities of the state ; active assent, or silent acquiescence, where there is full knowledge. Ib.

The Ottoman government has acquiesced in allowing to the British government, within the Ottoman dominions, jurisdiction between British subjects and the subjects of other christian states. Ib.

Political treaties between a foreign state and subjects of the Crown of Great Britain, acting as an independent state under powers granted by charter and act of parliament, are not a subject of municipal jurisdiction ; therefore, a bill founded on such treaties by the Nabob of Arcot, against the East India Company, was dismissed. Carnatic (Nabob) v. East India Co., 2 Ves. J. 56. And see Glasse v. Marshall, 15 Sim. 71 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 25.

Sovereignty—How Proved.]—A judicial court cannot take notice of a foreign government, not acknowledged by the government or country in which that court sits ; and the fact of acknowledgment is matter of public notoriety. Berne

(City) v. Bank of England, 7 Ves. 347; 7 R. R. 218.

A certificate from the foreign or colonial office, as the case may be, is conclusive as to the status of sovereignty. Mighell v. Johore (Sultan), 63 L. J., Q. B. 593; [1894] 1 Q. B. 149; 9 R. 447; 70 L. T. 64; 58 J. P. 244—C. A. Cp. Yrissarri v. Clement, 3 Bing. 432; 11 Moore, 308; 2 Car. & P. 223; 4 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 128. See further tit. REVOLT AND RESTORATION, col. 192, post.

Immunity from Process—In general.]—A foreign sovereign coming to England cannot be made responsible in the courts there for acts done by him in his own country and elsewhere abroad, even if he is also a British subject who has taken the oath of allegiance, and is in England exercising his rights as such subject. Brunswick (Duke) v. Hanover (King), 2 H. L. Cas. 1. Affirming 6 Beav. 1; 13 L. J., Ch. 107; 8 Jur. 253.

The courts of this country have no jurisdiction over an independent foreign sovereign, unless he submits to the jurisdiction. Mighell v. Johore (Sultan), 63 L. J., Q. B. 593; [1894] 1 Q. B. 149; 9 R. 447; 70 L. T. 84; 58 J. P. 224.—C. A.

An action cannot be maintained in any English court against a foreign potentate for anything done or omitted to be done by him in his public capacity as representative of the nation of which he is the head; and no English court has jurisdiction to entertain any complaints against him in that capacity. De Haber v. Portugal (Queen), Wandsworth v. Spain (Queen), 17 Q. B. 171; 20 L. J., Q. B. 488; 16 Jur. 164.

The courts of this country cannot interfere with the prerogative rights of the sovereign of another country; and where, therefore, a concession had been granted by the Turkish government, for the formation of a company for the purpose of issuing notes in Turkey, and the Turkish government had granted another concession for the formation of another company with similar privileges:—Held, that although the proceedings of the second company in England might be in derogation of the rights and privileges granted by the contract with the first company, yet, as it would be an interference with the sovereign rights of the government of Turkey, the court would not interfere by injunction to restrain the proceedings of the second company. Gladstone v. Ottoman Bank, 1 H. & M. 505; 1 N. R. 512; 32 L. J., Ch. 228; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 246; 8 L. T. 162; 11 W. R. 460.

Action against—Procedure—Lex fori.]—Where a foreign prince is defendant, he stands on the same footing with ordinary suitors as to the rules and practice of the court. Spain (King) v. Hullet, 1 Cl. & F. 333; 1 Dow & Cl. 169. S. P., Columbian Government v. Rothschild, 1 Sim. 94; 5 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 43; 27 R. R. 171; Rothschild v. Portugal (Queen), 3 Y. & C. 594.

To attempt to make a foreign sovereign or state amenable to the jurisdiction of our courts would be offensive to the spirit and principles of international law, and, therefore, a foreign sovereign or state cannot be served with a writ or other process of our courts. The only apparent exceptions to this rule are—(1) where a foreign sovereign or state has come into our courts to seek redress against a defendant; in which case the defendant may assert any claim he has by way of counterclaim or cross action, in order that complete justice may be done; (2) where both the plaintiff and a foreign sovereign or state have claims upon funds in the hands of third persons within the jurisdiction of the English courts; in which case the foreign sovereign or state may be joined as a defendant, in order to be enabled to assert any claim to the funds in question. Strousberg v. Costa Rica (Republic), 44 L. T. 199; 29 W. R. 125—C. A.

—— Pleading.]—In a suit against a sovereign prince, who is also a subject, the bill ought, upon the face of it, to shew a cause rendering the sovereign prince liable to be sued as a subject. Brunswick (Duke) v. Hanover (King), supra.

Action on a deed. Plea to the jurisdiction because the defendant, at the time of making the deed, was a sovereign prince; that the deed was made by him within his dominions, and that, at the time of the commencement of the action, he was and still is entitled to all the rights, prerogatives and privileges appertaining to him as such; and that, by reason thereof, he ought not to be compelled to answer before any court whatsoever:—Held, that the plea was bad for not stating that he was a sovereign prince at the time of commencing the action, or of plea pleaded. Munden v. Brunswick (Duke), 10 Q. B. 656; 16 L. J., Q. B. 300; 11 Jur. 801.

Plea by the East India Company to a bill for an account filed by the Nabob of Arcot, that by charters confirmed by act of parliament, they had certain powers, by virtue of which the acts were done, overruled; as it did not set forth the contents of the charters and acts of parliament, and shew what court had the proper jurisdiction. Carnatic (Nabob) v. East India Co., 3 Bro. C. C. 292. And see 1 Ves. J. 371.

—— Submission to Jurisdiction—Appearance.]—A foreign sovereign prince, who was also an English peer, was made defendant to a suit, and served with a letter missive. The Lord Chancellor refused to recall it. The defendant then appeared, and filed a demurrer for want of jurisdiction:—Held, first, that the Lord Chancellor had not decided that the defendant was liable to the jurisdiction of the court; and, secondly, that the defendant had not, by appearing, waived any defence to the bill. Brunswick (Duke) v. Hanover (King), supra.

—— Effect of.]—A foreign sovereign who, for the purpose of obtaining his property, submits to be made a defendant in an action, does not thereby lose his rights. Vavasseur v. Krupp, 9 Ch. D. 351; 39 L. T. 273; 28 W. R. 642—C. A.

Where a foreign government applies here for the appointment of new trustees of a fund, they are treated as only having submitted to jurisdiction as regards matters properly raisable in that action, and, consequently, a counterclaim for damages for libel will be struck out. South African Republic v. La Compagnie Franco-Belge, 66 L. J. Ch. 747; [1897] 2 Ch. 487; 77 L. T. 241; 46 W. R. 67—C. A.

—— Acting as Private Individual.]—Submission to the jurisdiction cannot take place until the jurisdiction is invoked. The fact that a foreign sovereign has been residing in England, and has entered into a contract there, under an assumed name, does not amount to a submission to the jurisdiction, so as to render him liable to be sued in English courts for the breach of such contract. Mighell v. Johore (Sultan), 63 L. J., Q. B. 593; [1894] 1 Q. B. 149; 9 R. 447; 70 L. T. 64; 58 J. P. 244—C. A.

Action by Foreign Sovereign.]—A foreign sovereign prince may sue in this country in equity as well as at law in his political capacity. Spain (King) v. Hullet, 1 Cl. & F. 333; 1 Dow & Cl. 169. S. P., Austria (Emperor) v. Kossuth, 3 De G. F. & J. 217; 30 L. J., Ch. 690; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 639; 4 L. T. 274; 9 W. R. 712.

—— Parties.]—To a bill filed by the chargé d'affaires of the Brazilian government in this country, in his own name, to restrain judgment creditors from issuing execution against certain furniture, upon which a sum of money had been advanced by the Brazilian government, secured by an unregistered bill of sale of the furniture, a demurrer on the ground that the minister could not sue in his own name was allowed. Penedo (Baron) v. Johnson, 29 L. T. 452; 22 W. R. 103.

—— Procedure—Lex fori.]—To attempt to make a foreign sovereign or state amenable to the jurisdiction of our courts would be offensive to the spirit and principles of international law, and, therefore, a foreign sovereign or state cannot be served with a writ or other process of our courts. The only apparent exceptions to this rule are—(1) where a foreign sovereign or state has come into our courts to seek redress against a defendant; in which case the defendant may assert any claim he has by way of counterclaim or cross action, in order that complete justice may be done; (2) where both the plaintiff and a foreign sovereign or state have claims upon funds in the hands of third persons within the jurisdiction of the English courts; in which case the foreign sovereign or state may be joined as a defendant, in order to be enabled to assert any claim to the funds in question. Strousberg v. Costa Rica (Republic), 44 L. T. 199; 29 W. R. 125—C. A.

A foreign sovereign may sue in this country, both at law and in equity; and, if he sues in equity, he submits himself to the jurisdiction, and a cross-bill may be filed against him, which he must answer on oath; but a foreign sovereign does not, by filing a bill in chancery against A., make himself liable to be sued in that court for an independent matter by B. Brunswick (Duke of) v. Hanover (King), 2 H. L. Cas. 1. Prioleau v. United States, 36 L. J., Ch. 36; L. R. 2 Eq. 659; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 724; 14 L. T. 700; 14 W. R. 1012.

A foreign prince, who comes voluntarily as a suitor into a court of law in England, becomes subject as to all matters connected with that suit to the jurisdiction of a court of equity. Rothschild v. Portugal (Queen), 3 Y. & C. 594.

Staying Action till Appointment of Person to give Discovery.]—The proceedings in an original suit by a foreign government were stayed until the plaintiff in that suit had given the name or names of persons who could be made defendant or defendants in a cross-suit by the same parties against the foreign government, for the purpose of making upon oath the discovery required. Peru (Republic) v. Weguelin, 44 L. J., Ch. 583; L. R. 20 Eq. 140; 32 L. T. 426; 23 W. R. 776.

A defendant to a suit, brought by a sovereign state or corporation, has no right to a stay of proceedings in the original suit until a person selected by him for the purposes of discovery, and made a co-defendant to a cross-suit, appears to such cross-suit. Costa Rica (Republic) v. Erlanger, 45 L. J., Ch. 145; 1 Ch. D. 171; 24 W. R. 151—C. A. Reversing 33 L. T. 632.

Transactions between.]—Transactions of independent sovereign states between each other are governed by other laws than those which municipal courts administer. Such courts have neither the means of decreeing what is right, nor the power of enforcing any decision which they may make. Secretary of State for India v. Kamachee Boye Sahaba, 13 Moore P. C. 22; 7 Moore Ind. App. 476; 7 W. R. 722. S. P., Carnatic (Nabob) v. East India Co., 2 Ves. J. 56.

A bill filed by Charles, ex-Duke of Brunswick, against the King of Hanover (a subject of this realm), stated, that by a decree of the Germanic Diet, followed by a declaration of his Agnati, he had been deposed, and his brother appointed successor, and that by an instrument signed by the reigning Duke, and by William IV. and his brothers, the Duke of Cambridge had been appointed guardian of the plaintiff's fortune, and the guardianship "was to be legally established in Brunswick, where it was to have its locality." That on the death of William IV. the King of Hanover was appointed guardian, and possessed himself of the private property of the plaintiff. The bill alleged that the instrument was void, and prayed a declaration to that effect, and for an account:—Held, that the alleged acts, under the instrument, were not such as rendered the defendant liable to be sued, or subject to the jurisdiction of the court. Brunswick (Duke) v. Hanover (King), 2 H. L. Cas. 1.

—— Conventions between Nations as to Compensation.]—A., a British subject, claimed to be entitled to compensation for losses suffered by him through confiscation of his property in the first French revolution. The governments of England and France entered into conventions respecting compensation to be afforded to British subjects. The English government received all the money agreed upon between the two governments as the amount of compensation, and undertook to satisfy all the claimants. The 59 Geo. 3, c. 31, declared how claims were to be preferred and liquidated. B. presented his claim to the commissioners, and adopted the modes of proceeding provided by the act. His claim was rejected. After payment of the claims, which were established to the satisfaction of the commissioners, a surplus remained, which, in accordance with the act, was paid over to the lords of the treasury. B. proceeded to make his claim afresh, under a petition of right:—Held, that he had no remedy except under the provisions of the statute. De Bode v. Reg. 3 H. L. Cas. 449.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, s. 1, the articles of a convention between her majesty and the King of the French, concerning the fisheries in the seas between the British islands and France, are declared to have the force of law. By s. 11, all offences against the articles committed by British subjects are to be determined by justices of the peace, who are also empowered to award compensation for the loss or damage caused by the breach of any of the articles. By art. 25, trawl boats shall keep at a distance of three miles from boats fishing with drift-nets. By art. 69, all transgressions of the regulations shall in both countries be submitted to the exclusive jurisdiction of the tribunal or the magistrates designated by law, who are to settle all differences and decide all contentions between fishermen of the same country, or between fishermen of the two countries; and by art. 70, the trial and judgment shall always take place in a summary manner. By art. 75, this tribunal may award damages for injuries, over and above all penalties:—Held, that no action could be maintained for an injury caused by a breach of art. 25, as exclusive jurisdiction was given to the tribunal specified in the act. Marshall v. Nicholls, 18 Q. B. 882; 21 L. J., Q. B. 343; 16 Jur. 1155.

Rights of—Protecting.]—Courts of law cannot take cognizance of acts of power exercised by governments in matters of state arising out of war, but they will preserve the private rights of sovereign princes, if by so doing the sovereign acts of the state are not interfered with. Veer Rajundar Wadeer v. East India Co., 30 L. J., Ch. 226; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 350; 9 W. R. 247.

—— Circulating Medium.]—The sovereign power of every state has the right of issuing notes for payment of money, as part of the circulating medium therein. Austria (Emperor) v. Kossuth, 3 De G. F. & J. 217; 30 L. J., Ch. 690; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 639; 4 L. T. 94; 9 W. R. 712.

Where, therefore, certain persons resident in this country, had manufactured documents which purported to be the notes of a foreign state, the court upon a bill filed by the sovereign of that state, alleging that the introduction of such notes into it would cause great detriment to his subjects, directed the manufacturers to deliver up to be destroyed the notes, and the plates from which the notes had been manufactured, and granted an injunction to restrain such persons from manufacturing documents purporting to be notes of that state. Ib.

—— Sovereign Rights—User of Royal Arms.]—Semble, the court will not interfere to protect the invasion of a mere sovereign right of a foreign sovereign. Ib.

Held, also, that the court will not interfere to prevent the use in this country of the royal arms of a foreign state. Ib.

Property of.]—The court will, at the instance of a foreign sovereign in amity with this country, protect the property to which he is entitled as sovereign, or of his subjects, being represented by him, where a damage to such property is done or threatened by persons resident within the jurisdiction of the court, and such injury is alleged in the bill. Austria (Emperor) v. Kossuth, 3 De G. F. & J. 217; 30 L. J., Ch. 690; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 639; 4 L. T. 274; 9 W. R. 719.

—— National Vessel of War—Salvage—Non-Liability to Arrest.]—A vessel of war commissioned by the government of a foreign state, and engaged in the national service of her government, was stranded on the coast of England. She had a cargo of machinery on board her, alleged to belong to private individuals, of which her government had for public purposes charged itself with the care and protection. Important and efficient salvage services were rendered to the ship and her cargo. A suit was instituted on behalf of certain of the salvors against the ship and her cargo. The court refused to order a warrant to issue for the arrest of the ship or cargo, and held it had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. The Constitution, 48 L. J., P. 13; 4 P. D. 39; 40 L. T. 219; 27 W. R. 739.

—— Ship, not being a Ship of War.]—An unarmed mail-packet belonging to a foreign sovereign, and officered by him, cannot be proceeded against in the Admiralty Court, even by action in rem, though the vessel is employed in commerce by carrying passengers and goods for hire. As a consequence of the absolute independence of every sovereign authority, and of the international comity which induces every sovereign state to respect the independence of every other sovereign state, each state declines to exercise by means of any of its courts any of its territorial jurisdiction over the person of any sovereign or ambassador, or over the public property of any other state which is destined to its public use, or over the property of any ambassador, though such sovereign, ambassador, or property be within its territory, and, therefore, but for the common agreement, subject to its jurisdiction. An action in rem, being an indirect method of impleading the owner, cannot be brought against the property of a foreign sovereign. The immunity of a public ship is not lost by her being used subordinately and partially for trading purposes. The Parlement Belge, 5 P. D. 197; 42 L. T. 273; 28 W. R. 642—C. A.

—— Removal of.]—The court has no jurisdiction to prevent a foreign sovereign from removing his property in this country. Vavasseur v. Krupp, 9 Ch. D. 351; 39 L. T. 437; 27 W. R. 176—C. A.

A foreign sovereign bought shells, made in Germany, according to an invention patented in England. The shells were brought to England to be shipped on board of ships of war belonging to the foreign sovereign. The patentee brought an action and obtained an injunction restraining the agents of the foreign sovereign and the wharfingers in whose custody the shells were from removing the shells. The foreign sovereign applied to be made a defendant in the action. An order was then made by the master of the rolls and affirmed on appeal, that, notwithstanding the injunction, the foreign sovereign should be at liberty to remove his shells. Ib.

—— Property in hands of Agent.]—The court has jurisdiction in a suit by an English citizen against another English citizen, in whose hands a fund is placed subject to the sole control at law of a foreign ambassador or government, to restrain the defendant from parting with the fund upon the order of such foreign ambassador or government. Gladstone v. Musurus Bey, 1 H. & M. 495; 32 L. J., Ch. 155; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 71; 7 L. T. 477; 11 W. R. 180.

Though a foreign government cannot be sued in this country without its own consent, yet the agent of a foreign government may be restrained from transmitting to it securities which the bill alleges should be deposited in this country. Foreign Bondholders Corporation v. Pastor, 31 L. T. 567; 23 W. R. 109. Cp., Larivière v. Morgan, 41 L. J. Ch. 746; L. R. 7 Ch. 550; 26 L. T. 859; 20 W. R. 731.

Grants of.]—The right of a foreign government to revoke a concession cannot be questioned in any legal proceedings in this country. National Bolivian Co. v. Wilson, 5 App. Cas. 176; 43 L. T. 60—H. L. (E.)

The court has no jurisdiction to interfere with the sovereign acts of a foreign government. Gladstone v. Ottoman Bank, 1 Hem. & M. 505; 32 L. J., Ch. 228; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 246; 8 L. T. 162; 11 W. R. 460.

In the case of two inconsistent grants of the same subject-matter, by the same foreign sovereign authority, the court cannot aid parties claiming under the first grant, against claimants, though within the jurisdiction, acting under the second. Ib.

Perpetual injunction to restrain proceedings against a Dane, for the seizure of property of English subjects in Iceland, the seizure being sanctioned by the Danish authorities. Blad v. Bamfield, 3 Swan. 604; 19 R. R. 285.

Contracts of—Loan.]—The bond of a foreign government creates nothing but a debt of honour, and the promise contained in it cannot be enforced in the courts of this country against English agents of the government who have funds belonging to it in their hands, even though the government, after notice of an action by the bondholder against the agents, makes no claim to the funds. If such an action against the agent could be maintained, it would amount to an assumption of a jurisdiction over the foreign government. As the foreign government cannot be sued in the courts of this country, neither can its agents be sued in the absence of the principals. Twycross v. Dreyfus, 46 L. J., Ch. 510; 5 Ch. D. 605; 36 L. T. 752—C. A.

By a convention between the government of Peru and a Peruvian company, all guano to be exported from Peru to Great Britain and Ireland was consigned to the company, and it was agreed that the company should sell the guano, and hold a portion of the proceeds at the disposal of the government. The Peruvian government afterwards contracted a loan in England upon the terms, that all the Peruvian guano to be imported into Great Britain and Ireland and Belgium should be hypothecated for the repayment of the loan, and that out of the proceeds of the guano a certain sum should be applied half-yearly in redemption of the loan:—Held, in a suit by the bondholders of the loan (to which the Peruvian government was made a defendant, but did not appear), that the court had no jurisdiction to compel the company or its agents to apply the proceeds of the guano in the hands of the agents in England to the redemption of the loan. Smith v. Weguelin, 38 L. J., Ch. 465; L. R. 8 Eq. 198; 20 L. T. 724; 17 W. R. 904.

When the government of a state contracts a loan in another country, the contract is governed by the law of the state whose government contracts the loan, and not by the law of the country in which the contract is made. Ib.

An English court of equity has no jurisdiction to enforce the contracts of a foreign government against the property of such government in England. Ib.

A foreign government contracting a loan in London agreed to apply a certain sum of money half-yearly in the redemption of the loan, to be made by payment off at par of bonds to be drawn by lot when the bonds should be above par, and by purchase at the market price when the bonds should be at or below par:—Held, that the government complied with this contract by cancelling half-yearly bonds, which had been given up to it in exchange for bonds of a subsequent loan, to the stipulated amount at the price at which the subsequent loan was contracted, being a higher price than the price of the bonds of the first loan as quoted on the London Stock Exchange. Ib.

The Mexican government having issued bonds by which they gave to the holders certain specified security for the due payment of capital and interest, and the interest upon these bonds having become in arrear, issued new bonds in lieu of the payment of the overdue interest, but without any specified security:—Held, that the new bonds were mere accretions of the old, and that the holders of the former were entitled to the same security as the holders of the latter. Guedalla v. v. Baring, 19 L. T. 597; 17 W. R. 253.

Employment of Agent.]—In the case of scrip issued by a foreign government on negotiating a loan (which scrip promises to give to the bearer, after all instalments have been duly paid, a bond for the amount paid, with interest), and the scrip is circulated in England by means of an agent here, who is to receive the instalments, and give acknowledgments for their payment, and to deliver the bonds when they are issued, the contracting party is the foreign government, and not the English agent. Goodwin v. Robarts, 45 L. J., Ex. 748; 1 App. Cas. 476; 35 L. T. 179; 24 W. R. 987—H. L. (E.)

—— Sale of Goods—Proceedings against Agent.]—When a foreign government has made a contract in this country, and has lodged money in the hands of agents in this country for payment of the sums to become due under the contract, the court will not refuse relief to the contractor because the contract was with a foreign government, nor because the foreign government does not appear before the court. Larivière v. Morgan, 41 L. J., Ch. 746; L. R. 7 Ch. 550; 26 L. T. 859; 20 W. R. 731.

When goods are agreed to be purchased by a sovereign state, and are to be paid for when received, and money is lodged for payment on the production of certificates from an agent of a sovereign state, the court, if certificates are refused, may direct an inquiry what goods have been delivered under the contract, and order payment of what is due to the contractor who has supplied the goods. Ib.

Other Matters.]—The King of Hanover, after his accession, renewed his oath of allegiance to the Queen of England, and claimed the right of an English peer:—Held, that he was exempt from the English courts for acts done by him as sovereign prince, but was liable to be sued in those courts in respect of matters done by him as a subject. Held, also, that the sovereign character prevailed where the acts were done abroad, and also where it was doubtful in which of the two characters they had been done. Brunswick (Duke) v. Hanover (King), 6 Beav. 1; 13 L. J., Ch. 107; 8 Jur. 253.

b. OFFICERS.

1. Ambassador.

In General.]—A public minister of a foreign state, accredited to and received by the sovereign of this country, having no real property in England, and having done nothing to disentitle him to the general privileges of such public minister, cannot, while he remains such public minister, be sued against his will, in this country, in an action; although such action may arise out of commercial transactions by him here, and although neither his person is nor his goods are touched by the suit. Magdalena Steam Navigation Co. v. Martin, 2 El. & El. 94; 28 L. J., Q. B. 310; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1260; 7 W. R. 598.

An ambassador, who has not submitted to the jurisdiction, cannot be retained before the court as a defendant. Gladstone v. Musurus Bey, 1 H. & M. 495; 32 L. J., Ch. 155; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 71; 7 L. T. 477; 11 W. R. 180.

Submission to Jurisdiction.]—An ambassador, who voluntarily appears to an action against him and others in this country as joint contractors, and who thus submits to the jurisdiction of the court, is not entitled to have the proceedings set aside or the action stayed, on the ground of his being privileged as an ambassador, if no step has been taken to interfere with his person or property. Taylor v. Best, 14 C. B. 487; 2 C. L. R. 1717; 23 L. J., C. P. 89; 18 Jur. 402; 2 W. R. 259.

Extent of Privilege. — Money in Agent's hands.]—Securities were deposited by the plaintiffs in the Bank of England in the name of the ambassador of a foreign state, in order to secure the performance of a contract between the plaintiffs and the foreign government. The ambassador threatened to withdraw the deposit on the ground of an alleged breach of contract by the plaintiffs, which they denied under the circumstances to be such breach:—Held, that it was not competent for the plaintiffs to move against the ambassador; but that an interim injunction might be granted against the bank, to restrain them from parting with the fund, and that, under this order, the bank would be protected against any proceedings by the ambassador. Gladstone v. Musurus Bey, 1 H. & M. 495; 32 L. J., Ch. 155; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 71; 7 L. T. 477; 11 W. R. 180.

—— Security for Costs.]—The court will not compel a foreign ambassador to give security for costs. De Montebliano (Duke) v. Christin, 5 M. & S. 503; 17 R. R. 418.

Duration of Privilege.—Recall.]—Where a foreign minister had been dismissed, and a successor had been appointed several months before his arrest, held, that the privilege did not apply, notwithstanding he had not received any official notification of his dismissal. Marshall v. Critico, 9 East, 477; 14 R. R. Preface, VIII., n.

Statute of Limitations.]—An action cannot be commenced here against, and therefore the Statute of Limitations does not commence to run in favour of an ambassador whilst he is accredited to this country, or during such time after his recall as is reasonably occupied by him in winding up the affairs of his embassy and leaving the country. Musurus Bey v. Gadban, 63 L. J. Q. B. 621; [1894] 2 Q. B. 352; 9 R. 519; 71 L. T. 51; 42 W. R. 545—C. A.

2. Other Officers.

In General.]—A British subject, who is accredited to Great Britain by a foreign government as a member of its embassy, and who has not been received by the British government upon the express condition that he shall be subject to the local jurisdiction of his own country, is exempt therefrom. Macartney v. Garbutt, 24 Q. B. D. 368; 62 L. T. 368; 38 W. R. 559; 54 J. P. 437.

Privileges.]—The privilege from arrest of an ambassador's servant is the privilege of the ambassador and not of the servant. Fisher v. Begrez, 2 C. & M. 240; 3 Tyr. 184; 2 D. P. C. 279; 4 Tyr. 35; 2 L. J., Ex. 13.

Where there is Fraud in Appointment.]—An honorary attaché of the embassy, whose appointment has in no way been recognised by the British government, is not entitled to claim privilege if his appointment has been obtained for the purpose of protecting him against his creditors, and has been inadvertently made by the ambassador. Clvete, Ex parte, Clvete, In re, 65 L. T. 102; 55 J. P. 758; 8 Morrell 195—C.A. S. P., Delvalle v. Plomer, 3 Camp. 47; 13 R. R. 746; Lockwood v. Coysgarne, 3 Burr. 1676.

Who entitled—Councillor of Legation.]—A councillor of legation of a foreign sovereign, who has the charge of the executive of the legation, subject to the directions of the minister plenipotentiary, and who acts as chargé d'affaires in the absence of such minister, is entitled as such to the privileges of an ambassador. Taylor v. Best, 14 C. B. 487; 2 C. L. R. 1717; 23 L. J., C. P. 89; 18 Jur. 402; 2 W. R. 259.

—— Secretary.]—The secretary of a foreign minister is privileged, though his name is not registered at the office of either of the secretaries of state. Hopkins v. De Roebeck, 3 Term Rep. 79; 1 R. R. 650.

Protection to the English secretary of an ambassador was disallowed, because it appeared he was purser of a ship of war. Darling v. Atkins, 3 Wils. 33.

But in another case it was allowed, although formerly he had been a trader, and the case arose under very suspicious circumstances. Triquet v. Bath, 3 Burr. 1478; 1 W. Bl. 471.

Attaché.]—An attaché to an ambassador in this country of a foreign state is not liable for rates assessed on his private residence. Parkinson v. Potter, 55 L. J., Q. B. 153; 16 Q. B. D. 152; 53 L. T. 818; 34 W. R. 215; 50 J. P. 470.

—— Interpreter.]—An ambassador's interpreter, who does not live in the house, is not protected from arrest. Carolino's Case, 1 Wils. 78.

—— Chaplain.]—A chaplain to an ambassador is not protected from arrest if he does no duty in the house. Seacomb v. Bownley, 1 Wils. 20.

—— Chorister at Chapel.]—A British-born subject employed as first chorister at the Portuguese ambassador's chapel is not protected. Novello v. Toogood, 2 D. & R. 833; 1 B. & C. 554; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 181; 25 R. R. 507.

But semble, that a chorister, bonâ fide employed by an ambassador in the performance of religious worship in his chapel, is privileged. Fisher v. Begrez, 1 C. & M. 117; 1 D. P. C. 588. S. C., 2

C. & M. 240 ; 3 Tyr. 184 ; 2 D. P. C. 279 ; 4 Tyr. 35 ; 2 L. J., Ex. 13.

—— Land-waiter at Custom-house.]—A land-waiter at the custom-house cannot claim protection as such domestic servant. Masters v. Manby, 1 Burr. 401.

—— Wife of Officer.]—Where the wife of a foreign ambassador's secretary was arrested upon a writ issued against husband and wife, the court refused to quash the writ, though the husband swore that before and at the time of the arrest, he was in the actual employment of the ambassador, and in daily attendance upon him, in writing despatches and other official documents. English v. Caballero, 3 D. & R. 25.

Appointment—How proved.—The certificate of a foreign ambassador under the seal of the legation is sufficient evidence of the law of the country by which he is accredited. Klingemann, In goods of, 3 Sw. & Tr. 18 ; 32 L. J., P. 16 ; 8 L. T. 172 ; 11 W. R. 218.

The secretary of a foreign minister is privileged, though his name is not registered at the office of either secretary of state. Hopkins v. De Roebeck, 3 Term Rep. 79 ; 1 R. R. 650.

Semble, if there is evidence that a certain person is treated at the embassy of a foreign nation in England as a member of the legation, and is employed from time to time by the ambassadors of that nation, it is not for the court to measure the quantum of the services either required from or rendered by him. Parkinson v. Potter, 55 L. J., Q. B. 153 ; 16 Q. B. D. 152 ; 53 L. T. 818 ; 34 W. R. 215 ; 50 J. P. 470.

It is not sufficient to shew that the servant's name is in the list transmitted by the secretary of state to the sheriff's office, of persons privileged as attached to an embassy, but it must be clearly shewn that the person is in the actual and bonâ fide service of the ambassador. Fisher v. Begrez, 1 D. P. C. 588 ; 1 C. & M. 117 ; 3 Tyr. 184 ; 2 L. J., Ex. 13.

Extent of Privilege.]—Although an ambassador's servant may be privileged as to his person, it does not follow that all his goods are privileged also, so as to enable the sheriff to apply to set aside a fi. fa. issued against them ; and a clear case of privilege must be made out to the satisfaction of the court, or else they will not interfere, either on behalf of the sheriff or the person privileged. Fisher v. Begrez, 1 D. P. C. 588 ; 1 C. & M. 117 ; 3 Tyr. 184 ; 2 L. J., Ex. 13.

—— Liability for Rates.]—A British subject, accredited to Great Britain by a foreign government as a member of its embassy, is, unless he has been received by the British government upon the express condition that he shall be subject thereto, exempt from the local jurisdiction of his own country, and therefore, where this condition has not been imposed on him at the time of his reception, his household furniture is privileged from seizure for non-payment of parochial rates. Macartney v. Garbutt, 24 Q. B. D. 368 ; 62 L. T. 656 ; 38 W. R. 559 ; 54 J. P. 437.

An attaché to an ambassador in this country of a foreign state is not liable for rates assessed on his private residence. Parkinson v. Potter, 55 L. J., Q. B. 153 ; 16 Q. B. D. 152 ; 53 L. T. 818 ; 34 W. R. 215 ; 50 J. P. 470.

—— Security for Costs.]—The servant of an ambassador will not be ordered to give security for costs. Davies v. Solomon, Tidd, Prac. 535, n. (s), 9th ed. Contra, Goodwin v. Archer, 2 P. Wms. 452 ; 1 Eq. Cas. Ab. 350, pl. 4 ; Anon., Moseley, 175.

Domicil.]—A foreigner having gained a British domicil does not lose it by becoming chargé d'affaires in this country for his own sovereign. Att.-Gen. v. Kent, 1 H. & C. 12 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 391 ; 6 L. T. 864 ; 10 W. R. 722.

Bringing Action on behalf of Foreign Government.]—To a bill filed by the chargé d'affaires of the Brazilian government in this country, in his own name, to restrain judgment creditors against certain furniture, upon which a sum of money had been advanced by the Brazilian government, secured by an unregistered bill of sale, a demurrer on the ground that the minister could not sue in his own name was allowed. Peneda (Baron) v. Johnson, 29 L. T. 452 ; 22 W. R. 103.

c. Consul.

How far protected from Process.]—The 7 Ann. c. 12, s. 2, does not extend to consuls, who are therefore liable to arrest. Viveash v. Becker, 3 M. & S. 284 ; 15 R. R. 488. And see Clarke v. Critico, 1 Taunt. 106 ; Barbuit's Case, Cas. t. Talb. 281.

The judge of a consular court, vested by treaty with plenary civil jurisdiction over all British subjects within the limits of the jurisdiction, while sitting and acting as judge of such consular court, is entitled to the same degree of protection which is accorded by the law of England to a judge of a court of record, and no action will lie for an act done by such judge within his jurisdiction in his judicial capacity. Haggard v. Pélicier, 61 L. J., P. C. 19 ; [1892] A. C. 61 ; 65 L. T. 769—P. C.

Remuneration.]—A foreign consul resident in this country, and receiving a salary as an officer from his own government, cannot maintain an action for any trouble or labour to which he may have been put in transacting business for merchants here, in which he acted in conformity to the express instructions of his own government. De Lema v. Haldimand, Ry. & M. 45 ; 1 Car. & P. 183.

But when he acts as between one individual and another, though he acts as consul, he may receive fees. Ib.

Consular Court—Jurisdiction.]—The supreme consular court at Constantinople has, by virtue of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 94 and orders in council of August, 1860, jurisdiction in cases of collision within Turkish waters, and can exercise such jurisdiction both in rem and in personam. Passayanni v. Russian Steam Navigation and Trading Co., or The Laconia, 2 Moore P. C. (N.S.) 161 ; 3 N. R. 219 ; 33 L. J., Adm. 11 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1160 ; 7 L. T. 164 ; 12 W. R. 90.

A railway company and partnership, completed and existing in a foreign country, is not within the purview of the English Joint Stock Companies Acts of 1856 and 1857, so as to enable her majesty's consular court in Egypt to issue a sequestration against such of the members of the company as were resident within the jurisdiction of that court, for not complying with the order of that court to register the company as one of limited liability under the English statutes. Bulkeley v. Schutz, 8 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 170; L. R. 3 P. C. 676.

Previously to the protocol of June, 1867, permitting British subjects to hold land in Turkey, in their own names, they were permitted only to hold land in the name of some female relative, or of some native subject of the Ottoman empire. Two partners who owned land before 1868 had not availed themselves of the protocol, but continued to hold the land in the name of a subject of the sultan. A suit was instituted by one of the partners in the supreme consular court of Constantinople for the dissolution of the partnership and for taking the accounts. An order was made in the suit that the receiver should sell the land by auction:—Held, that the order was not ultra vires of the court. Abbott v. Abbott, L. R. 6 P. C. 220.

Where a treaty provides that the British sovereign may establish a consular court in a foreign state, and that all complaints against British subjects shall be heard in the consular court, and all complaints against subjects of the foreign state in the courts of that country, a subject of the foreign state, when bringing an action in the consular court against a British subject, cannot be met with a counterclaim in the nature of a cross action. The sovereign of the foreign state, although not specially mentioned in the treaty, is not in a worse position in this respect than his subjects. The orders in council of 1865 and 1881, relating to the administration of justice of China and Japan, do not confer upon the British consular court in Japan a jurisdiction wider than was acquired by the treaty with Japan in 1858, but only prescribe the manner of exercising the jurisdiction which is exercisable under that treaty. Japanese Government v. Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co., 64 L. J., P. C. 107; [1895] A. C. 644; 11 R. 493; 72 L. T. 881; 8 Asp. M. C. 50—P. C.

—— Procedure—Joinder of Parties.]—Where the language of a rule regulating the procedure of British consular courts, and giving power to a court to dismiss actions in which there has been a joinder of distinct causes of action by and against the same parties, is permissive in form, and it is provided by a subsequent rule that, in matters not covered by the rules, the procedure of the English courts is to be followed, the language of the rule with regard to the dismissal of such suits cannot be construed as authorising their institution, nor is such a joinder of parties authorised by any rules of the courts in England. Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co. v. Tsune Kijama, 64 L. J., P. C. 146; [1895] A. C. 661; 11 R. 508; 73 L. T. 37; 8 Asp. M. C. 23—P. C.

—— Mode of Trial.]—In countries in which "by treaty, capitulation, grant, usage, sufferance and other lawful means" the Queen has obtained jurisdiction within the meaning of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, by which she is empowered to exercise such jurisdiction "in the same and as ample a manner as if she had acquired it by the cession or conquest of territory," she is by Order in Council empowered to establish courts and regulate procedure in the manner prescribed in such order. The Japan Order in Council, 1865, constituted a court with a jury of five, and in the court so established the appellant was convicted of the murder of her husband:—Held, that the order was not ultra vires, and that the appellant was not entitled as a British subject to a jury of twelve. Carew v. Japan Crown Prosecutor, 66 L. J., P. C. 95; [1897] A. C. 719; 77 L. T. 1—P. C.

—— Judgment—Effect.]—A plea of judgment recovered in an action brought in a consular court at Constantinople established under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 94, and payment by the defendant of the amount is a bar to an action brought in this country for the same cause. Barber v. Lambe, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 95; 29 L. J., C. P. 234; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 981; 8 W. R. 461.

A defendant relying on a judgment of a tribunal summoned by a foreign consular court, as a bar to a party proceeding in this country, is bound to prove that the tribunal had jurisdiction by treaty, usage, or voluntary submission. The Griefswald, Swabey, 430.

Proceedings in the consular court of Alexandria debar the plaintiff in this country from recovering from the captain of a ship, plaintiff in the consular court, the amount paid to him in excess of what he is entitled to demand in respect of freight payable on unloading and right delivery. Tamvaco v. Simpson, 13 L. T. 160.

—— Ultra Vires and Irregularity.]—Orders of the consular court at Constantinople set aside as ultra vires and irregular on the grounds (1) that they were made in a suit to which the appellant was not a party, and in which many of the issues which they purported to decide could not properly be raised or determined; (2) that although the appellant's wife was a bare trustee of the property, the suit was defective in not making the appellant also a party; (3) that assuming the court had jurisdiction to make an order in personam against the appellant's wife regarding the property, the order could not extend to bind the appellant's interest therein; (4) that so far as the orders affected land, the rights of the appellant and the other beneficial owners could only be determined in a suit properly framed and instituted in the proper forum; (5) that the appellant's wife, on a decree being made against her as trustee, would, according to the usual course of justice, be entitled to her costs, instead of being condemned to pay the costs of the proceedings against her. Pitts v. La Fontaine, 5 App. Cas. 564—P. C.

II. REVOLT AND RESTORATION.

In General.]—Upon the suppression of a rebellion, the restored legitimate government is entitled, as of right, to all moneys, goods and treasure which were public property of the government at the time of the outbreak; such right being in no way affected by the wrongful seizure of the property by the usurping government. United States of America v. M'Rae, 38 L. J., Ch. 406; L. R. 8 Eq. 69; 20 L. T. 476; 17 W. R. 764.

But with respect to property which has been voluntarily contributed to, or acquired by, the insurrectionary government in the exercise of its usurped authority, and has been impressed in its hands with the character of public property, the legitimate government is not, on its restoration, entitled by title paramount, but as successor only (and to that extent recognising the authority) of the displaced usurping government; and in seeking to recover such property from an agent of the displaced government can only do so to the same extent and subject to the same rights and obligations as if that government had not been displaced, and was itself proceeding against the agent. Ib.

The recognised sovereign of a foreign country, who has been displaced by a usurping government de facto, is held here to succeed, upon the restoration of his authority, to all the rights of the usurping government, and to the public property which it has acquired, and he is the proper person to sue in respect of it. United States of America v. Prioleau, 2 Hem. & M. 559; 35 L. J., Ch. 7; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 792; 13 L. T. 92; 13 W. R. 1062.

Semble, that the recognised sovereign so succeeds to the property, subject to all the contracts entered into here by the Government de facto, whether with foreigners or natural-born subjects. Ib.

Therefore, in such a case the court refused, upon an interlocutory application, at the instance of a foreign government, to appoint a receiver against persons claiming a lien upon public property under a contract made in this country with the usurping government while in existence. Ib.

The government formed during a revolution in Sicily seized upon the king's treasure, and remitted part of it to persons in this country, to purchase steam-ships, and they applied the remittance accordingly:—Held, that the king, who had re-established his authority, was entitled to sue for one of the ships, which remained in the port of London. Two Sicilies (King) v. Willcox, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 332; 19 L. J., Ch. 202; 14 Jur. 163.

Where the revolutionary or de facto government of a country has been recognised by the government of a foreign state, a subject of such foreign state may safely contract with that de facto government; and if, by subsequent revolution, the previously existing government of the country is restored, the restored government is bound by international law to treat any such contract as valid, and in a litigation with the foreigner, party to the contract, must adopt the contract, merely taking such rights as the de facto government might have had under it:—Semble, that even in the case of a contract by a foreigner with a rebel state which has not been internationally recognised, property acquired under it cannot be recovered from him in violation of the contract. Peru Republic v. Dreyfus, 57 L. J., Ch. 536; 38 Ch. D. 348; 58 L. T. 433; 36 W. R. 492. And see Berne (City) v. Bank of England, 9 Ves. 347; 7 R. R. 218: and Dolder v. Huntingfield (Lord), 11 Ves. 283; 8 R. R. 139.

To a bill filed by the United States of America, alleging that they had succeeded to the rights of the late Confederate States of America, and praying an account and relief in respect of money received by the defendant, as agent for the Confederate States, the defendant pleaded that by a law of the United States the property of all persons who had acted as agents for the Confederate States was liable to confiscation, and that proceedings were actually pending in America for confiscation of his property there on the ground of his having so acted as agent, and that he could not answer without exposing himself to such confiscation, and that the plaintiffs could not have relief without waiving the right to confiscate:—Held, that the plea was bad so far as related to the relief, but good as to the discovery, and that the plaintiffs must be allowed to proceed and prove their case if they were able to do so without the answer of the defendant. United States of America v. McRae, 37 L. J., Ch. 129; L. R. 3 Ch. 79; 17 L. T. 428; 16 W. R. 377.

Jurisdiction of Courts to prevent.]—The Court of Chancery has no jurisdiction to interfere merely with a view to prevent revolution; it is only to prevent an injury to property that its aid can be invoked. Austria (Emperor) v. Kossuth, 3 De G. F. & J. 217; 30 L. J., Ch. 690; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 639; 4 L. T. 494; 9 W. R. 712.

Revolted State—Purchase of Securities of.]—It is illegal to purchase obligations or securities purporting to be granted by the government of a foreign country, which government is not recognised by the English executive. Thompson v. Barclay, 6 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 93. S. P., Thompson v. Powles, 2 Sim. 194. And see Jones v. Garcia del Rio, Turn. & R. 298; 24 R. R. 64.

Recognition of Revolted States.]—If a foreign state is recognised by this country, it is not necessary to support an allegation which describes it as a state, to prove that it is in fact an existing state; but if it is not so recognised, then such proof becomes necessary, and may be admitted. Yrisarri v. Clement, 3 Bing. 432; 11 Moore, 308; 2 Car. & P. 223.

If a body of persons assemble together to protect themselves and support their own independence, and make laws, and have courts of justice, that is evidence of their being a state; and it makes no difference whether it formerly belonged to another country or not, if they do not continue to acknowledge it, and are in possession of a force sufficient to support themselves in opposition to it. Ib. Cp. Berne City v. Bank of England, 7 Ves. 347; 7 R. R. 218; Mighell v. Johore (Sultan), 63 L. J., Q. B. 593; [1894] 1 Q. B. 149; 9 R. 447; 70 L. T. 64; 58 J. P. 244—C. A.

Effect of Re-Conquest.]—A country re-conquered from an enemy reverts to the same state that it was in before its conquest. The British inhabitants of a part of the French dominions which was conquered by the Dutch and afterwards re-conquered by the French, ought therefore to have had, after its re-conquest, the same protection that they were entitled to under the treaty of commerce of 1786; and were awarded compensation in respect of losses, after the re-conquest, by sequestration of their property in contravention of that treaty by the French government. Gambe's Case, 2 Knapp, 369.

III. CONQUERED STATES AND COLONIES.

What Law applicable.]—The laws of a conquered country continue until altered. Campbell v. Hall, Lofft, 655; Cowp. 204.

Englishmen establishing themselves in an Uninhabited Country.]—Where Englishmen establish themselves in an uninhabited or a barbarous country, they carry with them not only the laws, but the sovereignty, of their own state; and those who live amongst them, and become members of their community, become partakers of and subject to the same laws. Bengal (Adv.-Gen.) v. Ranee Surnomoye Dossee, 9 Moore, Ind. App. 387; 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 22; 2 N. R. 530; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 877; 8 L. T. 843; 12 W. R. 21.

But this rule does not apply to the early settlement of the English in India, as the permission to the settlers to use their own laws within the factories did not extend those laws to natives associated with them within the same limits. Ib.

English Subjects visiting Colonies.]—When English settlers go out to a province conquered by the English, they carry with them, so far as may be applicable to their purpose, all the immunities and privileges of the law of England as the law of England was at that time—Per Blackburn, Lord. Lauderdale Peerage, The, 10 App. Cas. 692.

—— Alienage.]—The introduction of the English law into a conquered country, does not draw with it that branch which relates to aliens, if the acts of the power introducing it shew that it was introduced, not in all its branches, but only sub modo, and with the exception of this portion. The English law incapacitating aliens from holding real property to their own use, and transmitting it by descent or devise, has never been introduced into the East Indies. Lyons Corporation v. East India Co., 1 Moore, P. C. 175; 1 Moore, Ind. App. 175.

—— Statutes of Mortmain.]—Lands in a country conquered by or a colony settled by Englishmen, are not ipso facto subject to the English statutes of mortmain. Att.-Gen. v. Stewart, 2 Mer. 143; 16 R. R. 162: Jex v. McKinney, 58 L. J., P. C. 67; 14 App. Cas. 77; 60 L. T. 287; 37 W. R. 577—P. C.

—— Marriage Laws.]—With respect to marriage, the law which existed here before the Marriage Act, viz. the canon law, is the law applicable to British subjects resident in a British settlement. Lautour v. Teesdale, 2 Marsh. 243; 8 Taunt. 880; 17 R. R. 518. And see Rex v. Brampton Inhabitants, 10 East, 282; 10 R. R. 299.

Proposal to establish Colony—Undertaking Fictitious — Scrip Certificates.]—Where the defendant had been employed as the plaintiff's agent in raising a loan for establishing a colony on the coast of Honduras, and in that capacity had received deposits from various subscribers, to whom he gave scrip certificates, on which it was stated that the loan was for the use of the Poyais state:—Held, that it was incumbent on the plaintiff to prove the existence of such a state, on the ground that one of two parties to a mere bubble to deceive the public could not maintain an action against the other. M'Gregor v. Lowe, Ry. & M. 57; 1 Car. & P. 200.

Rights over a Conquered Country.]—The king has a legislative authority over a conquered country, although he may preclude himself from the exercise of that authority, by a proclamation that he has commissioned the governor to call an assembly of the people for the purpose of enacting laws. Campbell v. Hall, Lofft, 655; Cowp. 204.

The king, before he has published a proclamation, promising a legislative assembly, might have laid a tax upon Grenada as a conquered country, without either the consent of parliament or the people of Grenada in their assembly or otherwise; but that by such a proclamation he had precluded himself from so doing. Ib.

A country conquered by the British arms becomes subject to the Crown, and therefore to the legislative power of parliament; and its inhabitants become British subjects. Ib.

IV. PERSONS.

a. ALIENAGE.

1. General Principles.

Who is an Alien.]—A neutral residing in an enemy's country, as consul of a neutral state, and who also trades there as a merchant, is to be regarded as an enemy. Sorensen v. Reg., 11 Moore, P. C. 141.

An alien is a subject of a foreign state who has not been born within the allegiance of the Crown of this kingdom. Reg. v. Burke, 11 Cox, C. C. 138.

Alien carrying on trade in an enemy's country, though resident there also in the character of consul of a neutral state, considered an alien enemy, and as such disabled to sue, and liable to confiscation. Albrecht v. Sussmann, 2 Ves. & B. 323; 13 R. R. 110.

The character of an alien and a British subject cannot be united in one person. Reg. v. Manning, 1 Den. C. C. 467; T. & M. 155; 2 Car. & K. 887; 19 L. J., M. C. 1; 13 Jur. 962; 4 Cox, C. C. 31.

A native of a neutral state taken in an act of hostility on board an enemy's ship, and brought to England as a prisoner of war, is not disabled from suing while in confinement, on a contract entered into as a prisoner of war. Sparenburgh v. Bannatyne, 1 Bos. & P. 163; 2 Esp. 581; 4 R. R. 772.

An inhabitant of an island ceded by Great Britain, who, immediately after its cession, comes over to England, and finding the climate not agree with his health, returns to the ceded island, in which he had left his family, and resides with them there for upwards of six years, and then emigrates with them to another country under the government of Great Britain, retains the character of a British subject; and one of his children, born after the capitulation of the island, and before its final cession by treaty, is not an alien. Jephson v. Riera, 3 Knapp, 130.

A natural-born subject of this country may also be a citizen of America for the purposes of commerce, and entitled to all the advantages of an American, under a treaty between this country and the United States: the circumstance of his coming over here for a temporary purpose does not deprive him of those advantages. Wilson v. Marryat, 8 Term Rep. 31; 1 Bos. & P. 430.

By what Law determined.]—The status of a man, as whether alien or not, is to be determined by the law of this country; but the rights and liabilities incident to that status are fixed by the law of the colony where he has been or is a resident. Accordingly, it was determined, 1st, that a Frenchman who had resided in the Mauritius, and had filled the office of assignee of insolvent estates, and been admitted to take the oath of allegiance, was clearly an alien; 2nd, that according to the French law, which, by the treaty of cession in 1810, prevails in the Mauritius, the circumstances of the case did not constitute that "authorisation by the government," in the absence of which, according to the French law, an alien may be removed without cause shewn. Adams, In re, 1 Moore, P. C. 460.

Descendants born Abroad of Natural-born British Subjects.]—The status of natural-born British subjects, which by the acts 7 Ann. c. 5, 4 Geo. 2, c. 21, and 13 Geo. 3, c. 21, is conferred on children and grandchildren born abroad of natural-born British subjects, is a merely personal status, and is not by those acts made transmissible to the descendants of the persons to whom that status is thereby given. There is no foundation for the notion that by the common law of England the posterity of a natural-born British subject, though born abroad, must be treated as British subjects for ever. The rule that the children born abroad of ambassadors in the service of the Crown of England abroad, are treated as natural-born British subjects, does not apply to the children born abroad of officers in the military service of the Crown in foreign parts. De Geer v. Stone, 52 L. J., Ch. 57; 22 Ch. D. 243; 47 L. T. 434; 31 W. R. 241.

Status of Son of Alien before 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 4.]—The son of an alien father and English mother, born out of the king's allegiance, could not inherit to his mother in this country, before 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 4. Doe d. Durouré v. Jones, 4 Term Rep. 300; 2 R. R. 390. And see further, col. 212, post.

Persons born in the United States of America, since the treaty of 1783, by which the independence of those states was acknowledged by this country, are aliens, and cannot take lands by descent, or inherit them in this country. Doe d. Thomas v. Acklam, 4 D. & R. 394; 2 B. & C. 779; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 129; 26 R. R. 544.

—— Electoral Status of Persons born in Hanover before the Queen's Accession.]—At a parliamentary election in 1885 the following persons voted:—(1) Persons born in the kingdom of Hanover before 1837 and not naturalised; (2) persons born in that kingdom since 1837 of parents born there before that date and not naturalised; (3) a person born in Prussia since 1837 of parents born in Hanover in 1802 and not naturalised:—Held, that such persons are aliens in the contemplation of the law relating to parliamentary elections, and as such disentitled to vote though upon the register. Isaacson v. Durant, 55 L. J., Q. B. 331; 17 Q. B. D. 54; 54 L. T. 684; 34 W. R. 547.

Partnership with Alien Enemy—Respective Rights.]—Two American citizens and a French subject being in partnership, and owners of certain ships captured by British cruisers, and the commissioners under the treaty in 1794 between this country and America, for awarding compensation to American subjects who had suffered losses by capture, for which they could obtain no redress in the ordinary tribunals, having awarded in compensation of the ships captured, certain sums to the two Americans, with express exclusion of the French citizen, as an alien enemy:—Held, the sums so awarded are not partnership property; and the creditors of the partnership have no claim on them, as against the separate creditors of the Americans. Campbell v. Mullett, 2 Swan. 551; 19 R. R. 127.

A debt due to two partners is good to support a commission of bankruptcy, notwithstanding one of the partners is resident in an enemy's country, such residence not being shewn to be an adhering to the enemy. Roberts v. Hardy, 3 M. & S. 533; 16 R. R. 347.

Women.]—A native-born Irishman, a British subject, married a Frenchwoman domiciled in France. They resided in France till the breaking out of the French revolution, when they emigrated to Germany. The wife died in the lifetime of her husband, without having ever come within the territory of Great Britain:—Held, that she did not by her marriage become a British subject, for that, while she remained abroad, she was not within the allegiance of the Crown of England. Wall's Case, 6 Moore, P. C. 216; 12 Jur. 145.

By the common law of England, before 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 16, an alien woman married to an Englishman was not entitled to dower. Ib.

In an ejectment by M. and Sarah his wife, Joyce Child, and Armand Shallon and Eleanor his wife, the females made out their title as co-heiresses of Jonah Child. The husband of Eleanor was an Egyptian:—Held, that the fact of Shallon being an alien would not prevent the plaintiffs from recovering. Doe d. Miller v. Rogers, 1 Car. & K. 390.

—— Since 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66.]—The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 16, by which an alien woman, married to a natural-born subject, is naturalised, is not a declaratory act. Wall's Case, 6 Moore, P. C. 216; 12 Jur. 145.

A female alien, who has married a natural-born subject of this realm, is, by virtue of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 16, naturalised, and acquires the status of a natural-born subject. Reg. v. Manning, 1 Den. C. C. 467; T. & M. 155; 2 Car. & K. 887; 19 L. J., M. C. 1; 13 Jur. 962; 4 Cox, C. C. 31.

By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 16, any foreign woman married, or who shall be married to a natural-born subject, or person naturalised, shall be deemed and taken to be herself naturalised, and to have all the rights and privileges of a natural-born subject:—Held, that a woman indicted for murder, who was a native of Lausanne, in Switzerland, and was married to a British subject in 1847, was not entitled to a jury de medietate linguæ, as by her marriage her civil and political status was changed, she having ceased to be an alien, and having to all intents and purposes become a British subject. Ib.

Effect of return of Peace.]—Choses in action belonging to an alien enemy are forfeited to the Crown; but there must be a commitment and inquisition to entitle the king; and a peace before inquisition discharges the cause of forfeiture. Att.-Gen. v. Weedon, Park, 267.

A right of a foreigner by contract is generally only suspended by a subsequent war, and may be enforced upon the restoration of peace. In bankruptcy, therefore, a claim admitted, reserving the dividend. Contract with alien enemy void. Boussmaker, Ex parte, 13 Ves. 71; 9 R. R. 142.

English Acts apply to Ireland.]—The English acts relating to aliens apply to Ireland since the Act of Union as far as they are acts affecting the status of persons in allegiance to the king of the United Kingdom. Davies v. Lynch, 16 W. R. 1207 (Ir.).

Pleadings relating to.]—A plea, that the plaintiff was an alien enemy residing in this kingdom without the licence, safe conduct, or permission of the sovereign, is good, though it does not expressly negative a certificate from one of the secretaries of state under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, ss. 6, 8. Alcenius v. Nygren, 4 El. & Bl. 217 ; 24 L. J., Q. B. 19 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 16 ; 3 W. R. 25.

Proof of Alienage.]—The mere production of a passport found on a prisoner, which is proved to be granted by the authorities of a foreign state to natural-born subjects only, is not evidence of his being an alien. Reg. v. Burke, 11 Cox, C. C. 138.

To prove a replication of licence to a plea of alien enemy, it is not enough to prove that a licence was granted to the plaintiff with an allowance to undertake a voyage, which did not terminate until the commencement of hostilities, and that after the termination of the voyage he was at large here without molestation. Boulton v. Dobree, 2 Camp. 163.

To prove that a person was an alien enemy at the time of the action, it is not enough to shew that he was some time before domiciled in a territory which has become hostile, without shewing that he was a native of that territory. Harman v. Kingston, 3 Camp. 152 ; 13 R. R. 775.

2. Alien Friend.

Rights of—Right to enter British Territory.]—An alien friend has no legal right enforceable by action to enter British territory. Musgrove v. Chung Teong Toy, 60 L. J., P. C. 28 ; [1891] A. C. 272 ; 64 L. T. 378—P. C.

—— Lands—Agreement for a Lease.]—An agreement for a lease to an alien artificer was void, by 32 Hen. 8, c. 16, s. 13, as much as an actual demise. Lapierre v. M'Intosh, 1 P. & D. 629 ; 9 A. & E. 758 ; 8 L. J., Q. B. 112 ; 3 Jur. 123.

—— Assignment of Lease.] — But the 32 Hen. 8, c. 16, s. 13, did not make void an assignment of a lease to an alien artificer. Wootton v. Steffenoni, 12 M. & W. 129 ; 13 L. J., Ex. 72.

—— Dower.]—By the common law of England, before 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 16, an alien woman, married to an Englishman, was not entitled to dower. Wall's Case, 6 Moore, P. C. 216 ; 12 Jur. 145.

—— Trusts of—Before Naturalisation Act.]—In March, 1862, L. & S. (the wife of an alien) conveyed land of which they were tenants in common to a trustee, upon trust to sell and stand possessed of the proceeds for L. & S. in equal shares, the share of S. to be for her separate use. In April, 1862, L. & S. entered into an agreement to allot the lands in severalty, and that the trustee should stand possessed of each such respective allotment on the respective trusts declared by the deed of March, and that nothing in the agreement should prejudice or affect any of the powers or trusts of the deed. No sale was ever effected, and S. died in 1866, having by her will given to her husband, the alien, her personal estate absolutely and a life interest in her real estates :—Held, first, that the land was not in equity converted into money. Sharp v. De St. Sauveur, 41 L. J., Ch. 576 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 343 ; 26 L. T. 142 ; 20 W. R. 269.

—— Rights of Crown.] — Held, thirdly, that the trust for the alien could be enforced for the benefit of the Crown. Ib.

A devise of lands was made to English subjects, in trust to sell, and after payment of mortgages to invest the surplus moneys in the funds in trust for persons, some of whom were aliens :—Held, that the Crown was not entitled to the share of the aliens either in the land or the produce. Du Hourmelin v. Sheldon, 1 Beav. 79 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 133 ; 3 Jur. 69. Affirmed 4 Myl. & Cr. 525 ; 9 L. J., Ch. 25 ; 4 Jur. 116.

A court of equity will enforce for the benefit of the Crown, a trust of real estate created in favour of an alien. The devise being valid, and there being a cestui que trust, who can take but not hold, the Crown becomes entitled beneficially, and not the trustee or heir-at-law. Barrow v. Wadkin, 24 Beav. 1 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 679 ; 5 W. R. 695.

A devise to trustees in trust for a person who is an alien is a trust incapable of taking effect, either for the benefit of the alien or of the Crown, and the beneficial interest results to the heir of the testator. Rittson v. Stordy, 3 Sm. & G. 230 ; 3 Eq. R. 1039 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 771 ; 3 W. R. 627. See S. C. on appeal, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 410 ; 4 W. R. 438.

—— Effect of Naturalisation Act, 1870.]—Where the title of the alien having accrued before the passing of the Naturalisation Act, 1870, that act does not remove his disability to hold land. Sharp v. De St. Sauveur, supra.

—— Copyright.] — An alien friend who, during the time of his temporary residence in a British colony, publishes, in the United Kingdom, a book of which he is the author, is, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45, entitled to the benefit of English copyright. Routledge v. Low, 37 L. J., Ch. 454 ; L. R. 3 H. L. 100 ; 18 L. T. 833 ; 16 W. R. 1081. See further, title COPYRIGHT.

—— Fraudulent Use of Trade Mark.] — A foreign manufacturer has a remedy by suit in this country, for an injunction and account of profits against a manufacturer who has committed a fraud upon him by using his trade mark for the purpose of inducing the public to believe that the goods so marked are manufactured by the foreigner. Collins Co. v. Brown, 3 Kay & J. 423 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 929 ; 5 W. R. 676.

An alien can in the courts of this country sue to restrain the fraudulent appropriation of his trade mark, although the goods on which such trade mark is affixed are not usually sold by him in this country. Collins Co. v. Reeves, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 865 ; 6 W. R. 717.

—— Libel.]—An alien friend, though resident abroad, is entitled to sue in the courts at Westminster for a libel published concerning him in England. Pisani v. Lawson, 6 Bing. (N.C.) 90 ; 8 Scott, 180 ; 8 D. P. C. 57 ; 9 L. J., C. P. 12 ; 3 Jur. 1153.

—— Patent.]—A patentee applied to the Court of Chancery to stay all proceedings on a scire facias to repeal the patent, or that a nolle prosequi might be entered, on the ground that the prosecutor was an alien:—Held, that the court had no authority to interfere in the matter. Reg. v. Prosser, 11 Beav. 306; 18 L. J., Ch. 35; 13 Jur. 71.

An illegal monoply is a public grievance, and the Crown having been informed of such a grievance, and having the power and duty to remove it, if it be such, ought not to be disabled from directing the necessary proceedings to ascertain the truth, because the information was given by an alien. Ib.

—— Will of—Execution.]—A will made according to the forms of English law by an alien, who though her domicil of origin was English, was domiciled abroad at the time of making her will and of her death, is not entitled to probate in this country. In determining what is the valid will of an alien, the general principles of law prior to the passing of the Naturalisation Act, 1870, are still applicable. Bloxam v. Favre, 53 L. J., P. 26; 9 P. D. 130; 50 L. T. 776; 32 W. R. 673.

Other Matters—Bastardy Orders.]—An order in bastardy cannot be made in respect of an illegitimate child born abroad of a foreign woman. Reg. v. Blane, 13 Q. B. 769; 3 New Sess. Cas. 597; 18 L. J., M. C. 216; 13 Jur. 854.

3. Alien Enemy.

a. Contracts by and with.

Generally.]—Commerce by a person resident in an enemy's country, even as a representative of the Crown of this country, is illegal, and the subject of prize, however beneficial to this country, unless authorised by licence. Baglehole, Ex parte, 18 Ves. 528; 1 Rose, 271. S. P., M'Connell v. Hector, 3 Bos. & P. 113; 6 R. R. 724.

Trading with an enemy without the king's licence is illegal; and it is illegal for a subject in time of war, without the king's licence, to bring even in a neutral ship goods from an enemy's port, which were purchased by his agent resident in the enemy's country, after the commencement of hostilities, although it may not appear that they were purchased from an enemy. Potts v. Bell, 8 Term Rep. 548; 2 Esp. 612; 5 R. R. 452.

A contract with an alien enemy made in time of war cannot be enforced in the courts here. Willison v. Pattison, 7 Taunt. 439; 1 Moore, 133; 18 R. R. 525.

An action may be maintained here by a neutral on promissory notes given to him by a British subject in an enemy's country for goods sold there. Houriet v. Morris, 3 Camp. 303.

Though a bill drawn by a prisoner of war in France upon a person resident in England in favour of an alien enemy, could not have been originally enforced, the drawer is liable on a subsequent promise in time of peace. Duhammel v. Pickering, 2 Stark. 90; 19 R. R. 686.

A., a native of America, and B., a native of England, had dealings by mutual consignments previous to 1812. In June, 1812, war was declared between the two countries, and on the 24th December, 1814, preliminaries of peace were signed at Ghent. A cargo of goods consigned on account by A. to B. arrived in England in November, 1814, and were sent by B. to France and there sold, and he received bills for the amount which he got discounted. Another cargo so consigned arrived in England in January, 1815, and was sold by B. before the 15th February. In March, 1815, B. became bankrupt, and was appointed by his assignees their agent to wind up his affairs, in the course of which employment he received the proceeds of the second cargo, and transmitted accounts to A., in which he admitted him to be his creditor for a balance in respect of the proceeds of both cargoes. In an action by A. against the assignees of B., to recover such balance:—Held, that A. was entitled to prove under B.'s commission for the balance due to him upon the second cargo only. Ogden v. Peele, 8 D. & R. 1; 29 R. R. 472.

Crown can enforce Contract made by Alien Enemy.]—If an alien enemy, a prisoner of war, makes a contract, it may be enforced by the king for the benefit of the Crown. Maria v. Hall, 1 Taunt. 33, n.; 9 R. R. 696.

And if the Crown does not enforce it, the prisoner may sue on it after the return of peace. Ib. Contra, Anthon v. Fisher, 2 Dougl. 649, n.

Ransom.]—The ransom of British ships or goods taken by the enemy was made void, and prohibited under a penalty of 500*l.* by 22 Geo. 3, c. 25. Anthon v. Fisher, 2 Dougl. 649, n. And see Woodward v. Larking, 3 Esp. 286.

The ransom acts are remedial laws, and must be construed liberally to meet the mischief. Havelock v. Rockwood, 8 Term Rep. 277.

An action was maintainable by an alien enemy upon a ransom bill. Ricord v. Bettenham, 3 Burr. 1734; 1 W. Bl. 563.

Even when the hostage given died in prison. Ib.

An enemy's ship which has ransomed a British vessel, being retaken with the hostage and ransom bill on board, but the bill secreted, and not delivered up to the recaptor, the first captor may recover upon the ransom bill. Corme v. Blackbourne, 2 Dougl. 641.

The plaintiff and defendant being taken prisoners in Portugal, jointly solicited and obtained the liberation of themselves, and the ransom of the defendant's ship, contrary to 45 Geo. 3, c. 72; to effect which the plaintiff lent money to the defendant, who afterwards gave him a bill for the amount:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover on the bill. Webb v. Brooke, 3 Taunt. 6.

b. Trading in time of War.

In General.]—A contract between two subjects of a neutral state to export contraband of war to a belligerent is not unlawful in the neutral state. Chavasse, Ex parte, Grazebrook, In re, 4 De G. J. & S. 655; 34 L. J., Bk. 17; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 400; 12 L. T. 249; 13 W. R. 627.

The carrying on trade with a blockaded port is not a breach of municipal law, nor illegal, so as to prevent a court of the loci contractûs from enforcing the contract of which it is the subject. The Helen, 35 L. J., Adm. 2; L. R. 1 Adm. 1; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 1025; 13 L. T. 305; 14 W. R. 136.

A neutral state is not bound by the law of nations to impede or diminish its own trade by municipal restrictions. Ib.

A natural-born subject of this country, domiciled in a foreign country in amity with this, may lawfully exercise the privileges of a subject of the country where he is domiciled to trade with another country in hostility with this. Bell v. Reid, 1 M. & S. 726; 14 R. R. 557.

The king having, by orders in council, declared certain ports in St. Domingo not hostile, which had formerly been but were no longer in the possession or under the dominion of France; though such declarations were made for collateral and limited purposes, not covering in their terms the trading in question; yet a trading to such ports from parts of the king's dominions, not named in such prior limited orders, was legalised, as if it had been to an ordinary neutral port, by such authoritative recognition of those ports in St. Domingo not being hostile: and the inference as to the legality of such neutral trade was not rebutted by a subsequent order of council opening the trade generally (so as to cover in its terms the particular adventure) to all ports of St. Domingo not in the possession of France. And such trade to neutral ports, requiring no licence from the Crown, is not restricted by the fact of a British ship carrying a licence for trading to them from Great Britain with a certain specified cargo; but the British trader may, notwithstanding, carry other lawful goods, and insure his whole adventure, and may recover from the underwriter a loss arising from capture by a British cruiser, though induced by the fact of such trading with goods not being covered by the licence which was produced to the captor; for the licence itself not being necessary, the carrying of goods not included in it was no legal cause of seizure, however it might operate upon the question of costs in the Prize Court. Blackburne v. Thompson, 15 East, 81; 3 Camp. 61; 13 R. R. 382.

Enemies' goods coming into this country may be seized for the use of the Crown. Land v. North (Lord), 4 Dougl. 266.

What is a State of War.]—Though a state may be in the military possession of one or two belligerents, that will not constitute her subjects enemies to the other belligerent, if the sovereign power of the latter chooses to permit a continuance of commerce with them; therefore, where an insurance was effected on property shipped in this country on account of persons who were domiciled at Hamburg, at a time when that country was in the possession of French troops, the senate continuing to exercise the powers of civil government in the same manner as before:—Held, that the assured were entitled to recover for a loss which happened in the course of a voyage permitted by his majesty's orders in council. Hagedorn v. Bell, 1 M. & S. 450; 14 R. R. 497.

c. Licence to Trade.

i. Construction.

Licences to trade with an enemy are to be construed liberally, and not, like grants of property from the Crown, strictly. Flindt v. Scott, 5 Taunt. 674; 15 R. R. 615—Ex. Ch.

A misdescription of a party applying to the Crown for a licence to trade with an enemy, if made without fraud, does not vacate the licence, or vitiate a policy effected upon it. Vaughan v. Lemeke (in error), 7 D. & R. 236; 8 Moore, 646; 1 Bing. 473; 25 R. R. 691.

Licence—Non-assignable.]—A licence from the king to B., to import in neutrals, from an enemy's country, goods, being the property of B., cannot be assigned so as to authorise the importation of goods the property of the assignee. Feise v. Thompson, 1 Taunt. 121.

Subject to a Condition.]—A licence was granted for the exportation of gunpowder on the petition of the manufacturer, on behalf of himself and others, provided the merchant exporter should first give a security by a bond, with two sureties, under a certain condition. The manufacturer of the powder sold it to the plaintiff, and contracted to ship it free on board:—Held, that the condition of this licence was not complied with by the manufacturer's giving the required security, as he was not the merchant exporter within the meaning of the licence. Camels v. Britten, 4 B. & Ald. 184.

ii. Operation.

It is legal to trade with the subjects of an enemy's country by the king's licence. Vandyck v. Whitmore, 1 East, 475.

A Licence to Trade not equivalent to Licence to Reside.]—An order in council, licensing a person to export and import certain goods to and from an enemy's country, does not authorise his residence and trading there. Baglehole, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 271; 18 Ves. 525.

Prospective Licence.]—A prospective licence from the Crown for a voyage from an enemy's country, granted after the voyage has commenced, is insufficient to render it legal. Henry v. Staniforth, 4 Camp. 270; 17 R. R. 293.

—— Licence obtained before Contract executed.]—The 43 Geo. 3, c. 153, s. 15, having enabled the king, by order in council, to license the importation of certain goods, being British or neutral property from the enemy's country, in neutral ships; a contract made by A. and B., British subjects, for the purchase of brandy from a house of trade in France (an enemy), to be shipped thence in a neutral ship, on account of A. and B., which contract was made in contemplation of obtaining a licence for that purpose, which licence was accordingly obtained soon after the making of such contract, and before it was begun to be executed, is a legal contract, and may lawfully be guaranteed in the first instance by C. and D., other British subjects; and after such licence obtained, the guarantees are liable in damages for non-shipment of the goods by the house in France, on board a neutral ship sent there for that purpose. Timson v. Merac, 9 East, 35.

As to Persons.]—A licence to trade to an enemy's country, granted to one set of British merchants, cannot be used to cover a trading by other British merchants, without connecting them together. Bush v. Bell, 16 East, 3; 14 R. R. 270.

In an alien enemy, commorant here under the king's licence to reside here, purchases goods for exportation, the exportaton by him, after his licence to reside has ceased, is not protected by a licence to trade, also obtained after his licence to reside has ceased, and authorising the exportation of the identical goods by B. and K. or other British merchants. Warind v. Scott, 4 Taunt. 605; 13 R. R. 698.

A licence to export goods to certain places within the influence of the enemy, interdicted to British commerce, granted to N. on behalf of himself and other British merchants, is sufficient to legalise an insurance on such an adventure, if it appears that N. was the agent employed by the British merchants really interested in it to get the licence, though he had no property in the goods himself. Rawlinson v. Janson, 12 East, 223.

A licence to a British merchant, that a ship may go to a hostile port, and bring home a cargo of goods, authorises the importation of such goods, being the property of an alien enemy, a subject of that hostile country; and therefore authorises him to insure, and enforce his contract of insurance in our courts. Morgan v. Oswald, 3 Taunt. 554. See Flindt v. Scott, 15 R. R. 615, 620.

Under a licence to a British merchant, by name, on behalf of himself and others to export to P., and to import a cargo thence, an alien enemy may lawfully be interested in the export cargo as well as in the import cargo. Feise v. Bell, 4 Taunt. 4; 13 R. R. 549.

A native Spaniard domiciled here in time of war between this country and Spain, having been licensed in general terms by the king to ship goods in a neutral vessel hence to certain ports of Spain, such commerce is legalised for all purposes of its due and effectual prosecution, either for the benefit of the party himself or of his correspondents, though residing in the enemy's country. Usparicha v. Noble, 13 East, 332; 12 R. R. 360.

If a licence is obtained from the British government by A. to import from an enemy's country in six ships such goods as shall be specified in his bill of lading, and goods are imported on board one of the six ships on account of B., C. and D., to whom several bills of lading are sent with their respective goods, and one general bill of lading for the whole cargo is sent to A., the whole cargo will be protected. Defflis v. Parry, 3 Bos. & P. 3. But see Feise v. Waters, col. 206.

A licence to F. & Co., obtained by them as the plaintiff's agents, permitting them to export in a ship named, bearing any flag except the French, specified goods from London to Dantzig, or any port in the Baltic not blockaded, though the documents might represent her destination to any neutral or hostile part, and to whomsoever the property might appear to belong, protects a consignment made by a Prussian neutral alien, resident here by licence, to a hostile Russian port of the Baltic. Schmakoeg v. Andrews, 5 Taunt. 716. See Flindt v. Scott, 15 R. R. 615.

Two neutral Prussians, one of them resident in England, the other at Konigsberg, having a licence to export to all Baltic ports, some whereof were hostile, were not precluded from recovering on an insurance of goods exported, and confiscated by an act of the Prussian government, then neutral. Anthony v. Moline, 5 Taunt. 711.

A licence to trade with an enemy granted to F. & Co. and others, may be used by the person for whom F. & Co. were the acting agents in procuring such licence, and in carrying on the adventure, though the person was a foreigner residing here under an alien licence at the time. Feise v. Newnham, 16 East, 197.

If a merchant, British by domicil, and two neutral merchants, his partners, export goods from London to a hostile port, under a licence granted to their broker on behalf of several British merchants, and insure, although the neutrals become enemies before action brought, the broker may, upon a loss incurred, maintain an action against the underwriters to recover the value of the joint interest of the three. De Tastet v. Taylor, 4 Taunt. 233; 13 R. R. 585.

Although a licence "to the plaintiff, of London, merchant, on behalf of himself and other British and neutral merchants, to export on board a certain vessel, bearing any flag except the French, a specified cargo from London to any port in the Baltic not under blockade, and to whomsoever the property may appear to belong," did not protect a part of the cargo which was the property of Russian subjects at the time of the shipment, Russia being then at war with this country, so as to entitle the plaintiff to recover in respect of that part upon a policy effected by him as the agent for and by the orders of those Russian subjects, the loss being occasioned by seizure, and confiscation in a Russian port by commissioners appointed by the Russian government; yet, as the licence was also obtained, and the policy effected by the plaintiff on his own account, and as agent for certain Hamburghers, who were respectively interested in separate and distinct proportions of the cargo:—Held, that he was entitled to recover in respect of his own interest, and that of the Hamburghers: Hamburgh being in a state of permissive neutrality with this country. Hagedorn v. Bazett, 2 M. & S. 100.

Under a licence to British brokers resident here, that a ship bearing any flag may import from an enemy's country to whomsoever the property may appear to belong, three British subjects not named in the licence, one of whom resides in a hostile country, may import from another hostile country to this. Fayle v. Bourdillon, 3 Taunt. 546.

A licence granted under an order in council to H. S. (a British resident merchant) permitting a vessel, bearing any flag except the French, to proceed in ballast from any port north of the Scheldt to Archangel, there to load a cargo of such goods as were permitted by law to be imported, and proceed with the same to a port in the United Kingdom, was considered as not confined personally to H. S. or any particular class of persons; and therefore, where Russian subjects at Archangel, who were alien enemies, had shipped goods under such licence for the purpose of being brought into this country:—Held, that they were protected by it; and an insurance made for their benefit was legal. Robinson v. Touray, 1 M. & S. 217; 3 Camp. 160; 13 R. R. 781; and see 16 R. R. 284, n. S. P., Robinson v. Cheesewright, 1 M. & S. 220.

As to Goods.]—Under a licence to A. to import goods the property of A., as specified in his bill of lading, if the goods are consigned to others with particular bills of lading, a general bill of lading signed to A., without proof of some special interest in A. in the goods, will not entitle the consignment to the benefit of the licence. Feise v. Waters, 2 Taunt. 248. But see Defflis v. Parry, col. 205.

A licence granted by the secretary of state under an order in council by virtue of 48 Geo. 3, c. 126, s. 2, to P., B. and C. (who were in fact British merchants residing here, but were not so expressed to be in the licence), on behalf of themselves and others, to export goods on board a vessel bearing any flag except the French, from London to any port in the Baltic (of which most were at that time hostile, but some were neutral), will not warrant an export of goods which were the property at the time of the shipment, of an alien enemy, a Russian subject residing at St. Petersburg, then a hostile port of the Baltic, to which place the cargo was consigned, and at whose desire the licence was obtained by P., B. and C. Mennet v. Bonham, 15 East, 477. See Vaughan v. Lemcke, 25 R. R. 692, 694.

A licence to British merchants, by name, to export goods in a certain ship to any port in the Baltic, not blockaded, and to whomsoever the property might appear to belong, authorizes an enemy, subject of the hostile country to which the ship is licensed, legally to export from London. Flindt v. Scott, 5 Taunt. 674; 15 R. R. 615—Ex. Ch.

Importation of more Goods than Licence warrants.]—If a vessel brings under a licence a cargo of enumerated goods from a hostile country hither, and also certain other goods not licensed, the insurance on the licensed goods is not thereby vitiated. Pieschell v. Allnutt, 4 Taunt. 792. And see Hagedorn v. Bell, 14 R. R. 500.

A quantity of gunpowder was exported, for a part of which only a licence had been obtained:—Held, that the exportation of the excess only was illegal; and, therefore, that an insurance effected on the whole cargo might be supported as to so much for which the licence was obtained, whether the property of the same or of different persons. Keir v. Andrade, 2 Marsh. 196; 6 Taunt. 498; 16 R. R. 660.

Licence as to Goods in Ship will Legalise Insurance on Ship.]—Where a certain trading with an alien enemy for specie and goods, to be brought from the enemy's country in his ships into our colonial ports, was licensed by the king's authority:—Held, that an insurance on the enemy's ships, as well as on the goods and specie put on board for the benefit of the British subjects, was incidentally legalised; and that it was competent for the British agent of both parties, in whose name the insurance was effected, to sue upon the policy in time of war; the trust not contravening any rule of law or public policy, and there being no personal disability in the plaintiff on the record to sue. Kensington v. Inglis, 8 East, 273; 9 R. R. 438. S. P., Flindt v. Scott, 5 Taunt. 674; 15 R. R. 615—Ex. Ch.

A licence to H. of London, merchant, on behalf of himself and other British or neutral merchants, to import a cargo from certain limits within which an enemy's port is situate, in any vessel bearing any flag except the French, will protect a ship trading from that port, in which ship H. and an alien enemy are jointly interested. Hagedorn v. Reid, 1 M. & S. 567; 3 Camp. 377.

As to Ship.]—An importation from a hostile port by an alien enemy there resident, may be legalised by a licence to R., on behalf of a British merchant, for a ship not named; but in order so to legalise it, it is not sufficient that the ship's name should be indorsed at the hostile port of loading on the licence; the assured must also prove by what authority he applies the licence so obtained to that adventure. Robinson v. Morris, 5 Taunt. 730.

Insurance on Goods on Ship with Licence—Seizure after Transfer to Launches.]—Insurance on goods on board a Spanish ship from Nassau to Campeachy, to continue on the goods till discharged and safely landed. The ship having a licence from the British government at Nassau, sailed from Campeachy, arrived off that port, and made signals for launches, in which the goods were put for the purpose of being run ashore. In this situation the goods were seized by two Spanish government brigs, it being contrary to the Spanish law to import British goods into the Spanish Main. The goods were protected by the policy while on board the launches, such being the usual method of carrying on that trade. Matthie v. Potts, 3 Bos. & P. 23.

As to Places.]—A licence granted upon the representation of U. on behalf of different British merchants, for permitting a ship (by name) to proceed under any colours, except the French, with a cargo of such goods as were permitted by an order in council to be exported from London to any ports within certain limits, the whole of the country within those limits being in hostility with this country, was held to protect the property of an alien enemy residing in the hostile country, shipped on his account in this country; and therefore an insurance for his benefit was legal. Hullman v. Whitmore, 3 M. & S. 337; 15 R. R. 283.

A licence to ship-brokers in London on behalf of themselves and British or neutral merchants, to load and export a cargo on board a Russian ship from London to any port in the Baltic not under blockade, protected Russian property exported from this country on a voyage to a Russian port, Russia being at war with Great Britain. Rucker v. Ansley, 5 M. & S. 25; 17 R. R. 251.

A licence to sail in ballast from any port north of the Scheldt to Archangel, or any other port of the White Sea, there to take in a cargo of permitted goods, and import them into the United Kingdom, legalises a vessel which had sailed from Great Britain to St. Petersburg with colonial produce, in bringing home a return cargo of the specified goods. Staniforth v. Coombe, 5 Taunt. 726.

A licence to import direct from any port in Norway or to sail in ballast from any port north of the Scheldt to any port in Norway, and in either case to import thence, authorises by the first clause a sailing from a British port, whether north or south of the Scheldt, to Norway to fetch the cargo. Le Cheminant v. Pearson, 4 Taunt. 367; 13 R. R. 636.

iii. Limitation of Time.

Expiration of Licence after Shipment but before Sailing.]—If a licence to export and deliver goods to an enemy's country is granted for a limited time, it is not sufficient that the goods were shipped before the expiration of the time, the ship not sailing till afterwards. Vandyck v. Whitmore, 1 East, 475.

A licence to export to a hostile country was to continue in force for exporting till the 10th September. The ship cleared at the custom-house on the 9th September, and on the 12th received her clearing note at Gravesend:—Held, that the ship had not exported the cargo before the 10th, and that the insurance was void. Williams v. Marshall, 6 Taunt. 390; 2 Marsh. 92; 1 Moore, 168; 7 Taunt. 468; 18 R. R. 542.

A vessel is not protected under a licence for six months which was to be renewed on application by the parties on the return of the vessel from her voyage, if it appears that the licence expired on the 2nd January, and that the ship cleared at the custom-house on the 19th December preceding, but did not receive her clearance at Gravesend till the 20th January, being detained by the exporter, who feared a capture by French privateers. Tulloch v. Boyd, 1 Moore, 174; 7 Taunt. 472; Holt, 487; 18 R. R. 546.

Voyage not completed within Time — No Default—Perils of the Sea.]—A licence to trade, which is to expire on a certain day, will protect the adventure beyond that day, if it be protracted by events which the licensed party cannot control. And where a homeward cargo, shipped without laches after the licence had expired, was, through perils of the sea, necessarily unladen in the course of the voyage, and destroyed by fire on shore:—Held, that the licence protected a cargo of the specified goods substituted for the cargo burnt. Siffkin v. Glover, 4 Taunt. 717.

Where a licence was granted to the plaintiff on the 25th of May, 1810, to take a cargo from London to Archangel, and to return thence with a cargo of grain and other goods, permitted by law to be imported to any port of the United Kingdom, and the licence was limited to the 29th of September following, which time was afterwards extended to the 1st of January, 1811; and the ship, after taking in a cargo of pitch and tar at Archangel, sailed on her homeward voyage on the 13th of October, 1810, but was driven back to Archangel, and there unloaded, and the cargo sold, and the ship laid up for the winter, and did not sail again from thence with a cargo of wheat until the 1st of August, 1811:—Held, that the licence was not exhausted by taking in the first cargo of pitch and tar, but would cover the cargo of wheat also, notwithstanding the time limited for its continuance had elapsed, provided it appeared that the voyage was prosecuted with all reasonable despatch, which was a question for the jury. Siffkin v. Allnutt, 1 M. & S. 39.

If a licence to trade is limited in duration to a certain day, and the vessel has not completed her voyage before the licence expires, it is incumbent on the licensed person to prove that such due diligence has been used by the master of the vessel that the adventure is still protected within the spirit of the licence. But if there has been no default in the conduct of the vessel, the licence, though expired, still protects the adventure till its completion. Freeland v. Walker, 4 Taunt. 478; 13 R. R. 651.

A voyage legalised in its commencement by a licence for four months, which expired during the voyage may be legally finished, if special circumstances, not in the power of the licensed person to control, clear of fraud and laches on his part, have protracted the voyage. Leevin v. Cormac, 4 Taunt. 483, n; 13 R. R. 654.

A license by the king in council legalises the prosecution of the intended adventure, after the time specified in the licence has expired, if the delay was caused by unavoidable necessity whether the voyage protected commence after the licence expired or before. Effurth v. Smith, 5 Taunt. 329.

Date not truly Indorsed.]—If the defence upon a policy is, that the licence requires the date of the ship's clearance from a hostile port to be indorsed thereon, and that it is not truly indorsed, it is incumbent on the defendant to prove what a clearance is, and the discrepancy between the real date of the clearance and the date indorsed. Morgan v. Oswald, 3 Taunt. 554.

iv. How proved.

When Lost.]—If a licence to trade is lost, the next best evidence is the register of it in the books of the secretary of state. Rhind v. Wilkinson, 2 Taunt. 237; 11 R. R. 551.

Where a ship insured is captured in a voyage to an enemy's country, and the British licence legalising the voyage is lost, to shew that she had such a licence, it is necessary to prove the loss of the paper purporting to be a licence which was on board the ship, and to produce examined copies of the order in council for granting the licence, and the copy of the licence preserved in the secretary of state's office. Eyre v. Palsgrave, 2 Camp. 605; 12 R. R. 751.

Where a licence to trade with an enemy, granted abroad, had been returned after being used, to the secretary of the governor by whom it was issued, who had, as he believed, thrown it aside amongst the waste papers of his office, and did not know what was become of it, having afterwards searched for, but not recollecting the finding it, and thinking that he had not found it; this is reasonable and probable evidence of the loss of such licence, so as to let in parol evidence of its contents. Kensington v. Inglis, 8 East, 273; 9 R. R. 438.

A licence having been deposited in the custom-house, and accidentally destroyed, it is to be presumed that the time of clearance, as required by the order in council, was indorsed upon it, upon its being shewn that without such indorsement the custom-house would not have permitted the entry to have been made. Butler v. Allnutt, 1 Stark. 222.

As to Possession of Licence.]—Where an assured British merchant, in an action on a policy of insurance in goods bound to an enemy's port in Holland, seeks to protect the adventure under the king's licence to trade with the enemy, it is not sufficient to give in evidence at the trial, and to prove his possession in fact before the voyage commenced, of a general licence dated three months before, licensing six neutral vessels under certain neutral flags to pass unmolested to or from any port of Holland, from or to any port of this kingdom, with certain goods (including the goods insured), which licence was directed to S. and other British merchants, with a condition annexed that they should cause the licence to be delivered up to them or their agents when the ship should enter any port of this kingdom; without also giving probable evidence to account for his possession of the licence, and to shew that his use of it was lawful; as by shewing from whom and when he received it, and thereby connecting his own particular adventure with such general licence. Barlow v. M'Intosh, 12 East, 311.

d. Proceedings by and against.

In general.]—An alien enemy cannot, by the municipal law of this country, sue for the recovery of a right claimed to be acquired by him in actual war. Anthon v. Fisher, 2 Dougl. 649, n. Contra Maria v. Hall, 1 Taunt. 32, n.

No action can be maintained either by or in favour of an alien enemy. Brandon v. Nesbitt, 6 Term Rep. 23 ; 3 R. R. 109.

An alien, to whom a bill, drawn on England by a British subject detained prisoner in France during war, payable to another British subject detained there, is there indorsed by the latter, may sue on it in this country after the return of peace. Antoine v. Morshead, 1 Marsh. 558 ; 6 Taunt. 237 ; 16 R. R. 610.

Feme Covert — Husband Alien Enemy.]—A feme covert cannot sue alone on a contract made with her before or after marriage, though her husband is an alien enemy. De Wahl v. Braune, 1 H. & N. 178 ; 25 L. J., Ex. 343 ; 4 W. R. 646.

Neutral taken in Act of Hostility.]—A native of a neutral state taken in an act of hostility on board an enemy's fleet, and brought to England as a prisoner of war, is not disabled from suing while in confinement, on a contract entered into as a prisoner of war. Sparenburgh v. Bannatyne, 1 Bos. & P. 163 ; 2 Esp. 580 ; 4 R. R. 772.

Action by Trustee for.]—It is no defence to an action on a bill of exchange that the plaintiff sues in trust for an alien enemy. Daubuz v. Morshead, 6 Taunt. 332 ; 16 R. R. 623.

Action by Agent for.]—A plea of alienage to an action on a policy brought in the name of an English agent for his principal, an alien, whose interest appears on the record, is a good plea ; and a replication to such plea, that the alien is indebted to the agent in more money than the value of the property insured, cannot be supported. Brandon v. Nesbitt, 6 Term Rep. 23 ; 3 R. R. 109.

A British agent effecting a policy on behalf of alien enemies, who became enemies after the loss happened, but before the action commenced, is entitled to recover against the underwriter, who had only pleaded the general issue ; for such temporary suspension during the war, of the assured's right of suit upon a contract, legal at the time, and liable to be enforced upon the return of peace, cannot be taken advantage of under a plea of perpetual bar, there being no legal disability in the plaintiff on the record to sue. Flindt v. Waters, 15 East, 260 ; 13 R. R. 457.

Pleadings relating to.]—In a plea of alienage, the defendant must state that the plaintiff was born in a foreign country, at enmity with this country, and that he came here without letters of safe conduct from our king. Casseres v. Bell, 8 Term Rep. 166.

In an action on a policy of insurance, it is no defence under the general issue that the persons interested, who were neutrals when the policy was effected and the loss happened, had become alien enemies before action. Harman v. Kingston, 3 Camp. 152 ; 13 R. R. 775.

Where an alien amy, at the time of the action brought, became an alien enemy before plea pleaded, and the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff ought not to have or maintain his action, because he was before and at the time of exhibiting his bill, and that he now is, an alien enemy ; concluding that, therefore, the plaintiff ought to be barred from having or maintaining his action ; to which the plaintiff replied, that, at the time of exhibiting his bill, he was an alien amy ; wherefore he prayed judgment and his damages : to which there was a demurrer :—Held, that the plea was ill pleaded. But yet, as the court was ex-officio bound to give such judgment as appeared upon the whole record to be proper, without regard to the issues found or confessed, or to any imperfection in the prayer of judgment on either side ; and as it appeared upon the whole that the plaintiff was now an alien enemy, and therefore incapable of maintaining further his suit, judgment was given that he be barred from further having or maintaining his action. Le Bret v. Papillon, 4 East, 502 ; 7 R. R. 618.

—— Since 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66.]—A plea, that the plaintiff was an alien enemy residing in this country without the licence, safe conduct, or permission of the sovereign is good, although it does not expressly negative a certificate from one of the secretaries of state under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, ss. 6, 8. Alcenius v. Nygren, 4 El. & Bl. 217 ; 24 L. J., Q. B. 19 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 16 ; 3 W. R. 25.

Proof of Alien Enemy.]—See col. 199, supra.

4. Naturalisation.

Generally.]—A person naturalised in this country becomes to all intents and purposes a British subject, and ceases to be an alien. Reg. v. Manning, 1 Den. C. C. 467 ; T. & M. 155 ; 2 Car. & K. 887 ; 19 L. J., M. C. 1 ; 13 Jur. 962.

An alien domiciled and naturalised in this country, is subject to the same disabilities as is a natural-born subject. Mette v. Mette, 28 L. J., P. 117 ; 1 Sw. & Tr. 416 ; 7 W. R. 543.

Marriage.]—He is incapable of contracting a marriage, which would have been void if contracted by a natural-born subject, although valid by the law of his domicil of origin, and by the lex loci contractûs. Ib.

Qualified Naturalisation—Infants—Guardian —Jurisdiction.]—In 1861, B., a Frenchman, came to England, and in 1871 obtained from the British Home Office a certificate of naturalisation, declaring that he was thereby naturalised as a British subject, and that upon taking the oath of allegiance he should in the United Kingdom be entitled to all political and other rights, powers, and privileges, and be subject to all obligations to which a natural-born British subject was entitled or subject in the United Kingdom, with this qualification, "that he shall not, when within the limits of the foreign State of which he was a subject previously to his obtaining his certificate of naturalisation, be deemed to be a British subject unless he has ceased to be a subject of that State in pursuance of the laws thereof, or in pursuance of a treaty to that effect." In 1870 B. married an Englishwoman. Two children were born in Paris, and their births registered at the British Embassy. In 1886 B. died at Neuilly, having by will made in French form given the residue of his property to his two children. Half the property was in France and half in England. In June, 1887, B.'s widow died. On summons by an English half-brother of the children for the appointment of himself as guardian :—Held, that the certificate was not a certificate of naturalisation absolutely to all intents and purposes, but that the naturalisation was qualified, and did not deprive B. of his status as a French subject :—Held, that, as B. was at the time of his death a French subject, and his children were French subjects, the English court had no jurisdiction. Bourgoise, In re, 41 Ch. D. 310 ; 58 L. T. 431 ; 37 W. R. 563. See S. C. in C. A., 41 Ch. D. 310 ; 60 L. T. 553 ; 37 W. R. 563.

Bastard.]—To be within the 4 Geo. 4, c. 21, the child must be born of a British father ; but a bastard, filius nullius, can have no father. Shedden v. Patrick, 1 Macq. H. L. 535.

A child born of a bastard in a foreign country, not recognising the doctrine of legitimation per subsequens matrimonium, is an alien, although his putative father was a Scotchman domiciled all his life in Scotland, and although such putative father afterwards married the mother of the bastard for the express purpose of rendering the bastard legitimate. Ib.

7 Anne, c. 5 ; 4 Geo. 2, c. 21 ; and 13 Geo. 3, c. 21.]—The status of natural-born British subjects, which by the acts 7 Ann. c. 5 ; 4 Geo. 2, c. 21, and 13 Geo. 3, c. 21, is conferred on children and grandchildren born abroad of natural-born British subjects, is a merely personal status, and is not by these acts made transmissible to the descendants of the persons to whom that status is thereby given. De Geer v. Stone, 52 L. J., Ch. 57 ; 22 Ch. D. 243 ; 47 L. T. 434 ; 31 W. R. 241.

4 Geo. 2, c. 21, and 13 Geo. 3, c. 21.]—The children of an American loyalist, who continued his allegiance to the Crown of Great Britain after the colonies were separated from the mother country, and settled in America, are entitled to take lands by descent in England, within the operation of 4 Geo. 2, c. 21, as natural-born subjects of the Crown of Great Britain. Doe d. Auchmuty v. Mulcaster, 8 D. & R. 593 ; 5 B. & C. 771 ; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 311 ; 29 R. R. 390.

A., who was by birth an Englishman, emigrated to the United States of America, after the recognition of their independence by the treaty of 1783, and took the oaths of obedience to the American government, and of abjuration of all other allegiance, married an American woman, and had a son of that marriage (B.), born in the United States. B. had a son (C.), who was also born in America, out of the Queen's dominions : —Held, that C. was capable of inheriting real estate as a British subject, within 13 Geo. 3, c. 21, and 4 Geo. 2, c. 21. Fitch v. Weber, 6 Hare, 51 ; 17 L. J., Ch. 73 ; 12 Jur. 76.

The privileges which 4 Geo. 2, c. 21, and 13 Geo. 3, c. 21, confer, are the privileges of the children and not of the father ; and, therefore, acts intended by a British-born subject to have the effect of abandonment or abjuration of his rights in that character, do not deprive his children of the benefit of 4 Geo. 2, c. 21, and 13 Geo. 3, c. 21, unless such acts bring them within the disqualifying provisions of those statutes. Ib.

The words in the 13 Geo. 3, c. 21, s. 3, are to be read "aliens' duties, customs and impositions," and not "aliens, duties, customs, and impositions," and therefore the grandchild of a natural-born subject, born out of the Queen's allegiance, is entitled to the benefit of that statute, in regard to holding lands as a natural-born subject, although he has not complied with the formalities specified in the 3rd section. Barrow v. Wadkin, 24 Beav. 327 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 129 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 679 ; 5 W. R. 695.

The 13 Geo. 3, c. 21, ss. 3 and 4, annex certain provisoes as to the time within which a claim is to be made, to enable grandchildren to claim or demand any estate in pursuance of the right given them by s. 1 :—Held, that these provisoes apply to Ireland, as qualifying the status of the English subject which the Act of Union transferred. Davies v. Lynch, 16 W. R. 1207.

The 3rd section, which requires for its purpose that the person naturalised should subscribe to the Church of England, applies solely to fiscal matters, and does not exclude dissenters from the operation of the remainder of the act. Ib.

The children of natural-born subjects, who, under 4 Geo. 4, c. 21, are to be considered natural-born subjects of this kingdom, must have been legitimate from their birth, and not rendered so by the subsequent marriage of their parents. Shedden v. Patrick, 1 Macq. H. L. 535.

13 Geo. 2, c. 3.]—An alien who has served on board a British man-of-war for four years in time of war, is a natural-born subject under 13 Geo. 2, c. 3. Giraud, In re, 32 Beav. 385.

37 Geo. 3, c. 97, s. 24.]—A. resided in Pennsylvania before the declaration of American independence, and he had a son, B., born there also before that period. In 1783, A. came to England to get compensation for his loss as an American loyalist. In 1785, he returned to Pennsylvania, where he died. B. was never in England. Semble, that both A. and B. were American subjects, and that A. became so by returning to Pennsylvania in 1785 ; and that a claim to lands could only (if at all) be made through them under 37 Geo. 3, c. 97, s. 24. Doe d. Stansbury v. Arkwright, 5 Car. & P. 575.

Under the treaty of 1794, between Great Britain and America, and 37 Geo. 3, c. 97, American citizens who held lands in Great Britain on the 28th of October, 1795, and their heirs and assigns are at all times to be considered, so far as regards these lands, not as aliens, but as native subjects of Great Britain. Sutton v. Sutton, 1 Russ. & M. 663. S. P., 8 Wheaton Amer. Rep. 494.

33 & 34 Vict. c. 14.]—Where the title to an alien to hold land accrued before the passing of the Naturalisation Act, 1870 :—Held, that that act did not remove his disability to hold the land. Sharp v. De St. Sauveur, 41 L. J., Ch. 576 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 343 ; 26 L. T. 142 ; 20 W. R. 269.

The statute 33 Vict. c. 14, is not retrospective. De Geer v. Stone, 52 L. J., Ch. 57 ; 22 Ch. D. 243 ; 47 L. T. 434 ; 31 W. R. 241.

British Subject Naturalised in Foreign Country.]—A testator who was by birth a British subject, and was the father of the plaintiff, went to reside in Switzerland, and in the year 1842 acquired the "Landrecht" or "Indigenat" in the canton of Zurich, without being required to renounce his English nationality, which in the then state of English law he could not have effectually done ; and he thereby became of Swiss nationality. With the sanction of the cantonal authorities he could have relinquished this "Landrecht" or "Indigenat," but he never effectually did so, although he afterwards left Switzerland and went to reside in France, where he died with a French domicil in the year 1878:—Held, that the 6th section of the Naturalisation Act, 1870, applied to the testator; that at the time of his death he was a Swiss, and not a British subject; and that, having regard to the French law, under which the Swiss tribunals were the proper forum, the courts of Zurich had jurisdiction to decide upon the right of succession to his personal estate:—Held, also, that notwithstanding an attempted disposition by the testator of the whole of his personal estate in favour of a stranger, the plaintiff was, in accordance with a judgment of the courts of Zurich, entitled as the testator's only child to nine-tenths of such estate as his compulsory portion. Trufort, In re, Trafford v. Blanc, 57 L. J., Ch. 135; 36 Ch. D. 600; 57 L. T. 674; 36 W. R. 163.

b. Husband and Wife and Divorce.

1. Marriage.

How Constituted.]—When an English woman marries a domiciled foreigner, the marriage is constituted according to the lex loci contractûs; but she takes his domicil and is subject to his law. Harvey v. Farnie, 52 L. J., P. 33; 8 App. Cas. 43; 48 L. T. 273; 31 W. R. 433; 47 J. P. 308—H. L. (E.)

Where the formalities of the lex loci contractûs are observed, it is immaterial that one of the parties to the marriage had some other motive besides marriage. Bell v. Graham, 13 Moore, P. C. 242; 1 L. T. 221; 8 W. R. 98.

A marriage contract was entered into in Paris between two English subjects, according to the formalities required by the French law, in anticipation of a marriage to be solemnised "suivant la loi." A valid English marriage took place at the embassy, but no marriage ceremony took place according to the French forms and solemnities:—Held, that the marriage "suivant la loi" was fulfilled by the English marriage, and that the settlement being to regulate an English marriage, was valid here, notwithstanding that, according to the French law, the marriage and the settlement might be inoperative. Este v. Smyth, 18 Beav. 112; 23 L. J., Ch. 705; 18 Jur. 300; 2 W. R. 148.

English subjects, on their marriage, may stipulate that their marriage rights shall be regulated by the law of a foreign country, and this court will enforce such a contract. Ib.

Marriage in Uncivilised Country between Domiciled Englishman and Woman of Barbarous Tribe—Native Customs.]—A union formed between a man and a woman in a foreign country, although it may there bear the name of a marriage, and the parties to it may there be designated husband and wife, is not a valid marriage according to the law of England, unless it is formed on the same basis as marriages throughout Christendom, and be in its essence the voluntary union for life of one man and one woman to the exclusion of all others. Bethell, In re, Bethell v. Hildyard, 57 L. J., Ch. 487; 38 Ch. D. 220; 58 L. T. 674; 36 W. R. 503.

Capacity to Contract Marriage.]—Although the lex loci contractûs quoad solemnitates determines the validity of the contract of marriage, the question whether the parties may enter into such contract must depend upon the lex domicilii. Brook v. Brook, 9 H. L. Cas. 193; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 422; 4 L. T. 93; 9 W. R. 461. Affirming 3 Sm. & G. 481; 27 L. J., Ch. 401.

The 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 54, would not affect the law of marriage in any conquered colony in which a different law of marriage has prevailed. It is limited in its operation to the inhabitants of Great Britain and Ireland. Ib.

The rule that the marriage, if good in the country where it was contracted, is good everywhere, is subject to the qualification, that the marriage must not be one prohibited by the country to which the parties contracting belong. Ib.

The personal capacity of parties to enter into the contract of marriage depends upon their domicil; and where both parties had a foreign domicil, and, by the law of their domicil, their marriage was invalid by reason of consanguinity, a marriage which was contracted in England, and which would have been valid according to English law, was held invalid. Sottomayer (otherwise De Barros) v. De Barros, 47 L. J., P. 23; 3 P. D. 1; 37 L. T. 415; 26 W. R. 455—C. A. See next case.

Two natives of Portugal, one of whom was domiciled in England, the other in Portugal, contracted a marriage in England in 1866. They were first cousins, and were incapable, according to the law of Portugal, of intermarrying, on account of consanguinity, without a papal dispensation. The petitioner (the wife) filed a petition praying that her marriage with the respondent might be declared null and void:—Held, that the lex loci contractûs should prevail in the matter; and the marriage being valid according to the law of England, the court dismissed the petition. Sottomayer (otherwise De Barros) v. De Barros (The Queen's Proctor intervening), 49 L. J., P. 1; 5 P. D. 94; 41 L. T. 281; 27 W. R. 917. And see preceding case.

The rule, that the lex loci contractûs of a marriage establishes its validity, requires this qualification—viz., where the law of a country forbids marriage under any particular circumstances, the prohibition follows the subjects of that country wherever they may go. Fenton v. Livingstone, 3 Macq. H. L. 497; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1183; 7 W. R. 671.

The comity of nations does not demand that a nation should recognise as valid every marriage which is valid lege loci contractûs, and not prohibited by the common consent of Christianity. Each nation has a right to define and prohibit incest. Ib.

If a marriage, though good according to the law of the domicil, were nevertheless contrary to the religious or moral notions of other states, it would be impossible to contend that it ought to be adopted by them. Ib.

If the comity of nations were always to prevail, a foreign marriage between uncle and niece, under papal dispensation, must be held valid, and the issue might claim to take a Scotch estate and Scotch honours, although, had the marriage been contracted in Scotland, the parties might have been capitally punished. Ib.

A divorced wife, who and whose husband are not native-born subjects of the country in which the divorce was pronounced, may contract a valid marriage here, although by the law of the foreign country the wife, being the guilty party, could not contract a valid marriage so long as the innocent party remained unmarried. Scott v. Att.-Gen., 55 L. J., P. 57 ; 11 P. D. 128 ; 56 L. T. 924 ; 50 J. P. 824.

If Marriage between British subjects in France is not Valid there, it will not be Valid here.]—Where the parties, British subjects, are married in France, if the marriage is not valid in that country, it will not be so in this. Lacon v. Higgins, D. & R., N. P. C. 38 ; 3 Stark. 178 ; 25 R. R. 779. S. P., Butler v. Freeman, Ambl. 303 ; Kent v. Burgess, 11 Sim. 361 ; 10 L. J., Ch. 100 ; 5 Jur. 166. Alison, In re, 31 L. T. 638 ; 23 W. R. 226.

Where the alleged husband cohabited with a party entitled to a pension, durante viduitate, residing in Scotland, and reputed as man and wife ; but with the view to the receipt of the pension, she yearly made the solemn declaration of continuing widowhood :—Held, on exception to the Master's report, that he was warranted in finding that no valid marriage had taken place. Robertson v. Crawford, 3 Beav. 102.

British Subjects in a British Settlement.]—British subjects resident in a British settlement abroad are governed by the laws of this country, and consequently, with respect to marriage, by the law which existed here before the marriage act, viz., the canon law. Lautour v. Teesdale, 2 Marsh. 243 ; 8 Taunt. 880 ; 17 R. R. 518.

Marriage at British Embassy.]—The 4 Geo. 3, c. 91, gives validity to the marriage of a British subject in the chapel of the British ambassador abroad, whether the other party to the marriage is a British subject or not. Wright's Trust, In re, 2 Kay & J. 595 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 621 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 465 ; 4 W. R. 541. And see Este v. Smyth, 18 Beav. 112 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 705 ; 18 Jur. 300 ; 2 W. R. 148.

Celebration by Army Chaplain.]—The marriage of an officer, celebrated by a chaplain of the British army within the lines of the army when serving abroad, is valid under 9 Geo. 4, c. 91, though such army is not serving in a country in a state of actual hostility, and though no authority for the marriage was previously obtained from the officer's superior in command. Waldegrave Peerage, 4 Cl. & F. 649.

Effect of Marriage.]—A woman who has become by the law of France personally liable for her husband's debts, and has paid them after his death, and who is by the same law entitled to sue a defendant in her own right to recover the money so paid, has a primâ facie right to bring such action in this country without first taking out administration here. She is entitled to the like privilege as a donee by the law of France of her deceased husband's rights of action. Vanquelin v. Bouard, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 341 ; 33 L. J., C. P. 78 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 566 ; 9 L. T. 582 ; 12 W. R. 128.

Where a husband and wife carry on trade as partners in Spain, they cannot sue as such in our courts, nor maintain a joint action against persons resident in this country, to recover the amount of a balance due to the partnership account, without proof being given that by the law of Spain a feme covert is permitted to trade ; and it is doubtful whether an action could be maintained by both, even on such proof being given. Cosio v. De Bernales, 1 Car. & P. 266 ; R. & M. 102 ; 28 R. R. 775.

Other Matters.]—A marriage established by the sentence of a foreign court, having proper jurisdiction, is conclusive by the law of nations. Roach v. Garvan, 1 Ves. Sen. 159.

2. Marriage Settlement.

In General.]—Where a contract is made between persons domiciled in a foreign land, and in a form known to the law of that country, the court in administering the rights of parties under it will give it the same construction and effect as the foreign law would have given it. If, therefore, a domiciled Scotchman would be held entitled in Scotland, by virtue of a marriage contract executed there, and in the Scotch form, to receive whatever property accrued during coverture to his wife, this court will enforce his right, as against any such property coming within its jurisdiction, and will not raise an equity for a settlement in favour of the wife in opposition to the provisions of the contract. Anstruther v. Adair, 2 Myl. & K. 513.

Immovable Property—Englishwoman with Foreign Husband.]—By a settlement made in 1881, upon the marriage of an English lady with a Spaniard, certain real estate in England, the property of the lady, was, with the approbation of the intended husband, "given in consideration of the renunciation that day executed by her of any rights which she would otherwise have acquired by marriage in her husband's property according to the law of Spain," conveyed to a trustee to such uses as she should, notwithstanding coverture, by deed appoint. And it was thereby declared that the settlement was to be construed according to the law of England. By an indenture dated the 23rd of February, 1882, the wife, with the consent of her husband, appointed the real estate to a trustee in fee, upon trust to sell and to stand possessed of the proceeds of sale in trust for such persons as "she should at any time thereafter by any writing appoint" ; and, in default of appointment, in trust for her separate use. The wife died in June, 1882, without children, having, by her will, made immediately after her marriage, given four fifths of her real and personal estate, in case she should leave no children, to her husband absolutely. According to the law of Spain, as she had died without children, two-thirds of her property belonged to her parents :—Held, that the deed of February, 1882, must be construed according to English law. Hernando, In re, Hernando v. Sawtell, 53 L. J., Ch. 865 ; 27 Ch. D. 284 ; 51 L. T. 117 ; 33 W. R. 252.

—— Englishman with Foreign Wife.]—The Scotch real estate of a wife, whose domicil at the date of the marriage was Scotch, while that of her husband was English, is entitled to be exonerated from his debt, which had been charged upon it by way of security, although he has obtained a divorce by reason of her adultery ; and she being domiciled in England may sustain a suit for the purpose in England, even though he is at the time domiciled abroad. Drummond v. Drummond, 37 L. J., Ch. 811 ; 17 W. R. 6.

Power in a marriage settlement to grant to a wife any annual sum of money or yearly rent-charge to be tax free, and without any deduction, and to be issuing out of and chargeable upon lands in Ireland, so that such rent-charge do not exceed, in the whole, the yearly sum of 3,000*l.* of lawful money of Great Britain :—Held, that a rent-charge appointed under this power, is payable in Ireland in the currency of England ; but that the appointee is not entitled to have the sum transmitted to England free of the charge of conveyance and exchange, properly so called. Lansdowne v. Lansdowne, 2 Bli. 60 ; 21 R. R. 43.

Movable Property—Infant domiciled abroad.]—The appellant, the widow of a domiciled Scotchman, brought an action in the Court of Session, for the reduction of an ante-nuptial contract, by which in consideration of a provision made by her husband she purported to discharge her legal rights of terce and jus relictæ. The contract was executed in Ireland by the appellant, who was then an infant domiciled in Ireland, but it was contemplated that she and her husband should reside, and they actually resided, during their married life in Scotland. The grounds upon which the appellant sought to obtain reduction of the contract were, that being an infant she was incapable of contracting by the law of Ireland, and minority and lesion according to the law of Scotland :—Held, that the capacity of the appellant to bind herself by the marriage contract must be determined by the law of her domicil (i.e. the Irish or English law), and that under such law she could not as an infant incur an obligation which was not shown to be for her benefit, and that she was therefore at liberty to avoid the contract and claim her legal rights as a Scotch widow. Cooper v. Cooper, 13 App. Cas. 88 ; 59 L. T. 1—H. L. (Sc.) See also, Cooke's Trusts, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 637 ; 56 L. T. 737 ; 35 L. T. 608.

A married woman, domiciled in France, entered into a contract in England respecting her reversionary interest in trust money invested in the English funds, which was substantially valid according to French law, although invalid according to the English law ; but the contract was not entered into in the manner prescribed by French law, which requires that there should be as many instruments as there are distinct parties to the contract :—Held, that the French law gave capacity to make the contract, but that the English law regulated the form of it, and that therefore the contract was valid ; and it was enforced by decree. Guépratte v. Young, 4 De G. & Sm. 217.

—— How affected by form.]—By a settlement in contemplation of marriage, made at the Mauritius, where the laws of France were in force, drawn up in the French language, and executed according to the French form, it was agreed, that there should be no community of goods between the husband and wife ; and it was stated to be the intention of the parties to marry according to the laws and customs of England, the benefit of which they reserved to themselves the right to claim. The husband then acknowledged the receipt of 4,000*l.*, belonging to the wife, which he covenanted to invest for her benefit, and for her separate use during the marriage, either in land or in the French funds, or other securities which the wife should approve. The 4,000*l.* was never paid to the husband, nor did he invest such a sum during the marriage. His domicile was in England. Held, that upon his death intestate, the wife was entitled to receive 4,000*l.* out of his estate, and also a distributive share of his personal estate remaining after payment of that sum. Lang v. Lang, 8 Sim. 451 ; 6 L. J., Ch. 324 ; 1 Jur. 472.

A marriage settlement, made in France between English subjects, stipulated that the custom of Paris should regulate their community and the other clauses of the contract. As to 2,000*l.* (part of the wife's fortune), the husband was to be chargeable to his wife, and it was to remain her bien personnel. By the general law of France a wife can make a will. A marriage, valid as to the English, but, as was alleged, invalid as to the French law, followed. Held, that the rights were to be regulated by those which French subjects would have under such a contract and marriage valid in France ; and that, whether the contract was valid or not in France, still that here the wife had a power to dispose of the property by will. Held, secondly, on the construction of the instrument, that the marital right over the property was excluded ; and thirdly, that a will executed according to English, though not according to French formalities, effectually disposed of this property. Este v. Smyth, 18 Beav. 112 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 705 ; 2 Eq. R. 1208 ; 18 Jur. 300 ; 2 W. R. 148.

A French gentleman domiciled in France, and an English lady resident in that country, in contemplation of a marriage, which was afterwards solemnised in France, executed a settlement in the English form, declaring the trusts of the property comprised therein in favour of the husband and wife and children of the marriage. The settlement was void in France, for want of formalities required by the French law. The property comprised in the settlement consisted of moneys which had been appointed in favour of the wife, upon the understanding that it should be settled, and retained in England in the name of the English trustees. The husband and wife were still domiciled in France. The husband filed a bill, praying a declaration that the settlement was void :—Held, that the contract must be construed according to the English law, and not according to the lex domicilii, and that the marriage having taken place upon the faith of the validity of the settlement, effect must be given to it by the court. Van Grutten v. Digby, 31 Beav. 561 ; 32 L. J., Ch. 179 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 111 ; 7 L. T. 455 ; 11 W. R. 230.

A. being domiciled in Turkey was married in London to B., an Englishwoman. Previously to the marriage a settlement was made, in English form, of property belonging to A. on B., her daughter by her former husband, and her issue by A. After the marriage they went to reside in Turkey, and children were born to them. After some time the wife returned to this country with her children, and during her absence, and without giving her notice, the husband obtained a divorce which was good according to Turkish law. She afterwards died :—Held, that the settlement was an English one, and to be construed according to English law, and that the court would not, under the circumstances, take into consideration the Turkish divorce and its effect on the settlement according to Turkish law. Colliss v. Hector, 44 L. J., Ch. 267 ; L. R. 19 Eq. 334 ; 32 L. T. 223 ; 23 W. R. 485.

By a marriage contract dated in 1857, and made in Scotland, on the marriage of a domiciled Englishman with a domiciled Scotchwoman, real estate in England and a sum of consols were brought into settlement on the part of the husband, and property in Scotland was brought into settlement on the part of the wife. There was an absolute trust for sale and conversion of the husband's property, and investment of the proceeds, which were to be held in trust for the husband and wife successively for life, and after the decease of the survivor, in trust "for such child or children of the said intended marriage, and if more than one, in such shares and in such manner and form, and to vest at such time or times, and to be subject to such powers and restrictions," as the husband and wife by deed, or the survivor, by deed or will, should appoint. The other trusts of the husband's property were in English form, and the trustees were to have "the usual powers for advancement, maintenance and accumulation, according to the law of England." The trusts declared of the wife's property were exclusively in Scotch form, the phraseology of the general clauses was mainly Scotch, and the deed was registered in the Court of Session in Scotland. The trustees named were six in number, four of whom were Scotch. Held, that notwithstanding the general rule, that the construction of a contract regarding personal estate is to be determined by the lex loci contractûs, yet here, in accordance with the manifest intention of the parties, as evidenced by the frame of the instrument, the marriage contract must, so far as the husband's property was concerned, be construed according to English law. Chamberlain v. Napier, 49 L. J., Ch. 628; 15 Ch. D. 614; 29 W. R. 194.

In 1849 an Englishman domiciled in England married a Scotch lady in Scotland. Previously to the marriage the parties executed a "contract of marriage" in the Scotch form. The intended husband thereby bound himself, his heirs, executors, and successors, to pay to the intended wife, in case she should survive him, an annuity of 200*l*., and further to pay 3,000*l*. to the children of the marriage after his death. After the marriage the parties resided in England. In 1870 the husband died there, having by his will, dated in 1863, but which did not in any way refer to the marriage contract, given his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to pay the income thereof to his wife for life, with remainder as to the capital to his children equally at twenty-one. The wife died in England in 1886, having made a will appointing executors. During her widowhood she never received the annuity under the contract, but enjoyed the income of her husband's residuary estate. There were two children of the marriage, both of whom survived their father, but predeceased their mother, having attained twenty-one. The husband's estate being insufficient to satisfy both the arrears of the widow's annuity and the 3,000*l*. payable to the children, the question was raised, by originating summons, whether the contract was to be construed according to Scotch law (under which the provision of an annuity to the wife on marriage imports a jus crediti in her favour, entitling her to rank pari passu with her husband's other creditors, the children having only a spes successionis), or according to the English law:—Held, that the intention of the parties on entering into the contract must be considered; that the fact that it was entered into in the Scotch form led to the inference that it was to be construed not according to the law of England, but according to the law of Scotland; and that the case was governed by Guepratte v. Young (4 De G. & Sm. 217), and that, therefore, as the husband's assets were not more than enough to satisfy the paramount claim of the wife's representatives to the arrears of her annuity, the claim of the children in the division of the assets failed. Barnard, In re, Barnard v. White, 56 L. T. 9.

Registration.]—A man and his wife, who were married in Batavia, entered into a contract before the marriage, by which a sum of 75,000 guilders was settled on the wife for her separate use. By the law of Batavia no marriage contract excluding a community of goods has any effect as regards third parties until registered in the courts of that country. The contract was never registered. They subsequently came to England, where the husband became bankrupt, and his wife claimed to prove against his estate for the sum settled:—Held, that the provision of the law of Batavia respecting registration did not affect the validity of the contract, but only the remedy of those claiming under it; that all questions of priority of creditors must be determined by the law of the country where the bankruptcy takes place; and, therefore, that the wife was not precluded by the non-registration of the deed from proving for the sum settled pari passu with the other creditors. Melbourn, Ex parte, 40 L. J., Bk. 25; L. R. 6 Ch. 64; 23 L. T. 578; 19 W. R. 83.

How affected by Divorce.]—A settlement on a marriage in England between a domiciled Turkish subject and an English lady, on the faith of his promise to reside in England, is governed by English law. Colliss v. Hector, 44 L. J., Ch. 267; L. R. 19 Eq. 334; 32 L. T. 223; 23 W. R. 485.

A divorce in Turkey, the effect of which by Turkish law was to annul the settlement, but which was pronounced without notice to the wife or other persons interested under the settlement, disregarded. Ib.

Other Matters—Marriage of Scotchman with Englishwoman.] — Upon the marriage of a Scotchman with an Englishwoman upon whom property has already been settled, it is desirable that an ante-nuptial contract should be entered into by them confirming the wife in her rights according to the English Law, so as to preclude the husband, in the event of the wife's death, from setting up any claim, jure mariti, to her property under the Scotch Law. Craignish, In re, Craignish v. Hewitt, [1892] 3 Ch. 180; 67 L. T. 689.

3. Equity to a Settlement.

A feme covert, domiciled with her husband in Scotland, was entitled to the produce of a real estate in England directed to be sold. Upon proof that, by the law of her domicile, her personal estate vested absolutely in the husband, and that she had no equity to a settlement, the estate, being unsold, was directed to be conveyed to the husband in fee. Hitchcock v. Clendinen, 12 Beav. 534; 19 L. J., Ch. 238.

Where a husband and wife are domiciled in Scotland, in which country a wife has no equity to a settlement, the court here will order payment of the wife's legacy to an assignee of the husband. M'Cormick v. Garnett, 5 De G. M. & G. 278; 2 Eq. R. 536; 23 L. J., Ch. 777; 18 Jur. 412; 2 W. R. 408.

Where a wife was entitled to share under the distributions, and resident in Prussia, by the laws of which, one moiety of the effects of the husband must come to her on his death; the court did not require him to make any settlement. Sawer v. Shute, 1 Anstr. 63.

By a decree of this court, a feme sole, a subject of Great Britain, was decreed entitled to a certain sum to be realised by a sale of certain lands. Afterwards, and before the sum was realised, she intermarried abroad with a subject of the Austrian empire, and continued to reside with her husband in that empire. Afterwards, the sum being realised and in court, an application made on behalf of the husband and wife, that the money should be paid out to the attorney for the husband and wife on a warrant executed abroad by them, and on an affidavit stating that by the laws of the Austrian empire the sum would be at the absolute disposal of the wife, was granted, the court, under the circumstances, not requiring that the husband should thereout make any settlement on the wife, or that any commission for her separate examination should issue. Hutchinson v. Catheart, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 394.

Money belonging to the wife paid to the husband, the parties being subjects of Denmark, and the law of that country not requiring a settlement. Chapple v. Cadell, Jac. 544; 23 R. R. 138.

In 1855 a domiciled Manxman came to England, and married an Englishwoman, and resided in England for twenty years. At the date of the marriage the wife was entitled to a vested reversionary interest in a legacy which fell into possession in 1885. In 1875 the husband and wife returned to the Isle of Man, where the husband carried on business till 1878, when he became insolvent, and executed a deed of assignment of all his property, including his wife's interest in the legacy for the benefit of his creditors. In 1880 the parties returned to England, where they resided till 1882, when the husband went to Mexico to seek employment. The doctrine of a wife's equity to a settlement is unknown to Manx law:—Held, that the husband's domicil was Manx, and that the wife's equity to a settlement could not be asserted. Marsland, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 581; 54 L. T. 635; 34 W. R. 540.

Ward of Court.]—Although, according to the law of Scotland, a wife has no equity to a settlement, still, if she is a ward of the Court of Chancery, the court is bound, before parting with her funds to her husband, to take care that proper provision is made for her. Tweedale, In re, 1 Johns. 109.

4. Divorce.

Domicil to found Jurisdiction.]—The word domicil has many meanings, according as it is used with reference to succession and other purposes. A person may have retained a foreign domicil for many purposes, and yet may be domiciled in England, so as to give jurisdiction to the court for divorce; but if he has never resided in England except temporarily, and is not there at the time of the commencement of the suit, he is not subject to its jurisdiction. Yelverton v. Yelverton, 1 Sw. & Tr. 574; 29 L. J., Mat. 34; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 24; 1 L. T. 194; 8 W. R. 134.

A bonâ fide residence of the husband in this country, not casual, or as a traveller, is sufficient to found the jurisdiction of this court against the wife, who has committed adultery abroad, during such residence. Brodie v. Brodie, 2 Sw. & Tr. 259; 30 L. J., P. 185; 4 L. T. 307; 9 W. R. 815. S. P., Wilson v. Wilson, 41 L. J., P. 33; L. R. 2 P. 435; 26 L. T. 108, 189; 20 W. R. 373.

Mere residence in England at the time of the institution of a matrimonial suit, is not sufficient to found the jurisdiction of the court. The residence of the petitioner must be bonâ fide, and not casual or as a traveller. Manning v. Manning, 40 L. J., P. 18; L. R. 2 P. 223; 24 L. T. 196; 19 W. R. 479.

The domicil of the husband will sustain the jurisdiction of the court over the wife, though married abroad, always after marriage resident abroad, and accused of adultery committed abroad. Gillis v. Gillis, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 597.

Domicil without residence is sufficient to sustain the jurisdiction of the court; and the jurisdiction of the court is not defeated by non-residence, except in cases where the non-residence affects the domicil. Ib.

Domicil of Husband.]—In 1854 an Englishman, being in pecuniary difficulties, left England, and went to reside in Scotland in order to avoid his creditors. He left his wife in England, she refusing to accompany him. In 1858 he became lessee, for a term of six years, of a house and shooting ground. He occasionally visited England, and corresponded with solicitors, in reference to getting rid of his liabilities. In 1860 he commenced proceedings in the Scotch courts for a divorce from his wife, on the ground of adultery:—Held, that the husband had not acquired a Scotch domicil, and therefore the Court of Session had no jurisdiction. Pitt v. Pitt, 4 Macq. H. L. 627; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 735; 10 L. T. 626; 12 W. R. 1089.

The domicil of the husband in cases of this kind is not to be regarded in law as the domicil of the wife, either by construction or by attraction, so as to compel the wife to become subject to the jurisdiction of the tribunals of any country in which the husband may choose to acquire a domicil. Ib.

The court has jurisdiction to grant a divorce against a foreigner. A marriage was solemnised at Gibraltar between a Frenchman and an Englishwoman. The husband resided for several years in England, but being a consul for France he retained his domicil of origin. The wife presented a petition for a divorce, alleging adultery committed in England and desertion. The husband appeared under protest and prayed to be dismissed:—Held that the court had jurisdiction to grant a divorce. Niboyet v. Niboyet, 48 L. J., P. 1; 4 P. D. 1; 39 L. T. 486; 27 W. R. 203—C. A.

—— Wife in England.]—In proceedings for divorce it appeared that the petitioner had been born in France of French parents. When he was ten years old his parents settled in England, and the father subsequently obtained letters of naturalisation as a British subject. The petitioner when eighteen years of age went to Canada, where he took up the business of farming, bought a farm, served in the Canadian volunteers, and discharged the duties of a citizen of Canada. In 1878 he married the respondent, who was a Canadian, and in 1883 he brought her with their children to this country, where he resided for some years with his father. He had occasion to return several times to Canada, as he alleged, to look after his farm, and from 1884 was only seven months in this country. The respondent remained in England until the date of the alleged adultery, when she visited France: —Held, that the petitioner had not lost his English domicil—that the matrimonial home was in England, and that the court had therefore jurisdiction over the proceedings. D'Etchegoyen v. D'Etchegoyen, 57 L. J., P. 104; 13 P. D. 132; 37 W. R. 64.

Of Origin or Choice.]—A husband whose domicil of origin was English entered the Ceylon civil service and acquired a domicil of choice there. He afterwards returned to England and took rooms with the intention that his children should be educated here and that his wife should remain in those rooms or other home provided by the husband until the children's education should be finished, and that they should remain here even if he were obliged to return to Ceylon; the husband intended ultimately to rejoin his wife and children in England, either on leave or after his retirement from the Ceylon civil service :— Held, that the domicil of the husband and wife was English. Hurley v. Hurley, 67 L. T. 384.

In a petition by the wife for divorce, on the ground of the husband's adultery and desertion, it appeared that both husband and wife were born in France, of parents born in England but resident in France. The marriage took place in England, but the husband and wife subsequently resided in France. The respondent, on coming of age, made a declaration of his intention to retain his English nationality, and it also appeared that both he and his father contemplated returning to England when they had made sufficient money to maintain them. The respondent, after deserting his wife, led an unsettled life in New Zealand and the Australian colonies :—Held, that both parties had an English domicil at the commencement of the proceedings, and that the court, therefore, had power to entertain the petition and to dissolve the marriage. Goulder v. Goulder, 61 L. J., P. 117; [1892] P. 240.

Rights of Wife in Divorce Court.]—A wife's domicil is that of her husband, and her remedy for matrimonial wrongs must, as a general rule, be sought in the courts of that domicil; and, therefore, the wife of a man not domiciled in England cannot maintain a suit for restitution of conjugal rights if her husband has left the jurisdiction before the commencement of the proceedings. Firebrace v. Firebrace, 47 L. J., P. 41; 4 P. D. 63; 39 L. T. 94; 26 W. R. 617.

When a husband has been guilty of such misconduct as would furnish the wife with a defence to a suit by him for restitution of conjugal rights, she cannot on that ground acquire a separate ground of domicil for herself. Yelverton v. Yelverton, 1 Sw. & Tr. 574; 29 L. J., Mat. 34; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 24; 1 L. T. 194; 8 W. R. 134.

A. intermarried with B., a major in her majesty's royal artillery at Edinburgh, in April, 1857, and in August, 1857, the marriage was celebrated in Ireland, according to the rites of the Romish church. In April, 1858, B. deserted A. at Bordeaux, and had, since that time, been stationed with his regiment at Edinburgh. B.'s domicil of origin was in Ireland, and he had never acquired a domicil in England. A. petitioned for restitution of conjugal rights, and described herself as resident in England :—Held, that as there was no proof of B. having acquired an English domicil, and A.'s domicil was that of her husband, the court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Ib. And see Niboyet v. Niboyet, 48 L. J., P. 1; 4 P. D. 1; 39 L. T. 486; 27 W. R. 203—C. A. supra.

And see further, tit. HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Foreign Divorces.]—A foreign tribunal has no authority, so far as consequences in England are concerned, to pronounce a decree of divorce à vinculo in the case of an English marriage between English subjects, unless such subjects are, at the time of such decree pronounced, bonâ fide domiciled in the country where that tribunal has jurisdiction, and the suit is prosecuted without collusion. Shaw v. Gould, 37 L. J., Ch. 433; L. R. 3 H. L. 55; 18 L. T. 833. S. P., Dolphin v. Robins, 7 H. L. Cas. 390; 3 Macq. H. L. 563; 29 L. J., P. 11; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1271; 7 W. R. 674.

English courts of justice cannot recognise any power in the courts of Scotland to dissolve an English marriage, where the parties are not really domiciled in Scotland, but have only been there for such time as would render them amenable to the jurisdiction of the Scotch courts, and for the sole purpose of founding such jurisdiction. Ib.

The English courts will recognise as valid the decision of a competent foreign christian tribunal dissolving the marriage between a domiciled native in the country where such tribunal has jurisdiction, and an Englishwoman, when the decree of divorce is not impeached by any species of collusion, or fraud. And this, although the marriage may have been solemnised in England, and may have been dissolved for a cause which would not have been sufficient to obtain a divorce in England. Harvey v. Farnie, 52 L. J., P. 33; 8 App. Cas. 43; 48 L. T. 273; 31 W. R. 433; 47 J. P. 308—H. L. (E.)

A domiciled Scotchman married, in England, an Englishwoman. Immediately after the ceremony the married couple went to Scotland and resided there as their matrimonial home. Two years after, the wife obtained, in Scotland, a divorce à vinculo matrimonii, on the ground of her husband's adultery only. The husband came to England and married there another Englishwoman, the first wife being still alive. In a suit for a declaration of the nullity of the first marriage at the instance of the second wife :— Held, that the divorce in Scotland was a sentence of a court of competent jurisdiction, not only effectual within that jurisdiction but entitled to recognition in the courts of this country also. Rex v. Lolley (Russ. & Ry. 237; 15 R. R. 737) explained: Warrender v. Warrender (2 Cl. & F. 488): Geils v. Geils (1 Macq. H. L. 255) undistinguishable: Maghee v. M'Allister, (3 Ir. Ch. 604) also undistinguishable and affirmed: M'Carthy v. Decaix (2 Russ. & M. 614) dissented from. Ib.

Quære, whether a bonâ fide change of domicil which was English at the date of the contract would affect the question of dissolution; and whether Pitt v. Pitt (4 Macq. H. L. 627) would govern cases like Niboyet v. Niboyet (4 P. D. 1), if they arose in Scotland. Ib.

Where the courts of a country assume jurisdiction to decree a divorce between persons living in the country, the jurisdiction must be derived either from some recognised principle of the general law of nations, or from some rule of municipal law peculiar to its forum. Where the jurisdiction exercised is in accordance with the principles of international law, the decree ought to be respected by the tribunals of every civilised country; but where it is derived solely from some rule of the municipal law of the particular country, it cannot claim extraterritorial authority if it trenches upon the interest of any other country to whose tribunals the spouses are amenable. Le Mesurier v. Le Mesurier, 64 L. J., P. C. 97; [1895] A. C. 517; 11 R. 527; 72 L. T. 873.

While mere residence may be sufficient to justify the courts of that country in ordering aliment or decreeing judicial separation, the only true test of jurisdiction to decree a divorce, according to international law, is the domicil for the time being of the married pair. There is no such thing as a matrimonial domicil. Ib.

The petitioner, being a domiciled Englishwoman, in 1872 went through a form of marriage with an American citizen. She cohabited with him until February, 1879, in the United States, and in April, 1879, the supreme court of Columbia pronounced a decree dissolving the marriage on the ground of the husband's incapacity. She then returned to this country, and in 1886 presented a petition to this court, praying for a declaration of nullity of marriage:—Held, that as the marriage was voidable and not void, the petitioner had acquired an American domicil, that the American court had jurisdiction to dissolve the marriage, and that there being no longer a marriage in existence, this court had no jurisdiction. Turner v. Thompson, 57 L. J., P. 40; 13 P. D. 37; 58 L. T. 387; 36 W. R. 702; 52 J. P. 151.

A domiciled Englishman married in England a native of the United States. After a time the husband was served in England with a citation to appear in proceedings for divorce commenced in America by the wife, but he refused to submit to the jurisdiction of the American court, and did not appear:—Held, that the decree in America dissolving the English marriage was not binding in this country, and could not affect the husband's rights here. Green v. Green, 62 L. J., P. 112; [1893] P. 89; 1 R. 507; 68 L. T. 261; 41 W. R. 591.

S., an Austrian subject by birth and parentage, and a Roman Catholic by religion, contracted a valid marriage in Berlin with a lady of the same domicil as himself, but described in the marriage certificate as of the evangelical religion. This marriage, which, by the law of Austria, was absolutely indissoluble, was subsequently dissolved in Berlin by mutual consent, on a petition presented by the wife. S. subsequently married in England an English Protestant lady, his first wife being still alive. The second wife petitioned the English court for a decree of nullity, on the ground that the Berlin divorce did not effectually dissolve the first marriage of S., which she alleged was therefore still subsisting and binding:—Held, that the Berlin divorce was good; and, consequently, that the second marriage was good also. Ingham v. Sachs, 56 L. T. 920.

Prior to 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85.]—At a time when marriage in England was indissoluble, except by act of parliament, a sentence of divorce à vinculo of a foreign court, purporting to dissolve a marriage solemnised in England between domiciled subjects, was of no force. Shaw, Ex parte, Wilson, In re, 35 L. J., Ch. 243; L. R. 1 Eq. 247; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 132: 13 L. T. 576; 14 W. R. 101: M'Carthy v. Decaix, 2 Russ. & M. 614; 2 Cl. & F. 568, n.

—— Fraud—On Court granting Divorce.]—M., a domiciled Englishman, obtained a divorce in the Scotch courts on the ground of his wife's adultery with B., by fraudulent representations as to his domicil and otherwise, to which B. was a party. The wife then went through a form of marriage with B. during the lifetime of M. B. afterwards brought a suit to have such subsequent marriage declared null and void:—Held, that the Scotch divorce had not dissolved the marriage, that B. was not estopped from taking advantage of the fraud to which he was a party, and the court declared the subsequent marriage null and void. Bonaparte v. Bonaparte, 62 L. J., P. 1; [1892] P. 402; 1 R. 490; 67 L. T. 531.

B., an Englishman, married in England H., an Englishwoman, but they separated, and B. lived apart, in adultery with another woman. S. wished to marry H., and he induced B. to go to and reside in Scotland for forty days in order to give the Scotch court jurisdiction to entertain a suit to be brought against him by H. for a divorce; and there was an agreement between S. and B. that S. should pay B. a sum of money, but only in case B. gave no information which should be prejudicial to the divorce. The suit was instituted, and a decree of divorce obtained:—Held, that the Scotch divorce was null and void quoad its operation in England, because the divorce was obtained by collusion. Shaw v. Gould, 37 L. J., Ch. 433; L. R. 3 H. L. 55; 18 L. T. 833.

An agreement by which the former and guilty husband should receive a sum of money for bringing himself within the reach of the Scotch court, so as to enable his wife to institute a suit for divorce, to be determined on its merits, would not be objectionable on the ground of collusion. But an agreement that he should forfeit a sum of money if he, or any one through him, gave information which should be prejudicial to the divorce, would be such a collusion as would have the effect of invalidating the decree of divorce. Ib.

—— Other Matters—Presumption of Jurisdiction of Foreign Court—Validity of Second Marriage.]—A. and B., both having an Irish domicil, were lawfully married in Ireland, and resided in Ireland for a year after their marriage. They subsequently went to an English colony, where the husband was engaged in various pursuits, abandoned all idea of returning home, and visited England only for short periods and for temporary purposes. In the fifth year of cohabitation B. committed adultery with S., whose domicil was English, and in a suit instituted by A. in the colonial court, in which all parties were represented, a decree was pronounced dissolving the marriage. B. and S. shortly afterwards returned to England, where they went through the form of a marriage according to law:—Held, first, that it must be taken that A. was domiciled in the colony and that the divorce was valid; secondly, that the marriage between B. and S. was valid, for although the law prevailing in the colony prohibited the re-marriage of a guilty party as long as the innocent party remained unmarried, yet as the colonial divorce operated to annul the existing marriage and to restore the parties to the position of unmarried persons, they were free to remove from the jurisdiction and to contract a fresh marriage according to the laws of this country. Scott v. Att.-Gen., 55 L. J., P. 57; 11 P. D. 128; 56 L. T. 924; 50 J. P. 824.

5. Other Matters.

Rights in each other's Property.]—An Englishwoman married a domiciled Frenchman. Articles were, previous to the marriage, executed in the English form, by which the wife became entitled to 200*l.* a year. Her husband afterwards separated from her, and subsequently the French court condemned her for adultery:—Held, that the contract of marriage was English, and that the rights of the parties were to be regulated by the English law, and further property of the wife having fallen into possession, and the moral conduct of both parties being reprehensible, the income of the fund must be equally divided between them. Watts v. Shrimpton, 21 Beav. 97.

—— Gift to Separate Use.]—A father gave his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to pay the income to his daughter for life for her separate use, and after her death to pay the fund to the children of the daughter as she should by deed or will appoint, and in default of appointment amongst them equally. The daughter appointed by deed the whole of the fund amongst her children, giving the plaintiff, who was one of them, a specified sum for her separate use absolutely. The plaintiff, after the death of her grandfather, and before the date of the appointment by her mother, married a Frenchman domiciled in France. He died before the date of the appointment, and there was one child only of the marriage. There was no settlement on the marriage, and the French law of community applied, under which the child became entitled, in the absence of any contrary declaration by the donor, to half the property acquired by her mother during the marriage:—Held, that the plaintiff must be considered to have acquired the appointed fund from the date of the appointment only, and that the fund not having been acquired during the marriage, did not become subject to the law of community. De Serre v. Clarke, 43 L. J., Ch. 821; L. R. 18 Eq. 587; 31 L. T. 161; 23 W. R. 3.

Held, also, that the fact of the gift being expressed to be for the separate use was a sufficient declaration to exclude the law of community. Ib.

Enforcing Foreign Contract for Settlement.]—A contract made in France, on the marriage of two people of that nation, who afterwards take refuge and live in England, shall be carried into a specific execution here, although the terms of it refer to the custom of Paris. Foubert v. Turst, 1 Bro. P. C. 129; Pre. Ch. 207.

Compromise of Suit.]—Compromise of suit by married woman, domiciled in France, sanctioned without reference to the master, on proof that they concurred in notarial acts, which by the law of France were binding on them, and that the subject-matter was mere personalty. Chameau v. Riley, 8 Beav. 269; 14 L. J., Ch. 349.

Foreign Law—Presumption.]—In a conflict of evidence as to the law of France on a point relating to the rights of a married woman in personalty in reversion, no presumption can be derived from the law of England. Guepratte v. Young, 4 De G. & Sm. 217.

c. Legitimacy.

By what Law Determined.]—The legitimacy of a child is determined by the law of the country where its parents are domiciled at the time of the conception and birth of the child, and not by the law of the country where the child is born. Wright's Trust, In re, 2 Kay & J. 595; 25 L. J., Ch. 621; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 465; 4 W. R. 541.

A child who is born illegitimate cannot afterwards be made legitimate by the parents domiciling themselves and intermarrying in a country where, if they had been domiciled there at the time of the birth, such child would have been legitimate. Ib.

Therefore, where a domiciled Englishman became the father of a child by a Frenchwoman, and afterwards, having gained a domicil in France (where the subsequent marriage of the parents, with acknowledgment of their children born previously to the marriage, renders those children legitimate), married the mother and acknowledged the child:—Held, that the child was not legitimate. Ib.

—— Illegitimate born Children—Subsequent Marriage—Foreign Nationality.]—T., a German by birth, came to England in 1734, and remained there, carrying on business, till 1779. Soon after coming to England he lived with P. as his wife, and by her had three children, born in 1744, 1745, and 1747. In 1749 he married W., and by her had one child, G. W. died in 1752, and in 1755 he married P., and by her had four more children. In 1774 he presented a petition to the council of Geneva, which he described as "his native country," seeking to establish the legitimacy in Geneva of his three children by P. born before marriage, by reason of his subsequent marriage with her, and the council made an order accordingly. T. died in 1779 in England, having by his will, made in English form, described himself as of Tottenham, in Middlesex, and being possessed of leasehold property in London. A daughter of G. had died intestate a domiciled Englishwoman, and it became necessary to ascertain who were her next-of-kin, and the question was, whether the children of T. by P. born before marriage were legitimate or not:—Held, that T. had in 1744 acquired an English domicil, and the legitimacy of his children by P. must be determined according to the law of the place where their parents were domiciled at their birth, i.e. England, and that those born before marriage were, therefore, not legitimate. Grove, In re, Vaucher v. Treasury Solicitor, 58 L. J., Ch. 57; 40 Ch. D. 216; 59 L. T. 587; 37 W. R. 1—C. A.

A child born a bastard in a country which does not recognise legitimation per subsequens matrimonium, cannot be legitimated by the subsequent marriage of its parents, although the country in which the putative father is domiciled recognises that form of legitimation. Shedden v. Patrick, 1 Macq. H. L. 535. S. P., Goodman v. Goodman, 3 Giff. 643; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 554; 6 L. T. 641.

—— Scotch Law.]—The child of a Scotchman, though born in England, becomes legitimate for all civil purposes in Scotland by the subsequent marriage of the parents in England, if the domicil of the father continued throughout to be Scotch. Neither the place of the marriage, nor the place of the birth of the child, will under such circumstances affect the status of the child. Dalhousie (Countess) v. M'Douall, 7 Cl. & F. 817. Same point decided the same way, where there was also the additional circumstance of the mother being an Englishwoman. Munro v. Munro, 7 Cl. & F. 842.

In order to entitle the children of a putative marriage, which has been declared void, to the status of legitimacy, under the Scotch law, the parents must be justifiably ignorant of the subsistence of the impediment which led to the nullity, and the impediment must be a matter of fact and not of law only. Shaw v. Gould, 37 L. J., Ch. 433; L. R. 3 H. L. 55; 18 L. T. 833.

In relation to Descent of Land.]—The question of legitimacy having relation to real estate is a question which each country will answer for itself. Fenton v. Livingstone, 3 Macq. H. L. 497, 556; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1183; 7 W. R. 671.

In deciding the title to real estate, the lex loci rei sitæ must always prevail, so that a person legitimate by the law of his birthplace, and of the place where his parents were married, may not be regarded as legitimate to take a real estate by inheritance elsewhere. Ib.

In respect to immovable property, the rule is, that the law of the country in which it is situated governs the tenure, the title and the descent. Ib.

The general rule is to determine the validity of a mariage by the law of the country where the parties were domiciled, and in most cases the legitimacy of a party is to be determined by the law of his birthplace, and of his parents' domicil. Ib.

A child born in Scotland of unmarried parents, domiciled in that country, and legitimated for all purposes in Scotland, by the subsequent marriage of the parents, is not capable of inheriting lands in England. Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 7 Cl. & F. 895; West, 500; 9 Bli. (N.S.) 32. S. C., nom. Doe d. Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 2 Scott (N.R.) 828; 6 Bing. (N.C.) 85—H. L. (E.) S. P., Dow's Estate, In re, 4 Drew. 194; 27 L. J., Ch. 98; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1192; 5 W. R. 836.

Succession Duty Act.]—J. A., a native of Cumberland, acquired a Roman or Italian domicil before his death, which occurred in 1877. He cohabited with an Italian woman, by whom he had four sons, all born in Rome prior to 1862. The parents were never married. By his will, made in the English form, he gave all his real estate, whether in Italy or England, to his four sons nominatim. Upon petition by the children for the distribution of a fund in court representing the proceeds of sale of English real estate, which J. A. had inherited:—Held, that they were strangers in blood to the testator for the purposes of the Succession Duty Act, 1853. Atkinson v. Anderson, Anderson, In re, or Atkinson, In re, Anderson v. Atkinson, 51 L. J., Ch. 452; 21 Ch. D. 100; 46 L. T. 850; 30 W. R. 562.

Will—Gift to Children of Married Person—Child Legitimated by subsequent Marriage.]—A child legitimated by the subsequent marriage of his parents, is entitled to share in a specific devise of realty to the children of H., although H. had children born subsequently to the marriage. Grey, In re, Grey v. Stamford (Earl), 61 L. J., Ch. 622; [1892] 3 Ch. 88; 41 W. R. 60.

By the law of Scotland, where a marriage between two persons is invalid by reason of the existence of a prior marriage entered into by one of those persons, and either of such persons is, at the time of the solemnisation of such second marriage, justifiably ignorant that any impediment to such second marriage exists, the issue of the invalid marriage have, nevertheless, the personal status of legitimate children. Wilson's Trust, In re, Shaw, In re, 35 L. J., Ch. 243; L. R. 1 Eq. 247; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 132; 13 L. T. 576; 14 W. R. 161.

But, according to the law of England, such issue will not come within the terms of a gift to children lawfully begotten contained in an English will. Ib.

Legitimation by subsequent Marriage—Residuary Bequest.]—A testator bequeathed his residuary personal estate to trustees in trust for his great-nephews, the sons of his deceased nephew, T. G. A., in equal shares. T. G. A. was a native of Guernsey. The plaintiff was a son of T. G. A., born before the marriage of his parents, who were domiciled in Guernsey, both at the time of the plaintiff's birth and of their subsequent marriage. By the law of Guernsey, children born out of wedlock become legitimated by the subsequent marriage of their parents. Other children were born after the marriage; and the plaintiff claimed to share with them in the property bequeathed by the will:—Held, that since a bequest of personalty in an English will to the children of a foreigner meant to his legitimate children, and by international law, as recognised in this country, those children were legitimate whose legitimacy was fixed by the law of the father's domicil, the plaintiff was entitled to share in the gift as a legitimate child of the father. Andros, In re, Andros v. Andros, 52 L. J., Ch. 793; 24 Ch. D. 637; 49 L. T. 163; 32 W. R. 30.

—— Distributive Share in Personalty.]—The proper law for determining the "kindred" under the Statute of Distributions is the international law adopted by the comity of states. A child born in a country which recognises legitimation by the subsequent marriage of the parents, if the parents are there domiciled at its birth, is entitled to share in the personal estate of an intestate dying domiciled in England as one of the next of kin, under the Statute of Distributions. Goodman's Trusts, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 425; 17 Ch. D. 266; 44 L. T. 527; 29 W. R. 586—C. A.

d. Guardianship of Infants.

British Subject.]—When the Court of Chancery had appointed a guardian, and settled a scheme for the education of an infant peer, who was entitled to large estates in England and Scotland, it restrained the tutor dative from continuing proceedings in the Court of Session relative to the education and residence of the infant, and as to his English estates which had been instituted in Scotland, so as to supersede the scheme approved of by the Court of Chancery. Bute (Marquis) v. Stuart, 2 Giff. 582; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 355; 3 L. T. 809; 9 W. R. 356. Affirmed sub nom., Stuart v. Moore, 9 H. L. C. 440; 4 Macq. H. L. 1; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1129; 4 L. T. 382; 9 W. R. 722.

An infant, being a British subject and also an American citizen, and having lost both father and mother, was brought over to England from the United States, where her property was situated, by a paternal aunt with whom she resided; an application was then made by a maternal aunt, who had been appointed her guardian by the court in America, to have the custody of the infant delivered to her, with the view of taking the infant back to America. The Lord Chancellor refused to interfere, being of opinion that he had no right to make such an order, even if on other grounds he had thought proper, which he did not, to accede to the application. Dawson v. Jay, 3 De G. M. & G. 764; 2 W. R. 366. Varying, 3 Sm. & G. 199; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 36; 2 W. R. 311.

Foreign Subject—Order of Foreign Court.]—When an infant, a citizen of a foreign country, is sent to England, the Court of Chancery will carry out in all respects the orders of the courts of the foreign country in regard to the infant, so far as consistent with the laws of England. Di Savini v. Lousada, 22 L. T. 61; 18 W. R. 425.

V. DOMICIL.

a. General Principles.

Definition.]—Observations upon the various definitions of domicil. Whicker v. Hume, 7 H. L. Cas. 124; 28 L. J., Ch. 396; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 933.

The domicil of a person is that place or country in which his habitation is fixed without any present intention of removing therefrom. Craignish, In re, Craignish v. Hewitt, [1892] 3 Ch. 180; 67 L. T. 589—C. A.

Distinction upon contemporary domicils, in the case of a nobleman or gentleman, generally the domicil is the mansion-house in the country; that of a merchant is at his residence in town. Somerville v. Somerville (Lord), 5 Ves. 750; 5 R. R. 155.

The mere place of birth or death does not constitute the domicil. The domicil of origin which arises from birth and connections remains until clearly abandoned and another taken. In the case of Lord Somerville, of two acknowledged domicils, the family seat in Scotland, and a leasehold house in London, upon the circumstances, the former of which was the original domicil, prevailed. Ib.

A person may be said to have more than one residence. If he have houses in different places, at each of which he keeps an establishment, each may be called his residence, though he may not go there for years. But the meaning of the word residence is different from domicil, for an infant has the domicil of his parents until he attains his full age, and does some act to acquire a new one, and thus his domicil may be in a country in which he has never personally been; whereas residence implies personal presence at some time or other. Walcot v. Botfield, Kay, 534; 18 Jur. 570; 2 W. R. 393.

Only one Domicil Possible.]—A man cannot have two domicils, at least with reference to the succession of his personal estate. Forbes v. Forbes, Kay, 341; 2 Eq. R. 178; 23 L. J., Ch. 724; 18 Jur. 642; 2 W. R. 253. S. P., Crookenden v. Fuller, 1 Sw. & Tr. 441; 29 L. J., P. 1; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1222; 1 L. T. 70; 8 W. R. 49.

With respect to domicil as affecting Marriage, Divorce and Legitimacy, see tit. Persons, supra.

Change of Domicil.]—A change of domicil must be a residence sine animo revertendi. A temporary residence for the purposes of health, travel, or business, does not change the domicil. Also (1) every presumption is to be made in favour of the original domicil; (2) no change can occur without an actual residence in a new place; and (3) no new domicil can be obtained without a clear intention of abandoning the old. Lauderdale Peerage, The, 10 App. Cas. 692—H. L. (Sc.)

Domicil not lost by forced Residence abroad.]—A domicil will not be lost by a constrained residence in a foreign country. D'Orleans (Duchess), In Goods of, 1 Sw. & Tr. 253; 28 L. J., P. 129; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 104; 7 W. R. 269.

Does not affect Allegiance.]—Every individual at his birth becomes the subject of some particular country by the tie of natural allegiance, which fixes his political status, and becomes subject to the law of the domicil, which determines his civil status. Udny v. Udny, L. R. 1 H. L., Sc. 441.

To suppose that for a change of domicil there must be a change of natural allegiance is to confound the political and the civil status, and to destroy the distinction between patria and domicilium. Ib.

A man may change his domicil as often as he pleases, but not his allegiance. Exuere patriam is beyond his power. Ib.

The question of domicil is distinct from that of naturalisation and allegiance, and in order to effect a change of domicil it is not necessary that a man should do all in his power to divest himself of his original nationality (exuere patriam), it being sufficient that there should be a change of residence of a permanent character voluntarily assumed. Haldane v. Eckford, L. R. 8 Eq. 631; 21 L. T. 87; 17 W. R. 1059.

Not arising from Society or Locality—Anglo-Egyptian.]—There is no such thing as domicil arising from society and not from connection with a locality; consequently, as Cairo is not a British possession governed by English law, a testator's permanent abode therein under British protection does not attract to him an English or Anglo-Egyptian domicil. Tootal's Trusts, In re (23 Ch. D. 532), approved. Abd-Ul-Messih v. Farra, 57 L. J., P. C. 88; 13 App. Cas. 431; 59 L. T. 106—P. C.

The testator, a member of the Chaldean Catholic community, having a Turkish domicil of origin, fixed his permanent residence in Cairo, where he acquired the status of a protected British subject:—Held, that he died domiciled in the dominions of the Porte, and that the consular court at Constantinople, being bound by ss. 5 and 6 of the order in council of 1873 to follow the same principles which would have been observed by an English court of probate, was right in holding that the law of Turkey governing the succession to a member of the Chaldean Catholic community domiciled in Turkey should be followed in considering the power of testacy of the deceased and in distributing his effects. Ib.

—— Anglo-Chinese.]—British subjects resident in Chinese territory cannot acquire in China a domicil similar to that existing in India, and commonly known as Anglo-Indian. Tootal's Trusts, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 664 ; 23 Ch. D. 532 ; 48 L. T. 816 ; 31 W. R. 653.

How Established.]—Primâ facie, the place of residence is the place of domicil, but that may be rebutted or supported by circumstances. Bempde v. Johnstone, 3 Ves. J. 198.

Domicil is established not by assertion, but by conduct. McMullen v. Wadsworth, 59 L. J., P. C. 7 ; 14 App. Cas. 631 ; 61 L. T. 487—P. C.

b. Of Origin.

Principles regulating Law.]—The law is, beyond all doubt, clear with regard to the domicil of birth, that the personal status indicated by that term clings and adheres to the subject of it until an actual change is made by which the personal status of another domicil is acquired. Bell v. Kennedy, L. R. 1 H. L., Sc. 307.

The domicil of origin adheres until a new domicil is acquired. Ib.

It is a settled principle that no man shall be without a domicil ; and to secure this end the law attributes to every individual as soon as he is born the domicil of his father if the child is legitimate, and the domicil of his mother if the child is illegitimate. This is called the domicil of origin, and is involuntary. It is the creation of law—not of the party. It may be extinguished by act of law, as for example, by sentence of death, or exile for life, which puts an end to the status civilis of the criminal ; but it cannot be destroyed by the will and act of the party. Udny v. Udny, L. R. 1 H. L., Sc. 441.

In matters to be determined by the domicil of the parties, it is a principle of law that the domicil of origin must prevail until the party has not only acquired another, but has manifested and carried into execution an intention of abandoning his former domicil, and acquiring another as his sole domicil. Dalhousie v. M'Douall, 7 Cl. & F. 817.

The domicil of origin must be presumed to continue until another sole domicil has been acquired by actual residence, with the intention of abandoning the domicil of origin. Ib.

In order to lose a domicil of origin, and to acquire a new domicil, a man must intend quatenus in illo exuere patriam. It is not enough for him to take a house in the new country, even with the probability and the belief that he may remain there all the days of his life. Moorhouse v. Lord, 10 H. L. Cas. 272 ; 1 N. R. 555 ; 32 L. J., Ch. 295 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 677 ; 8 L. T. 212 ; 11 W. R. 637—H. L. (E.)

A mere change of residence, however long continued, does not affect a change of domicil in a testamentary sense, unless there is also an intention to change the domicil, or throw off his native country ; as, for example, if an Englishman goes to France, he must not only reside in France, but intend to become a Frenchman instead of an Englishman, before his domicil will be held changed. Ib. S. P., Att.-Gen. v. Blucher de Wahlstatt, 3 H. & C. 374 ; 34 L. J., Ex. 29 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1159 ; 11 L. T. 454 ; 13 W. R. 163.

Presumption as to—Officer—Anglo-Indian.]—The mere fact that a person bears an English name, and is an officer in the British army, does not raise any presumption that his domicil is English as distinguished from Scotch or Irish. The cases relating to Anglo-Indian domicil commented on and explained. Cunningham, Ex parte, Mitchell, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 1067 ; 13 Q. B. D. 418 ; 51 L. T. 447 ; 33 W. R. 22 ; 1 Morrell, 137—C. A.

Presumption as to Intention to Change.]—The strongest intention of abandoning a domicil, and actual abandonment of residence, will not deprive a man of that domicil unless he has acquired another. Forbes v. Forbes, Kay, 341 ; 2 Eq. R. 178 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 724 ; 18 Jur. 642 ; 2 W. R. 253.

The presumption of law is against the intention to abandon the domicil of origin. Hodgson v. De Beauchesne, 12 Moore, P. C. 285 ; 7 W. R. 397. S. P., Att.-Gen. v. Rowe, 1 H. & C. 31 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 314 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 823 ; 6 L. T. 438 ; 10 W. R. 718.

Length of residence in a foreign country, per se, according to time and circumstances, raises a presumption of intention to abandon the domicil of origin, and to acquire a new domicil, but such presumption may be rebutted by facts shewing that there was no such intention. Ib.

A change of domicil is not to be inferred from the fact of a lengthened residence in a foreign country. To constitute a change of domicil it must be animo et facto. Ib.

An intention to abandon the domicil of origin and to acquire another must be indicated by some words or acts of a marked character, from which a definite resolve may safely be collected ; but the mode in which a man may indicate such an intention must vary indefinitely with the age, the character, the circumstances, and the general conduct of the individual. Sharpe v. Crispin, 38 L. J., P. 17 ; L. R. 1 P. 611 ; 20 L. T. 41 ; 17 W. R. 368.

For the purposes of succession where there is an undoubted domicil of origin continued through many years, such domicil will be held to have been retained unless there is evidence of an intention to abandon it, accompanied by acts sufficient to found the acquisition of a new domicil. Crookenden v. Fuller, 1 Sw. & Tr. 441 ; 29 L. J., P. 1 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1222 ; 1 L. T. 70 ; 8 W. R. 49.

Reverting to Domicil of Origin.]—When a domicil of choice is abandoned, the domicil of origin revives—a special intention to revert to it being unnecessary. Udny v. Udny, L. R. 1 H. L., Sc. 441.

If after having acquired a domicil of choice a man abandons it and travels in search of another domicil of choice, the domicil of origin comes instantly into action and continues until a second domicil of choice has been acquired. Ib.

A natural-born Englishman may domicile himself in Holland ; but if he breaks up his establishment there and quits Holland, declaring that he will never return, it is absurd to suppose that his Dutch domicil clings to him until he has set up his tabernacle elsewhere. Ib.

A man having acquired a domicil of choice, may put an end to it of choice, without it being incumbent on him to acquire another domicil of choice, because his domicil of origin thereupon becomes his domicil. King v. Foxwell, 45 L. J., Ch. 693 ; 3 Ch. D. 518 ; 24 W. R. 629.

In order to lose the domicil of choice, and revive the domicil of origin, it is not sufficient for the person to form the intention of leaving the domicil of choice, but he must actually leave it with the intention of leaving it permanently. Marrett, In re, Chalmers v. Wingfield, 36 Ch. D. 400 ; 57 L. T. 896 ; 36 W. R. 344—C. A.

The domicil of origin does not revive until an acquired domicil is finally abandoned. Craigie v. Lewin, 3 Curt. 435 ; 7 Jur. 519.

Abandonment of Origin—What is.]—A domiciled Scotchman not in the service or employ of the Indian government went to India and resided there for the purposes of his private business, always, however, retaining the wish and intention of returning finally to Scotland :—Held, that he never lost or intended to lose his original Scotch domicil. Jopp v. Wood, 4 De G. J. & S. 616 ; 5 N. R. 422 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 212 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 212 ; 12 L. T. 41 ; 13 W. R. 481.

Domicil can only be changed animo et facto ; and residence alone, although decisive as to the factum, is an equivocal act as to the animus. Ib.

Domicil imports an abiding and a permanent home, and not a mere temporary one. Ib.

The acquisition of a new domicil involves the abandonment of the previous domicil, and to effect the change the animus of abandonment must be shewn. Ib.

A person, born in France, succeeded his uncle in business at Manchester, and purchased land and built a handsome house there, and also a vault in which he buried his uncle, wife and child, and, going to Vichy for his health, died at the place of his birth. The evidence of intention was conflicting, and went chiefly to the impression of the witness ; but he preferred the French climate, and talked of taking his wife's body to France :—Held, that the domicil of origin never was lost, and that he died a domiciled Frenchman. Capdevielle v. Capdevielle, 21 L. T. 660 ; 18 W. R. 107.

For many purposes a domicil of origin requires more to change it than a domicil of acquisition ; and in order to prove that the domicil of an adult of sound mind has been changed, an intention on his part must be shewn. Douglas v. Douglas, 41 L. J., Ch. 74 ; L. R. 12 Eq. 617 ; 25 L. T. 530 ; 20 W. R. 55.

It might be convenient to insist, as evidence of the requisite intention, on the proof of a desire to change the civil status of the party—as that would leave the question to be governed by the domicil of origin—but such, although the stricter rule, is not that of the law of England. Ib.

All that the law requires is proof of an intention to settle in a new country as a permanent home. If that is proved certain legal consequences ensue, whether intended or not, and even although, perhaps, the exact contrary of those consequences may have been intended. Ib.

The evidence necessary to support the intention must be either express, or such as to shew that if the question had been formally submitted to the party whose domicil is in dispute he would have declared his wish in favour of a change. That is to say, such an intention must be proved to have actually existed in the mind of the party, or it must appear that it was reasonably certain it would have existed, if the question had arisen in a form requiring a deliberate and solemn determination. Ib.

A child of Scotch parents for some time resident in England, who was born there, and was for many years himself a resident with his wife and children there, and who died and was buried in England, was, under all the circumstances of the case, held not to have lost his Scotch domicil of origin. Ib.

A testator, born in America, A.D. 1764, went to Scotland, when a minor, for the purposes of education, and, after he had attained his majority, in 1788 sailed for India, describing himself in the ship's books as an American ; he remained in India thirty years, when he returned to Europe, leaving the bulk of his property in Bengal ; and afterwards, having been in America, visited England, Scotland and the continent, when he returned to America, entered into agricultural pursuits there, and continued to draw his property to that country until his death, at New York, in 1826 :—Held, that he was an American citizen. Bruce, In re, 2 C. & J. 436 ; 2 Tyr. 475 ; 1 L. J., Ex. 153.

Intention and Act both necessary to Create Change of Domicil.]—See post, col. 239.

c. Change of Domicil.

General Principles.]—Domicil of choice is the creation of the party. When a domicil of choice is acquired, the domicil of origin is in abeyance ; but is not absolutely extinguished or obliterated. Udny v. Udny, L. R. 1 H. L., Sc. 441.

In order to lose a domicil of origin, and to acquire a new domicil, a man must intend quatenus in illo exuere patriam. It is not enough for him to take a house in the new country, even with the probability and belief that he may remain there all the days of his life. Moorhouse v. Lord, 10 H. L. Cas. 272 ; 1 N. R. 555 ; 32 L. J., Ch. 295 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 677 ; 8 L. T. 212 ; 11 W. R. 637—H. L. (E.)

That place is properly the domicil of a person in which he has voluntarily fixed the habitation of himself and his family, not for a mere special and temporary purpose, but with a present intention of making it his permanent home, unless and until something (which is unexpected or uncertain) shall occur to induce him to adopt some other permanent home. Lord v. Colvin, 4 Drew. 366 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 361 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 351 ; 7 W. R. 250.

Slighter evidence is required to warrant the conclusion that a man intends to abandon an acquired domicil, and to resume his domicil of origin, than is necessary to justify the conclusion that he means to abandon his domicil of origin, and to acquire a new one. Ib.

It requires stronger and more conclusive evidence to justify the court in deciding that a man has acquired a new domicil in a foreign country than in one where he is not a foreigner. Ib.

A man changes his domicil of origin by choosing a new domicil, i.e. by voluntarily fixing his sole or chief residence in a country not being the country of origin, with an intention of continuing to reside there for a period not limited as to time. King v. Foxwell, 45 L. J., Ch. 693 ; 3 Ch. D. 518 ; 24 W. R. 629.

Naturalisation is neither essential to, nor conclusive of, domicil ; it is important as evidence of an intention to reside permanently. Ib.

Peer can acquire one.]—A peer of the British parliament is not, by reason of his obligation to attend the House of Peers whenever his presence there is required, incapacitated from acquiring a domicil of choice in a foreign country. Hamilton v. Dallas, 45 L. J., Ch. 15; 1 Ch. D. 257; 33 L. T. 495; 24 W. R. 264.

How Established.]—Domicil is established not by assertion, but by conduct. McMullen v. Wadsworth, 59 L. J., P. C. 7; 14 App. Cas. 631; 61 L. T. 487—P. C.

Evidence of subsequent, as well as of prior, act is admissible for the purpose of ascertaining a person's domicil at a given period. Grove, In re, Vaucher v. Treasury Solicitor, 58 L. J., Ch. 57; 40 Ch. D. 216; 59 L. T. 587; 37 W. R. 1—C. A.

In order to acquire a domicil, there must be actual residence in the place chosen, which must be the principal and permanent residence of the party. Dalhousie v. McDoual, 7 Cl. & F. 817.

The mere declaration of intention to change a domicil without an actual change of residence is inoperative to create a new domicil. Brown v. Smith, 15 Beav. 444; 21 L. J., Ch. 356.

To constitute a new domicil, there must be not only the factum of residence in a place, but the animus manendi. Ib.

The animus to change an acquired domicil is not sufficient without the factum of return. Drevon v. Drevon, 4 N. R. 316; 34 L. J., Ch. 129; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 717; 10 L. T. 730; 12 W. R. 946.

The courts are slower to hold a change of the domicil of origin, and must be satisfied that the party intended quatenus in illo exuere patriam. Ib.

In questions of domicil, less weight is given by the courts to a testator's declarations than to his acts, and no one act is necessarily per se paramount in importance; but the relative importance of all his acts, however trivial, must be considered as evidence of the animus manendi or revertendi. Ib.

An intention expressed, but not executed, cannot countervail existing facts. Platt v. Att.-Gen. for New South Wales, 47 L. J., P. C. 26; 3 App. Cas. 336; 38 L. T. 74; 26 W. R. 516—P. C.

R. left Dunkerque, where she had an acquired domicil, with intention of residing in England; she got on board the packet at Calais, but before it left the harbour she was through illness obliged to land, and never sufficiently recovered to leave France:—Held, that there was no sufficient act to give effect to the intention to resume the English domicil. Raffenel, In goods of, 3 Sw. & Tr. 49; 1 N. R. 569; 32 L. J., P. 203; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 386; 8 L. T. 211; 11 W. R. 549.

A new domicil cannot be acquired except by intention and act; but, being in itinere to the intended domicil, is a sufficient act for this purpose. Forbes v. Forbes, Kay, 341; 2 Eq. R. 178; 23 L. J., Ch. 724; 18 Jur. 642; 2 W. R. 253. S. P., Munroe v. Douglas, 5 Madd. 379.

A party whose domicil was in question was called as a witness, and examined to prove what was passing in his own mind at a given period with reference to his domicil. Maxwell v. M'Clure, 3 Macq. H. L. 852; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 407; 2 L. T. 65; 8 W. R. 370—H. L. (Sc.)

—— Change of Political Status.]—Naturalisation is important as evidence of an intention to reside permanently. King v. Foxwell, 45 L. J., Ch. 693; 3 Ch. D. 518; 24 W. R. 629.

Naturalisation is neither essential to, nor conclusive of, domicil. Ib. S. P., Brunel v. Brunel, L. R. 12 Eq. 298; 25 L. T. 378; 19 W. R. 970; Doucet v. Geoghegan, 9 Ch. D. 441; 26 W. R. 825—C. A.

A de facto domicil governing the succession to personal property of which he dies intestate may be acquired in France by a foreigner who has not obtained the government authorisation imposed by the Code Napoléon, art. 13, as the condition for enjoyment by a foreigner resident in that country of full civil rights. Hamilton v. Dallas, 45 L. J., Ch. 15; 1 Ch. D. 257; 33 L. T. 495; 24 W. R. 264.

Evidence of Domicil.]—A British subject went to settle in France in 1762, and afterwards purchased an estate and became naturalised there. In 1791 he left France and came to England, in consequence of the French revolution, and shortly afterwards his property was confiscated by the revolutionary government. In January, 1802, he made a will in London, by which he left his property partly to a charity in Ireland, and partly to individuals resident in England, and appointed one of those individuals his executor. In April, 1802, emigrants were permitted to return to France, and soon afterwards he returned to that country. In 1804 he made a will in Paris, in which he stated that he was born at Waterford, and had come to France to obtain restitution of his estate; and, after referring to his former will (which he had mislaid in London), he recapitulated very nearly its contents, and concluded by expressly confirming it. He died in Paris in 1806; and his two testamentary papers were proved both in France and in England:—Held, that the testator was domiciled in France at his death, and that the fund in court was not subject to legacy duty. Charitable Donations Commissioners v. Devereux, 13 Sim. 14; 11 L. J., Ch. 362; 6 Jur. 616.

Residence Abroad.]—Residence originally temporary, and intended for a limited period, may afterwards become general and unlimited, and in such a case, as soon as the change of purpose, or animus manendi, can be inferred, the fact of domicil is established. Haldane v. Eckford, L. R. 8 Eq. 631; 21 L. T. 87; 17 W. R. 1059.

Although permanent residence abroad without intent to return may not operate as a change of domicil, if believed to be necessary for health's sake, the circumstance that such residence was occasioned by mere preference of climate, or by the opinion that the air or the habits of the country may be better suited to the health than those of the country which has been quitted, will not be sufficient to prevent such permanent residence from so operating. Hoskins v. Matthews, 8 De G. M. & G. 13; 25 L. J., Ch. 689; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 196; 4 W. R. 216.

An English gentleman, long before his death, took up his abode in a house he had purchased in a foreign city, set up his establishment there, centred his fortune, so far as it admitted of locality, there, lived there with such of his children as were not at school or out in the world, and destined that place as their future residence; from thence he went and habitually returned. He died in the country where he had purchased the house, having made a will in the language of that country, but not effectual for disposing of his property there, and a will in the English form, giving all his other property, which was personal:—Held, that the domicil was foreign. Ib.

A British subject, domiciled and having real and personal estate in England, went abroad, and purchased, in 1821, the title, castle and estate of R., in the Papal States. He hired Italian domestic servants, male and female, whom he kept at R. until his death. He expended large sums in repairing and improving the castle and grounds of R., which repairs and improvements were going on at the time of his death. He did not make R. his constant residence, but from 1828 to 1831 sometimes occupied it, sometimes lived in furnished lodgings in the town adjacent, and at other times visited Rome, Florence and other parts of Italy, residing in furnished lodgings. In 1831, he came to England, and resided in different parts of it till September, 1832. In March, 1832, he made his will in London. In the same month he left England and went to Florence, where he remained two months, and thence to R.; he then lived sometimes in the castle of R., sometimes in furnished lodgings in the adjacent town, till October, 1833, when he went to Rome, and there lived in furnished lodgings till his death, in February, 1834:—Held, that upon these facts there was no evidence of the testator's having actually acquired a domicil at R., or elsewhere abroad; although they indicated an intention to make R. his domicil; that his English domicil therefore remained. Att.-Gen. v. Dunn, 6 M. & W. 511.

A testator born at Montory in France, of French parents, in 1807 went to Cadiz, where he was clerk to a merchant. He afterwards went to Gibraltar. In 1830 he came to England, and carried on business as a commission agent at Manchester until his death in 1859. During all that time he resided in lodgings, for which he paid a weekly rent, and a further weekly sum for his board. In 1835 he visited Montory, and again in 1846, when he passed a solemn act before a notary for the preservation of his co-hereditary rights of succession to a property there. He also then purchased a house and land at Montory, and desired that some apartments in the house should be kept ready for his return. He frequently expressed an intention to return to his native country. He devised and bequeathed all his real and personal property to his nephew in England. He had no real property in England, but a large amount of personal property, consisting of cash and railway shares:—Held, that the testator was domiciled in France. Capdevielle, In re, 2 H. & C. 985; 5 N. R. 15; 33 L. J., Ex. 306; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1155; 12 W. R. 1110.

In 1858, M. left Canada, which was his domicil of origin, sold his house and burial-ground there, and came to Paris to educate his children. He lived in Paris ten years, but went over several times to Montreal, and amongst other things made his will there, describing himself as of Montreal. In 1868, he came to England and took a lease of a house in London. His daughter married and settled in London, and he purchased for his son a share in a business in London. M. died in 1871:—Held, that he had acquired and shewn an intention to retain an English domicil. Stevenson v. Masson, 43 L. J., Ch. 134; L. R. 17 Eq. 78; 29 L. T. 666; 22 W. R. 150.

—— For Permanent Pursuit.]—If a man is settled in a foreign country, engaged in some permanent pursuit requiring his residence there, a mere intention to return to his native country on a doubtful contingency will not prevent such residence from changing his domicil of origin. Aikman v. Aikman, 3 Macq. H. L. 854; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1017; 4 L. T. 374.

A domiciled Scotchman went to India, where he was engaged in mercantile pursuits for nine years:—Held, that this residence and occupation in India did not, in the absence of any expression of intention, change his domicil. Jopp v. Wood, 4 De G. J. & S. 616; 5 N. R. 422; 34 L. J., Ch. 212; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 212; 12 L. T. 41; 13 W. R. 481.

In 1818, S., a Portuguese, came to England as agent of a wine company, in which capacity he was employed until 1833. He continued to reside in England, and in 1857 was appointed attaché to the Portuguese embassy, which office he held until his death in 1860. There was no evidence of his having visited Portugal, or communicated with any person there, after he came to England. In a will in his handwriting he stated that as he was a Portuguese subject, and an attaché, his property was not liable to legacy duty:—Held, first, that he had acquired an English domicil. Att.-Gen. v. Kent, 1 H. & C. 12; 31 L. J., Ex. 391; 6 L. T. 864; 10 W. R. 722.

Held, secondly, that his appointment as attaché did not revive his domicil of origin. Ib.

A French subject, by establishing himself in business in this country, marrying, and continuing to reside here for more than thirty years, making only occasional business visits to France, loses his domicil of origin, and acquires an English domicil, notwithstanding his refusal to take out letters of naturalisation in this country, on the ground that he might return to France, and would not give up his status as a French citizen. Brunel v. Brunel, L. R. 12 Eq. 298; 25 L. T. 378; 19 W. R. 970.

—— Retaining Property in Domicil of Origin.]—A person born in Scotland, resided many years in India, returned to Scotland, and lived in his paternal house for six years; then resided in France for six years, and died at Boulogne, on his return from a journey to Scotland, where he had been for some weeks. He was said to have preferred France, and to have been annoyed at his neighbours in Scotland. He had apartments at Paris, and furnished them handsomely. He sent for his horses, but not for his furniture or plate, from Scotland. He never let his paternal estate, and attended to the management of it:—Held, that he had not abandoned his Scotch domicil. Lord v. Colvin, 4 Drew. 366; 28 L. J., Ch. 361; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 351; 7 W. R. 250.

A., domiciled in England, took up his abode in Scotland under circumstances which, had they stood alone, would have sufficed to constitute a Scotch domicil, but inasmuch as he all the time retained his English residence and performed certain functions in England:—Held, that he had not abandoned his English domicil. Maxwell v. M'Clure, 3 Macq. H. L. 852; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 407; 2 L. T. 65; 8 W. R. 370.

W. was born and educated in England, and for a time held a commission in the army. In 1835 he sold out, married an Englishwoman, and went to reside abroad. He travelled about to different places, but from 1846 until his death, in 1860, he resided either at Boulogne, or at St. Germain-en-

Laye, in France. He periodically visited his brother in England, and sent his eldest son to be educated in this country. In 1846 he made his will in the English form, but in 1848 he executed a copy of it according to the law of France, and at the same time wrote a memorandum, in which he stated that he did so by reason of some doubts which had lately arisen as to the validity of wills made in the English form by persons residing and dying abroad, and that he had no intention to reside permanently away from England. All his property was in England, except some furniture in his house at St. Germain :—Held, that he had not lost his domicil of origin, and that his will made in the English form was entitled to probate. West, In Goods of, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 831.

—— Permanent Residence of Wife and Family.]—In determining the question of a man's domicil it is material to consider where his wife and family have their permanent residence. Platt v. Att.-Gen. for New South Wales, 47 L. J., P. C. 26 ; 3 App. Cas. 336 ; 38 L. T. 74 ; 26 W. R. 516—P. C. S. P., Doucet v. Geoghegan, 9 Ch. D. 441 ; 26 W. R. 825—C. A.: Bullen-Smith, In re, Berners v. Bullen-Smith, 58 L. T. 578.

A native of Scotland acquired a domicil in New South Wales, where he was possessed of a station called Westbrook, at which he, for some time, resided. The portion of New South Wales in which Westbrook was situate was afterwards separated from the rest, and made into an independent colony under the name of Queensland. Shortly before the separation he had ceased to reside permanently at Westbrook, and handed over the management of the station to his partner ; but he was still part owner of the station, and frequently visited it, and had expressed an intention to reside there at a future time, and to be buried there. He was a member of the Legislative Assembly of Queensland, and took an active part in the political business of the colony but had no permanent residence there. His wife and family lived at a house which he had built in New South Wales. He died suddenly while on a visit to the station at Westbrook, and was buried there :—Held, that he was domiciled in New South Wales, and not in Queensland. Ib.

The rule that a man will be considered as domiciled in the place where his wife permanently resides, and in which he has fixed his establishment, is not affected by the circumstance that the choice of residence has been made in deference to the wishes of the wife, and that the house has been bought and furnished at her instance and with her money. Aitchison v. Dickson, 39 L. J., Ch. 705 ; L. R. 10 Eq. 589 ; 23 L. T. 97 ; 18 W. R. 989.

A Scotchman having his domicil in Scotland, and being a landed proprietor and a banker there, married an Englishwoman, with whom he resided for some years in Scotland. He then, on account of his health, left Scotland, and for ten years resided at different places in England. Afterwards he returned to Scotland, and remained there for a few months, for the purposes of his business, but was again forced to leave by ill health and return to England, where for nearly two years he was in confinement in an asylum, and for the next five years he was travelling about on the continent, and in England ; meanwhile almost all his Scotch property was sold to pay his debts. At the end of that time, the wife's trustees bought a house at Brighton, and he and his wife lived there till his death ten years afterwards :—Held, that he had acquired an English domicil. Ib.

An Englishman emigrated to America in 1851, where he carried on a shoemaker's trade. In 1856 he was admitted as a citizen of the United States of America. He buried his first wife in America, and remarried there in 1866 :—Held, that he had acquired an American domicil of choice. King v. Foxwell, 45 L. J., Ch. 693 ; 3 Ch. D. 518 ; 24 W. R. 629.

A Frenchman came to England when about eighteen, and lived here twenty years, and bought and improved a house in which he lived ; and also bought a vault in which he buried his uncle, and also his wife, who died four years before him. After his wife's death he shewed a disposition to return to France, but continued to reside in England. He died during a temporary visit to his native place, and made his will there, in which he referred to his English residence as "home" :—Held, that his domicil was French. Capdeville v. Capdeville, 18 W. R. 107 ; 21 L. T. 663.

In 1858 M. left Canada, which was his domicil of origin, sold his house and burial-ground there, and came to Paris to educate his children. He lived in Paris ten years, but went over several times to Montreal, and amongst other things made his will there, describing himself as of Montreal. In 1868 he came to England and took a lease of a house in London. His daughter married and settled in London, and he purchased for his son a share in a business in London. M. died in 1871 :—Held, that he had acquired and shewn an intention to retain an English domicil. Stevenson v. Masson, 43 L. J., Ch. 134 ; L. R. 17 Eq. 78 ; 29 L. T. 666 ; 22 W. R. 150. And see Brunel v. Brunel, L. R. 12 Eq. 298 ; 25 L. T. 378 ; 19 W. R. 970.

—— Conversations and Declarations as Evidence.]—Conversations and declarations unless accompanying acts are the lowest species of evidence of a change of domicil ; they must not, however, be discarded, but must be duly weighed together with the rest of the evidence. Crookenden v. Fuller, 1 Sw. & Tr. 441 ; 29 L. J., P. 1 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1222 ; 1 L. T. 70 ; 8 W. R. 49.

In questions of domicil, less weight is given by the courts to a testator's declarations than to his acts, and no one act is necessarily per se paramount in importance ; but the relative importance of all his acts, however trivial, must be considered as evidence of the animus manendi or revertendi. Drevon v. Drevon, 4 N. R. 316 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 129 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 717 ; 10 L. T. 730 ; 12 W. R. 946.

—— Statement in Will.]—The fact of a testator describing himself in his will as of a foreign country does not of itself shew any intention to change his domicil. Jopp v. Wood, 4 De G. J. & S. 616 ; 5 N. R. 422 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 212 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 212 ; 12 L. T. 41 ; 13 W. R. 481. S. P., Att.-Gen. v. Kent, 1 H. & C. 12 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 391 ; 6 L. T. 864 ; 10 W. R. 722.

Where a person left England and took up his residence at Hamburgh, and the facts shewed that he intended to live there permanently, and he did live and died there :—Held, that his domicil was there, notwithstanding that in a will made during a visit to England he said that although he intended to return to Hamburgh, he did not mean by such declaration of intention to renounce his domicil of origin as an Englishman. Steer, In re, 3 H. & N. 594; 28 L. J., Ex. 22.

——Form of Will.]—Making will in a particular form, employing terms of art, is evidence of intention to acquire a domicil. Doucet v. Geoghegan, 9 Ch. D. 441; 26 W. R. 825—C. A. S. P., Bullen-Smith, In re, Berners v. Bullen-Smith, 58 L. T. 578.

And also to retain one. West, In Goods of, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 831. Vide Att.-Gen. v. Pottinger, 6 H. & N. 733; 30 L. J., Ex. 284; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 470; 4 L. T. 368; 9 W. R. 578.

The execution in England of a will, according to the English form and law, by a man who had acquired an English domicil of choice, but was resident abroad, held not sufficient to prevent the acquisition of another domicil of choice. Anderson v. Laneuville, 9 Moore, P. C. 325; 2 Spinks, 41.

Terms of Foreign Law in Will.]—A Scotchman came to live in England and acquired an English domicil. He afterwards went for ten years to France, and returned to England where he soon after died. He left an unsigned will of personal estate made in 1827, which was drawn by a Scotch lawyer, and contained several technical words of Scotch law. The will was admitted to probate by the English court. Semble, that the testator died domiciled in England, his residence in France not being sufficient evidence of his intention to abandon his English domicil. Semble, also, that the use of some technical Scotch words in the will, did not furnish sufficient indication of the intention of the testator to induce the court to construe it according to Scotch law. Bradford v. Young, 29 Ch. D. 617; 53 L. T. 407; 33 W. R. 860—C. A. Affirming in part 54 L. J., Ch. 96.

A domiciled Scotchman made a will, and afterwards married in Scotland. He subsequently acquired an English domicil, which he retained until his death:—Held, that as the will was valid so long as he remained in Scotland, it was not revoked by his subsequent change of domicil, and was entitled to probate in England. Reid, In the Goods of, 35 L. J., P. 43; L. R. 1 P. 74; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 300; 13 L. T. 680; 14 W. R. 316.

When Acts of Party are contrary to Expressed Intention.]—The expressions of an intention not to renounce a domicil of origin cannot prevail against the intention and facts collected from the acts of the party if those are otherwise sufficient to constitute a domicil abroad. Steer, In re, 3 H. & N. 594; 28 L. J., Ex. 22.

A Frenchman had lived twenty-seven years in England, during the greater part of which time he was a partner in an English house of business, paying occasional visits to France. He married successively, in English churches, two wives, who were Englishwomen and Protestants, though himself a Roman Catholic, and his children were brought up in England as Protestants. He made his will in the English form, and died and left his property in a manner inconsistent with French law. Upon an action to establish a French domicil, numerous witnesses deposed that he had made various parol declarations that he intended to return to France when he made his fortune. It was also proved that he always refused to be naturalised in England, and would not take a lease of more than three years of his house:—Held, that the acts of the testator manifested an intention to acquire an English domicil; and that his declarations of intention to return to France when he had made his fortune were not sufficient to rebut the conclusion to be derived from the facts of his life, especially of his English marriages. Doucet v. Geoghegan, 9 Ch. D. 441; 26 W. R. 825—C. A.

A testator, whose domicilium originis was Ireland, where he inherited considerable estates, abandoned such, and by a long residence in England acquired an English domicil. In 1836 he sold his house and furniture, and broke up his establishment in England, and went to reside in France, where he bought and furnished a house, in which he resided permanently (cohabiting with a French woman) to the period of his death, in 1849, with the exception only of occasional visits of short duration to England for purposes of business relating to his estates in Ireland and his property in the English funds:—Held, that the domicil was French, and was not affected by his having expressed an intention to return to England, in an event which never happened, or of his having, on one occasion, when in England, executed a will according to the English form and law, or from the circumstance that the bulk of his property, at his death, was in the English funds. Anderson v. Laneuville, 9 Moore, P. C. C. 325; 2 Spinks, 41.

An Irishman went to India, and was there resident in business for at least ten years. He then came to England, and lived here for nine years, having taken a house on lease, and furnished it. Being in bad health, he sold his lease and furniture, and went to Madeira, leaving his books and trunks in care of a person living in London. He lived at Madeira two years, and there made his will; and then he went to Lisbon, and died. He had property in India, some Irish stock, some India stock and some English stock; and he banked in London. He was proved to have expressed himself as intending ultimately to reside in Ireland:—Held, that he abandoned his Indian domicil, and acquired an English domicil; and that he never changed the latter, either for India, or Madeira, or Ireland. Att.-Gen. v. Fitzgerald, 3 Drew. 610; 25 L. J., Ch. 743; 4 W. R. 797.

Acts and Declarations.]—An unmarried Englishwoman, in 1849, went to reside abroad at the house of her married sister in Germany. She resided there, contributing towards the expenses of housekeeping, until 1863, in which year she died. Her property consisted of money invested in English securities, but she also possessed a valuable library, which she caused to be transported to Germany. She occasionally came over to England with her married sister to visit her friends, and while in England in 1854 she made her will, describing herself as on a visit to her sister, bequeathing her property to trustees to pay the annual income to her sister for life for her separate use, without power of anticipation, with power of appointment to her sister by deed or will. The testatrix told her sister that if she survived her, she should continue to live in Germany, and that nothing would induce her to return to England, except on an occasional visit. She also named the church-yard where she wished to be buried, and where she was afterwards buried:—Held, that her acts and declarations did not shew a sufficient intention to change her domicil; and, assuming she intended to give up her English domicil, that until she acquired a new domicil her English domicil continued.

Att.-Gen. v. Blucher de Wahlstatt, 3 H. & C. 374; 5 N. R. 135; 34 L. J., Ex. 29; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 1159; 11 L. T. 454; 13 W. R. 163.

Abandonment of Domicil of Choice.] — An acquired domicil is not lost by mere abandonment, but continues until a subsequent domicil is acquired, which can only be animo et facto, unless the party dies in itinere towards an intended domicil. Munroe v. Douglas, 5 Madd. 379.

In order to lose the domicil of choice and revive the domicil of origin it is not sufficient for the person to form the intention of leaving the domicil of choice, but he must actually leave it with the intention of leaving it permanently. Marrett, In re, Chalmers v. Wingfield, 36 Ch. D. 400; 57 L. T. 896; 36 W. R. 344—C. A.

A. was born in Scotland; when a young man he went to the East Indies, where he remained above ten years in the company's service; he then returned to Scotland, and lived in Edinburgh, where he put his name on the books of the municipality, married, took a house, entered into business as a partner in a banking-house, and became a member of various societies there established. At the end of a few years he left Edinburgh in anger; the banking business had come to an end, and he took off his name from the books of the municipality and of the various societies, and declared his intention never to return to Auld Reekie; he lived in London, first in lodgings, and then in houses hired for different periods, lectured on Oriental literature, and endeavoured thereby to increase the sale of some books which he had written on the Hindostanee language. At the end of some years he went to Paris, to avoid some annoyances in London, but never made any such declarations with respect to London that he had made with respect to Edinburgh; and he left his works in London, and likewise some ornamental furniture which he desired a friend to keep for him till his return. He died in Paris, having just before made a will in the English form:—Held, that he had lost his Scotch, and obtained an English domicil. Whicker v. Hume, 7 H. L. Cas. 124; 28 L. J., Ch. 396; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 933; 6 W. R. 813.

In 1855, a domiciled Manxman came to England and married an Englishwoman, and resided in England for twenty years. At the date of the marriage the wife was entitled to a vested reversionary interest in a legacy which fell into possession in 1885. In 1875 the husband and wife returned to the Isle of Man, where the husband carried on business till 1878, when he became insolvent, and executed a deed of assignment of all his property, including his wife's interest in the legacy, for the benefit of his creditors. In 1880 the parties returned to England, where they resided till 1882, when the husband went to Mexico to seek employment. The doctrine of a wife's equity to a settlement is unknown to Manx law:—Held, that the Manx domicil of the husband, which had been lost by the twenty years' residence in England, reverted on his return to the Isle of Man, that nothing happened afterwards to re-establish the English domicil, and that the domicil was therefore Manx. Marsland, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 581; 54 L. T. 635; 34 W. R. 540.

—— Burden of Proof.]—The onus of proving a change of domicil is on the party who alleges it. Bell v. Kennedy, L. R. 1 H. L., Sc. 307.

The burden of proof is on the party who impugns the domicil of origin. Crookenden v. Fuller, 1 Sw. & Tr. 441; 29 L. J., P. 1; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1222; 1 L. T. 70; 8 W. R. 49. S. P., Att.-Gen. v. Rowe, 1 H. & C. 31; 31 L. J., Ex. 314; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 823; 6 L. T. 438; 10 W. R. 718. Att.-Gen. v. Blucher de Wahlstatt, 3 H. & C. 374; 5 N. R. 135; 34 L. J., Ex. 29; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1159; 11 L. T. 454; 13 W. R. 163.

Where a domicil has been acquired, the onus of proof, to be deduced from all the facts and circumstances of the case, lies on the person who desires to shew that that domicil has been changed. Maxwell v. M'Clure, 3 Macq. H. L. 852; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 407; 2 L. T. 65; 8 W. R. 370.

A testator made his will in England in 1843, and afterwards went to reside in France where he died in 1850. On the question that an inquiry ought to take place, as it had been suggested that his domicil was French:—Held, that there was no ground for an inquiry, there being nothing to shew that the testator's domicil was not English. Harrison v. Southampton Corporation, 18 Jur. 669; 2 W. R. 659.

—— Presumption of Reverter to Domicil of Origin.]—Where a question between a reverter to the domicil of origin and a domicil in another country is in equilibrio, the domicil of origin will prevail. Craigie v. Lewin, 3 Curt. 435; 7 Jur. 519.

d. Married Women.

Domicil of Wife.]—By marriage, the domicil of the husband becomes that of the wife. Dalhousie v. M'Douall, 7 Cl. & F. 817.

When an English woman marries a domiciled foreigner, the marriage is constituted according to the lex loci contractûs; but she takes his domicil, and is subject to his law. Harvey v. Farnie, 52 L. J., P. 33; 8 App. Cas. 43; 48 L. T. 273; 31 W. R. 433; 47 J. P. 308—H. L. (E.)

A wife cannot acquire a domicil separate and distinct from her husband. Dolphin v. Robins, 7 H. L. Cas. 390; 3 Macq. H. L. 563; 29 L. J., P. 11; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1271; 7 W. R. 674.

A feme coverte, living apart from her husband, has no power to change her domicil. Daly, In re, 25 Beav. 456; 27 L. J., Ch. 751; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 525; 6 W. R. 533.

—— In Relation to Divorce.]—See col. 223, ante.

—— After Sentence of Divorce.]—The ordinary presumption that a wife is legally domiciled where the husband is, fails, when there has been a sentence of divorce. Williams v. Dormer, 2 Rob. Ec. Rep. 505; 16 Jur. 366.

A. and B. were married in England, and resided here for many years; differences then arose between them, and by agreement they lived separate from each other. B. had the power to dispose of property by deed or will. In February, 1854, A. went to Scotland, and committed adultery there; he resided there till the middle of June in that year. While he was so residing there, B. instituted a suit against him for a divorce, on the ground of adultery. Pending the suit she made a will in favour of C. A decree of divorce was pronounced. She married C., and went with him to France, where she lived till her death. In June, 1856, she made a testamentary paper, revoking all former wills:—Held, that the divorce was inoperative; that she had no domicil but that of her husband, and that, consequently, the French will was void. Dolphin v. Robins, supra.

Englishwoman Marrying Foreigner Abroad —Acquisition of new Domicil—Abandonment of Domicil of Origin.]—In 1839 N., a domiciled Englishwoman, being then an infant, married in France a Frenchman. Previously to the marriage she entered into a notarial contract dealing with her property according to French law. There were children of the marriage. In 1845 she separated from her husband and went with her children to reside in Jersey. In 1849 an act of separation of property between the husband and wife was made by the Royal Courts of Jersey. In 1853 N., believing her husband to be dead, went through the ceremony of marriage with B., and accompanied him and her children to New South Wales, where she lived until her death in 1879. Her husband did not in fact die until 1877. In 1878 she made a will, by which she left all her property to B. :—Held, that by going to New South Wales N. had acquired a new domicil there, inasmuch as there were present both the elements necessary for such acquisition —namely, the factum and the animus manendi; but that, even if not so, it must be taken that she had abandoned her French domicil and that her English domicil of origin had revived :—Held, also, following Sottomayor v. De Barros (3 P. D. 5), that the validity of the notarial contract must be decided according to the law of her domicil of origin, and consequently, she being an infant, that such contract was invalid :—Held, therefore, that there was nothing to prevent her making a will, or to disentitle B. to take under it as against the children of the French marriage. Cooke's Trusts, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 637; 56 L. T. 737; 35 W. R. 608.

c. INFANTS.

Rule.]—It is a settled principle that no man shall be without a domicil; and to secure this end the law attributes to every individual as soon as he is born the domicil of his father if the child is legitimate, and the domicil of the mother if the child is illegitimate. Udny v. Udny, L. R. 1 H. L., Sc. 441.

Legitimate children acquire by birth the domicil of their father. Forbes v. Forbes, Kay, 341; 2 Eq. R. 178; 23 L. J., Ch. 724; 18 Jur. 642; 2 W. R. 253.

Change of Domicil during Infancy.]—A new domicil cannot be acquired during pupilage, or until the person is sui juris. Somerville v. Somerville (Lord), 5 Ves. 750; 5 R. R. 155.

An infant cannot change his domicil by his own act. Forbes v. Forbes, supra.

There can be no change of domicil during infancy, and the lapse of seven years after the attainment of majority would be too short a time to operate a change of domicil, in the absence of any evidence of an intention to change it. Jopp v. Wood, 4 De G. J. & S. 616; 34 L. J., Ch. 212; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 212; 12 L. T. 41; 13 W. R. 481.

—— By Change of Father's Domicil.]—A. was born in England, and at the age of nine accompanied his father to Jersey, where he resided partly with his father, and at times with an uncle, for eleven years. He, being still under age, entered the navy, and was borne on the books of some one of her majesty's ships of war until he died. The father continued to live in the same island :—Held, that at the time A. went to sea his domicil was that of his father, namely, at Jersey, and that, as he never afterwards acquired a new one, that was his domicil when he died. Patten, In Goods of, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 151. S. P., Firebrace v. Firebrace, 47 L. J., P. 41; 4 P. D. 63; 39 L. T. 94; 26 W. R. 617: D'Etchegoyen v. D'Etchegoyen, 57 L. J., P. 104; 13 P. D. 132; 37 W. R. 84.

A.'s father was formerly the sovereign of the Punjaub, but in 1849, by a treaty made by him with the English government when he was ten years of age, he renounced his sovereignty, and subsequently resided in England until 1886, when he left this country, taking with him his wife and son, with the avowed intention of returning to India, and on being prevented from so doing had since resided on the continent. A. at this time had not attained his majority, and while still a minor returned to England with his father's consent and lived with his mother at his father's expense up to and after his majority, when he entered the English army as an officer, his regiment being stationed in Canada :—Held, that A.'s father, although he had resided in England, had never abandoned his domicil of origin in the Punjaub, and that even if he had the English domicil was renounced during the minority of A., who thereupon followed the domicil of his father wherever that might be: that there was not sufficient evidence to shew that A., after he attained his majority, intended to take a domicil of choice in this country. Cross, Ex parte, Dulcep Singh, In re, 7 Morrell, 228—C. A.

Per Lopes, L.J. :—A domicil of choice arises when an independent person resides in a country with the intention of permanently residing there. Ib.

—— Effect on Domicil of Origin.]—Where the domicil of birth is changed during infancy by a change of domicil of the father :—Semble, that the altered domicil cannot be regarded as the infant's domicil of origin. Craignish, In re, Craignish v. Hewitt, [1892] 3 Ch. 180; 67 L. T. 689—C. A.

—— By Change of widowed Mother's Domicil.]—A native of England, domiciled in Guernsey, died intestate, leaving a widow and infant children by her, and also by a former wife. The widow, after his death, was appointed guardian of the children by the Royal Court of Guernsey, and in conjunction with another person, who was appointed guardian of the children by a former marriage, sold the property of the intestate, and invested the produce in the English funds, after which she came to England with her children, and was domiciled there. On the death of some of the children under age, a question arose whether their shares of the property were distributable according to the law of England or of Guernsey :—Held, that the law of England governed the succession, the domicil of the children being (according to the opinion of foreign jurists, our own law being silent on the subject) to follow the domicil of the surviving mother, where no fraudulent intention can be imputed. Potinger v. Wightman, 3 Mer. 67; 17 R. R. 20.

—— Second Marriage—Change of Mother's Domicil—Domicil of Step-father.]—The change in the domicil of an infant, which may follow from a change of domicil on the part of its widowed mother, is not to be regarded as the necessary consequence of a change of the mother's domicil (e.g. upon her second marriage), but as the result of the exercise by her of a power vested in her for the welfare of the infant, which in its interest she may abstain from exercising, even when she changes her own domicil. Potinger v. Wightman (3 Mer. 67; 17 R. R. 20) explained. Beaumont, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 923; [1893] 3 Ch. 490; 8 R. 9; 42 W. R. 142.

Domicil of Lunatic Child after attaining Majority.]—The domicil of a child during its minority follows that of the father; and if from lunacy or mental imbecility it is incapable, after it has attained the age of majority, to choose a domicil for itself, in such case its domicil will still continue to be determined by that of the father. Sharpe v. Crispin, 38 L. J., P. 17; L. R. 1 P. 611; 20 L. T. 41; 17 W. R. 368.

Illegitimate Child—Domicil of Origin or of Choice.]—The illegitimate son of a Portuguese woman was sent to Scotland when a child, and remained under the control of his father's relations there, being sent to school in Scotland, and for a short time in Germany. At the age of eighteen he obtained an appointment in the English Customs Department, and went to Yarmouth, and afterwards to London, where he remained in the same employment till he was twenty-eight, when he returned to Scotland in ill-health, and soon afterwards became lunatic, in which state he remained until his death. While living in London he paid some visits to Scotland, where he retained apartments, in which he left his books, &c. According to Scotch law an infant can choose his own domicil at the age of fourteen:—Held, on the evidence, that his domicil was not Scotch. Semble, that his domicil was English. Urquhart v. Butterfield, 57 L. J., Ch. 521; 37 Ch. D. 357; 58 L. T. 750—C. A.

Effect of Domicil on Legitimacy.]—See tit. LEGITIMACY, col. 235, supra.

f. CORPORATIONS.

Double Domicil.]—A public company may have two domicils; and places of business may, for the purpose of founding jurisdiction, be treated as places of domicil, and service there is sufficient. Carron Co. v. Maclaren, 5 H. L. Cas. 416; 24 L. J., Ch. 620; 3 W. R. 597.

The Caledonian Railway Company was incorporated in 1845 by 8 & 9 Vict. c. clxii. for the purpose of making a railway from Carlisle to Glasgow and Edinburgh. The whole of the line, with the exception of six miles in England, is situate in Scotland. By s. 1 of the special act the Companies Clauses (Scotland) Act, 1845, is, among others, incorporated with the special act, s. 2 of which also incorporates the English Companies Act, 1845, so far as may be necessary for carrying into effect the object and purposes of the special act in relation to the portion of the line situate in England. The meetings of the board of directors of the company were held at Glasgow, from which place the business of the company was managed and controlled. The company also had a station at Carlisle, in England, where the traffic in that district was managed and controlled by a district traffic superintendent, who was subject to the orders issued by the board of directors at Glasgow:—Held, that the company was a Scotch company, domiciled in Scotland, and not a company partly Scotch and partly English. Palmer v. Caledonian Ry., 61 L. J., Q. B. 552; [1892] 1 Q. B. 823; 66 L. T. 771; 40 W. R. 562—C. A.

g. TAKING SERVICE UNDER THE CROWN.

In General.]—Residence in a foreign country as a public officer gives rise to no inference of a domicil in that country; but if already there domiciled and resident, the acceptance of an office in the public service of another country does nothing to destroy the domicil. Sharpe v. Crispin, 38 L. J., P. 17; L. R. 1 P. 611; 20 L. T. 41; 17 W. R. 368.

—— Subsequent Residence Abroad.]—A person whose name was English, but whose domicil of origin was not shewn, held a commission in the English army. He sold out in 1810, and subsequently resided, down to his death, in France; there he formed a French connection, there he educated his son as French, and there he died, and his whole property was in French rentes:—Held, that his domicil at his death was French, and that legacy duty was not payable on his assets. United States President v. Drummond, 33 Beav. 449; 4 N. R. 7; 33 L. J., Ch. 501; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 533; 10 L. T. 321; 12 W. R. 701.

P. was born in Scotland in 1792, of Scotch parents. In 1810 he obtained a commission in the army, and immediately proceeded with his regiment on foreign service, and served abroad till 1860, when he retired from the army. From 1860 till his death he resided in lodgings, hotels, and boarding-houses in various places in England, dying in 1882, intestate and a bachelor, in a private hotel in London, leaving no real estate in England, and no property whatsoever in Scotland. From the year 1810 till his death he never revisited Scotland, and for the last twenty-two years of his life never left the territorial limits of England:—Held, that the domicil of the intestate at his death was Scotch. Patience, In re, Patience v. Main, 54 L. J., Ch. 897; 29 Ch. D. 976; 52 L. T. 687; 33 W. R. 501.

Ambassador.]—A foreigner having gained a British domicil does not lose it by becoming chargé d'affaires in this country for his own sovereign. Att.-Gen. v. Kent, 1 H. & C. 12; 31 L. J., Ex. 391; 6 L. T. 864; 10 W. R. 722.

Nor does his appointment revive his domicil of origin. Ib.

In 1819, a Sardinian came to England, and became attached to the Sardinian embassy. In 1821, he was dismissed, but he continued to reside ten years in England. He was then, for three years, chargé d'affaires in London, and for three years minister in Holland. In 1837, he was appointed envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to England, and retained this office until his death in 1846:—Held, upon the evidence of his declaration and acts, that he was domiciled in England. Heath v. Samson, 14 Beav. 441.

Civil Service.]—In 1856, a Queen's counsel, whose domicil of origin was England, was appointed chief justice of Ceylon, during the pleasure of the crown, and he resided with his family there, in the exercise of the duties of his office, until his death in 1860. He left a library and other effects in England, and he invested large sums of money on mortgage in Ceylon :— Held, that, in the absence of any evidence of an intention to acquire a foreign domicil, he retained his domicil of origin. Att.-Gen. v. Rowe, 1 H. & C. 31 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 314 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 823 ; 6 L. T. 438 ; 10 W. R. 718.

A domiciled Irishman went to India in the military service of the East India Company in 1804. In 1840 he returned to England, and went in 1841 to China as plenipotentiary. In 1844 he returned to England and bought a house. In 1845 he went as governor to the Cape of Good Hope, and in 1848 to Madras as governor. In 1854 he returned to England, and in 1855 went to Malta, with an idea of proceeding at some time to India. In his will, made in England, and in a codicil, made at Malta, he described himself as of Eaton Place, London :—Held, that he resumed his English domicil in 1844, and never subsequently lost it. Att.-Gen. v. Pottinger, 6 H. & N. 733 ; 30 L. J., Ex. 284 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 470 ; 4 L. T. 368 ; 9 W. R. 578.

Naval Service.]—A Scotchman came to England at the age of sixteen, and remained in the English naval service until his death in 1848 :— Held, that he had not lost his domicil of origin. Brown v. Smith, 15 Beav. 444 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 356.

Military Service.]—A domiciled Irishman, by enlisting in a regiment in her majesty's service, the headquarters of which are in England, does not thereby acquire an English domicil. Yelverton v. Yelverton, 1 Sw. & Tr. 574 ; 29 L. J., Mat. 34 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 24 ; 1 L. T. 194 ; 8 W. R. 134.

The rule that a British subject does not, by entering into and remaining in the military service of the crown, abandon the domicil which he had when he entered into the service, applies to an acquired domicil as well as to a domicil of origin. Macreight, In re, Paxton v. Macreight, 55 L. J., Ch. 28 ; 30 Ch. D. 165 ; 53 L. T. 146 ; 33 W. R. 838.

A., a domiciled Englishman in the military service of the East India Company, came to England from India, in 1829, upon furlough. By the rules of the service, he was liable at any time to be recalled to India on active service. In 1838 he acquired the brevet rank of major-general in her majesty's service. While on furlough, and in 1832, he went to France, where he resided with his wife and daughter, and died there in 1855. He occupied lodgings during that time in Paris. He also purchased a burial-place for his wife, who died and was buried there ; and purposed to be buried there himself. His residence in Paris was not continuous, as he frequently came to England and Scotland upon visits, but he had no permanent abode in either of those countries, nor did he give up his lodgings in Paris during these visits. All his property, except the furniture of the lodgings in Paris, was in England :—Held, first, that it was not competent to A. to acquire a domicil in a foreign state, as such domicil was incompatible with the obligations and duty of an officer in the military service of the Queen and the East India Company. Hodgson v. De Beauchesne, 12 Moore, P. C. 285 ; 7 W. R. 397.

Held, secondly, that the presumption of law arising from his profession and status was against any intention by A. to abandon his original domicil and acquire a new domicil in a foreign state, as it would be inconsistent to presume an intention contrary to his duty as an officer in the military service of her majesty and the East India Company. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that England being the domicil of origin of A., the onus probandi was upon the party who alleged he had abandoned it and had acquired another domicil, to establish that proposition. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the presumption raised by A.'s residence in France of his intention to acquire a French domicil was rebutted by the facts proved. Ib.

—— As affecting Domicil of Origin of Children.]—The rule that the children born abroad of ambassadors in the service of the crown of England abroad, are treated as natural-born British subjects, does not apply to the children born abroad of officers in the military service of the crown in foreign parts. De Geer v. Stone, 52 L. J., Ch. 57 ; 22 Ch. D. 243 ; 47 L. T. 434 ; 36 W. R. 241.

Engaged in Military Service of East India Company.]—The rule of law, that an engagement in India, in the military service of the East India Company, or as a covenanted servant to that company, changed the domicil into Anglo-Indian, does not extend to a person who becomes the servant in a private establishment abroad, or who goes abroad for the purpose of acquiring a fortune, with the intention of returning, at some undefined period, when his object has been attained. Jopp v. Wood, 4 De G. J. & S. 616 ; 5 N. R. 422 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 212 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 212 ; 12 L. T. 41 ; 13 W. R. 481.

The cases as to officers and covenanted servants of the East India Company are exceptions to the general rule, and their principle will not be extended. Ib. And see Hodgson v. De Beauchesne, supra.

A native of Scotland having, by employment in the military service of the East India Company, acquired a domicil in India :—Held, that by his return to Scotland, animo manendi, his original domicil did not revive, the party still holding his commission, and being liable to be called upon to return to India, and intending to return if called upon to do so. Craigie v. Lewin, 3 Curt. 435 ; 7 Jur. 519.

h. Anglo-Indian.

In what Cases.]—A British-born subject, an officer on service in her majesty's army in India, died there intestate, leaving all his property situate in that country, with the exception of a small sum of money due to him from the War Office in England. His widow took out letters of administration in India, and after paying the debts, &c., invested the rest of the estate in India in her own name, for her own benefit, and that of the next of kin. She afterwards took out letters of administration in England for the purpose of obtaining the debt due from the War Office :—Held, that as the deceased was on duty in India in her majesty's service, he did not acquire a domicil in that country, and that the whole of his property, though chiefly situate abroad, was liable to legacy duty. Att.-Gen. v. Napier, 6 Ex. 217 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 173 ; 15 Jur. 253.

P., who was the son of Irish parents, and an officer in the military service of the East India Company on the Bombay establishment, returned to England in 1840, having attained the regimental rank of colonel. By the regulations of the service, officers who had attained that rank were permitted to reside where they pleased, subject to the company's orders for their return to duty in India. P. continued in the service of the company until his death. In 1841 he was appointed plenipotentiary in China, and accepted this appointment with consent of the East India Company. On his return in 1844, having been made a privy councillor, he purchased the ground-lease of a house in Eaton Place, which he furnished and fitted up for his residence, and resided there. Soon afterwards he was appointed governor of the Cape of Good Hope, where he continued until 1848, when he was appointed governor of Madras. He resided at Madras until 1854, when he returned to his house in Eaton Place, but afterwards went to other places in England, and ultimately to Malta, where he died. In his will and codicils he described himself as of Eaton Place. During the last period of his life he frequently declared his intention of returning to India :—Held, that the fact that he continued in the service of the company, and was liable to be ordered to return to India, did not prevent him from acquiring an English domicil on his return from China ; that his subsequent residence as governor of the Cape of Good Hope and at Madras did not involve the loss of his English domicil ; and that, as he had acquired an English domicil on his return from China in 1844, subsequent expressions of intention to return to India, and even the going to Malta with the view of ultimately returning there, did not affect the domicil he had acquired in England. Att.-Gen. v. Pottinger, 6 H. & N. 733 ; 30 L. J., Ex. 284 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 470 ; 4 L. T. 368 ; 9 W. R. 578.

C., born in Scotland, went to India and acquired an Anglo-Indian domicil. On his return to Europe he settled in Scotland, at his native place, occupying the family estate. After some years he left Scotland, where, however, he still kept up his house, and went to France, chiefly for the benefit of his health, and for special reasons, and rented an unfurnished house there till he died, in France :—Held, the Scotch domicil had been re-acquired, and had not been changed by the residence in France. Moorhouse v. Lord, 10 H. L. Cas. 272 ; 1 N. R. 555 ; 32 L. J., Ch. 295 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 677 ; 8 L. T. 212 ; 11 W. R. 637.

A native of Scotland went to India in the military service of the East India Company, whereby he acquired an English domicil. He remained in that country, with two exceptions, until 1837. The first of those exceptions consisted of a visit to England on a special military mission ; the second, of a temporary sojourn at the Cape of Good Hope. In 1837, being a lieutenant-colonel in the service, he came to England on leave of absence for three years, which was usually extended to five, still retaining his commission in the service, and being attached to a regiment. There was great probability that he would attain the rank of full colonel before the expiration of his leave of absence, in which event he need not have returned to India. He died in 1841, before his extended leave of absence expired. During this time he resided for the greater part in Scotland, but partly in England. He died in London. He, however, evinced a decided intention of permanently residing in Scotland, but coupled with the determination not to resign his commission in the East India Company's service, and to return to India, if that should be necessary to his becoming full colonel :—Held, that the acquired Anglo-Indian domicil was not divested. Craigie v. Lewin, 3 Curt. 435 ; 7 Jur. 519.

A domiciled Scotchman, having ancestral property, but no house in his native country, by accepting a commission, and serving in the Indian army, abandoned his domicil of origin, and acquired an Anglo-Indian domicil. He afterwards attained the rank of general in the Indian army, and was made colonel of a regiment and then left India with the intention of not returning thither, but came to Great Britain, where he lived part of the year in a house which he had built on his estate in Scotland, and part in a hired house in London, under circumstances which, if he had been a single man, would have given him again a Scotch domicil ; but his wife and establishment of servants resided constantly at the house in London :—Held, that this fact counterbalanced the effect of the other circumstances, and proved that his intention was permanently to reside in England ; and that therefore he must be considered to have abandoned his acquired domicil in India, and acquired by choice, a new one in England. Forbes v. Forbes, Kay, 341 ; 2 Eq. R. 178 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 724 ; 18 Jur. 642 ; 2 W. R. 253.

A testator had a Scotch domicil of origin. In 1807 he sailed from England for the East Indies ; the vessel was wrecked, and he was taken prisoner, and confined at Verdun till 1814 : in that year he was released. In 1815 he went to India, and set up in business ; in 1835 he made his will at Calcutta, describing himself as of that place, and appointing two persons resident at Calcutta his executors. In 1836 he sailed from India in a vessel bound for an English port, and died in itinere :—Held, that the domicil at the time of his death was Indian, and therefore no legacy duty was payable upon his personal property. Lyall v. Paton, 25 L. J., Ch. 746 ; 4 W. R. 798.

An English officer in the navy, upon half-pay, went to India, and remained there as a merchant for ten years, when he died, having acquired a very large fortune there. He always received his half-pay, and from time to time applied for and received fresh leave of absence :—Held, that he was domiciled in India, and that legacy duty did not attach upon his property there. Cockrell v. Cockrell, 25 L. J., Ch. 730 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 727 ; 4 W. R. 730.

A Scotchman by birth, after a service of forty years in India, became insane, and was sent to England on leave. He never recovered his faculties, and died in England :—Held, that his domicil was Anglo-Indian. Hepburn v. Skirving, 9 W. R. 764.

The decisions that persons going to India in the service of the East India Company, thereby acquire an Anglo-Indian domicil, are excrescences upon, and anomalous to, the principles of domicil. Drevon v. Drevon, 4 N. R. 316 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 129 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 717 ; 10 L. T. 730 ; 12 W. R. 946.

A Scotchman went to India, entered into business, and resided there for eighteen years. He then returned to England for the benefit of his health, leaving all his property in India. He spent eleven months in England and six months in Scotland, having no fixed abode ; after which time he went back to India, made his will, describing himself as T. C., coffee planter, Mysore, and died in India a few months after:—Held, that he had abandoned his domicil of origin, had acquired an Anglo-Indian domicil, which he retained at his death, and consequently that his property was not liable to legacy duty. Allardice v. Onslow, 33 L. J., Ch. 434; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 352; 9 L. T. 674; 12 W. R. 397.

i. OTHER MATTERS.

Legacy Duty—Chinese Domicil.]—Notwithstanding the constitution of the supreme court of China and Japan, and the jurisdiction conferred on that court over British subjects having a fixed place of residence in China, a British subject cannot acquire by residence in China a new domicil so as to exempt his personal estate on death from the operation of the Legacy Duty Acts. Tootal's Trusts, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 664; 23 Ch. D. 532; 48 L. T. 816; 31 W. R. 653.

Construction of Statute—Crown Lands Alienation Act.]—The Crown Lands Alienation Act of 1868 (31 Vict. No. 46), enacts (s. 46) that an applicant for lands under the act shall make a declaration that he "lives in Queensland":—Held, that the word "live" must be taken to be used in its popular meaning, denoting more than a transient presence in the colony, though not necessarily an intention to create a new domicil there, and not excluding the possession of a residence elsewhere. Fisher v. Tully, 47 L. J., P. C. 59; 3 App. Cas. 627; 38 L. T. 236.

Held, also, that this declaration was a material base of the contract created by the act, and that any misrepresentation in it avoided the whole contract. Ib.

VI. PROPERTY.

a. PRINCIPLES APPLICABLE TO IMMOVABLE AND MOVABLE.

Generally.]—It is established as a general principle, that a legal title, duly acquired, in any one country, is a good title over all the world. Simpson v. Fogo, 1 H. & M. 195; 1 N. R. 422; 32 L. J., Ch. 249; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 403; 8 L. T. 61; 11 W. R. 418.

When the law of a foreign country places a restraint upon the alienation of property, a contract here respecting that property cannot be enforced against the foreign law. Waterhouse v. Stansfield, 10 Hare, 254; 21 L. J., Ch. 881; 16 Jur. 1006; 1 W. R. 11.

—— Distribution of Estate.]—Where a person domiciled in one country dies possessed of property situate in another, the personal estate is to be applied and administered according to the law of the place of domicil, and the real estate according to the law of the place where the real estate is situate. Winchelsea (Earl) v. Garrety, 2 Keen, 293; 7 L. J., Ch. 99.

—— Decision of Foreign Tribunal.]—Although the parties claiming to be entitled to the estate of a deceased person may not be found to resort to the tribunals of the country in which he was domiciled, and although the courts of this country may be called upon to administer the estate of a deceased person domiciled abroad, and may in such a case be bound to ascertain as best they can who according to the law of the domicil are entitled to the estate, yet where the title has been adjudicated upon by the courts of the domicil, such adjudication is binding upon and must be followed by the courts of this country, Enohin v. Wylie (10 H. L. Cas. 1), Ewing v. Orr-Ewing (10 App. Cas. 453), Doglioni v. Crispin (L. R. 1 H. L. 301); even if the judgment of the foreign court has by the default of the party complaining of the judgment proceeded on a mistake as to the English law, Castrique v. Imrie (L. R. 4 H. L. 414), Godard v. Gray (L. R. 6 Q. B. 139), or the whole of the facts were not before the foreign tribunal (De Cosse Brissac v. Rathbone, 6 H. & N. 301); for the courts of this country do not sit to hear appeals from foreign tribunals, and if the decision of the foreign tribunal is wrong, recourse must be had to the mode of appeal provided in the foreign country (Bank of Australasia v. Nias, 16 Q. B. 717). Trufort, In re, Trafford v. Blanc, 57 L. J., Ch. 135; 36 Ch. D. 600; 57 L. T. 674; 36 W. R. 163.

Omnia ritè esse acta.]—The presumption when a foreign court has purported to act properly and within its jurisdiction is omnia ritè esse acta. Taylor v. Ford, 29 L. T. 392; 22 W. R. 47.

Will—Not revoked by change of Domicil.]—A domiciled Scotchman made a will, and afterwards married in Scotland. He subsequently acquired an English domicil, which he retained until his death:—Held, that as the will was valid as long as he remained in Scotland, it was not revoked by his subsequent change of domicil, and was entitled to probate in England. Reid, In goods of, 35 L. J., P. 43; L. R. 1 P. 74; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 300; 13 L. T. 680; 14 W. R. 316. And see Bradford v. Young, 29 Ch. D. 617; 53 L. T. 407; 33 W. R. 860—C. A.

—— Foreign Technical Language.]—Semble, where a will made in an acquired domicil uses technical language of the native domicil, the courts of the acquired domicil resort to the law of the native domicil for the purpose of ascertaining the meaning of such language. Martin v. Lee, 4 L. T. 657.

—— Executing a Power of Appointment.]—A will of a person who dies domiciled abroad disposing of personal estate in this country, if made in pursuance of a power of appointment, and executed in compliance with the requisites of the power, is entitled to probate, though not executed according to the testamentary law of the domicil or testator. Alexander, In goods of, 29 L. J., P. 93; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 345; 2 L. T. 56; 8 W. R. 451.

Where a domiciled Englishman executes by will a general power of appointment created by a Scotch will, the case is governed by the law of Scotland, and consequently the appointor does not thereby make the appointed property part of his general estate so as to be assets for creditors. Bald, In re, Bald v. Bald, 66 L. J., Ch. 524; 76 L. T. 462; 45 W. R. 499.

—— Of Married Woman.]—The testamentary law of the domicil at the time of death does not govern the will of a married woman made in execution of a power. Alexander, In goods of, 29 L. J., P. 93; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 345; 2 L. T. 56; 8 W. R. 451.

A married woman, domiciled in Scotland, made a will under a power in the English form, but not valid by the law of Scotland:—

Held, that it was entitled to probate. Hallyburton, In goods of, 35 L. J., P. 122; L. R. 1 P. 90; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 416; 14 L. T. 136.

—— Deceased Domiciled Abroad—Foreign Creditors.]—In the administration in England of the English assets of a foreigner who died domiciled abroad, no priority is given to English creditors over foreign creditors, but all take pari passu. Klæbe, In re, Kannreuther v. Geiselbrecht, 54 L. J., Ch. 297; 28 Ch. D. 175; 52 L. T. 19; 33 W. R. 391.

Power of Attorney—Exercise in Country other than that in which made—Extent of Authority.]—Where a power of attorney is executed in a foreign country in a language of that country, the intention of the writer is to be ascertained by evidence of competent translators and experts, including, if necessary, lawyers of the country, as to the meaning of the language used; and if, according to such evidence, the intention appears to be that the authority shall be acted upon in other countries, the extent of the authority in any country in which the authority is acted upon must be determined by the law of that country. Chatenay v. Brazilian Submarine Telegraph Co., 60 L. J., Q. B. 295; [1891] 1 Q. B. 79; 63 L. T. 739; 39 W. R. 65—C. A.

b. IMMOVABLE PROPERTY.

In General.]—The lex loci rei sitæ governs exclusively the tenure, title and descent of immovable property. Fenton v. Livingstone, 3 Macq. H. L. 497; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1183; 7 W. R. 671.

The incidents to immovable property, the right of alienating or limiting it, and the course of succession, depend entirely on the law of the country where the estate is situated. Nelson (Earl) v. Bridport (Lord), 8 Beav. 547; 10 Jur. 1043.

Duly to acquire a legal title to immovable property, such legal title must be according to the lex loci rei sitæ. Simpson v. Fogo, 1 H. & M. 195; 1 N. R. 422; 32 L. J., Ch. 249; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 403; 8 L. T. 61; 11 W. R. 418.

Immovable property is regulated by the law of the country where the land lies. Brodie v. Barry, 2 Ves. & B. 131; 13 R. R. 37. S. P., Elliot v. Minto (Lord), 6 Madd. 16.

All questions as to the burdens and liabilities of immovable property situate in a foreign country depend solely upon the lex loci, in the absence of any trust or personal contract affecting it executed in this country. Harrison v. Harrison, 42 L. J., Ch. 495; L. R. 8 Ch. 342; 28 L. T. 145; 21 W. R. 164.

The validity of a testamentary disposition of English leasehold is governed by the law of England, and not by the law of the testator's domicil. Freke v. Carbery (Lord), L. R. 16 Eq. 461; 21 W. R. 835.

A child, born in Scotland of unmarried parents, domiciled in that country, and legitimated for all purposes in Scotland by the subsequent marriage of the parents, is not capable of inheriting lands in England. Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 7 Cl. & F. 895; West, 500; 9 Bli. (N.S.) 32. S. C., nom. Doe d. Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 2 Scott (N.R.) 828; 6 Bing. (N.C.) 385—H. L. (E.) S. P., Don's Estate, In re, 4 Drew. 194; 27 L. J., Ch. 98; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1192: 5 W. R. 836.

Will of.]—The incidents to immovable property, the right of alienating or limiting it, and the course of succession to it, depend entirely on the law of the country where the estate is situated. An estate in Sicily was granted to an English subject, which he disposed of by his will upon certain trusts:—Held, that as he could not subject his successor to a course of succession different from that which accorded with the grant and the law of Sicily, so neither could he subject the successor, as such, to any duties or obligations different from the duties and obligations which by the grant and the law of Sicily were annexed to his holding. Nelson (Earl) v. Bridport (Lord), 8 Beav. 547; 10 Jur. 1043.

—— Chattels Real.]—The validity of a testamentary disposition of an English leasehold is governed by the law of England, and not by the law of the testator's domicil. Freke v. Carbery (Lord), L. R. 16 Eq. 461; 21 W. R. 835.

A French subject, domiciled and resident in France, by his will, executed as required by the 1 Vict. c. 26 (but not made and executed as required for the validity thereof by the law of France), bequeathed his personal estate in England and Ireland to trustees, whom he also named executors, and he gave and devised leaseholds for years in Cork, in Ireland, and all other his real estate and chattels real in England and Ireland to the same trustees:—Held, that the will was valid as to the chattels real, but invalid as to the personal property of the testator, other than the chattels real, and so far as it purported to appoint executors, or to revoke any prior testamentary disposition of personal property other than chattels real, and the court granted to the trustees in that character alone administration cum test. ann. limited to the chattels real in Ireland. De Fogassieras v. Duport, 11 L. R., Ir. 123.

—— Construction—Specific Devise to Children of named Person—Child Legitimated by subsequent Marriage.]—The rule laid down in Doe d. Birtwhistle v. Vardill (5 B. & C. 438), that an antenatus son cannot inherit English land as heir, relates only to descent on an intestacy, and does not affect the case of a specific devise to children. The testator devised specifically a share of real estate and also a share of personalty upon trust for his son Harry for life, and then for his children. Harry acquired a domicil at the Cape of Good Hope, and died there, leaving, amongst other children, a son John, born before marriage, but, according to Cape law, legitimated by the subsequent marriage of his parents:—Held, that John was entitled to a share of both the real and personal estate. Grey, In re, Grey v. Stamford (Earl), 61 L. J., Ch. 622; [1892] 3 Ch. 88; 41 W. R. 60.

Succession to.]—A child, born in Scotland of unmarried parents, domiciled in that country, and who afterwards intermarry in Scotland, though, by the laws of Scotland, capable of inheriting lands in that country, is not capable of inheriting lands in England. Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 7 Cl. & F. 895; West, 500; 9 Bli. (N.S.) 32. S. C. nom. Doe d. Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 2 Scott (N.R.) 828; 6 Bing. (N.S.) 385—H. L. (E.)

An ante-nuptial son, born in Scotland of Scotch parents, who was legitimised according to the law of Scotland, by the subsequent marriage of his parents, settled in England and purchased freehold property. The son died intestate and unmarried, leaving his father surviving him :—Held, that the father was incapable, under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 6, of inheriting real estate from his son, although that son was legitimate by the law of England as to his personal status. The property, therefore, escheated to the Crown. Don's Estate, In re, 4 Drew. 194 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 98 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1192 ; 5 W. R. 836.

—— Chattels Real.]—Succession to chattels real depends on the law of the country wherein they are situate, and not on that of the deceased's domicil ; and in case of intestacy the right to administration as to chattels real must follow the right of succession to them ; and it is not the practice of the Court of Probate to limit its grants by the measure of the beneficial interest of the grantee. Gentili, In goods of, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 541.

Leaseholds in England, belonging to a domiciled Scotchman, devolve, in case of his intestacy, upon the persons entitled according to the English Statute of Distributions. Duncan v. Lawson or Duncan and Lawson, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 502 ; 41 Ch. D. 394 ; 60 L. T. 732 ; 37 W. R. 524 ; 53 J. P. 532.

—— Sale under Partition Act.]—A fund of upwards of 13,000*l* consols, representing the proceeds of sale of real estate, the absolute property of a foreign lunatic, which had been sold by order of the court under the powers of the Partition Act, 1868, was standing in court to the credit of the lunatic. The curator ad bona of the lunatic, duly appointed according to the law of the country in which the lunatic resided, and who according to that law had the fullest powers and control over the lunatic's real and personal estate, petitioned for the transfer of the fund to him :—Held, that the fund, representing real estate sold under special legislation, was subject to the laws of this country relative to real estate, and must remain in court as a fund which might devolve upon the heir-at-law of the lunatic, and that the curator ad bona was only entitled to receive the dividends. Grimwood v. Bartels, 46 L. J., Ch. 788 ; 25 W. R. 843.

Actions in English Courts with respect to Foreign Lands—Trespass.] — An action for damage for trespass to land situated in a foreign country, founded on a disputed claim of title to such land, cannot be tried in the courts of this country. British South Africa Co. v. Companhia de Moçambique, 63 L. J., Q. B. 70 ; [1893] A. C. 602 ; 6 R. 1 ; 69 L. T. 604—H. L. (E.)

Ord. XXXVI. r. 1 (R. S. C., 1883), which abolishes local venues, is a rule of procedure only, and does not affect the jurisdiction of the courts of this country. The Judicature Acts and Rules deal with procedure only, and do not confer any new right of action. Ib.

—— Waste.]—On a bill for a partition of lands in Ireland, and an account of waste committed there, a demurrer was allowed as to the partition, and overruled as to the account. Kennedy v. Cassillis (Earl), 2 Swanst. 323.

—— Liability for Waste under Implied Contract — Tort — Actio Personalis moritur cum Personâ.]—The possessor of Austrian entailed estates died domiciled in, and leaving property in, England. By the law of Austria the possessor is under an obligation to hand over the property to the successor in as good a state as when he received it, and is liable for deterioration, whether voluntary or permissive, unless it occurs without any fault of his, and he is entitled to compensation for improvements made by him. The successor brought a creditor's action in England against the English executrix, in which it was admitted by the parties that there was some deterioration, and also that some improvements had been made. The court below made a decree for administration with liberty to the plaintiff to take proceedings in the courts of the countries in which the estates were situate, to establish the amount of his claim :—Held, on appeal, that the objection that the plaintiff's claim was for a tort analogous to waste, and therefore, according to English law, died with the person, and could not be enforced in an English court, was not sustainable, for that the deteriorations were not to be regarded as torts, but as breaches of an obligation in the nature of an implied contract ; but that the accounts in an administration suit ought not to be directed till it was ascertained that a sum was due to the plaintiff. Batthyany v. Walford, 56 L. J., Ch. 881 ; 36 Ch. D. 269 ; 57 L. T. 206 ; 35 W. R. 814—C. A.

—— Upon Contracts relating to.]—A contract between domiciled Englishmen relating to real estate in a foreign country, is governed by English law, and is therefore cognisable by the courts of this country, although it has been adjudicated upon by the courts of the country in which the real estate is situate. Cood v. Cood, 33 Beav. 314 ; 3 N. R. 275 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 273 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1335.

A. and B. were entitled to real estate in Chile. A., who was residing there, wrote to B. in this country, offering to purchase his interest in the property. B. replied in terms which would warrant A. in concluding that he had accepted the offer. Nothing further was done on either side during a period of thirteen years to ratify or annul the contract :—Held, that B. was barred by lapse of time from disputing the existence of the contract. Ib.

S. & Co., German merchants, carrying on business in London and Shanghai, being in Prussia, entered into verbal negotiations with H. & Co., merchants in Prussia, for opening a credit with H. & Co., against which S. & Co. were to draw bills to a certain amount. As a security S. & Co. proposed to deposit with H. & Co. the title deeds of real estate at Shanghai. These negotiations were subsequently carried on by letters, written by S. & Co. from London and H. & Co. from Prussia. A final contract was completed by a letter written by S. & Co. from London, transmitting the title deeds to H. & Co., and undertaking to register the mortgage at Shanghai, as required by the law there. S. & Co. liquidated their affairs by arrangement in the London bankruptcy court. They were indebted in a large amount to H. & Co., under the above-mentioned contract. H. & Co. applied for an order that the trustee in liquidation should convey the real estate to them. The mortgage had not been registered in Shanghai, and without such registration was incomplete according to the law of Shanghai :—Held, that by whatever law the contract was governed it was personally binding on S. & Co., and the real estate was ordered to be sold, and the proceeds paid to H. & Co. Holthausen, Ex parte, Scheibler, In re, 44 L. J., Bk. 26 ; L. R. 9 Ch. 722 ; 31 L. T. 13.

Held, semble, that looking to the nature of the security, and the letter by which the deposit was completed, and which was written and posted in London, the contract must be construed according to the law of England. Ib.

By Scotch law an instrument under seal is not necessary for the conveyance of a sporting right, and therefore the stipulations of an unsealed lease made between Englishmen in England of a sporting right over land in Scotland may be enforced by action in the English courts, as the provision of the law of England, that an instrument under seal is necessary for the conveyance of a right to an incorporeal hereditament, is not part of the lex fori. Even if such lease were invalid for want of a seal, the lessee, after having had enjoyment of the right, could not set up the invalidity as a defence to an action for breach of a stipulation in the lease to leave a good breeding stock of game on the ground at the termination of the lease. Adams v. Clutterbuck, 52 L. J., Q. B. 607; 10 Q. B. D. 403; 48 L. T. 614; 31 W. R. 723.

—— Court of Equity.]—An action was brought against the executors and trustees of a will to recover a share of the proceeds of sale of a house in Dresden, which had been sold by C. S. H., the testator in the action. The plaintiffs alleged that, upon the death of Colonel H., a domiciled Irishman, who died in February, 1853, one moiety of the house, subject to a certain life interest therein, devolved by Saxon law, as to three-fourth parts thereof, on G. G., his daughter. That lady died in 1863, leaving her husband, J. G. surviving her, and he thereupon, by Saxon law, became entitled to all her property, movable and immovable, including her interest in the house. The plaintiffs were the administrator and the next of kin of J. G., who died intestate. The defendants denied the alleged title of the plaintiffs, and contended that C. S. H. held the house as sole and legal owner for his own use and benefit. All the parties interested were resident within the jurisdiction:—Held, that this being a contested claim to real property situate in Dresden, the question must be determined by the law of Saxony as to immovables; and where the only ground for instituting proceedings in this country was the fact that the defendants were residents here, the court had no authority to adjudicate on the case, and the action must therefore be dismissed. Hawthorne, In re, Graham v. Massey, 52 L. J., Ch. 750; 23 Ch. D. 743; 48 L. T. 701; 32 W. R. 147.

—— Equities.]—Whether the court will enforce against defendants, having in their hands proceeds of the sale of land situated out of the jurisdiction, the equities to which such proceeds would have been subjected if the land had been situated within the jurisdiction depends upon the question whether the contract, which is sought to be enforced, was, or was not, by the lex loci rei sitæ, capable of being fulfilled. Waterhouse v. Stansfield, 9 Hare, 234; 21 L. J., Ch. 881; 16 Jur. 1006; 1 W. R. 11.

If a contract relating to land situated out of the jurisdiction be one which the lex loci rei sitæ renders incapable of fulfilment, the court will not enforce the contract against the proceeds of a sale of such land coming to the possession of parties within the jurisdiction, though they take such proceeds bound by the same equity as affected the party to the contract under whom they claim. Ib.

The rights of the parties interested in the proceeds of the sale of lands situated out of the jurisdiction do not cease to be governed by the lex loci rei sitæ by the circumstance of such proceeds being brought in specie within the jurisdiction. Ib.

A law permitting alienation of land only upon the terms of the proceeds being applied in a particular manner is a restraint upon alienation, and restraints upon the alienation of land are always governed by the lex loci rei sitæ. Ib.

—— Administration.]—A testator, domiciled in England, dies seised of lands in a foreign country, which, by the law of that country, and also by the will, are charged with his debts; the assets, being insufficient for the payment of his simple contract debts, the produce of those lands must be applied among the simple contract creditors, according to the priorities recognised by the law of the country where the lands are situate. Hanson v. Walker, 7 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 135.

All questions as to the burdens and liabilities of real estate situate in a foreign country depend solely upon the lex loci, in the absence of any trust or personal contract affecting it executed in this country. Harrison v. Harrison, 42 L. J., Ch. 495; L. R. 8 Ch. 342; 28 L. T. 145; 21 W. R. 164.

Therefore, when a testator devised real or heritable estate in Scotland, and gave a legacy to his heir according to the law of Scotland, who elected to take against the will, and his personal estate, though sufficient to pay his debts, was not sufficient to pay in full the legacies given by the will and the costs of a suit instituted for the administration of the estate:—Held, that there must be an inquiry whether, by the law of Scotland, the descended real estate or heritable estate was liable to the payment of any and which of the debts of the testator, and, if so, whether it was so liable, primarily, or in exoneration of the personal estate in favour of the legatees. Ib.

—— Fraudulent Conveyance.] — Court of equity in England will relieve against fraudulent conveyances gained of lands in Ireland, when defendant is in England. Arglasse v. Muschamp, 1 Vern. 75; 2 Ch. Rep. 266.

This court having jurisdiction in personam upon equity arising out of transactions concerning lands abroad, particularly if in the British dominions, a purchase of an estate in the West Indies, by a creditor under his own execution, was, upon the circumstances, held only a security for the debt, the expenses of the proceeding, and the incumbrances paid by him with interest; and subject thereto, a reconveyance was decreed. Cranstown (Lord) v. Johnston, 3 Ves. J. 170; 3 R. R. 80.

—— Partition.]—On a bill for a partition of lands in Ireland, and an account of waste committed there, a demurrer was allowed as to the partition, and overruled as to the account. Kennedy v. Cassillis (Earl), 2 Swanst. 323.

—— Mortgage.]—A company with an office in London, and having house property at Florence, raised, under powers in its articles, a sum of money by the issue of obligations payable to bearer, whereby it purported to "bind itself, its successors and assigns, and all its estate, property and effects," reserving the right to redeem a part of the obligations (to be determined by drawings) in each of eight successive years. Subsequently, by a mortgage in the Italian form, registered at Florence, the company mortgaged the property to a bank with a London office, which had notice of the obligations. The bank having taken proceedings in the tribunal at Florence to enforce its mortgage, an action was brought on behalf of the holders of the obligations against the company and the bank, claiming to be mortgagees of the Florence property in priority to the bank. On motion to restrain the sale of the property :— Held, that the obligations were not mortgages, but simply bonds. Norton v. Florence Land and Public Works Co., 7 Ch. D. 332 ; 38 L. T. 377.

Held, also, that even if they created a charge on the company's property, they could not be enforced as against the bank claiming under a registered mortgage at Florence ; and that, the matter being already before the tribunal of the country where the property was situated, the court of chancery would not interfere. Ib.

An American company, having large concessions in Lower California, Mexico, issued debentures charging the lands. The plaintiffs, who were English, held some of the debentures, but in order to have a valid claim on the lands it was necessary, according to Mexican law, to register there a deed of hypothecation. The American company transferred their undertaking and assets to an English company expressly subject to the debenture charges, and the English company registered the instrument of transfer in Mexico. The plaintiffs never registered a deed of hypothecation. The English company claimed the right to dispose of the lands without regard to the interests of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs brought an action against the English company for a declaration that they were entitled to a first charge on the lands and for an account, and moved for a receiver. The court, without formerly deciding whether it had jurisdiction to appoint a receiver over mortgaged property situate in a foreign country, declined to do so under the circumstances mentioned below, but held that the English company having acquired the lands subject to the plaintiffs' charge and to the obligation of satisfying it, they and their directors personally would be responsible to the court if they applied any part of the proceeds of the lands without making provision for the plaintiffs' claims, and might be restrained from so doing. Mercantile Investment Co. v. River Plate Trust Co., 61 L. J., Ch. 473 ; [1892] 2 Ch. 303 ; 66 L. T. 711.

According to English law, an equitable mortgage was effected of Scotch property. The special case found, that " by the law of Scotland no lien or equitable mortgage on the estate in question was created by the deposit " :—Held, nevertheless, that the parties contracting, as well as the assignees under a subsequent fiat against the mortgagors, being resident here, the property came to the hands of the assignees charged with the equity, and therefore they were bound to pay the mortgage debt out of the proceeds of the particular property. Pollard, Ex parte, Courtney, In re, Mont. & C. 239 ; 4 Deac. 27.

The courts of this country will apply the general law thereof, being abstractedly just and not founded on any peculiar technical rule, to questions relating to lands in a colony where a different system of jurisprudence prevails, unless it is suggested or shown that the laws of the colony are different on the point in question :— Held, therefore, that the mortgagee of an estate in Demerara was not to be bound to produce his securities for inspection before payment. Bentinck v. Willink, 2 Hare, 1. Cp., Smith v. Gould, 4 Moore, P. C. 21 ; 6 Jur. 543.

A. lent money to B. on mortgage of land in Demerara, to be repaid by bills on Scotland :— Held, that the contract was governed by the law of Scotland, and that moneys having been paid from B. to A., which according to that law were referable to other debts, the mortgage was still subsisting for the whole amount. Campbell v. Dent, 2 Moore, P. C. 292.

A loan was secured by the issue of bonds bearing coupons for twenty half-yearly payments of interest, on the 1st of June and 1st of December, such bonds to be redeemable by half-yearly drawings of at least five per cent. on the total amount of the loan. A deed was executed, by which the borrowers granted certain foreign railways to trustees, and covenanted with them to remit half-yearly sums sufficient to pay the amount of interest and moneys required for redemption. On each 1st of December and 1st of June the moneys so to be remitted were to be applied in payment of the principal sums secured by such of the bonds as should have been drawn on the preceding 1st of November and 1st of May, as the case might be, and of the interest on such of the bonds as should be outstanding and bearing interest which would become payable on such 1st of December or 1st of June ; but it was declared that no interest should be payable on any drawn bond after the day fixed for its redemption. In case of default in the remittances, the trustees were to enter into possession of the railways, and apply the net profits in payment of all arrears of interest due on such of the bonds as should be outstanding and bearing interest ; in redemption of such an amount of bonds as ought to have been redeemed on any previous 1st of June or 1st of December, but might not have been redeemed through failure of the borrowers to remit funds ; and lastly in payment of the future interest on the bonds and the redemption of the same in any future half year ; and after full payment and satisfaction of all the principal moneys and interest secured by the bonds, the trustees were to hold the surplus in trust for the borrowers. Default was made in the remittances, the trustees took possession, and in November, 1876, had a fund in hand out of which they proposed to pay interest on the undrawn bonds only. Bonds to the amount of 10 per cent. on the whole loan had been drawn in November, 1875, and May, 1876, but had not been paid through want of funds :— Held, that drawn bonds which remained unredeemed through failure of the borrowers to provide funds, could only be redeemed by payment of the principal with interest up to the time of payment. Gordillo v. Weguelin, 46 L. J., Ch. 691 ; 5 Ch. D. 287 ; 36 L. T. 206 ; 25 W. R. 620 —C. A.

Held, that the funds were to be applied in the first place in payment of interest pari passu on undrawn bonds, and on drawn bonds which remained unpaid through the failure of the borrowers to provide funds ; dissentiente Brett J. A., who was of opinion that the payment of interest on undrawn bonds had priority over the payments in redemption of drawn bonds. Ib.

—— Lien.]—Where there is no privity between the plaintiff and the defendant, a plaintiff in this country cannot, as against a defendant also residing in this country, enforce a lien on immovable property of the defendant situate out of the jurisdiction of the court. Norris v. Chambres, 3 De G. F. & J. 583; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 689; 4 L. T. 345; 9 W. R. 794. Affirming 29 Beav. 246; 30 L. J., Ch. 285.

The court will not pronounce a decree, even in personam, where it cannot be enforced without the intervention of a foreign court. Ib.

A suit by a plaintiff in England against defendants, also residing in England, to enforce a lien on real estate in Prussia, can only be sustained by special circumstances arising out of the dealings between the parties, but where no privity existed between the plaintiff and the defendants, and where the principal parties were Prussians, and not amenable to the jurisdiction of the court, the bill was dismissed. Ib.

If a plaintiff makes out a case which entitles him to a declaration of lien upon the real estate of a defendant out of the jurisdiction, the court will make it, and, in some cases, grant a receiver, but it will leave the plaintiff to make it available or not as he can by means of the foreign tribunals. Ib.

—— Specific Performance.] — A contract between domiciled Englishmen relating to immovable property in a foreign country is governed by English law, and is therefore cognisable by the courts of this country, although it has been adjudicated upon by the courts of the country in which the real estate is situate. Cood v. Cood, 33 Beav. 314; 3 N. R. 275; 33 L. J., Ch. 273; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1335.

—— Trusts.]—Bill lies here to be relieved touching a trust of lands in Ireland, defendant being in England. Kildare (Earl) v. Eustace, 1 Vern. 405.

Where land in Sardinia was devised by a domiciled Englishman by an English will upon trust for sale, which was a valid trust according to Italian law, and upon trust to hold the proceeds, which were directed to be invested in English securities, upon certain trusts which were invalid according to Italian law, the validity of the trusts of the proceeds of sale must be determined by the English law. But before the sale of the lands by the trustees, the foreign law must determine the persons by whom the rents and profits are to be received. Piercy, In re, Whitwham v. Piercy, 64 L. J., Ch. 249; [1895] 1 Ch. 83; 13 R. 106; 71 L. T. 745; 43 W. R. 134.

—— Where a Foreign Tribunal has already adjudicated on the Claim.]—Jurisdiction upon a contract concerning an estate in colony; but the question, upon the construction of the contract for a security by way of mortgage, having been before a court of competent jurisdiction in the colony, and a foreclosure and judicial sale directed, the allegations of fraud merely general and denied, an injunction was refused. White v. Hall, 12 Ves. 321; 8 R. R. 324. S. P., Kennedy v. Cassillis (Earl), 2 Swanst. 323; Trufort, In re, Trafford v. Blanc, 57 L. J., Ch. 135; 36 Ch. D. 600; 57 L. T. 674; 31 W. R. 163. And see Cood v. Cood, supra.

—— Evidence.]—The courts of this country, in dealing with real property in Jamaica, will be guided by the law of evidence in Jamaica. Tulloch v. Hartley, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 114.

c. Movable Property.

In General.]—Foreign personal assets are governed by the lex domicilii of the deceased owner for the purpose of succession and enjoyment. For the purpose of legal representation, of collection and of administration as distinguished from distribution among the successors, they are governed by the lex loci. Blackwood v. Reg., 52 L. J., P. C. 10; 8 App. Cas. 82; 48 L. T. 441; 31 W. R. 645—P. C.

Personal property, having no situs of its own, follows the domicil of its owner. Thomson v. Advocate-General, 1 Cl. & F. 1—H. L. (Sc.)

The law of the domicil of a testator governs questions of testacy and intestacy, of the construction of the will, and of the rights of those who claim to be his next of kin. Enohin v. Wylie, 10 H. L. Cas. 1; 31 L. J., Ch. 402; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 897; 6 L. T., 263; 10 W. R. 467—H. L. (E.)

The law of the domicil of a deceased person governs the succession to his personal estate wherever situate, but the estate itself must be administered in the country in which possession is taken of it under lawful authority. Preston v. Melville (Viscount), 8 Cl. & F. 1—H. L. (Sc.)

In dealing with the succession to deceased foreigners, the court is bound by the law of domicil at the time of death. Lynch v. Paraguay Government, 40 L. J., P. 81; L. R. 2 P. 268; 25 L. T. 164; 19 W. R. 982.

A domiciled foreigner made a will disposing of personal property in England. After his death the government of his country passed a decree confiscating all his property. The court declined to recognise this decree, and held that the government had no locus standi to oppose the grant of probate. Ib.

The due acquisition of a legal title to movables may give rise to the question whether the lex loci contractûs, or the law of the country wherein the contracting parties may be domiciled, or even the lex loci rei sitæ, shall prevail. Simpson v. Fogo, 1 H. & M. 195; 1 N. R. 422; 32 L. J., Ch. 249; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 403; 8 L. T. 61; 11 W. R. 418.

But where all these circumstances are combined in the acquisition of a legal title to a movable, such title is, beyond doubt, good over all the world. Ib.

Where assets are distributable, the order and disposition of such assets will be in accordance with the lex fori where such assets are distributable, but not where such assets are the produce of a chattel upon which a valid security has been given. Ib.

A ship, the property of British subjects, was duly mortgaged in Great Britain, to other British subjects, and being in the mortgagor's possession, proceeded to New Orleans. Whilst there it was attached by creditors of the mortgagor's resident in New Orleans, and, after due intervention and hearing of the British mortgagees, before and by the courts of Louisiana, sold under process of the court, to satisfy the attaching creditors, to a British subject, who had notice of the mortgagees' intervention:—Held, that the sale was subject to the right of the mortgagees. Ib.

—— Judicial Decision in Court of Domicil.]—The judgment of the court of the domicil of the deceased at time of death is binding on the court of a foreign country in all questions as to the succession and title to personal property, whether under testacy or intestacy, where the same questions between the same parties are in issue in the foreign court which have been decided by the court of the domicil. Doglioni v. Crispin, 35 L. J., P. 129 ; L. R., 1 H. L. 301 ; 15 L. T. 44—H. L. (E.).

Title to.]—If personal chattels are sold in a manner binding according to the law of the country in which they are disposed of, that disposition is binding in this country. Cammell v. Sewell, 5 H. & N. 728 ; 29 L. J., Ex. 350 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 918 ; 2 L. T. 799 ; 8 W. R. 639—Ex. Ch.

A cargo of deals was shipped on board a Prussian vessel by Russian merchants at Onego, for an English firm carrying on business at Hull. The vessel struck on the rocks on the coast of Norway, but the cargo was landed safely. A survey was held, when the surveyors recommended, as best for all parties, that the ship and cargo should be sold, and the cargo was sold accordingly. By the law of Norway, though the captain might not, under such circumstances, be able to justify the sale as between himself and the owners of the cargo, an innocent purchaser would have a good title to the property bought at such sale :—Held, that the sale in Norway bound the property, and that the goods having afterwards come to this country, the owner claiming under such sale had a good title to them as against the underwriters to whom the cargo had been abandoned. Ib.

The transfer of personal property must be regulated by the law of the owner's domicil, and the disregard of that law by the courts of a foreign country is an infraction of the comity of nations which justifies the court of chancery in decreeing a restitution upon the property coming within its jurisdiction. Liverpool Marine Credit Co. v. Hunter, 37 L. J., Ch. 386 ; L. R. 3 Ch. 479 ; 18 L. T. 749 ; 16 W. R. 1090.

But if a creditor pursues the chattel of his debtor to a foreign country in which he knows that the rights of a third party will be disregarded, the court of chancery cannot interfere to restrain the proceedings taken by the creditor in the foreign country. Ib.

A British ship, mortgaged in England by a British subject to British subjects, was arrested at New Orleans by creditors of the mortgagor, also British subjects resident in England, and as the courts of New Orleans do not recognise such mortgages of ships, the mortgagees, in order to protect the ship from sale, gave bonds for the amounts claimed by the creditors. The mortgagees afterwards filed a bill in equity to restrain the creditors from suing on these bonds :—Held, that though the decisions of the courts of New Orleans might be open to the reproach of injustice, yet as the creditors owed no duty to the mortgagees, and had a right to proceed against the property of their debtor wherever they found it, the bill could not be maintained. Ib.

—— Husband and Wife.]—Legacy to married woman subject of a foreign state paid to the husband to whom it would, by the law of that country, belong. Campbell v. French, 3 Ves. J. 323 ; 4 R. R. 5.

—— Infant—Payment out of Court—Attainment of Age according to Law of Domicil.]—Funds in court in this country, placed to the separate credit of an infant domiciled abroad, were paid out to her on attaining her full age, according to the law of her then and native domicil, although she had not come of age according to English law. Donohoe v. Donohoe, 19 L. R., Ir. 349. S. P., Hellman, In re, L. R. 2 Eq. 363 ; 14 W. R. 682.

By the law of Holland, the surviving parent is entitled to the income of his children's property until they attain eighteen. By a judicial compromise of a suit in Holland, two infant children, who were domiciled in this country, were adjudged to be entitled to one-fourth of their deceased mother's personal estate :—Held, that their father was not entitled to the income of their property until they attained eighteen. Gambier v. Gambier, 7 Sim. 263 ; 4 L. J., Ch. 81.

Succession to.]—The succession to the personal estate of an intestate is regulated by the law of that place, which was his domicil at the time of his death. For that purpose, there can be but one domicil ; and the lex loci rei sitæ does not prevail. Somerville v. Somerville (Lord), 5 Ves. 750 ; 5 R. R. 155 ; S. P., Burns v. Cole, Ambl. 415 ; Price v. Dewhurst, 4 Myl. & Cr. 76 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 57 ; 2 Jur. 1006 ; Preston v. Melville (Viscount), 8 Cl. & F. 1—H. L. (Sc.) ; Thomson v. Advocate-General, 12 Cl. & F. 1—H. L. (Sc.) ; Doglioni v. Crispin, 35 L. J., P. 129 ; L. R. 1 H. L. 301 ; 15 L. T. 44—H. L. (E.) ; Forbes v. Forbes, Kay, 341 ; 2 Eq. R. 178 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 724 ; 18 Jur. 642 ; 2 W. R. 253 ; Crookenden v. Fuller, 1 Sw. & Tr. 441 ; 29 L. J., P. 1 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1222 ; 1 L. T. 70 ; 8 W. R. 49 ; Balfour v. Scott, 6 Bro. P. C. 550—H. L. (Sc.) ; Bempde v. Johnstone, 3 Ves. 198.

The law of the domicil of the testator governs questions of testacy and intestacy, of the construction of the will, and of the rights of those who claim to be his next of kin. Enohin v. Wylie, 10 H. L. Cas. 1 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 402 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 897 ; 6 L. T. 263 ; 10 W. R. 467—H. L. (E.)

—— Domicil with Qualified Civil Rights.]—If an Englishman has acquired a de facto domicil in France, property as to which he may die intestate will be distributed according to the French law, although he has not been admitted by the authorisation of the government to enjoy civil rights in accordance with Art. 13 of the Code. Hamilton v. Dallas, 45 L. J., Ch. 15 ; 1 Ch. D. 257 ; 33 L. T. 495 ; 24 W. R. 264.

—— Legitimacy.]—The Statute of Distributions being a statute not for Englishmen only but for all persons, English or not, dying intestate and domiciled in England, and applying universally to persons of all countries, races, and religions whatsoever, the proper law for determining the "kindred" under that statute is the international law adopted by the comity of states. Therefore a child born before wedlock, of parents who were at her birth domiciled in Holland, but legitimated according to the law of Holland by the subsequent marriage of her parents :—Held, entitled to a share in the personal estate of an intestate dying domiciled in England as one of her next of kin, under the Statute of Distributions. Boyes v. Bedale (1 H. & M. 798) disapproved. Goodman's Trusts, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 425 ; 17 Ch. D. 266 ; 44 L. T. 527 ; 29 W. R. 586—C. A.

Will relating to.]—The law of the domicil of a testator governs questions of testacy and intestacy, of the construction of the will, and of the rights of those who claim to be his next of kin. Enohin v. Wylie, 10 H. L. Cas. 1; 31 L. J., Ch. 402; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 897; 6 L. T. 263; 10 W. R. 467—H. L. (E.)

Where, therefore, a will was made by an Englishman, who died domiciled abroad, and the foreign court had granted probate of the will, it became the duty of the English court of probate (some of his personal property being situated in this country) to grant ancillary probate to the foreign executors. It had no right to constitute itself a court of construction. Ib.

The law of the country, in which a deceased party was domiciled at his death, both decides the right of succession as to his personal estate, and also regulates the decision as to what constitutes his last will. Price v. Dewhurst, 4 Myl. & C. 76; 8 L. J., Ch. 57; 2 Jur. 1006.

The testatrix, whose domicil of origin was English, married a German subject, and resided in Germany until his death, which happened after the 12th May, 1870. After the death of her husband, she executed in Germany a will, which was valid according to the requirements of the English law, but not according to the requirements of the law of Germany: Held, that the will was not entitled to probate in England. Bloxam v. Favre, 53 L. J., P. 26; 9 P. D. 130; 50 L. T. 766; 32 W. R. 673—C. A.

If a British subject domiciled in a foreign country by his will appoints A. his executor, but makes a disposition of his personal property, which, though valid by the laws of England, is invalid by the laws of that foreign country, the court of chancery is at liberty, notwithstanding probate may have been granted to A. in this country, to hold that the will has no operation beyond appointing A. the executor. Thornton v. Curling, 8 Sim. 310.

—— Validity of Provisions.]—A legacy to a superstitious use given by a testator domiciled in England is void, even although the legatees are resident in a country where such a legacy would be valid. Elliott, In re, Elliott v. Johnson, 39 W. R. 297.

—— Construction.]—A foreign court in a suit for the distribution of personal estate of a party domiciled out of the country, is bound to adopt, in the interpretation of testamentary instruments, the rules of construction which would prevail in the country where the party was domiciled, but is not bound to adopt the foreign rules of evidence, every court being governed by its own rules of procedure. Yates v. Thompson, 3 Cl. & F. 544—H. L. (Sc.)

—— Terms of Foreign Law.]—Where a testator in a foreign will expresses himself in technical language of the place where made and where he is domiciled, to obtain the intention, the technical terms must be interpreted by the meaning put on them in the systems of law from which they are borrowed. Studd v. Cook, 8 App. Cas. 577—H. L. (Sc.)

"Male children," in a Dutch will, held to mean "male descendants"; and "male descendants" held to mean according to the English law (and semble, according to the Dutch law also), descendants claiming through males only. Bernal v. Bernal, 3 Myl. & Cr. 559; C. P. C. 55; 7 L. J., Ch. 115; 2 Jur. 273.

Recourse to foreign law for the construction of a foreign instrument may sometimes be dispensed with. Ib.

The meaning and effect of an appointment of an exécuteur testamentaire, in a holograph will made in France by one domiciled there, is a question of French law. Laneuville v. Anderson, 3 Sw. & Tr. 304; 30 L. J., P. 25; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1260; 2 L. T. 24; 9 W. R. 74.

The terms used by a foreigner domiciled in England, and there making a will, are to be construed according to their meaning in that country, but the principles of the English law must be applied with respect to their operation. Anstruther v. Chalmer, 2 Sim. 1; 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 123; 29 R. R. 48.

A native of Scotland domiciled in England, having personal property only, executed, during a visit to Scotland, and deposited there, a will prepared in the Scotch form, and died in England:—Held, that the will was to be construed according to the English law. Ib.

—— Gift to Children—Children legitimated by subsequent Marriage.]—Under a bequest to the children of S., who had three children born to him in England, while domiciled there, by a woman with whom he had cohabited, and with whom he removed to Holland, and, while domiciled in Holland, had another child born to him by the same woman, whom he afterwards married in Holland:—Held, that the law of the country of the domicil, at the time of the birth and of the marriage, must prevail, and that the child born in Holland was entitled to share equally with another child born there after the marriage, but the three children born in England being illegitimate, according to the law of England were excluded. Goodman v. Goodman, 3 Giff. 643; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 554; 6 L. T. 641.

Under a gift of personal estate by will to the children of A., a child of A., illegitimate by the law of the testator's domicil, though legitimate by the law of the domicil of A., cannot take unless a contrary intention appears. Boyes v. Bedale, 1 H. & M. 798; 33 L. J., Ch. 283; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 196; 10 L. T. 131; 12 W. R. 232. And see Goodman's Trusts, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 425; 17 Ch. D. 266; 44 L. T. 527; 29 W. R. 586—C. A.

—— Gifts in Foreign Currency.]—Legacies are to be paid in the currency of the country where testator resided, where there were assets and executors in that and this country also. But legatee residing here not entitled to be paid in the foreign currency. Bourke v. Ricketts, 10 Ves. 330.

Legacy in a foreign country and coin, as sicca rupees by a will in India, if paid by remittance to this country, the payment must be according to the current value of the rupee in India, without regard to the exchange or the expense of remittance; so as to other countries. Cockerell v. Barber, 16 Ves. 461.

A testator, by his will made in Ireland, prior to the 6 Geo. 4, c. 79, bequeaths an annuity, and dies domiciled in England after that act was passed. The annuity is to be paid according to the rate of Irish currency. Holmes v. Holmes, 1 Russ. & M. 660; 8 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 157.

Testator living in Jamaica gave legacies to be paid in sterling money in the first place, and the two legacies immediately following (one of which was to the plaintiff), generally without saying in sterling money; and, at the end of the will, several more to be paid in sterling money:—

Held, that the plaintiff must make his legacy in Jamaica money, for testator's expressing himself differently shewed a different intention. Saunders v. Drake, 2 Atk. 465.

Bond given in Dublin, or note in Jamaica, must be paid in current money ; the same with regard to a will. Ib.

The fact that the legatees are living in England makes no distinction, for the residence of persons devising must decide it. Ib.

Though testator's effects are partly in Jamaica, and partly in England, yet, if the devise is of a compound residue without separating the funds, no argument can be drawn from it in favour of the plaintiff. Ib.

A testator domiciled in Jamaica gave legacies in Jamaica currency to J. C., H. C., and M. C., persons also domiciled in that island, and desired them to be paid out of money due to him on certain bonds, which the will specified. At his death, which happened in Scotland in 1790, no such bonds were to be found, but J. C. was then indebted to his estate upon other bonds. After administration was taken out to the testator's estate in England, a bill was filed for the purpose of enforcing payment of the legacies :—Held, that the legacies were demonstrative only, and were not to be considered as having been adeemed ; that as they were payable out of assets in this country, their value was to be computed according to the standard par of exchange between Jamaica and British currency, and not according to the actual rate at the time of payment. Campbell v. Graham, 1 Russ. & M. 453 ; 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 234. Affirmed, 8 Cl. & F. 429 : 32 R. R. 244—H. L. (E.)

—— Execution.]—A will must be executed according to the law of the country where the testator was domiciled at the time of his death. Whicker v. Hume, 7 H. L. Cas. 124 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 396 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 933 ; 6 W. R. 813—H. L. (E.)

The grant of probate not appealed against, conclusively establishes that it was so executed. Ib.

Lands held in the East Indies by a tenure of the nature of fee simple do not pass by an unattested will, but decreed to the person who would be heir-at-law in England. Gardiner v. Fell, 1 Jac. & Walk. 22 ; 2 Wils. 32 ; 20 R. R. 208.

A domiciled Englishman, while resident at Milan in October, 1838, executed a codicil disposing of personal property situated in the United States of America. The codicil was holograph signed, though not attested, but was well executed according to the Austrian law :—Held, by the judicial committee, 1st, that the validity of the codicil would be governed by the law of the domicil ; and 2ndly, that the provisions of 1 Vict. c. 26, applied to testamentary papers made in foreign countries by a domiciled Englishman. Croker v. Hertford (Marquis), 4 Moore, P. C. 339 ; 8 Jur. 863.

A foreigner domiciled in England, and naturalised under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 66, s. 6, and whose certificate of naturalisation conferred upon him "all the rights and capacities of a natural-born British subject except (inter alia) any rights and capacities of a natural-born British subject out of and beyond the dominions of the British Crown and the limits thereof," executed a testamentary document in his native country, while on a visit there. The document was valid according to the law of the place where it was made, but was not duly executed in accordance with the provisions of the English law :—Held, that the document was not well executed within the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 114, s. 1, and could not be admitted to probate in England. Gatti, In Goods of, 39 L. T. 639 ; 27 W. R. 323.

A French subject, domiciled and resident in France, by his will, executed as required by 1 Vict. c. 26 (but not made and executed as required for the validity thereof by the law of France), bequeathed his personal estate in England and Ireland to trustees, whom he also named executors, and he gave and devised leaseholds in Cork, in Ireland, and all other his real estate and chattels real in Ireland to the same trustees :—Held, that the will was valid as to the chattels real, but invalid as to the personal estate of the testator, other than the chattels real, and so far as it purported to appoint executors, or to revoke any prior testamentary disposition of personal property other than chattels real, and the court granted to the trustees, in that character alone, administration cum test. ann. limited to the chattels real in Ireland. De Fogassieras v. Duport, 11 L. R., Ir. 123.

—— In Execution of a Power.]—A father gave the income of the residue of his estate in trust for his daughter for life, and after her death the capital to be divided among her children in such shares as she should by deed or by will appoint, and in default of appointment equally between them. The daughter had four children, one of whom in 1851 married a French priest, and by him had one child, a daughter. The priest died in 1857, and in 1870 the daughter appointed to her widowed daughter a part of the fund over which she had a power of appointment by the testator's will, for her separate use if she survived her mother, the appointor, which happened :—Held, that there was no "community of goods" within the meaning of art. 1401 of the Code Napoléon, on the ground, first, that the right to the fund accrued under the appointment and consequently after the husband's death ; and secondly, that it was appointed to the lady for her separate use. De Serre v. Clarke, 43 L. J., Ch. 821 ; L. R. 18 Eq. 587 ; 31 L. T. 161 ; 23 W. R. 3.

—— Execution.]—A will, disposing of personal estate, situate in this country, made in pursuance of a power of appointment, and executed in compliance with the requisites of the power, is entitled to probate, though not executed according to the testamentary law of the domicil of the party making it. Tatnall v. Hankey, 2 Moore, P. C. 342.

An instrument which is valid as a will, according to the law of the country of domicil, is a valid exercise of a power to appoint personalty by will. D'Huart v. Harkness, 34 Beav. 374 ; 5 N. R. 440 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 311 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 633 ; 13 W. R. 513.

Administration — In General.] — Foreign personal assets are governed by the lex domicilii of the deceased owner for the purpose of succession and enjoyment. For the purpose of legal representation, of collection and of administration as distinguished from distribution among the successors, they are governed by the lex loci. Blackwood v. Reg., 52 L. J., P. C. 10 ; 8 App. Cas. 82 ; 48 L. T. 441 ; 31 W. R. 645—P. C.

Whether property is to be administered according to English or Scottish notions of equity, is dependent on the domicil of the parties, and the property to be affected by decree. Kennedy v. Cassillis (Earl), 2 Swanst. 323.

The law of the domicil of a deceased person governs the succession to his personal estate wherever situated, but the estate itself must be administered in the country in which possession is taken of it under lawful authority. Preston v. Melville (Viscount), 8 Cl. & F. 1—H. L. (Sc.)

Although the succession to personal estate is governed by the law of the country where the deceased had his domicil, the administration of that estate should be by the law of the country where it is situate; accordingly, where, on the refusal of trustees and executors of a Scotch will to act, administration to the personalty in England had been taken out by the next of kin, and new trustees were afterwards appointed, it was held on appeal, reversing the judgment of the court of session, that such trustees had no right to call upon the next of kin to transfer to them the personal estate received under the administration. Id. 16.

—— Administration Action.]—The administration of the personal estate of a deceased person belongs to the court of the country where the deceased was domiciled at his death. The court of the domicil is the forum concursus to which the legatees under a will, or the parties entitled to the distribution of the estate of an intestate, are required to resort. The duty of administering personal estate in this country is to be discharged by the courts of this country, though in the performance of that duty they will be guided by the law of the domicil. Enohin v. Wylie, 10 H. L. Cas. 1; 31 L. J., Ch. 402; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 897; 6 L. T. 263; 10 W. R. 467—H. L. (E.)

—— Jurisdiction.]—An action was brought in England by an infant beneficiary to administer the estate of a testator domiciled in Scotland. The bulk of the estate was in Scotland, and four out of six trustees and executors were domiciled there. The will was proved both in Scotland and England. The trustees all appeared to the writ, without protest, and at their suggestion an inquiry was directed whether the action was for the plaintiff's benefit, which resulted in a decision that it was. At the trial (the English assets having been meanwhile transferred to Scotland) the trustees objected to the jurisdiction of the court. No proceedings had been taken to administer the estate in the Scotch court:—Held, first, that the court had jurisdiction to order an administration. Secondly, that under the circumstances of the case, it had no discretion in the matter, but was bound to make the order, though the action might be stayed before or after decree if it appeared that proceedings were pending in a Scotch court equally beneficial to the plaintiff. Dicta of Lord Westbury in Enohin v. Wylie (10 H. L. Cas. 1) disapproved. Ewing v. Orr-Ewing, 53 L. J., Ch. 435; 9 App. Cas. 34; 50 L. T. 401; 32 W. R. 573—H. L. (E.)

—— Estate of domiciled Scotch Testator—Trust Funds partly in Scotland partly in England.]—A resident and domiciled Scotchman died leaving a trust disposition and settlement appointing six trustees: three were resident in Scotland, one, being a Scotch member of parliament, resided in Scotland when parliament was not sitting, and the other two were resident in England. The truster had a very large amount of personalty in Scotland as well as heritable estate; and a trifling amount of personal estate only in England. The trustees proved the trust deed in Scotland, and were confirmed as executors. They then had the Scotch probate sealed in accordance with 21 & 22 Vict. c. 66, s. 12, and thus became the personal representatives in England. They removed all but a small portion of the personalty in England into Scotland. A person resident in England, who was entitled to a share of a large legacy, and also to a share of the residue, brought an action in England to administer the estate. The trustees were served and entered an appearance. The plaintiff, an infant, in the English action moved for judgment for administration of the whole estate, and on the 29th November, 1882, the court of appeal granted the order. The trustees lodged an appeal to this house. In June, 1883, the trustees carried certain accounts into chambers in the English action. On the 5th July, 1883, four of the residuary legatees commenced this action in Scotland against the trustees for, inter alia, declarator that the trustees were bound to administer the estate in Scotland, subject to the Scotch law, and under the authority and jurisdiction of the Scottish courts alone. On the 30th November, 1883, this house affirmed the order of the court of appeal. On the 29th February, 1884, the court of session granted an interlocutor finding in terms of the declaratory conclusions of the summons: sequestrating the estate, appointing a judicial factor and interdicting the trustees from removing any title-deeds, &c., from Scotland, or accounting to any one otherwise than the judicial factor appointed by the court. On appeal taken by order of the court of chancery in England:—Held, that the decerniture in terms of the declaratory conclusions of the summons, which in effect affirms the exclusive competency of the Scottish jurisdiction, was not supported by statute or authority; and, therefore, that part of the principal interlocutor and that part of the interdict relating to accounting must be reversed. Ewing v. Orr-Ewing, 10 App. Cas. 453; 53 L. T. 826—H. L. (Sc.)

The widow of a domiciled Scotchman filed a bill for the administration of her husband's estate, under an English will; and prayed that her infant children should elect and collate, in order to enable her to ascertain her rights and remedies according to the Scotch law; and insisted on a Scotch domicil. The residuary legatee under the English will filed a cross bill, to establish an English domicil, and for the administration of the estate accordingly:—Held, that the questions raised by the widow were well raised, and could be disposed of by the court. Douglas v. Douglas, 41 L. J., Ch. 74; L. R. 12 Eq. 617; 25 L. T. 530; 20 W. R. 55.

On the marriage of an Englishman, domiciled in England, with a Scotch lady, a settlement in Scotch form was made of her property, under which, after the death of the wife, the property went to the children of the marriage, subject only to an annuity to the husband. On the death of the wife, the only child of the marriage, an infant, resident with his father in England, commenced an action against the trustees to have the trusts administered by the court, alleging that the trustees improperly refused to allow maintenance out of the income. The trust property was all in Scotland, and the trustees all resided there. An order having been obtained for leave to serve the writ upon the trustees in Scotland:—Held, by the court of appeal, that, assuming that there was jurisdiction under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XI. r. 1, to allow service of the writ in Scotland, still under the discretion given by Ord. XI. r. 1a, such service ought not to be authorised, as it was more convenient and proper that the trusts of Scotch property held by Scotch trustees upon the trusts of a Scotch instrument should be administered by a Scotch than by an English court. Semble, that under Ord. XI. r. 1, there was no jurisdiction to order service of the writ in Scotland. Creswell v. Parker, 11 Ch. D. 601; 40 L. T. 599; 27 W. R. 897—C. A.

Payment of Debts.]—If a Dutchman be possessed of real estate in Holland, and personal estate in England, and devise his real estate to A., and his personal to B., the personal shall be first applied to pay debts in Holland, though real estate is liable there. Anon., 9 Mod. 66.

A person domiciled in England, who was indebted in money upon bond, died intestate, leaving real estate in Scotland, and the bond debts were paid by the heir out of the produce of the real estate in Scotland:—Held, that the right of relief or demand against the personal estate, which by the law of Scotland is given to the heir who has paid movable debts, is capable of being made available in England, where the personal estate is the primary fund for the payment of all debts. Winchelsea (Earl) v. Garetty, 2 Keen, 293; 7 L. J., Ch. 99; 2 Jur. 367.

A testator, domiciled in England, dies seised of lands in a foreign country, which, by the law of that country, and also by the will, are charged with his debts; the assets, being insufficient for the payment of his simple contract debts, the produce of those lands must be applied among the simple contract creditors, according to the priorities recognised by the law of the country where the lands are situate. Hanson v. Walker, 7 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 135.

A person died in England, having been adjudicated insolvent in Australia, and debts to a large amount having been proved in the insolvency and not satisfied:—Held, that even if the domicil of the deceased was English, a sum of money paid into the court of chancery, in England to his credit must be applied towards payment of the debts proved in the insolvency in Australia, in priority to any claim by an English administrator. Davidson's Settlement, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 347; L. R. 15 Eq. 383; 21 W. R. 452.

—— Priority.]—The priorities of creditors are regulated by the domicil of the testator, though the personal assets may be situate and administered in another country. Wilson v. Dunsany (Lady), 18 Beav. 293; 2 Eq. R. 706; 23 L. J., Ch. 492; 18 Jur. 762; 2 W. R. 288.

In the administration in England of the English assets of a foreigner who died domiciled abroad, no priority is given to English creditors over foreign creditors, but all take pari passu. Klœbe, In re, Kannreuther v. Geiselbrecht, 54 L. J., Ch. 297; 28 Ch. D. 175; 52 L. T. 19; 33 W. R. 391.

A domiciled Englishman with personal property in Scotland by a will in the English form, after bequeathing various legacies, gave the residue of his estate to his sons D. and H. equally, and appointed his three sons executors, two of whom, D. and H. proved the will in England and Scotland. D. lent H. various sums on memoranda of charge on his interest in his father's estate. H. was also indebted to an English insurance company, which became amalgamated with another having offices in London and Edinburgh, and the amalgamated company brought actions in England and in Scotland in respect of the debt due to them. D.'s co-executor who proved with him had notice of the memoranda of charge, part of the moneys secured by which was paid off. D. then filed a bill in England for an account of his father's estate and what was due to him on the memoranda of charge, and to restrain the proceedings at law by the insurance company:—Held, that the testator being a domiciled Englishman, and the executors not admitting assets, non constat that there would be any residue upon which the actions could attach, and therefore, upon the executors undertaking to obtain an administration decree, an order was made for an injunction to restrain any proceedings in Scotland involving the taking the accounts of the testator's estate, without prejudice to the establishment of their right to a charge against H.'s share, and without prejudice to any question of priority as between the company and the plaintiff in equity. Baillie v. Baillie, 37 L. J., Ch. 225; L. R. 5 Eq. 175; 17 L. T. 376; 16 W. R. 272.

When a debt is contracted by an Englishman in a foreign country, the provisions of the lex loci contractûs do not avail to entitle the creditor to payment of his debt out of equitable assets administered in this country in priority to other creditors. Pardo v. Bingham, L. R. 6 Eq. 485.

When, therefore, an Englishman residing in Venezuela, executed an instrument to secure repayment to G. of 1,600*l.*, and G. afterwards registered the instrument in the form prescribed by the law of Venezuela, and by virtue of such registration became entitled, according to that law, to be paid his debt out of the general assets of the debtor in priority to other creditors:—Held, nevertheless, that a fund in this country constituting equitable assets of the debtor must be divided among the creditors without regard to any such priority. Ib.

—— Marshalling.]—Real estate in Scotland of a testator domiciled in England must be administered according to Scotch law, and the personal estate being by the law of Scotland primarily liable for the personal debts, it follows that in respect of those debts pecuniary legatees are not entitled to a marshalling of assets against the heir-at-law. Harrison v. Harrison, 42 L. J., Ch. 495; L. R. 8 Ch. 342; 28 L. T. 145; 21 W. R. 164.

Other Matters.]—A fund of upwards of 13,000*l.* consols, representing the proceeds of sale of real estate, the absolute property of a foreign lunatic, which had been sold by order of the court under the powers of the Partition Act, 1868, was standing in court to the credit of the lunatic. The curator ad bona of the lunatic, duly appointed according to the law of the country in which the lunatic resided, and who according to that law had the fullest powers and control over the lunatic's real and personal estate, petitioned for the transfer of the fund to him:—Held, that the fund representing real estate sold under special legislation was subject to the laws of this country relative to real estate, and must remain in court as a fund which might devolve upon the heir-at-law of the lunatic, and that the curator ad bona was only entitled to receive the dividends. Grimwood v. Bartels, 46 L. J., Ch. 788 ; 25 W. R. 843.

An action was brought against the executors and trustees of a will to recover a share of the proceeds of sale of a house in Dresden, which had been sold by C. S. H., the testator in the action. The plaintiffs alleged that, upon the death of Colonel H., a domiciled Irishman, who died in February, 1853, one moiety of the house, subject to a certain life interest therein, devolved by Saxon law, as to three-fourth parts thereof, on G. G., his daughter. That lady died in 1863, leaving her husband, J. G., surviving her, and he thereupon, by Saxon law, became entitled to all her property, movable and immovable, including her interest in the house. The plaintiffs were the administrator and the next of kin of J. G., who died intestate. The defendants denied the alleged title of the plaintiffs, and contended that C. S. H. held the house as sole and legal owner for his own use and benefit. All the parties interested were resident within the jurisdiction :—Held, that this being a contested claim to real property situate in Dresden, the question must be determined by the law of Saxony as to immovables ; and where the only ground for instituting proceedings in this country was the fact that the defendants were resident here, the court had no authority to adjudicate on the case, and the action must therefore be dismissed. Hawthorne, In re, Graham v. Massey, 52 L. J., Ch. 750 ; 23 Ch. D. 743 ; 48 L. T. 701 ; 32 W. R. 147.

The English courts, in giving effect to a bequest of personal property of a testator dying domiciled abroad, only adopt the law of the place of domicil as it stands at the time of the testator's death, and do not consider any subsequent retrospective changes made in that law by the legislature of the foreign country. Aganoor's Trusts, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 521 ; 13 R. 677.

E. having died in Ireland intestate, letters of administration were granted in Ireland to the plaintiff. Part of his assets being in India, the plaintiff sent out a power of attorney to F. & Company in India, who procured letters of administration to be granted to them in India for the use and benefit of the plaintiff, received the Indian assets, paid the Indian debts, and remitted the surplus to their agents in England. The Irish letters of administration were sealed in England :—Held, that the agents in England were bound to hand over the fund to the plaintiff, and could not require the concurrence of the next of kin, they not having taken any legal proceedings to prevent the plaintiff from receiving the assets. Eames v. Hacon, 50 L. J., Ch. 740 ; 18 Ch. D. 347 ; 45 L. T. 196 ; 29 W. R. 877—C. A.

A British-born subject died domiciled in a British colony. At the time of his death he was possessed of personal property, locally situated in Scotland. Probate of his will was taken out in Scotland, for the purpose of administering his property, and out of the fund thus obtained by the executors legacies were paid to the legatees residing in Scotland :—Held, that legacy duty was not payable in respect of these legacies. Thompson v. Advocate-General, 12 Cl. & F. 1 ; 13 Sim. 153 ; 9 Jur. 217.

VII. CONTRACTS.

a. In General.

Capacity to Contract.]—A married woman, domiciled in France, entered into a contract in England respecting her reversionary interest in trust money invested in the English funds :—Held, that the French law determined her capacity to make the contract. Guepratte v. Young, 4 De G. & Sm. 217.

When the cause of action occurs in Scotland, and infancy is pleaded, the defendant must shew that infancy is a legal defence to the demand, by proving the law of that country in that respect. Male v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 163 ; 6 R. R. 823.

Interpretation.]—Primâ facie the law of the country where the contract is made will govern it, and decide what the law as to the contract is ; but the court must look at the circumstances of each contract, and consider, having regard to the nature of the contract and the other circumstances of the case, by what law it is to be governed. Missouri Steamship Co., In re, Monroe's Claim, 58 L. J., Ch. 721 ; 42 Ch. D. 321 ; 61 L. T. 316 ; 37 W. R. 696 ; 6 Asp. M. C. 423—C. A.

The law of the country where a contract is made, or is to be performed, furnishes the rules for expounding the nature and extent of its obligations ; but the law of the country where it is sought to enforce performance of a contract governs all questions as to the remedy and mode of proceeding, including lapse of time. Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Cl. & F. 121.

The lex loci contractûs, and the law applicable to cases of money charged as a rent payable out of land, where no provision as to the place of payment is made by the instrument, are inapplicable to a case where the instrument itself furnishes the means of interpretation. In ambiguous contracts, the domicil of the parties, the place of execution, the purpose, and the various provisions and expressions of the instrument, are material to be considered in the construction. Lansdowne v. Lansdowne, 2 Bligh, 60 ; 21 R. R. 43—H. L. (Ir.)

Where a contract is made between persons domiciled in a foreign country, and in a form known to the law of that country, the court, in administering the rights of parties under it, will give it the same construction and effect as the foreign law would have given to it. Anstruther v. Adair, 2 Myl. & K. 513.

A deed in the Scotch form, made between parties, some of whom were domiciled in Scotland and others in England, construed according to Scotch law so far as it affected the Scotch parties, and according to English law, so far as it affected the English parties. Duncan v. Campbell, 12 Sim. 616.

The rule governing the interpretation of a contract made in one country, to be performed wholly or partly in another country, is, that the law of the country where the contract is made governs as to the nature of the obligation and the interpretation of it, if the parties to the contract are either subjects of a power there ruling, or as temporary residents owe that power a temporary allegiance. In either case they must be understood to submit to the law there prevailing, and agree to its action on their contract. Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co. v. Shand, 3

Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 272 ; 6 N. R. 387 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 771 ; 12 L. T. 808 ; 13 W. R. 1049.

It is immaterial that such agreement so to be ruled by the lex loci contractûs is not so expressed in terms ; it is equally an agreement, in fact, presumed de jure ; and a foreign court interpreting or enforcing a contract so made on any contrary rule defeats the intention of the parties, as well as neglects to observe the recognised comity of nations. Ib.

The law of a country where a contract is to be enforced, must govern the construction of such contract. Don v. Lippmann, 5 Cl. & F. 1—H. L. (Sc.)

A court having before it a contract made between parties living under different systems of law, is not bound as a matter of law to apply either the lex loci solutionis or the lex loci contractûs ; the question is what law the parties intended to govern the contract. Hamlyn v. Talisker Distillery, [1894] A. C. 202 ; 6 R. 188 ; 71 L. T. 1 ; 58 J. P. 540—H. L. (Sc.)

Incorporating Foreign Law.]—A reference to foreign law in any English contract does not incorporate the foreign law, but merely affects the interpretation of the contract. Dever, Ex parte, Suse, In re, 56 L. J., Q. B. 552 ; 18 Q. B. D. 660—C. A.

When reliance is placed upon a difference between the law of England and the law of a foreign state, the party alleging the same is bound, by witnesses or books of authority, to shew that there is such a difference. Smith v. Gould, 4 Moore, P. C. 21 ; 6 Jur. 543. Cp. Bentinck v. Willink, 2 Hare, 1.

An instrument executed by foreigners in a foreign country must, on a demurrer be construed according to the obvious imports of its terms, unless there are allegations in the bill, that according to the law of the country in which it was executed, the true construction of it is different. Spain (King) v. Machado, 4 Russ. 225 ; 6 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 61 ; 28 R. R. 56.

—— In a Foreign Language.]—When a contract is made in a foreign country, and in a foreign language, an English court, having to construe it, must first obtain a translation of the instrument ; secondly, an explanation of the terms of art (if any) ; thirdly, evidence of the foreign law applicable to it ; and, fourthly, evidence of any peculiar rules of construction which may exist in that law ; and must then itself interpret the instrument on ordinary principles of construction. Di Sora v. Phillipps, 10 H. L. Cas. 624—H. L. (E.) S. P., Chatenay v. Brazilian Submarine Telegraph Co., 60 L. J., Q. B. 295 ; [1891] 1 Q. B. 79 ; 63 L. T. 739 ; 39 W. R. 65—C. A.

Informalities — Registration.] — A contract made in a foreign country, the laws of which require the contract to be registered before it can be sued upon there, may nevertheless be enforced here if the want of registration does not affect the validity. Melbourn, Ex parte, 40 L. J., Bk. 25 ; L. R. 6 Ch. 64 ; 23 L. T. 578 ; 19 W. R. 83.

Stamp and Revenue Laws.]—A document which, by the law of a foreign country, is not admissible in evidence for want of a stamp, may nevertheless be admitted in this country. Bristow v. Sequeville, 5 Ex. 275 ; 3 Car. & K. 64 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 289 ; 14 Jur. 674.

But where by the foreign law the want of a stamp renders the contract void, it cannot be enforced here. Ib.

The courts of this country will not take notice of the revenue laws of foreign states. Planche v. Fletcher, 1 Dougl. 251.

An agreement made in a foreign country cannot be used here, if it appears that by the laws of that country it would not have been available there without a stamp. Alves v. Hodgson, 7 Term Rep. 241 ; 2 Esp. 528 ; 4 R. R. 433. S. P., Clegg v. Levy, 3 Camp. 166.

A plaintiff cannot recover upon a written contract made in Jamaica, which, by the laws of that country, is void for want of a stamp. Ib.

Where an action was brought for money lent in France, and unstamped receipts were produced in proof of the loan, evidence to shew that by the law of France such receipts required stamps to render them valid, was rejected, on the ground that the courts of this country will not notice the revenue laws of foreign states. James v. Catherwood, 3 D. & R. 190.

b. Particular Contracts.

In relation to Funds in England.]—Locus regit actum is a canon of general jurisprudence, and must be assumed, in the absence of contrary evidence, to apply to a system of foreign law. Guepratte v. Young, 4 De G. & Sm. 217.

A married woman, domiciled in France, entered into a contract in England respecting her reversionary interest in trust money invested in the English funds, which was substantially valid according to French law, although invalid according to English law ; but the contract was not entered into in the manner prescribed by French law, which requires that there should be as many original instruments as there are distinct parties to the contract :—Held, that the French law gave capacity to make the contract, but that the English law regulated the form of it, and that therefore the contract was valid ; and it was enforced by decree. Ib.

Made in England between Merchants residing there, for Delivery in London of Goods shipped Abroad by Foreign Company—Vis major.]—The defendants, a London firm, contracted in London to sell to the plaintiffs, merchants in London, 20,000 tons of Algerian esparto, to be shipped by a French company at an Algerian port, at certain prices, according to specified qualities, on board vessels to be provided by the plaintiffs in London, and to be paid for by the plaintiffs in London by cash on or before arrival of the ship or ships at her or their port of destination, less interest at 5 per cent. per annum for the unexpired portion of three months from date of bill of lading, for the full amount of the invoice based on shipping weight. The defendants caused to be delivered, and were paid for, 9,000 tons of esparto, but failed to deliver the remaining 11,000 tons. In an action for this breach of contract :—Held, that the contract was an English contract and to be construed and dealt with according to the law of this country ; and consequently, that it was no answer to say that by the French law (which prevailed at the port of shipment) the defendants were excused from performing their contract if prevented from so doing by "force majeure," viz., the prohibition by the constituted authorities of the export of esparto from Algeria, by reason of an insurrection and consequent hostilities in that country. Jacobs v. Crédit Lyonnais, 53 L. J., Q. B. 156; 12 Q. B. D. 589; 50 L. T. 194; 32 W. R. 761—C. A.

Assignment of Debts.]—To an action for money payable by the defendant to the plaintiff, he pleaded that C., a joint debtor, resided in California in America, within the jurisdiction of a court there. That by the law of California a creditor might voluntarily assign his debt to another person who might in his own name sue the debtor. That the plaintiff being in California assigned the debt to R. there, and R. in his own name sued the defendant and C. for that and other debts in a court there, having jurisdiction for the recovery of such assigned debts, and recovered judgment, and the defendant and C. were liable to be sued by R. in this country upon the judgment. That the judgment was for an entire sum, making no distinction between the debts, and was partly satisfied by the levy of a sum less than the amount of the judgment, and not applicable to any one of the debts recovered more than to any other. Replication, that the law of California was that the assignee might re-assign to the creditor the debt or so much thereof as was unsatisfied, and the creditor might sue in his own name for so much, notwithstanding the assignee in the meantime had recovered judgment, unless the whole was actually levied. That R., before he had received any part of the debt or before any sum applicable thereto had been levied, re-assigned to the plaintiff, by reason whereof the plaintiff became entitled to sue for the debt in his own name as if there had been no such assignment as mentioned in the plea:—Held, that, assuming the plea to shew that the assignment made in California by the law of that country transferred the exclusive right to sue, it was answered by the replication. Thompson v. Bell, 3 El. & Bl. 236; 23 L. J., Q. B. 159; 18 Jur. 603.

Assignment of Policy of Assurance — Lex loci.]—The plaintiff sued the trustees of an English life assurance company as assignee from her husband of a policy of life assurance granted by the company. The assignment to the plaintiff was made in Cape Colony, the assignor being then domiciled in that colony, where he remained until death. By the law of Cape Colony such an assignment was void, because the assignee was the wife of the assignor:—Held, that the law of Cape Colony applied to the assignment of the policy, and that the defendants were entitled to judgment. Lee v. Abdy, 17 Q. B. D. 309; 55 L. T. 297; 34 W. R. 653.

Foreign Share Certificates—Dealings in England.]—Transactions as to certificates of shares in a foreign company taking place in England between persons domiciled here are to be decided by English law; but what is effectual to transfer the shares in the foreign country, by the laws of that country. Colonial Bank v. Cady, 60 L. J., Ch. 131; 15 App. Cas. 267; 63 L. T. 27; 39 W. R. 17—H. L. (E.)

Certificates negotiated in England—Foreign Securities.]—In an action to determine whether a bank were entitled to certain certificates of American securities:—Held, that as the question whether the bank was to be deemed rightfully in possession of the certificates turned upon transactions in England it was to be decided by English and not by American law, though the consequences of being rightfully in possession of them depended on American law. Williams v. Colonial Bank, 57 L. J., Ch. 826; 38 Ch. D. 388; 59 L. T. 643; 36 W. R. 625—C. A.

Shipping—Affreightment—Law of the Flag—"Lex loci contractûs"—Intention of Parties.]—Primâ facie the law of the country where the contract is made will govern it and decide what the law as to the contract is; but the court must look at the circumstances of each contract, and consider, having regard to the nature of the contract and the other circumstances of the case, what law it is to be governed by. Missouri Steamship Co., In re, Monroe's Claim, 58 L. J., Ch. 721; 42 Ch. D. 321; 61 L. T. 316; 37 W. R. 696; 6 Asp. M. C. 423—C. A.

A British company domiciled in England contracted to convey, in a British-owned ship, cattle belonging to an American citizen residing at Boston, Massachusetts, from Boston to Liverpool. The contract, which was made on behalf of the company by their American agent, contained a stipulation that the company should not be liable for negligence of the master and crew. According to the law of Massachusetts this stipulation was void as contrary to public policy. According to the law of England it was good. The ship was stranded off the coast of Wales through the negligence of the master and crew:—Held, that, having regard to the nature of the contract, and the other circumstances of the case, the contract must be governed by the law of England, and therefore the shipper was not entitled to damages for the loss of his cattle. Ib.

—— Bill of Lading—Collision between Ships belonging to same Owners—Excepted Perils.]—The plaintiffs shipped goods on board one of the defendants' ships, the "Kroon Prins," under a bill of lading, which was in the English language, and described the defendants by their corporate name, and which excepted, amongst other things, "collision and accidents, loss or damage from any act, neglect or default whatsoever of the pilots, master or mariners or other servants of the company in navigating the ship." The goods were lost by the "Kroon Prins" coming into collision on the high seas with the "Atjeh," which also belonged to the defendants; and the jury found that, though both ships were in fault, the chief blame was to be attached to the "Atjeh." The defendant company, which was composed entirely of English shareholders, in addition to being registered in England as a limited company, was also registered in Holland as a Dutch company, which was in fact a bare trustee of the ships for the English company. The ships also were registered as Dutch ships, and carried the Dutch flag. Such registration was for the purposes of trading to and from Dutch ports. The ships were not registered under the merchant shipping acts as British ships. In an action to recover the value of the goods, based, first, on the contract to carry safely contained in the bill of lading; and secondly, in tort:—Held, that, so far as the action was based on contract, the defendants, as owners of the "Kroon Prins," were relieved from liability for the negligence of their servants on board that ship by reason of the exceptions in the bill of lading, which was an English contract, and must be construed accordingly; also that the defendants were not liable either expressly or impliedly under the bill of lading, which had reference only to the carrying ship the "Kroon Prins," for the negligence of their servants on board the "Atjeh." Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China v. Netherlands India Steam Navigation Co., 52 L. J., Q. B. 220; 10 Q. B. D. 521; 48 L. T. 546; 31 W. R. 445; 47 J. P. 260—C. A.

Held, also (per Brett, L.J.), that both the ships were English and not Dutch ships, notwithstanding that they were registered in Holland as Dutch ships and carried the Dutch flag, inasmuch as the nationality of a ship depends upon the question of ownership. Ib.

—— Port of Distress—Sale of Cargo—Law of the Flag.]—The plaintiffs, who were British subjects, shipped pepper at Singapore, on board the German ship "August," to be carried with other cargo to London. The ship met with bad weather, and was obliged to put into Cape Town, the ship and portions of her cargo having sustained damage. The master, acting on the advice of surveyors, sold a portion of the plaintiff's pepper, with other cargo. In an action for breach of contract and for conversion:—Held, that the conduct of the master in selling the pepper in question was to be determined by German law, that being the law of the flag. The August, 60 L. J., P. 57; [1891] P. 328; 66 L. T. 32; 7 Asp. M. C. 110.

—— Bottomry Bond—Foreign Ship.]—The owner of cargo who ships it on board a foreign vessel, ships it to be dealt with by the master according to the law of the flag, that is, the law of the country to which the vessel belongs, unless that authority be limited by express stipulation at the time of the shipment. Therefore a bond made by the master of a foreign ship hypothecating cargo laden on board such ship if valid according to the law of the flag of the ship, will be enforced by the English Admiralty Court, on the arrest of the ship and cargo at the port of London (the port of discharge within the meaning of the bond), although the conditions imposed by English law as essential to the validity of such bond have not been complied with. The Gaetano and Maria, 51 L. J., P. 67; 7 P. D. 137; 46 L. T. 835; 30 W. R. 766; 4 Asp. M. C. 535—C. A.

—— Carrier—Loss of Luggage—Special Contract.]—S., being in England, took from the P. and O. Company, and paid for, a ticket for the passage from Southampton to Alexandria, and from Suez to Mauritius. In the body of the ticket the engagement of the company was stated to be subject to the conditions and regulations indorsed thereon. S. signed this ticket. There was indorsed a notice containing the following clause, "that the company does not hold itself liable for damage to, or loss or detention of, passengers' baggage." S. lost one package of his luggage during the voyage. No evidence was given of any negligence on the part of the company:—Held, that the contract was governed by the law of England, and that by the terms of the special contract the company was not liable for the loss of the package. Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co. v. Shand, 3 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 272; 6 N. R. 387; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 771; 12 L. T. 808; 13 W. R. 1049.

—— Sale of Ship—Prior Mortgage.]—Certain shipbuilders in America built several ships, mortgaged them there, sent them to England for sale, sold them there, and paid the mortgagees in America. The mortgages were duly registered in America; but notice of the mortgage having been indorsed on the certificate of registry in one case, and having impeded the sale, it was agreed that no such notice should be indorsed in future. Another ship was accordingly sent over and sold; the shipbuilders received the purchase-money, and failed, leaving the mortgagee unpaid. The mortgagee filed a bill to establish his claim against the purchaser:—Held, that the rights to the ship acquired under American law must be recognised; but that the purchase, having taken place in this country, must be governed by English law. Hooper v. Gumm, 36 L. J., Ch. 605; L. R. 2 Ch. 282; 15 W. R. 464; 16 L. T. 107.

Held, also, that that which furnishes the title to a ship in America will furnish the title to the ship in this country. Ib.

—— Seaman—Action for Wages.]—Foreign seamen at a foreign port enter into articles with the master, who is also a foreigner, for a voyage on board a foreign ship, and thereby agree amongst other things, not to institute any suit against the master in foreign countries, or cite him before any judge or magistrate, but that they will abide by the maritime code of their own country and the adjudication of their own courts. Having made this agreement in their own country, they cannot maintain an action in England against the master for wages, though the ship and cargo be confiscated in an English port, and the voyage thereby ended. Gienar v. Meyer, 2 H. Bl. 603; 3 R. R. 520. S. P., Johnson v. Machielsne, 3 Camp. 44; 13 R. R. 745.

—— Marine Insurance.]—The agent of the Albion Insurance Company had an office in Glasgow, at which J. P. and others, the owners of a steam vessel, effected an insurance, receiving from the company's agent a contract, importing generally that a policy corresponding with the memorandum, would be prepared at the office in London, and delivered to the assured, or their order, "on the third Monday in the ensuing month, or on any subsequent day." The policy that was sent down, and which was never shewn to or demanded by the assured, contained a clause that "it should be suspended and remain out of force during the time the steamboat might be at sea." At the end of the year the policy was renewed through the agent at Glasgow, who delivered to the assured a memorandum, signed by the company's secretary in London, signifying that the above policy had been renewed, but no notice of the exception was ever communicated to the assured. The vessel was shortly afterwards destroyed by fire on her passage from Liverpool to Dublin:—Held, that the memorandum was the contract of the parties, which had not been fulfilled by the company, who were therefore liable for damages; that the act 6 Geo. 1, c. 18 (repealed, see 6 Geo. 4, c. 91), so far as it declares all policies executed by six persons, other than the London Insurance and Royal Exchange Assurances, to be absolutely void, does not extend to Scotland; and that a contract so entered into was a Scotch and not an English contract. Pattison v. Mills, 2 Bli. (N.S.) 519; 1 Dow & Cl. 342—H. L. (Sc.)

chant upon goods shipped in a French ship, and it was thereby provided that general average was to be payable as per judicial foreign statement. The ship was damaged by a collision and put into port for repairs, the cargo, however, being uninjured. The master not having funds to do the necessary repairs, gave a bottomry bond on ship, freight and cargo. The ship and freight proving insufficient to satisfy the bond, the assured had to pay the deficiency in order to obtain possession of his goods:—Held, that the policy was not to be construed according to French law, except so far as the parties had expressly stipulated that it should be, and that there being no loss by perils of the sea according to English law, the assured could not recover from the underwriters the amount which he had paid as above mentioned. Greer v. Poole, 49 L. J., Q. B. 463; 5 Q. B. D. 272; 42 L. T. 687; 28 W. R. 582.

—— Insurance in London — Goods Shipped Abroad by undisclosed Principals.]—The defendants, an English firm, traded with D., a Spanish shipping agent at Havannah. The plaintiffs, who were Spanish merchants at Havannah, consigned a cargo of goods to the defendants through the agency of D. The defendants knew that D. was acting for a third party who was alluded to as the "interesado," but the name of the plaintiffs was not disclosed. The defendants effected an insurance in London on the ship in the name of themselves, and for the benefit of all parties interested. The ship having been lost, the policy-money was paid to the defendants, and D. being insolvent, the plaintiffs claimed the whole of the money after deducting the premiums and expenses. The defendants claimed a lien for the balance of their general account due from D.:—Held, that the questions must be determined according to English law, and not according to the law of Spain, the law of Spain only being material with regard to the nature and extent of the authority given by the plaintiffs to D. Maspons v. Mildred, 51 L. J., Q. B. 604; 9 Q. B. D. 530; 47 L. T. 318; 30 W. R. 862—C. A. Affirmed sub nom. Mildred v. Maspons, 53 L. J., Q. B. 33; 8 App. Cas. 874; 32 W. R. 125—H. L. (E.)

—— Repairs—Lien.]—A bill stated that the plaintiffs entered into certain contracts with D. for the repair of the steamship "Great Eastern," and that those contracts were afterwards transferred by D. to a French company, with limited liability, having offices in France and England. The bill further alleged that, according to the law of France, directors of companies were personally liable for debts incurred by their companies under certain provisions and requisites were complied with, and that those requisites had not been complied with, and it was prayed that certain goods on board the "Great Eastern," upon which the plaintiffs had a lien under the terms of their contract, might be sold, and the proceeds applied towards payment of their claim; and that if the assets of the company should be insufficient, the directors might be declared personally liable to make good the deficiency. Demurrer for want of equity by E., one of the directors, overruled the allegations (assumed to be true) being sufficient to shew that he was a director at the time the contracts were entered into; that the directors were personally liable under the French law; that the court had the power of taking the accounts of the company, inasmuch as it had an office in England; and that E. was a proper party to the taking of such accounts and to the sale of the goods. Bower v. Société des Affréteurs du Great Eastern, 17 L. T. 490.

—— War Risk—Destruction of Cargo by Enemy—Right to Compensation.] — The plaintiffs, underwriters, granted to the defendants valued policies of insurance, including war risks, on a cargo of a United States merchant ship. Such cargo during the insured voyage was totally destroyed by the "Alabama," a cruiser of the Confederate States then at war with the United States of America; and the plaintiffs paid to the defendants, as and for an actual total loss, the amounts named in the policies, but the real value of the cargo exceeded the sum so paid. The loss of this cargo formed one of the items of claims made by the United States against Great Britain, in respect of the damage done by the "Alabama" and other Confederate cruisers, which was referred to arbitration, and resulted in an award under which Great Britain paid the sum awarded for compensation to the United States. Afterwards the United States passed an Act of Congress for constituting a court for the distribution of this sum amongst its subjects who had been injured and whose claims should be allowed by that court under the provisions of such act, by which it was declared in effect that no claim should be allowed for which the party injured had received compensation from any insurer; but that if such compensation should be not equal to the loss actually suffered, allowance might be made for the difference; and that no claim should be allowed by or on behalf of any insurer, either in his own right or of that of the party insured. The defendants claimed in such court and received a sum out of such compensation-money for so much of their loss as exceeded the sum insured. The plaintiffs having paid for a total loss, sued the defendants for the compensation-money they had so received:—Held, (Baggallay, L.J., dissenting), that this money was no part of the salvage, but was given to the defendants under the Act of Congress as a pure gift, and that therefore the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover it. Burnand v. Rodocanachi, 51 L. J., Q. B. 548; 7 App. Cas. 823; 47 L. T. 277; 31 W. R. 65; 4 Asp. M. C. 576—H. L. (E.)

c. ILLEGALITY.

Illegality by the Lex loci contractûs.]—It is contrary to principle that a court of justice should give greater effect to a foreign contract that it would have by the lex loci contractûs. Talleyrand v. Boulanger, 3 Ves. 447; 4 R. R. 58.

A document which, by the law of a foreign country, is not admissible in evidence for want of a stamp, may nevertheless be admitted in this country. Bristow v. Sequeville, 5 Ex. 275; 3 Car. & K. 64; 19 L. J., Ex. 289; 14 Jur. 674. S. P., James v. Catherwood, 3 D. & R. 190.

But where by the law of a foreign country the want of a stamp renders the contract void, it cannot be enforced here. Ib. S. P., Alves v. Hodgson, 7 Term Rep. 241; 2 Esp. 528; 4 R. R. 433: Clegg v. Lery, 3 Camp. 166.

A. and B. were Spanish subjects resident in Spain; A. having entered into a mercantile contract with the Spanish government agreed with B. to allow him a share of the profits. Some years afterwards B. died, and A. went first to France and afterwards came to England. After he had left Spain he frequently wrote to the plaintiffs (who were resident in France, but had taken out administration to B. in this country), promising to settle with them for B.'s share of the profits of the contract, but not having done so they filed a bill against him to enforce the agreements. A. pleaded that the agreement was illegal and void by the laws of Spain, as at the time it was entered into B. held an office of trust and confidence under the Spanish government, and the plea averred that the entering into the agreement was a crime against the laws of Spain, subjecting the parties to pains and penalties and a criminal prosecution. It was objected that the particular law of Spain by which the agreement was nullified ought to have been set forth, and that A. after he had left Spain had recognised the agreement, and promised to perform it. The court, however, allowed the plea. Heriz v. Riera, 11 Sim. 318; 10 L. J., Ch. 47; 5 Jur. 20.

—— Police Laws.]—Money won at play, or lent for the purposes of gambling in a country where the games in question are not illegal, may be recovered in the courts of this country. Quarrier v. Colston, 1 Ph. 147; 12 L. J., Ch. 57; 6 Jur. 959.

—— Exporting Contraband of War.]—A contract between two subjects of a neutral state to export contraband of war to a belligerent is not unlawful in the neutral state. Chavasse, Ex parte, Grazebrook, In re, 6 N. R. 6; 34 L. J., Bk. 17; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 400; 12 L. T. 249; 13 W. R. 627.

Informalities — Registration.]—A contract made in a foreign country, the laws of which require the contract to be registered before it can be sued upon there, may nevertheless be enforced here, if the want of registration does not affect the validity. Melbourn, Ex parte, 40 L. J., Bk. 25; L. R. 6 Ch. 64; 23 L. T. 578; 19 W. R. 83. Holthausen, Ex parte, Scheibler, In re, 44 L. J., Bk. 26; L. R. 9 Ch. 722; 31 L. T. 13.

Illegality according to the Lex fori.]—When a court of one country is called upon to enforce a contract entered into in another, it is not enough that the contract should be valid according to the law of the latter, for if any part of the contract is inconsistent with the law and policy of the former, the contract will not be enforced, even as to another part of it which may not be open to this objection, and may be the only part remaining to be performed. Hope v. Hope, 8 De G. M. & G. 731; 26 L. J., Ch. 417; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 454; 5 W. R. 387.

Therefore, where an Englishman married a Frenchwoman, and they resided in France, where their children were born, and suits were instituted between them in both countries, and were compromised by an agreement, of which part was, that the wife would facilitate proceedings for a divorce, and another part was, that one of the children should remain with its mother, and a third part related to the payment of an allowance to the wife:—Held, that even supposing the parties to be domiciled in France, and the agreement to be governed by French law, and to be valid according to that law, and to have been performed as to the parts which were invalid according to English law, it could not be enforced here as to any part of it. Ib.

—— Champerty.]—An agreement entered into in France, but intended to be carried out in England, of such a nature, that if entered into in England it would have been void for champerty, cannot be enforced in England. Grell v. Levy, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 73; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 210; 9 L. T. 721; 12 W. R. 378.

—— Agreement contrary to Policy.]—If an agreement contrary to the policy of the English law is entered into in a country by the law of which it is valid, an English court will not enforce it. The policy of the English law in favour of trade applies to foreigners trading in England equally with English subjects. Rousillon v. Rousillon, 49 L. J., Ch. 338; 14 Ch. D. 351; 42 L. T. 679; 28 W. R. 623; 44 J. P. 663.

d. How Affected by the Lex fori.

In General.]—The law of the country where a contract is made, or is to be performed, furnishes the rules for expounding the nature and extent of its obligation; but the law of the country, where it is sought to enforce performance of a contract, governs all questions as to the remedy and mode of proceeding, including lapse of time. Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Cl. & F. 121—H. L. (Sc.)

The law of a country where a contract is to be enforced, must govern the enforcement of such contract. Don v. Lippmann, 5 Cl. & F. 1—H. L. (Sc.)

The distinction between that part of the law of a foreign country where a personal contract is made which is adopted and that which is not adopted by our courts, is, that so much of the law as affects the rights and merits of the contract, all that relates ad decisionem litis, is adopted from the foreign country—so much of the law as affects the remedy only, all that relates ad litis ordinationem, is taken from the lex fori of that country where the action is brought. In the interpretation of this rule, the time of limitation of the action is governed by the law of the country where the action is brought, and not by the lex loci contractus. Hubert v. Steiner, 2 Scott, 304; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 202; 1 Hodges, 206; 2 D. P. C. 781; 4 L. J., C. P. 233.

In a suit between parties resident in England, on a contract made between them in a foreign country, the contract is to be interpreted according to the foreign law, but the remedy must be taken according to the law here. De la Vega v. Vianna, 1 B. & Ad. 284; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 388.

The rules of the lex fori, where a question is raised between or by or against foreigners, are not to be applied to matters affecting the substance of the remedy, but only to matters affecting the form. Cope v. Doherty, 2 De G. & J. 614; 27 L. J., Ch. 600; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 699; 6 W. R. 695.

Statutes of Limitation.]—The law of prescription or limitation is a law relating to procedure, having reference only to the lex fori; and where a court entertains a cause of action which originated in a foreign country, the rule is to adjudicate according to the law of that country, yet the court proceeds according to the prescription of the country in which it exercises jurisdiction. Ruckmaboye v. Lulloobhoy Mottichund, 8 Moore, P. C. 4 ; 5 Moore, Ind. App. 234.

Where a claim is made in an administration suit in England by an Indian creditor of the testator, the English Statute of Limitations must be applied as part of the lex fori. Finch v. Finch, 45 L. J., Ch. 816 ; 35 L. T. 235.

4th Section of Statute of Frauds.]—The contract mentioned in the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds is not absolutely void if not in writing, as required by the statute, that section relating to the mode of procedure, and not to the contract itself. Consequently such parol contract, though made in a foreign country, where it is good and capable of being enforced, cannot be sued on in this country. Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 801 ; 22 L. J., C. P. 1 ; 16 Jur. 1021 ; 1 W. R. 22.

c. NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS.

Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes.]—A bill payable in France, though drawn in England, is a foreign bill, and notice of dishonour, according to the French law, is sufficient. Hirschfeld v. Smith, 1 H. & R. 284 ; 35 L. J., C. P. 177 ; L. R. 1 C. P. 340 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 523 ; 14 W. R. 455.

In an action by indorsee against payee and indorser of a bill of exchange drawn in England, and accepted payable in France, by a resident in France, the indorsee and indorser being both domiciled in England :—Held, that the bill, being payable in France, was a French bill. Rothschild v. Currie, 4 P. & D. 737 ; 1 Q. B. 43 ; 10 L. J., Q. B. 77.

A bill of exchange was drawn and accepted in Paris and made payable in England. The drawer and acceptor were living there. No rate of interest was expressed to be payable on the bill : —Held, that the default being made in England, interest was payable according to the English and not the French law. Cooper v. Waldegrave (Earl), 2 Beav. 282.

As between the holder of a bill and the drawer, the lex loci contractus of the drawer and of the indorser, and not of the acceptor, governs the liabilities of the drawer and indorser respectively. Allen v. Kemble, 6 Moore, P. C. 314 ; 13 Jur. 287.

Bills of exchange, of which the plaintiffs in London claimed to be the owners, were sent to New York to the defendant, A., who had undertaken as agent to collect the moneys due upon them. The bills came into the possession of B. in New York. B. sued in an American court. In those proceedings a commission issued to examine witnesses, and the bills were handed over to C., who was appointed commissioner. The plaintiffs alleged that the bills of exchange came into the possession of B., and subsequently of that of B. and C., by a breach of duty on the part of A. towards the plaintiff, and asked that the bills might be handed over to them, or for a perpetual injunction to restrain C. from parting with them :—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to make such decree. London and Mediterranean Bank v. Stratton, 21 L. T. 415 ; 18 W. R. 107.

—— Indorsee against Acceptor.]—To an action by the indorsee of the drawer against the acceptor of a bill of exchange drawn in England, accepted in England, and payable in England, it is no answer that the indorsement was made in France, and was not conformable to the law of France ; nor in such action is it any answer that the drawer indorsed the bill immediately to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff and the drawer, when the bill was made and indorsed, were resident and domiciled in France, and were subjects of that empire. Lebel v. Tucker, 8 B. & S. 830 ; 37 L. J., Q. B. 46 ; L. R. 3 Q. B. 77 ; 17 L. T. 244 ; 16 W. R. 338.

Action on a bill of exchange by indorsees against acceptor. Plea, that he and S. carried on business in London and at Rio ; at the former place under the firm of M., S. & Co. ; at the latter under the firm of S. & M. ; that S. & M. drew the bill on M., S. & Co., payable to their own order, and indorsed it to the plaintiffs for a bonâ fide debt. Afterwards, and before the bill was accepted, S. & M. stopped payment, and made an arrangement with their creditors, the plaintiffs being parties to it, the effect of which, according to the law of Rio, was, that S. & M. were absolutely discharged from the debt for which the bill was indorsed to the plaintiffs ; that the bill was accepted after such discharge, and in ignorance of it. The plea also stated, that part of the arrangement was, that the holders of bills drawn by S. & M. upon M., S. & Co. should be considered as creditors for cash paid, but that the dividends should be deposited in a bank until presentation and protest of the bills not having been paid ; and the payment in London being verified, the sums so deposited should be divided amongst the creditors :—Held, that the plea was bad as an answer, as it did not shew that the acceptor would have been discharged by the law of Rio, or by the agreement ; nor did the agreement shew that the drawee would be discharged from accepting the bill, or released from paying it, if he did accept it. Hartley v. Manton, 5 Q. B. 247 ; Dav. & M. 410 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 61 ; 8 Jur. 169.

—— Foreign Indorsement.]—Bills of exchange were drawn in France by a domiciled Frenchman in the French language, in English form, on an English company, who duly accepted them. The drawer indorsed the bills and sent them to an Englishman in England :—Held, that the acceptor could not dispute the negotiability of the bills by reason of the indorsements being invalid according to French law. Marseilles Extension Ry. and Land Co., Smallpage and Brandon, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 116 ; 30 Ch. D. 598.

—— Indorsed in Blank Abroad when Overdue.] —A Norwegian firm purchased a share of a ship from A., a domiciled Englishman, on the terms of paying 800*l.* to A. and a debt of 300*l.* due to a firm consisting of A. and B. Part of the purchase-money was paid by an inland bill of exchange, payable to the order of the purchasers. This bill was indorsed in Norway by the purchasers to their agent, by whom it was indorsed in blank and handed over in Norway to the agent of A. and his firm. While in his hands it was seized in execution for a private debt of B.'s, and the validity of the execution was established by a judicial proceeding. After the bill was overdue it was sold by auction by the judicial officer, and was subsequently re-sold to a Swedish bank, who had no notice of any adverse claim upon it. By the law of Norway and Sweden it was proved that the judicial sale conferred a complete title on the purchaser, and that a bonâ fide purchaser for value of an overdue bill of exchange took it freed from all equities. The bill was claimed by A. and his firm:—Held, that as between claimants not parties to the bill, the law of Norway ought to prevail, and that the bank had a complete title to the bill. Alcock v. Smith, 61 L. J., Ch. 161; [1892] 1 Ch. 238; 66 L. T. 126—C. A.

—— Promissory Note made in France—Indorsed in Blank.]—Where a promissory note was made in France, and indorsed in blank by the payee in that country, the maker and payee both at the times of making and indorsing the note being domiciled there:—Held, that, as no action could have been maintained upon it in the French courts of law, in the name of the indorsee, the indorsement according to the law of France, operating as a procuration only, and not as a transfer, so no action could be maintained by him in our courts. Trimby v. Vignier, 4 M. & Sc. 695; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 151; 6 Car. & P. 25; 3 L. J., C. P. 246.

Scrip of Bonds.]—The scrip of a foreign government, issued by it on negotiating a loan (which scrip promises to give to the bearer, after all instalments have been duly paid, a bond for the amount paid, with interest), is by the custom of all the stock markets of Europe a negotiable instrument, and passing by mere delivery to a bonâ fide holder for value. English law follows this custom—and any person taking it in good faith obtains a title to it independently of the title of the person from whom he took it. Goodwin v. Robarts, 45 L. J., Ex. 748; 1 App. Cas. 476; 35 L. T. 179; 24 W. R. 987—H. L. (E.)

The scrip promised to give the bearer a bond for the amount paid. A person who took this scrip as being negotiable, could not, after he had negligently allowed another person the means of transferring (even fraudulently) the possession of it to a bonâ fide holder, be heard to deny that the instrument was a negotiable instrument transferable to bearer by delivery. Ib.

Who is contracting Party.]—In the case of such scrip, issued by a foreign government and circulated in England by means of an agent here, who is to receive the instalments, and give acknowledgments for their payment, and to deliver the bonds when they are issued, the contracting party is the foreign government, and not the English agent. Ib.

f. Other Matters.

Discharge or Extinguishment of Debts—Effect in other Countries.]—A debt or liability arising in any country may be discharged by the laws of that country, and such a discharge, if it extinguishes the debt or liability, and does not merely interfere with the remedies or course of procedure to enforce it, will be an effectual answer to the claim, not only in the courts of that country, but in every other country. Ellis v. M'Henry, 40 L. J., C. P. 109; L. R. 6 C. P. 228; 23 L. T. 861; 19 W. R. 503.

The discharge of a debt or liability by the law of a country other than that in which the debt arises does not relieve the debtor in any other country. Where the discharge is created by the legislature or laws of a country which has a paramount jurisdiction over another country in which the debt or liability arose, or by the legislature or laws which govern the tribunal in which the question is to be decided, such a discharge may be effectual in both countries in the one case, or in proceedings before the tribunal in the other case. Ib.

A discharge of an insolvent debtor upon a cessio bonorum by the Court of Session in Scotland, is no answer to an action brought by an English subject in a court in this country to recover a debt contracted in England, although it appeared that the plaintiff opposed the discharge of the defendant in the Scotch court. Phillips v. Allan, 8 B. & C. 477; 2 Man. & Ry. 576; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 2; 32 R. R. 450.

Semble, that it would be an answer to the action if the plaintiff had claimed to have the benefit of the Scotch law, and to take a distributive share of the property of the insolvent. Ib.

—— Foreign Bankruptcy or Liquidation, Discharge by.]—A party to a contract made and to be performed in England is not discharged from liability under such contract by a discharge in bankruptcy or liquidation under the law of a foreign country in which he is domiciled. Gibbs v. Société des Métaux, 59 L. J., Q. B., 510; 25 Q. B. D. 399; 63 L. T. 503—C. A.

Arbitrations.]—By agreement between A. and B. made in France, any disputes which might arise between them were to be submitted by them to two arbitrators, merchants (négociants), respectively named by them, who, in case of disagreement, were to have power to name an umpire. The two or the three referees might also be named by a particular court, at the request of either party:—Held, that the court might appoint an arbitrator who was not a merchant; and also that an act by which it annulled B.'s nomination of an arbitrator, on the ground that he was a foreigner, and appointed not two other arbitrators, but one, a Frenchman, and not a merchant, to act as referee with the nominee of A., must be taken to be legal according to the French law, till the contrary was distinctly proved. Alivon v. Furnival, 1 C. M. & R. 277; 4 Tyr. 751; 3 D. P. C. 202; 3 L. J., Ex. 241.

Where on breach of an agreement entered into in France, and to be performed there, French arbitrators awarded a sum, including the profits which the plaintiff would have made had the agreement been fulfilled:—Held, that the sum might be recovered in an action here on the award, as not being shewn to be contrary to French law. Ib.

What Law applicable.]—A deed in the Scotch form, made between parties, some of whom were domiciled in Scotland and the others in England, construed partly according to the law of Scotland, and partly according to the law of England; that is to say, so far as it concerned the Scotch parties, according to the Scotch law, and so far as it concerned the English parties, according to the English law. Duncan v. Campbell, 12 Sim. 616; 6 Jur. 667.

Pleading.]—A simple allegation that a foreign instrument, depending on foreign law, is null and void, is too vague. Brunswick (Duke) v. Hanover (King), 2 H. L. Cas. 1. Affirming 6 Beav. 1; 13 L. J., Ch. 107; 8 Jur. 253.

VIII. TORTS.

Assault committed Abroad.]—An action will lie in respect of an assault or other tort committed by an English subject on another English subject beyond this realm, provided that the foreign law prevailing on the spot gives compensation or damages for the offence to the party injured. Seymour (Lord) v. Scott, 1 H. & C. 219; 1 N. R. 129; 32 L. J., Ex. 61; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 522; 8 L. T. 511; 11 W. R. 169—Ex. Ch.

Trespass to Foreign Lands.]—An action for damages for trespass to land situate in a foreign country, founded on a disputed claim of title to such land, cannot be tried in the courts of this country. British South African Co. v. Companhia de Moçambique, 63 L. J., Q. B. 70; [1893] A. C. 602; 6 R. 1; 69 L. T. 604—H. L. (E.)

Order XXXVI. r. 1 (R. S. C., 1883), which abolished local venues, is a rule of procedure only, and does not affect the jurisdiction of the courts of this country. The Judicature Acts and Rules deal with procedure only, and do not confer any new right of action. Ib.

Collision between British and Foreign Vessel on High Seas.]—In an action in personam brought by the owners of a British vessel against the owners of a Spanish vessel to recover damages caused to the British vessel by collision with the Spanish vessel on the high seas, the defendants pleaded that they were Spanish subjects, and that if there was any negligence on the part of those in charge of the Spanish vessel it was negligence for which the master and crew alone, and not the defendants, were liable according to the law of Spain:—Held, bad on demurrer. The Leon, 50 L. J., P. 59; 6 P. D. 148; 44 L. T. 613; 29 W. R. 916; 4 Asp. M. C. 404.

The owners of a foreign ship claimed damages for a collision between their ship and an English ship in Belgian waters. The owners of the English ship pleaded that, by the Belgian laws, pilotage was compulsory in the place where the collision occurred. The owners of the foreign ship replied that, according to the Belgian law, the owners of the English ship remained liable notwithstanding that the pilotage was compulsory:—Held, that the claim, being founded on a tort committed in the territory of a foreign state, the party claiming reparation in a British court was not entitled to the benefit of the foreign law against the admitted provisions of the statute law of England, and the practice of the Court of Admiralty in respect of compulsory pilotage, by which no such liability as provided by the Belgian law existed, as it is contrary to principle and authority to hold that an English court will enforce a foreign municipal law, and give a remedy in the shape of damages, in respect of an act which, according to its own principles, imposes no liability on the person from whom the damages are claimed. The Halley, 7 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 263; 37 L. J., Adm. 33; L. R. 2 P. C. 193; 18 L. T. 879; 16 W. R. 998.

Libel.]—A foreigner, resident abroad, may maintain an action in England for a libel published concerning him here. Pisani v. Lawson, 6 Bing. (N.C.) 90; 8 Scott, 180; 8 D. P. C. 57; 9 L. J., C. P. 12; 3 Jur. 1153.

Liability for Negligence.]—Declaration for an injury done to a ship of the plaintiffs on the high seas, by her being run foul of by a ship of the defendant, under the care, direction, and management of his mariners and servants. Plea, that the ship secondly mentioned ran foul of the plaintiff's ship on a part of the high seas, situate between the kingdoms of England and France, and out of the British dominions; that at the time the defendant was a subject of the king of the French, and was a holder and proprietor of shares in, and acting director of, a society or company established in France by royal ordinance, according to the laws of that kingdom; and that, at the time of the collision, the company, being subjects of the king of the French, were the owners of the ship, and by their mariners and servants were navigating the same as subjects of the king of the French for objects for which the company was established, and upon that part of the high seas before mentioned; and the company by their mariners and servants committed the grievances in the declaration; and that the defendant never was possessed of or interested in the ship, otherwise than as such holder and proprietor of shares; that by the law of France the defendant was not responsible for or liable to be sued or impleaded individually, or in his own name or person, in respect of the causes of action in the declaration mentioned; but the company alone by their style or title, or the master or person in command of the ship for the time being, was responsible for, and liable to be sued and impleaded for, the causes of action; and that the defendant never was master or in command of the ship:—Held, that, if the true construction of this plea was, that, by the law of France, the defendant was not liable, inasmuch as a body established by the French law, and analogous to an English corporation, were the proprietors of the ship, and alone liable for the acts of the master, it disclosed a good defence to the action; but that, if the plea only meant that in the French courts the mode of proceeding would be to sue the defendant jointly with the other shareholders of the company under the name of their association, it was bad, it being no objection to a suit in this country, that it would have been instituted in a different form in the country where the cause of action arose. General Steam Navigation Co. v. Guillon, 11 M. & W. 877; 13 L. J., Ex. 168.

—— English Ships injuring Foreign Piers.]—An English company, possessed of a pier in a port in Spain, instituted a cause of damage against an English ship for negligently injuring the pier. The shipowners pleaded that by the law of Spain the masters and mariners of a ship, and not the owners, were liable for negligent navigation:—Held, that the case was governed by the law of Spain, and that that part of their answer ought not to be struck out. The M. Moxham, 46 L. J., P. 17; 1 P. D. 107; 34 L. T. 559; 24 W. R. 650—C. A.

Trespass to and Conversion of Chattels—Process of Foreign Court.]—The courts of this country will not entertain an action for trespass to and conversion of a ship, seized under a process of attachment in a foreign court, and for malicious process for a false claim, until after the plaintiff has obtained a favourable termination of the proceedings in the foreign court; the presumption being omnia rite esse acta. Taylor v. Ford, 29 L. T. 392; 22 W. R. 47.

IX. JURISDICTION OF ENGLISH COURTS.

a. In General.

Over Foreign Sovereigns.]—See col. 179, ante.

Action in England.]—In order that an action may lie between parties in this country in respect of an act committed in a foreign country, the act must be one which if committed in this country would be actionable, and one which is not innocent according to the law of the country where it was committed; but it is not necessary that it should be the subject of civil proceedings in that country. The rule laid down in Phillips v. Eyre (10 B. & S. 1004; 40 L. J., Q. B. 28; L. R. 6 Q. B. 1) and The M. Moxham (46 L. J., P. 17; 1 P. D. 107; 24 L. T. 559; 24 W. R. 650) applied. Machado v. Fontes, 66 L. J., Q. B. 542; [1897] 2 Q. B. 231; 76 L. T. 588; 45 W. R. 565—C. A.

In considering what power and jurisdiction is conceded to Great Britain within the territories of a foreign state, it must be borne in mind that in transactions, whether political or mercantile, a difference subsists between Oriental and Christian states. Papayanni v. Russian Steam Navigation and Trading Co. or The Laconia, 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 162; 33 L. J., Adm. 11; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1160; 3 N. R. 219; 9 L. T. 37; 12 W. R. 90.

No state can claim jurisdiction as a matter of right within the territorial limits of another independent state. Ib.

Between two Christian states all claim to jurisdiction of any kind, or exemption from jurisdiction, must be founded on treaty, or engagements of similar validity; but the same strict forms would not be required in the intercourse between a Christian and an Oriental nation. Ib.

The Ottoman government has acquiesced in allowing to the British government, within the Ottoman dominions, jurisdiction between British subjects and the subjects of other Christian states. Ib.

Concurrent Jurisdiction.]—The plaintiff and defendant companies were proprietors of lines of railway in a foreign state and of offices in this country. The plaintiffs sued for the use and occupation of their station in the foreign state by the defendants, who stated in defence that the two companies were both concessionnaires of the foreign state; that the station was built upon land granted by that state; and that by the express provisions of the laws of that state powers of adjusting all rights arising out of the respective claims of the two companies were vested in the government of that state:—Held, that there was nothing in these allegations of the defendants to oust the jurisdiction of the courts of this country. Buenos Ayres Ry. v. Great Northern Ry. of Buenos Ayres, 46 L. J., Q. B. 224; 2 Q. B. D. 210; 36 L. T. 148; 25 W. R. 367.

Action in England—Similar Action pending Abroad.]—The court will not stay proceedings in an action commenced in this country against a foreigner by a plaintiff who has already commenced an action against him, for the same cause of action, in a court of his own country, on the ground of the pendency of the proceedings abroad. Cox v. Mitchell, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 55; 29 L. J., C. P. 33; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 225; 1 L. T. 8; 8 W. R. 45. S. P., Dillon (Lord) v. Alvarez, 4 Ves. 357; 4 R. R. 206.

A suit pending in England is not a good plea in bar to a subsequent suit in the plantations for the same matter. Bayley v. Edwards, 3 Swanst. 703; 19 R. R. 289—P. C.

A plea of a suit pending in a foreign or colonial court between the same parties, cannot be pleaded in bar to relief sought in a suit in chancery in England between the same parties relative to the same matters. Ostell v. Lepage, 5 De G. & Sm. 95; 21 L. J., Ch. 501; 16 Jur. 404; 1 W. R. 18. S. C. on appeal, 2 De G. M. & G. 892.

In an action of collision a judgment of a foreign court given in a cause between the same parties cannot be pleaded as an estoppel unless such judgment was obtained prior to the institution of the action in this country; there being no res judicata, but lis alibi pendens, when the plaintiff instituted his action here, he can claim to proceed to judgment in this country if he chooses. The Delta, The Erminia Foscolo, 45 L. J., P. 111; 1 P. D. 393; 35 L. T. 376; 25 W. R. 46.

—— Restraining Suit in Foreign Court.]—A., an Englishwoman by birth, intermarried with B., a natural-born Italian subject, and domiciled in Italy. In 1865, she being then domiciled in England, and some years prior to her marriage, made a will, and thereof appointed the plaintiff (her brother) executor. After her death, which happened in Italy in 1873, a contest arose between her executor and her husband (the defendant) as to the validity of the will. An agreement of compromise was come to between them, and in pursuance of it the plaintiff obtained probate of the will in common form. In 1878, the defendant produced an alleged holographic will of his deceased wife, which bore date December, 1872, and revoked the earlier will. Thereupon the plaintiff commenced a suit in this court, claiming probate in solemn form of the will of 1865. The defendant appeared under protest, but filed a defence and counter-claim, setting up the alleged will of 1872; and he at the same time commenced a suit for a decree affirming its validity in the Civil and Correctional Tribunal of Naples. In these circumstances the court refused to grant an injunction restraining the defendant from proceeding with the Italian suit. Dawkins v. Simonetti, 50 L. J., P. 30; 44 L. T. 266; 29 W. R. 228—C. A.

B., resident in San Francisco, brought an action against C. in England alleging that C. had been B.'s agent to purchase for him goods in England, that B. had recently discovered that C. had in the accounts rendered charged more for the goods than he had paid for them, and asking for an account against C. as agent. C. by his statement of defence denied agency, alleged that he had as principal sold the goods to B., insisted on the accounts rendered as settled accounts, and alleged that a large balance was due. C. then commenced an action in San Francisco against B. to recover the amount which he so alleged to be due. B. moved to restrain this action:—Held, that the action ought not to be restrained, for that there was no primâ facie inference that the bringing the action abroad, during the pendency of an action in England in which the matters in dispute could be determined, was vexatious, since the course of procedure in San Francisco might be such as to give advantages to C. of which he was entitled to avail himself, and that the burden lay on B. to prove that C.'s action was vexatious, which he had failed to do. Hyman v. Helm, 24 Ch. D. 531; 49 L. T. 376; 32 W. R. 258—C. A.

And see further, PRACTICE (Staying Proceedings).

—— Criminal Proceeding preceding Civil Remedy.]—If by the laws of a foreign state there is a civil remedy for a wrong done there, the fact that by those laws criminal proceedings must precede the civil remedy there, constitutes no bar or defence to an action in this country. Scott v. Seymour (Lord), 31 L. J., Ex. 457; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 568; 6 L. T. 607; 10 W. R. 739. Affirmed, on appeal, 1 H. & C. 219; 1 N. R. 129; 32 L. J., Ex. 61; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 522; 8 L. T. 511; 11 W. R. 169—Ex. Ch.

Extra-territorial Criminal Jurisdiction.]—The ruler of an independent state in India granted to the British government civil and criminal jurisdiction along a line of railway running through the territories:—Held, that this jurisdiction only extended to offences committed on the railway and to matters connected with the administration of the railway, and did not amount to a cession of territory, or justify the arrest of a person on the railway for an offence committed in another part of India in no way connected with it. Sayad Muhammad Yusuf-ud-Din v. Reg., 76 L. T. 813—P. C.

All crime is local. The jurisdiction over crime belongs to the country where the crime is committed, and, except over her own subjects, her Majesty and the imperial legislature have no power whatever. Macleod v. Att.-Gen. for New South Wales, 60 L. J., P. C. 55; [1891] A. C. 455; 65 L. T. 321; 17 Cox, C. C. 341—P. C.

What Law applicable.] — The rule as to property and civil contracts, that an act, unless intended to take effect elsewhere, shall, as regards its effects and incidents, if a conflict of law arises between the lex loci and the lex fori, be governed by the former, applies also to the case of an act causing a personal injury. If such an act is either enjoined or rendered lawful by the law of the country where it is done, an action cannot be maintained here in respect of it. Phillips v. Eyre, 10 B. & S. 1004; 40 L. J., Q. B. 28; L. R. 6 Q. B. 1; 22 L. T. 869—Ex. Ch.

If, in any case, the rights of foreigners out of their own country are governed by their own laws, it is not by force of those laws themselves, but by the law of the country in which they may be adopting those laws as part of their own laws for the purpose of regulating such rights. Caldwell v. Van Vlissengen, 9 Hare, 425; 21 L. J., Ch. 97; 16 Jur. 115.

When a foreign rule is repugnant to the fundamental principles of the lex fori, or when it is contrary to religion or sound morality, the doctrine of comity ought not to be followed. Fenton v. Livingstone, 3 Macq. H. L. 497; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1183; 7 W. R. 671.

If the adoption of the law of the domicil would occasion a prejudice to the rights of other states and their citizens, or if it would contravene a prohibitory enactment, the comity of nations would not require its adoption. Ib.

Primâ facie, and unless the contrary be expressed or be implied from the absolute necessity of the case, every legislature must be presumed to have intended by its enactments to regulate the rights which should subsist between its own subjects, and not to affect the rights of foreigners, whether by way of restricting or augmenting their natural rights. Cope v. Doherty, 2 De G. & J. 614; 27 L. J., Ch. 600; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 699; 6 W. R. 695.

—— Penal Laws.]—Penalties imposed by a foreign law must be enforced in the courts of that country, and not in England. The Louis, 2 Dod. 255.

Ousting Jurisdiction.]—English courts will give effect to a stipulation in a contract, entered into in a foreign country between foreigners, not to institute proceedings in any other courts than those of the country of the contracting parties, and refuse to entertain an action on matters arising out of the contract. Gienar v. Meyer, 2 H. Bl. 603; 3 R. R. 520. S. P., Johnson v. Machielsne, 3 Camp. 44; 13 R. R. 745.

See further, ARBITRATION.

Plea to the Jurisdiction.]—Claim, stating that the plaintiffs and defendants were each of them limited companies, with registered offices in London; that the action was brought for rent of a railway station in Buenos Ayres (into possession of which the defendants were put by the plaintiffs), and for part of the costs of constructing lines of railway and approaches to the station. Defence, that the plaintiff and defendant companies were domiciled in the Argentine Republic, and carried on business there; that the premises in question were constructed on land which was the property of the republic, and that the plaintiffs and defendants were joint concessionnaires under the republic of certain easements appurtenant thereto. That the construction of the premises was directed by the government of the republic, and was for the benefit and convenience of the citizens of Buenos Ayres, and that by the laws of the republic powers of adjusting all rights arising out of the construction, and applicable to the claim of the plaintiffs, were vested in the government, and that the contract (if any) as to the cost of the construction was made at Buenos Ayres, and was subject to the law of the place of contract, and that the republic had assumed jurisdiction over the plaintiffs' claim:—Held, that the defence was bad, as both parties to the action were within the jurisdiction of the English courts, and the facts alleged did not shew that the Argentine Republic had exclusive jurisdiction over the claim. Buenos Ayres and Ensenada Port Ry. v. Great Northern Ry. of Buenos Ayres, 46 L. J., Q. B. 224; 2 Q. B. D. 210; 36 L. T. 148; 25 W. R. 367.

b. OF COURT OF CHANCERY.

In General.]—The Court of Chancery will not entertain a suit in respect of a foreign contract, in which the parties are foreign subjects and the subject-matter is in a foreign country, although the plaintiff's claim is in respect of moneys in the possession of a second defendant as stakeholder, and who is within the jurisdiction. Matthaei v. Galitzin, 43 L. J., Ch. 536; L. R. 18 Eq. 340; 30 L. T. 455; 22 W. R. 700.

Bill filed by a foreigner against another foreigner, and against an English company formed for working a Russian mine, to restrain the English company from paying to a foreigner part of the profits of the mine which were claimed by the plaintiff, by way of commission, and also for an account of profits against the company. Demurrer allowed. Ib.

The courts in England will not, unless there is equity to justify them in so doing, interfere to restrain, by injunction, proceedings taken in a foreign court. Fletcher v. Rodgers, 27 W. R. 97—C. A.

Mere hardship or inconvenience is not sufficient to justify such interference. Ib.

If a plaintiff domiciled in this country sues a British subject here in respect of, or to be released from, a money demand by the defendant, and the defendant appears to the suit, the court will entertain it, although defendant may be actually residing abroad, and the whole subject-matter of the suit, ultra the mere personal claim of the plaintiff, may be in a foreign country and out of the jurisdiction of the court. Drummond v. Drummond, 37 L. J., Ch. 811; 18 L. T. 896; 17 W. R. 6.

Under circumstances, injunction granted to stay proceedings in Court of Session in Scotland. Bushby v. Munday, 5 Madd. 297; 21 R. R. 294.

Administration Action.] — An action was brought in England by an infant beneficiary to administer the estate of a testator domiciled in Scotland. The bulk of the estate was in Scotland, and four out of six trustees and executors were domiciled there. The will was proved both in Scotland and England. The trustees all appeared to the writ, without protest, and at their suggestion an inquiry was directed whether the action was for the plaintiff's benefit, which resulted in a decision that it was. At the trial (the English assets having been meanwhile transferred to Scotland) the trustees objected to the jurisdiction of the court. No proceedings had been taken to administer the estate in the Scotch court:—Held, first, that the court had jurisdiction to order an administration; secondly, that, under the circumstances of the case, it had no discretion in the matter, but was bound to make the order, though the action might be stayed before or after decree if it appeared that proceedings were pending in a Scotch court equally beneficial to the plaintiff. Dicta of Lord Westbury in Enohin v. Wylie (10 H. L. Cas. 1) disapproved. Ewing v. Orr-Ewing, 53 L. J., Ch. 435; 9 App. Cas. 34; 50 L. T. 401; 32 W. R. 573—H. L. (E.)

In an action commenced in Scotland by the residuary legatees against the trustees, after the decision in the above case in the Court of Appeal, but before the hearing in the House of Lords, claiming, inter alia, declarator that the trustees were bound to administer the estate in Scotland, subject to the Scotch law, and under the authority and jurisdiction of the Scotch courts alone; the Court of Session granted an interlocutor finding in the terms of the declaratory conclusions of the summons, and interdicted the trustees from accounting to anyone otherwise than to the judicial factor appointed by the court:—Held, on appeal to the House of Lords, that the decerniture in terms of the declaratory conclusions of the summons, which in effect affirms the exclusive competency of the Scottish jurisdiction, was not supported by statute or authority; and, therefore, that part of the principal interlocutor, and that part of the interdict relating to accounting, must be reversed. Ewing v. Orr-Ewing, 10 App. Cas. 453; 53 L. T. 826—H. L. (Sc.)

A testator of English birth and domicil died possessed of real and personal estate in Holland. A decree for the administration of his real and personal estate was made in the Court of Chancery, but subsequently proceedings were taken in the Dutch courts by the testator's daughter, alleging that his domicil was in reality in Holland, and seeking distribution of the estate, movable and immovable, as upon an intestacy, according to the laws of that country. Upon a bill filed to restrain these proceedings:—Held, that, in the absence of proof that the Dutch suit could proceed as to the real estate alone without affecting the personal estate, an interlocutory injunction had been properly awarded by Stuart, V.-C.; but Knight Bruce, L.J., was of opinion that the injunction ought to be confined to proceedings as to the personal estate. Hope v. Carnegie, L. R. 1 Ch. 320; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 284; 14 L. T. 117; 14 W. R. 489.

A testator died, domiciled in Jersey, leaving a widow and two infant children. By his will he gave the whole of his personal property, subject to a certain annuity to his wife, to his children. He died possessed of 13,000*l.* of English consols, and also of certain property in Jersey. The principal part of the latter consisted of a share in the property of a certain partnership, which had since his death become insolvent. His widow and two others were his executrix and executors. A gentleman resident in Jersey was shortly after the testator's death appointed "tuteur" of the infant children in accordance with the law of Jersey. The widow married again, and with the two children came to reside in England. An action was commenced in the Chancery Division by the infant children for administration of the testator's real and personal estate, and for the appointment of guardians. Leave was given for the service of the writ out of the jurisdiction on the "tuteur" and executors in Jersey; but after service, and before appearance, they moved to discharge the order, on the ground that the proceedings were wrongly instituted in this country:—Held, that, inasmuch as the plaintiffs were resident in England, and the bulk of the property was in England, there was no reason why the action should not be brought there. Lane, In re, Lane v. Robin, 55 L. T. 149.

Upon a bill filed in the Court of Chancery in England by creditors, decree was made to execute the trust of a deed, by which lands in Ireland were vested in trustees for the payment of debts. The debtor, a peer of the realm, did not answer the bill, or appear at the hearing of the original suit, but filed an answer to a supplemental suit, and by cross bill impeached the debts as fraudulent, and opposed the proceedings by counsel in various stages of the supplemental suits; by the decree in these suits an injunction and a receiver was appointed. But it being found impracticable to execute the decree, a bill was filed in the Court of Chancery in Ireland to carry the former decree into execution:—Held, reversing the judgment of the court below, that, under the circumstances, the court had jurisdiction, and the propriety of the English decree might be examined in the suit in Ireland; but that if part of it was sustainable, it might so far be executed by aid of the Irish court, although other parts might be erroneous. Houldditch v. Donegal (Marquis), 8 Bli. (N.S.) 301; 2 Cl. & F. 470—H. L. (Ir.)

A plaintiff, in England, filed a bill for an account against the executors of a deceased partner, some of whom were in Jamaica, but acting in concert with the others, who were in England; the partnership property being in Jamaica:—Held, upon a plea to the jurisdiction by the executors resident in Jamaica, that the suit was properly instituted in this country. Hendrick v. Wood, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 117.

B., who was held by the Scotch courts to have been a domiciled Scotchman, died in England, and his executor and universal legatee obtained probate in Scotland. He also sought to obtain probate in England, but the will was disputed by B.'s next of kin. There was an agreement to compromise the matter, but it eventually failed, and the executor's application to procure the seal of the English Probate Court was unsuccessful. The next of kin filed a bill for administration in England and Scotland, and for a receiver, and obtained an order to serve the executor with a copy of the bill, on which was indorsed an order for a receiver, and injunction in Scotland. On a motion by the executor to discharge this order on the ground that the jurisdiction was in England:—Held, that the executors ought not to have been so served; that the order for service as to the receiver and injunction must be discharged, but not as to service of a copy of the bill, the next of kin having consented at the request of the executor to enable him to get the seal affixed in the English Probate Court. Hawarden (Viscountess) v. Dunlop, 2 Dr. & Sm. 155; 7 L. T. 237; 10 W. R. 683.

Account.]—A., an Englishman domiciled in France, entered into a contract in France with B., a Frenchman, for carrying out jointly certain mercantile undertakings. In the course of the transactions large sums of money came into the hands of C. & D., foreign merchants in business in London. A. filed a bill against B., C. & D., alleging that, under the contract with B., he was entitled to participate in the profits of the undertaking, and praying for an account from C. & D. of the money in their hands, and that they might be restrained from handing it over to B. The defendants moved to stay all further proceedings in the suit pending certain proceedings in the French courts instituted by A. against B., in which a construction would be put upon the French contract:—Held, that there being portions of the relief sought as to which the defendants were bound to answer, the motion, which was in the nature of a demurrer, could not be sustained, and must be refused with costs. Wilson v. Ferrand, L. R. 13 Eq. 362; 26 L. T. 387.

Demurrer to a bill for an account of waste committed in Ireland overruled. Kennedy v. Cassilis (Earl), 2 Swanst. 323.

Bill filed by a foreigner against another foreigner, and against an English company formed for working a Russian mine, to restrain the English company from paying to a foreigner part of the profits of the mine which were claimed by the plaintiff, by way of commission, and also for an account of profits against the company. Demurrer allowed. Matthaei v. Galitzin, 43 L. J., Ch. 536; L. R. 18 Eq. 340; 30 L. T. 455; 22 W. R. 700.

Election.]—A domiciled Scotchman by his will gave certain benefits to his wife, and she after his death filed a bill claiming her right by the law of Scotland to elect between such benefits and one-third of his movables, and her terce in his heritable estate, and praying that the value of the objects between which she had to elect should for the purpose of her election be ascertained by the court. The devisee of the Scotch real estate, who was also residuary legatee, and one of the executors filed a cross bill praying for a general administration of the personalty:—Held, that under the circumstances the court had jurisdiction to direct such inquiries as might be necessary to guide the wife in exercising her right of election, and as far as possible to give effect to it. Douglas v. Douglas, 41 L. J., Ch. 74; L. R. 12 Eq. 617; 25 L. T. 530; 20 W. R. 55.

Erroneous Foreign Judgment.]—A plaintiff, a domiciled colonial subject, against whom judgment had been recovered in the colonial court, took the benefit of the laws in force in the colony for the relief of insolvents. He subsequently desired to appeal to the Privy Council against the judgment, but his assignee refused to allow his name to be used for that purpose. The assignee having come over to this country, the plaintiff filed a bill against him, alleging that if the judgment was set aside, as it probably would be, there would be a large surplus coming to him, and praying that the assignee might be ordered to allow his name to be used for the purpose of an appeal, upon a proper indemnity being given. To this bill a demurrer was put in:—Held, that the colonial court was the proper jurisdiction, and as the plaintiff had not shewn that he was not without remedy there, the demurrer must be allowed. Smith v. Moffatt, 35 L. J., Ch. 219; L. R. 1 Eq. 397; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 22; 14 W. R. 242.

Fraud.]—An injunction to restrain the prosecution of a suit in Scotland to enforce a real security granted on a suggestion of fraud, afterwards dissolved, notwithstanding the remedy in cases of fraud might be more effectual than in the Court of Session, the question on the whole being likely to be more conveniently litigated and concluded there than here. Jones v. Geddes, 1 Ph. 724.

Partition.]—Demurrer to a bill for a partition of lands in Ireland allowed. Kennedy v. Cassilis (Earl), 2 Swanst. 323.

Partnership.]—A., a resident in England, and the sole member of a Liverpool firm, entered into a partnership with B. and C., residents in Hayti, in a business to be carried on at Hayti. The Liverpool firm acted as the agents of the Haytian firm. B. was admitted as a partner in the Liverpool firm. C. died, and the winding-up of the Haytian firm was committed by agreement to A. and B. A. died, leaving B. sole survivor in each firm. B. and the Haytian legal representatives of C. engaged in cross suits in Hayti, in which certain settled accounts were established. The representatives of A., whose assets were all in England, was not a party to the Haytian suit:—Held, on a bill filed by the administrator of C. in England, that there was jurisdiction in the Court of Chancery to wind up the partnership in Hayti, and to take the accounts of that firm and of the agency of the Liverpool firm; and decree accordingly. Maunder v. Lloyd, 2 J. & H. 718; 1 N. R. 123; 11 W. R. 141.

Held, also, that the law of Hayti was to regulate the transactions of the Haytian firm. Ib.

The principles governing the jurisdiction in partnership cases are analogous to the rules of the civil law. Three circumstances must be found to exist, but any one of them will support the required jurisdiction; first, the domicil of the defendant in the suit must be within the territorial jurisdiction of the court; secondly, the subject of the suit must also be within it; and thirdly, the partnership contract must be entered into, or be to be performed within that jurisdiction. Cookney v. Anderson, 32 L. J., Ch. 305; 1 N. R. 77; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1220; 7 L. T. 491. Affirmed 32 L. J., Ch. 427; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 736; 8 L. T. 295; 11 W. R. 629; 2 N. R. 140—L. JJ.

Where, therefore, a plaintiff when residing here filed a bill against the defendants, who were all domiciled in Scotland, to obtain a decree for the administration of the trusts of a Scotch deed relating to a mining partnership in Scotland, so that no one of the requisites, neither the forum domicilii, nor the forum loci rei sitæ, nor the forum contractûs, existed, a demurrer to the bill for want of equity was allowed. The circumstance of the ordering of service on the defendants out of the jurisdiction, and of their not moving to discharge such order:—Held, not to affect their right to demur. Ib.

Two Portuguese subjects carried on business in partnership in one business at Lisbon. One of them carried on his own business at the same place, and the other carried on his own business in London. The Portuguese resident was also agent at Lisbon for the other in another business. The partnership was dissolved, and the Portuguese resident came on a visit to England, whereupon the other filed a bill for accounts, and obtained a writ of ne exeat regno against him. Upon a motion to discharge the writ:—Held, that the question of debt or no debt must be governed by the law of Portugal alone; and it not appearing with sufficient clearness that a debt existed, and the plaintiff having omitted to state that the debt, if any, would be endangered by the departure of the defendant, the writ was discharged. Vanzeller v. Vanzeller, 15 Jur. 115.

Patent.]—Foreigners in this country, as well as British subjects, are liable to actions for the injury done by their infringing upon the sole and exclusive right granted by the Crown to patentees of inventions, in conformity with the law and constitution of this country; and the powers of the court of equity, which are founded on the insufficiency of the legal remedy, must be enforced against them as well as against British subjects. Caldwell v. Van Vlissengen, 9 Hare, 415; 21 L. J., Ch. 97; 16 Jur. 115.

Trade Mark or Description.]—A foreign manufacturer has a remedy by suit, in this country, for an injunction and account of profits against a manufacturer here who has committed a fraud upon him by using his trade mark for the purpose of inducing the public to believe that the goods so marked are manufactured by the foreigner. Collins Co. v. Brown, 3 Kay & J. 423; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 929; 5 W. R. 676.

This relief is founded upon the personal injury caused to the foreigner by the defendant's fraud, and exists, although he resides and carries on his business in another country, and has no establishment here, and does not even sell his goods in this country. Ib.

Semble, a person on whom an injury is fraudulently committed may have a remedy in the courts of any country where the fraud occurs, and even although he is at the time an alien enemy. Ib.

An alien can in the courts of this country sue to restrain the fraudulent appropriation of his trade mark, although the goods on which such trade mark is affixed are not usually sold by him in this country. Collins Co. v. Reeves, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 865; 6 W. R. 717.

Copyright.]—See COPYRIGHT.

Preserving Property in Medio.]—Where courts of Scotland have power to preserve property pendente lite instituted there, this court has no jurisdiction to that end. Cruikshank v. Roharts, 6 Madd. 104.

A person holding by the warrant of her majesty the office of judicial assessor to the native princes, and being also chief justice of her majesty's dominions on the Gold Coast of Africa, took possession of the personal effects of a British subject who died intestate, domiciled at Cape Coast Town, in Africa, and claimed to be the official administrator of these assets by usage, in his capacity of judicial assessor, and as such to be entitled to 7½ per cent. commission upon them. He afterwards transmitted part of the assets to this country to be sold, and the proceeds carried to the account of the intestate's estate, and came to this country himself on leave of absence for a short time. The father of the intestate, being his sole next of kin, obtained letters of administration to him in England, and filed his bill against the judicial assessor for administration and for a receiver. And upon motion for a receiver in the suit:—Held, that the Court of Chancery had jurisdiction to sustain the application, as the assets and the judicial assessor were both in this country, whatever might be the nature of his authority; and that, there being the danger of his taking the assets again out of the jurisdiction, although he might be the proper representative of the intestate in Africa, a good case was made for the appointment of a receiver. Hervey v. Fitzpatrick, 1 Kay, 421; 2 Eq. R. 444; 23 L. J., Ch. 564; 2 W. R. 338, 365.

An inquiry as to the nature and extent of the jurisdiction exercised by her majesty at Cape Coast Town, in the administration of personal estate of persons dying there intestate, and the manner of exercising such jurisdiction, directed to the Colonial Office, under the provisions of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 94. Ib.

But a motion that the defendant might pay into court proceeds of assets in his own hands was refused. Ib.

A company of shipowners, on whose behalf the defendant, as their broker, had effected policies, had instituted proceedings in a competent court in Genoa against the defendant for an account, to which suit he had appeared, and, before final decree in the foreign court, he commenced actions in England against the insurers upon one of the policies which had resulted in a loss:—Held, that it was competent for the company to file a bill to restrain the action, and to have a receiver of the policy-moneys pending the foreign litigation. Transatlantic Co. v. Pietroni, Johns. 604; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 532. But see as to the first point, Bayley v. Edwards, 3 Swanst. 703; 19 R. R. 289. Venning v. Lloyd, 1 De G. F. & J. 193; 29 L. J., Ch. 152; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 81; 1 L. T. 277; 8 W. R. 117. Hyman v. Helm, 24 Ch. D. 531; 49 L. T. 376; 32 W. R. 258—C. A.

Stakeholder.]—A fund belonging to foreigners out of the jurisdiction was by arrangement among them sent by A., one of their number, to English agents for distribution among the persons entitled. A., having endeavoured to get back the fund and misapply it, one of the foreigners filed a bill to restrain the misapplication and for the administration of the fund. A plea to the jurisdiction by the English agents disallowed, although the fund was not so invested as to enable the court to order service on the defendants abroad. Central Railroad and Banking Co. of Georgia v. Mitchell, 2 H. & M. 452; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 258; 12 L. T. 73; 13 W. R. 428.

When a bill is filed against a stakeholder in this country, and against persons out of the jurisdiction, whom the plaintiff cannot serve, owing to the nature of the property, if the plaintiff uses his best endeavours to bring them in, by giving them notice of the proceedings, and they refuse to appear, the fund will be distributed in their absence. Ib.

The Court of Chancery will not entertain a suit with respect to a foreign contract, in which the parties are foreign subjects, and the subject-matter is in a foreign country, although the plaintiff's claim is in respect of moneys in the possession of a second defendant as stakeholder and who is within the jurisdiction. Matthaei v. Galitzin, 43 L. J., Ch. 536; L. R. 18 Eq. 340; 30 L. T. 455; 22 W. R. 700.

Actions relating to Lands Abroad.]—This court having jurisdiction in personam, upon an equity arising out of transactions concerning lands abroad, particularly if in the British dominions, a purchase of an estate in the West Indies by a creditor under his own execution was upon the circumstances held only a security for the debt, the expenses of the proceedings and incumbrances paid by him, with interest and subject thereto a reconveyance was decreed. Cranstown (Lord) v. Johnston, 3 Ves. 170; 3 R. R. 80.

Specific Performance.]—The court will specifically enforce against a foreigner a contract of sale made abroad, if the subject-matter of the contract is within its jurisdiction. Hart v. Herwig, 42 L. J., Ch. 457; L. R. 8 Ch. 860; 29 L. T. 47; 21 W. R. 663.

Therefore, when a contract was made abroad for the sale of a foreign vessel to be delivered in this country, the court granted an interim injunction to restrain the removal of the ship from an English port, allowing substituted service of the notice of motion on the captain. Ib.

—— Relating to Land Abroad.]—A contract between domiciled Englishmen relating to immovable property in a foreign country is governed by English law, and is therefore cognisable by the courts of this country, although it has been adjudicated upon by the courts of the country in which the estate is situate. Cood v. Cood, 33 Beav. 314; 3 N. R. 275; 33 L. J., Ch. 273; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1335.

A. and B. were entitled to real estate in Chile. A., who was residing there, wrote to B. in this country, offering to purchase his interest in the property. B. replied in terms which would warrant A. in concluding that he had accepted the offer. Nothing further was done on either side during a period of thirteen years to ratify or annul the contract:—Held, that B. was barred by lapse of time from disputing the existence of the contract. Ib.

—— Against Purchaser with Notice.]—Although a purchaser to whom land out of the jurisdiction of the court has been agreed to be sold by a person within the jurisdiction, may sue him for a specific performance of the agreement, or may possibly enforce a lien for money paid by the plaintiff on account of the price, he cannot sue here a third person to whom the vendor has afterwards sold the property, although such third person had notice of the former contract, there being no privity of contract before the two purchasers. Norris v. Chambres, 3 De G. F. & J. 583; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 689; 9 W. R. 794.

Nor will the court interfere if the matter is the subject of litigation in a foreign court which has the means of deciding upon and enforcing the rights of the parties. Ib.

—— Delivery of Title Deeds.]—A contract was entered into at Boulogne, where the plaintiff was resident, between him and the defendant, who was resident in Ireland, for the sale of land in Ireland. A receiver had been appointed by the Irish Court of Chancery. A bill was filed in this country asking that certain deeds relating to the property might be ordered to be given up. A plea by the defendant that the court had no jurisdiction was allowed. Blake v. Blake, 18 W. R. 944.

Trusts.]—An English lady married in England a domiciled Scotchman and a settlement in the English form was executed. The settled property was wholly in England, and the trustees resided in England. The marriage was subsequently dissolved for the wife's adultery, by the Scotch court. The effect of such a dissolution, according to Scotch law, is that the person against whom the decree is made is treated as dead for the purposes of the marriage settlement, and the question arose whether Scotch or English law was applicable. The husband brought an action in Scotland, in which the trustees were nominal plaintiffs, for the construction of the settlement; another action was brought in England by the wife for the administration of the trusts of the settlement:—Held, on motion by the wife to stay the Scotch action, that, under the circumstances, it was more convenient that the questions should be decided in the English action; and that the husband and trustees must therefore be restrained from proceeding with the Scotch action. Hearn v. Glanville, 48 L. T. 356.

Restraining Proceedings in Foreign Courts.]—If the circumstances of a case are such as would make it the duty of a court of equity in this country to restrain a party from instituting proceedings in another court here, they will also warrant it in imposing on him a similar restraint with regard to proceedings in a foreign court. Carron Iron Co. v. Maclaren, 5 H. L. Cas. 416; 24 L. J., Ch. 620; 3 W. R. 597.

The fact of a foreigner having property in this country, enables a court of equity here to make effectual an injunction issued to him, but, especially in the case of a foreigner who seeks no assistance from the courts here, the issuing of such injunction ought clearly to be shewn to be required as conducive to justice. Ib.

When there is a plain equity in favour of an injunction, and the representatives of the real and personal property, who seek it, are in this, the court will grant it, and restrain proceedings in the courts of a foreign country. Ib.

In such a case the court will decide upon a consideration of all the circumstances and require parties here to take or direct such steps in a foreign court as the ends of justice require. Ib.

The particular provisions of the foreign law applicable to a transaction, proceedings as to which in a foreign court are thus restrained, must not be regarded. Ib.

An incumbrancer on immovable property situate in a foreign country, who has instituted legal proceedings in that country for the purpose of enforcing his rights, will not be restrained by injunction from prosecuting such proceedings, even though the mortgagor is a company in course of winding up, at all events if the party seeking to restrain him may appear before the foreign tribunal and assert his rights. Moor v. Anglo-Italian Bank, 10 Ch. D. 681; 40 L. T. 620; 27 W. R. 652.

Injunction to restrain the defendants from suing in Ireland upon a bill of exchange given by the plaintiff for a gambling debt under the circumstances continued. Jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery to stay the proceedings of parties in foreign courts. Portarlington (Lord) v. Soulby, 3 Myl. & K. 104; 4 L. J., Ch. 241.

If the proceedings in a foreign court will enable this court more satisfactorily to dispose of the question between the parties, this court will permit such proceedings to go on to an adjudication; but it will not give such permission, where the adjudication of the foreign court between the parties there, whatever it may be, will not preclude the question which the plaintiffs in this court may think proper to raise against the plaintiffs in the proceedings in the foreign court. Bunbury v. Bunbury, 1 Beav. 318; 8 L. J., Ch. 297; 3 Jur. 644.

Where the title of a party does not turn on the law of a foreign country in the first instance, though it may ultimately, but on a preliminary question, which this court is not only as competent as the foreign court to decide upon, and, according to the position of the parties, much more competent, inasmuch as this court has all the parties before it, this court will not allow the proceedings in the foreign court to go on, involving the same question, with the chance of the two courts arriving at opposite conclusions. Ib.

The courts in England will not, unless there is equity to justify them in so doing, interfere to restrain by injunction proceedings taken in a foreign court. Mere hardship or inconvenience is not sufficient to justify such interference. Sect. 25, sub-s. 8, of the Judicature Act, 1873, does not alter the former practice as to injunctions, but is only intended to do away with certain technical objections. Fletcher v. Rodgers, 27 W. R. 97—C. A.

An injunction was granted to restrain the plaintiff from prosecuting a suit, not brought to a hearing in Ireland, the subject-matter of that suit being the same as that of a suit instituted in the Court of Chancery, and in which that court had pronounced a decree refusing the relief sought by the plaintiff. Booth v. Leycester, 1 Keen, 579.

Injunction to restrain proceedings in the court of session in Scotland, dissolved under the circumstances. Kennedy v. Cassillis (Earl), 2 Swanst. 313.

Whether property is to be administered according to the English or Scottish notions of equity, is dependent on the national character of the parties and the property to be affected by the decree. Ib.

The Court of Session is a court of law and of equity. Ib.

The Court of Chancery in England has no power to restrain an Irish creditor for proceeding to recover his claim against the estate of an intestate deceased debtor, domiciled and leaving property in Ireland. An Irish creditor cannot be compelled to prove his claim in England, or to forego his rights to recover in Ireland, he being in no privity to the English suit. Browne v. Roberts, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 540; 19 W. R. 115—Ir. Ch. App.

—— Where Remedies in English and Foreign Court are not identical.]—The Court of Chancery will interfere by injunction to restrain a plaintiff from prosecuting two distinct suits in different courts for the same object, either in this or a foreign country. But a plaintiff may carry on proceedings in one court to establish a demand, and in another court to obtain security, which the former court is unable to give him, for what should be found due to him. Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 4 Myl. & Cr. 855; 9 L. J., Ch. 205; 4 Jur. 661. Affirming 2 Beav. 208; 4 Jur. 66.

Plaintiffs had obtained a decree for an account in the Court of Chancery in England, against defendants, some of whom resided in Scotland, and had estates there. The plaintiffs then instituted proceedings in the Court of Session in Scotland, for the same purposes as the English suit, and also to obtain a lien on the Scotch estates of the defendants. The Court of Chancery granted an injunction, on the application of the defendants, to restrain the plaintiffs from proceeding with the suits in the Court of Session, except for the purpose of procuring security for what might be found due to them. Ib.

There is no primâ facie inference that the bringing an action abroad, during the pendency of an action in England in which the matters in dispute can be determined, is vexatious, since the course of procedure in the foreign forum may be such as to give to the party invoking the assistance of the foreign forum, advantages of which he is entitled to avail himself, and the burden lies on the party disputing the right to bring the foreign action to prove that it is vexatious. Hyman v. Helm, 24 Ch. D. 531; 49 L. T. 376; 32 W. R. 258—C. A.

An injunction granted on terms, to restrain proceedings instituted in Demerara to recover real estate there, and an order made for a consignee and manager of the estate and produce; it appearing to the court that there were many other questions between the parties connected with the estate, which could be more conveniently determined together in this country. Bunbury v. Bunbury, 1 Beav. 318; 8 L. J., Ch. 297; 3 Jur. 664.

Before this court interposes upon an interlocutory application to stay proceedings in a suit by reason of a decree or judgment in a foreign country, it must be satisfied that the foreign decree or judgment does justice and covers the whole subject of the suit. Ostell v. Le Page, 2 De G. M. & G. 892. Reversing 5 De G. & Sm. 95; 21 L. J., Ch. 501; 16 Jur. 1134; 1 W. R. 18.

A motion to stay proceedings pending the determination of proceedings in French courts refused, thereby portions of the relief sought as to which the defendant was bound to answer. Wilson v. Ferrand, L. R. 13 Eq. 362; 26 L. T. 387.

—— Before Decree for Administration.]—A testator domiciled in England gave his real and personal property, situate in England and Scotland, to be divided between two of his sons, and appointed his three sons executors. The will was proved in England by two of the sons. At the death of the testator the other son, one of the residuary legatees, was indebted to an insurance company carrying on business in Scotland and England, who obtained judgment in an action in Scotland against such son, and proceeded in Scotland against the executors to arrest the amount in their hands, to whom the indebted son was entitled. The court, upon the executors undertaking to obtain forthwith an administration decree in England, granted an injunction to restrain the proceedings in Scotland against the executors. Baillie v. Baillie, 37 L. J., Ch. 225; L. R. 5 Eq. 175; 17 L. T. 376; 16 W. R. 272.

—— After Decree for Administration.]—After a decree for administration of a testator's estate in England and Ireland, an incumbrancer upon the Irish estate having come in and proved his debt, restrained from proceeding in a creditors' suit instituted by him in the Court of Chancery in Ireland, receiving the costs up to the time of his having notice of the decree, and paying the costs of the application. Beauchamp v. Huntley (Marquis), Jac. 546; 23 R. R. 143.

The court will not interfere by injunction to restrain a foreign creditor resident abroad from suing for his debts in the courts of his own country, although a decree has been made here for the administration of the estate of the debtor, and the foreign creditor has come in under the decree, and filed evidence to prove his debt in the administration action. Boyse, In re, Crofton v. Crofton, 49 L. J., Ch. 689; 15 Ch. D. 591; 29 W. R. 169.

The court has no power to restrain an Irish creditor from proceeding to recover his claim against the estate of an intestate deceased debtor, domiciled and leaving property in Ireland. An Irish creditor cannot be compelled to prove his claim in England, and to forego his rights to recover in Ireland, he being in no privity with the English suit. Browne v. Roberts, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 540; 19 W. R. 115—Ir. Ch. App.

A British subject, entitled to real and personal estate, both in England and in the Netherlands, died domiciled in England, leaving a will by which he gave to trustees, upon certain trusts, all his property here and abroad; but as to his foreign property so far only as he could dispose of it according to the law of the country where it was situate. A decree was made in England for the administration of his estate. Subsequently, one of his children instituted proceedings in the Netherlands, for the administration of both his real and personal estate in that country. Stuart, V.-C., made an order restraining the prosecution of the pending proceedings in the Netherlands, and the taking any other proceedings there as to the personal estate. On appeal from this order:—Held, by Knight Bruce, L.J., that the order ought not to have absolutely restrained the appellant from carrying on the pending proceedings in the Netherlands, but ought to have left her at liberty to carry them on as to the real estate—if she could do so without proceeding as to the personal estate; but by Turner, L.J., that the order ought not to be thus varied, the appellant not having shewn that the proceedings could be carried on as regarded the real estate alone. Hope v. Carnegie, L. R. 1 Ch. 320; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 284; 14 L. T. 117; 14 W. R. 489.

A company was chartered in Scotland for the manufacture of iron. Its manufactory and chief office of management were there, it had agents for the sale of the goods in different parts of Scotland and England, and it possessed real estate in both countries. A., a large shareholder in the company, and possessed of real and personal property in England and Scotland, was the company's agent for the sale of goods in London, and was domiciled here. When he died, he made a will in the English form, and appointed as his executors persons who were resident in both countries; his heir was one of these persons, and was also the person who succeeded him in the London agency of the country. Probate of the will was taken out in England, and such of the executors as thought fit to apply to the Scotch court were, according to the Scotch law, confirmed in the execution of the will. An administration suit was instituted in the Court of Chancery, and the usual order for a general account of the debts and assets made. After the date of this order, the company took proceedings in the Scotch courts against the real and personal estate of the testator in Scotland. Notice of an injunction, at the suit of the executors, was served on the company's agent in London and on the company's manager in Scotland; the company did not appear, and the injunction was issued. The company then moved to dissolve the injunction. No order was made:—Held, that the injunction could not be maintained. Carron Iron Co. v. Maclaren, 5 H. L. Cas. 416; 24 L. J., Ch. 620; 3 W. R. 597. And see the further litigation between the same parties, nom. Maclaren v. Stainton, Maclaren or Stainton v. Carron Co., 21 Beav. 152; 26 L. J., Ch. 332; 25 L. J., Ch. 577; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 49.

A decree was made in an administration suit against executors, which directed an account of the testator's debts, and an inquiry as to incumbrances affecting the real estate. The usual advertisements for creditors were published. P. thereupon claimed specific performance of an agreement by the testator for a lease to him of lands in Ireland. The executors did not dispute the agreement. P. commenced proceedings against the executors and trustees in Ireland. Upon motion by the executors, an injunction was granted restraining him from prosecuting the suit in Ireland. Eustace v. Lloyd, 35 L. T. 900; 25 W. R. 211.

—— Creditors' Trust Deed.]—Trustees for creditors, after decree for execution of trusts, restrained from proceeding in a suit in Court of Chancery in Ireland having same objects. Harrison v. Gurney, 2 Jac. & Walk. 563; 22 R. R. 211.

—— Bankruptcy.]—The Court of Chancery has jurisdiction to grant an injunction, at the suit of the asignees of a bankrupt, to restrain the obligee under a heritable bond, executed by the bankrupt before his bankruptcy, from proceeding in the Court of Session in Scotland, to obtain payment of his debt out of a real estate in Scotland belonging to the bankrupt at the date of the bond, and thereby charged with the debt; but it will not exercise that jurisdiction, if the circumstances of the case render its interference unadvisable, as if the question between the parties might, upon the whole, be more conveniently litigated, and with a more conclusive result there than here. Jones v. Geddes, 1 Ph. 724; 14 Sim. 606.

Where a debtor became bankrupt in England, having real estate in Scotland:—Held, that this state of circumstances gave no jurisdiction to the Court of Chancery to restrain a creditor who had not proved under the bankruptcy from proceeding in an action against the assignees in Scotland, for the purpose of recovering out of the real estate there an amount equal to the dividend which would have been payable upon the debt. The grounds on which the Court of Chancery restrains creditors from proceeding against an executor after a decree for administration do not exist in such a case. Pennell v. Roy, 3 De G. M. & G. 126; 22 L. J., Ch. 409; 17 Jur. 247; 1 W. R. 237.

—— Foreclosure Action after Action for Redemption.]—Injunction to stay proceedings on bill to foreclose in foreign court, redemption being in progress in Court of Chancery here, granted. Beckford v. Kemble, 1 Sim. & S. 7; 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 5; 24 R. R. 143.

Jurisdiction upon a Contract concerning an Estate in a Colony.]—But the question upon the construction of the contract, for a security by way of mortgage, having been before a court of competent jurisdiction in the colony, and a foreclosure and judicial sale directed, the allegations of fraud being merely general and denied, an injunction was refused. White v. Hall, 12 Ves. 321; 8 R. R. 324.

—— Action respecting Testamentary Disposition.]—A., an English woman by birth, intermarried with B., a natural-born Italian subject, and domiciled in Italy. In 1865, she being then domiciled in England, and some years prior to her marriage made a will, and appointed the plaintiff (her brother) executor thereof. After her death, which happened in Italy, in 1873, a contest arose between her executor and her husband (the defendant) as to the validity of the will. An agreement of compromise was come to between them, and in pursuance of it the plaintiff obtained probate of the will in common form. In 1878, the defendant produced an alleged holographic will of his deceased wife, which bore date December, 1872, and revoked the earlier will. Thereupon the plaintiff commenced a suit in this court, claiming probate in solemn form of the will of 1865. The defendant appeared under protest, but filed a defence and counterclaim, setting up the alleged will of 1872; and he at the same time commenced a suit for a decree affirming its validity in the Civil and Correctional Tribunal of Naples. In these circumstances, the court refused to grant an injunction restraining the defendant from proceeding with the Italian suit. Dowkins v. Simonetti, 50 L. J., P. 30; 44 L. T. 266; 29 W. R. 228—C. A.

—— On the Ground of Convenience.]—An English lady married in England a domiciled Scotchman, and a settlement in the English form was executed. The settled property was wholly in England, and the trustees resided in England. The marriage was subsequently dissolved, for the wife's adultery, by the Scotch court. The effect of such a dissolution, according to Scotch law, is that the person against whom the decree is made is treated as dead, for the purposes of the marriage settlement, and the question arose whether Scotch or English law was applicable. The husband brought an action in Scotland, in which the trustees were nominal plaintiffs, for the construction of the settlement; another action was brought in England by the wife for the administration of the trusts of the settlement:—Held, on motion by the wife to stay the Scotch action, that, under the circumstances, it was more convenient that the questions should be decided in the English action; and that the husband and trustees must therefore be restrained from proceeding with the Scotch action. Hearn v. Glanville, 48 L. T. 356.

Other Matters.]—The plaintiff, W. A., a domiciled Scotchman, through his stockbroker in England, had various transactions for the feigned purchase and sale of shares and stock in railway and other companies; it was never intended that they should be completed by delivery of the stock, being merely time bargains, a gambling for differences between the prices at which the shares or stock were nominally purchased and sold. The brokers obtained from W. A. a deposit of certain shares as security for any balance which might be due to them, and also stipulated for a bond or judge's order, both in England and Scotland, as a further security. The defendants rendered an account, and then sold the deposited shares; but as the proceeds did not discharge the balance due to them, they brought an action against him in the sheriff's court in Scotland for the balance, and arrested his goods there, and a commission was issued for the purpose of taking evidence in England. W. A. then filed his bill in England, asking discovery, and for an account, and for an injunction to restrain the defendants from proceeding with the action in Scotland, at the same time offering to pay what was due, and submitting all his property in Scotland, subject to the arrestments, to the jurisdiction of this court. Upon a general demurrer to the bill:—Held, that the illegality of the transaction could not be then considered; that it was no ground for stopping the proceedings in a foreign court; that from the allegation that evidence of the transactions could not, by the law of Scotland, be received in the sheriff's court from the plaintiff and the defendants, there was ground to suppose that complete justice could not be done there. The demurrer was, therefore, overruled, and the costs were made costs in the cause. Ainslie v. Sims, 23 L. J., Ch. 161.

Injunction granted on interlocutory application in court of chancery in Ireland to restrain proceedings at law there, is not of itself sufficient ground to obtain injunction in this court to restrain proceeding on same matter in King's Bench here. But a final judgment might have been otherwise. Ball v. Storie, 1 Sim. & S. 210; 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 214; 24 R. R. 170.

R. contracted to let a house and moor in Scotland to the plaintiff for the months of August and September, at the rent of 800*l.*; and afterwards let it at the same rent to B. In August the plaintiff filed an original bill against R. and B. for specific performance of the contract, and obtained an injunction restraining B. from taking possession. This injunction was dissolved on appeal upon the terms of B. paying the 800*l.* into court. In September R. commenced an action of reduction in a Scotch court against the plaintiff to obtain the rescission of the contract. In October the plaintiff amended his bill, and moved to restrain R. from prosecuting the Scotch action:—Held, that the order made on the appeal had in effect decided that the Court of Chancery was the proper tribunal to decide the question, and an injunction was granted accordingly. Oakeley v. Ramsay, 27 L. T. 745.

c. COMMON-LAW COURTS.

Foreign Land — Trespass.]—An action for damages and trespass to land situate in a foreign country, founded on a disputed claim of title to such land, cannot be tried in the courts of this country. British South Africa Co. v. Companhia de Moçambique, 63 L. J., Q. B. 70; [1893] A. C. 602; 6 R. 1; 69 L. T. 604—H. L. (E.)

Ord. XXXVI. r. 1 (R. S. C. 1883), which abolishes local venues, is a rule of procedure only, and does not affect the jurisdiction of the courts of this country. The Judicature Acts and Rules deal with procedure only, and do not confer any new right of action. Ib.

—— Use and Occupation.]—The plaintiff and defendant companies were proprietors of lines of railway in a foreign state, and of offices in this country. The plaintiffs sued for use and occupation of their station in the foreign state by the defendants, who stated in defence that the two companies were both concessionnaires of the foreign state; that the station was built upon land granted by that state; and that by the express provisions of the laws of that state powers of adjusting all rights arising out of the respective claims of the two companies were vested in the government of that state:—Held, that there was nothing in these allegations of the defendants to oust the jurisdiction of the courts of this country. Buenos Ayres Ry. v. Great Northern Ry. of Buenos Ayres, 46 L. J., Q. B. 224; 2 Q. B. D. 210; 36 L. T. 148; 25 W. R. 367.

—— Recovery of Arrears of Rent-charge.]—An action of debt having been brought for arrears of a rent-charge upon lands in Australia prior to the commencement of the Judicature Act:—Held, that the venue in such action was local, and that it could not therefore be maintained in this country. Whitaker v. Forbes, 45 L. J., C. P. 140; 1 C. P. D. 51; 33 L. T. 582; 24 W. R. 241—C. A.

Interpleader.]—Semble, that a foreigner resident abroad is not within the Interpleader Act. Patorni v. Campbell, 12 M. & W. 277; 1 D. & L. 397; 13 L. J., Ex. 85; 7 Jur. 1139.

In respect of Torts.]—See ante, col. 295.

d. SUBMISSION TO JURISDICTION.

If a plaintiff domiciled in this country sees a British subject here in respect of, or to be released from, a money demand by the defendant, and the defendant appears to the suit, this court will entertain it although the defendant may be residing abroad, and the whole subject-matter of the suit, ultra the mere personal claim of the plaintiff, may be in a foreign country and out of the jurisdiction of this court. Drummond v. Drummond, 37 L. J., Ch. 811; 18 L. T. 896; 17 W. R. 6.

The court will not interfere by injunction to restrain a foreign creditor resident abroad from suing for his debts in the courts of his own country, although a decree has been made here for the administration of the estate of the debtor, and the foreign creditor has come in under the decree, and filed evidence to prove his debt in the administration action. Boyse, In re, Crofton v. Crofton, 49 L. J., Ch. 689; 15 Ch. D. 591; 29 W. R. 169.

A policy was affected with an assurance company carrying on business both in Edinburgh and London, and after the death of the insured the insurance money was claimed, on the one hand, by a mortgagee in England, and, on the other, by a trustee under a Scotch sequestration. The trustee raised an action in the Court of Session in Scotland, and the mortgagee instituted a suit in the Court of Chancery in England, each of them being a party to the litigation commenced by the other. An order was made in the suit for payment of the policy-moneys into court without prejudice to letters of arrestment which had issued in Scotland. By the decree in the suit an account was directed of what was due to the mortgagee on his securities, and he was declared entitled to a lien on the policy-moneys for what should be so found due. The trustee attended before the chief clerk on the taking of the accounts, and on further consideration the moneys in court were ordered to be paid to the mortgagee:—Held, on appeals by the trustee from the interlocutory order and decrees, that the appeals ought to be dismissed, the Lord Chancellor holding that the appellant had acquiesced in the decrees by attending before the chief clerk, and the Lords Justices holding (dissentiente the Lord Chancellor) that the circumstance of the action in Scotland having been brought to an issue before the commencement of the suit in the Court of Chancery was not a ground for refusing to make the order and decrees under appeal. Venning v. Lloyd, 1 De G. F. & J. 193; 29 L. J., Ch. 152; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 81; 1 L. T. 277; 8 W. R. 117.

R. contracted to let a house and moor in Scotland to the plaintiff for the months of August and September, at the rent of 800*l.*; and afterwards let it at the same rent to B. In August the plaintiff filed an original bill against R. and B. for specific performance of the contract, and obtained an injunction restraining B. from taking possession. This injunction was dissolved on appeal upon the terms of B. paying the 800*l.* into court. In September, R. commenced an action of reduction in a Scotch court against the plaintiff to obtain the rescission of the contract. In October the plaintiff amended his bill, and moved to restrain B. from prosecuting the Scotch action:—Held, that the order made on the appeal had in effect decided that the Court of Chancery was the proper tribunal to decide the question, and an injunction was granted accordingly. Oakeley v. Ramsey, 27 L. T. 745.

X. PROCEDURE.

a. PARTIES TO SUE AND TO BE SUED.

Power of Foreigner, incapacitated Abroad from suing, to sue in English Courts.]—The courts of this country will not recognise a state of disability not known to the law of this country. A French subject adjudicated a "prodigal" by a French Court, though by French law unable to sue without his "Conseil Judiciaire," can sue in the courts of this country independently. Worms v. De Valdor, 49 L. J., Ch. 261; 41 L. T. 791; 28 W. R. 346.

Bankruptcy or Insolvency.]—It was proved that two out of three provisional syndics may, by the law of France, sue to recover debts due to a bankrupt, and without the previous authority of the Juge Commissaire:—Held, that they may so sue in this country unless the French law is shewn to be contrary. Alivon v. Furnival, 1 C. M. & R. 277; 4 Tyr. 751; 3 D. P. C. 202; 3 L. J., Ex. 241. And see Huber v. Steiner, 4 M. & Sc. 828.

Held, also, that the act of the two syndics sufficiently implied the absence or want of consent of the third, without shewing his absence or want of consent. Ib.

A fund in court representing the share to which a person was entitled in default of appointment ordered to be paid to official assignee in his insolvency. Davidson's Settlement Trusts, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 347; L. R. 15 Eq. 383; 21 W. R. 452. Lawson's Trusts, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 95; [1896] 1 Ch. 175; 73 L. T. 571; 44 W. R. 280.

Husband and Wife Partners in Trade.]—Where a husband and wife carry on trade as partners in Spain, they cannot sue as such in our courts, nor maintain a joint action against persons resident in this country, to recover the amount of a balance due to the partnership account, without proof being given that by the law of Spain a feme covert is permitted to trade; and it is doubtful whether an action could be maintained by both, even on such proof being given. Cosio v. de Bernales, 1 Car. & P. 266; Ry. & Moo. 102; 28 R. R. 775.

Representative of Deceased Person.]—When judgment has been obtained in a foreign court by the foreign administrator of a creditor against an English debtor who has since died, and whose estate was being administered in England:—Held, that the foreign administrator could prove without taking out an English administration to his intestate. Macnichol, In re, Macnichol v. Macnichol, L. R. 19 Eq. 81; 31 L. T. 566; 23 W. R. 67.

A woman became, by the law of France, donee of the universality of the succession of her deceased husband and was thereby entitled to all his property, claims and causes of action, and became personally liable to his debts. After her husband's death, she was compelled to pay certain bills of exchange on which he was liable as indorser. She thereupon took proceedings in France, and obtained a judgment to recover the amount against the acceptor:—Held, that she might sue upon this judgment in this country in her own name, without taking out administration. Vanquelin v. Bouard, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 341; 3 N. R. 122; 33 L. J., C. P. 78; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 566; 9 L. T. 582; 12 W. R. 128.

b. LEX FORI.

Generally.] — Questions which resolve into matters of procedure are to be governed by the lex fori. Seymour (Lord) v. Scott, 1 H. & C. 209; 1 N. R. 129; 32 L. J., Ex. 61; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 522; 8 L. T. 511; 11 W. R. 169—Ex. Ch.

The rules of the lex fori, where a question is raised between or by or against foreigners, are not to be applied to matters affecting the substance of the remedy, but only to matters affecting the form. Cope v. Doherty, 2 De G. & J. 614; 27 L. J., Ch. 600; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 699; 6 W. R. 695.

When a foreign rule is repugnant to the fundamental principles of the lex fori, or when it is contrary to religion or sound morality, the doctrine of comity ought not to be followed. Fenton v. Livingstone, 3 Macq. H. L. 497; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1183; 7 W. R. 671.

If the adoption of the law of the domicil would occasion a prejudice to the rights of other states and their citizens, or if it would contravene a prohibitory enactment, the comity of nations would not require its adoption. Ib.

Right to Arrest Foreigner.]—One foreigner may arrest another in England for a debt which accrued in Portugal while both resided there, though the Portuguese law does not allow of arrest for debt. De la Vega v. Vianna, 1 B. & Ad. 284; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 388. And see Young v. Wildey, 4 L. J., C. P. 253.

The court refused to discharge a foreigner out of custody, on the ground that the debt for which he had been arrested was the balance of a demand, upon which the plaintiff had received a dividend, under proceedings in the country where the debt was contracted similar to our own proceedings in bankruptcy; though it was sworn by a competent person, that the law of the foreign country did not warrant an arrest under such circumstances. Brettilot v. Sandos, 4 Scott, 201; 1 Jur. 182.

Statute of Frauds.]—The contract mentioned in the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds is not absolutely void if not in writing, as required by the statute, that section relating to the mode of procedure, and not to the contract itself. Consequently such parol contract, though made in a foreign country, where it is good and capable of being enforced, cannot be sued on in this country. Leroux v. Brown, 12 C. B. 801; 22 L. J., C. P. 1; 16 Jur. 1021; 1 W. R. 22.

Statutes of Limitation.]—The law of a country where a contract is enforced govern all questions as to remedy and mode of proceeding, including those applicable to lapse of time. Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Cl. & F. 121—H. L. (Sc.) And see Cooper v. Waldegrave (Earl), 2 Beav. 282.

Where a claim is made in an administration suit in England by an Indian creditor of the testator, the English Statute of Limitations must be applied. Finch v. Finch, 45 L. J., Ch. 816; 35 L. T. 235.

Statutes of Limitation relate to matters of procedure, and therefore are governed by the lex fori, or the law of the country in which the action is brought. Alliance Bank of Simla v. Carey, 49 L. J., C. P. 781; 5 C. P. D. 429; 44 J. P. 735.

The law of prescription or limitation is a law relating to procedure, having reference only to the lex fori; and where a court entertains a cause of action which originated in a foreign country, the rule is to adjudicate according to the law of that country, yet the court proceeds according to the prescription of the country in which it exercises jurisdiction. Ruckmaboye v. Lulloobhoy Mottichund, 8 Moore, P. C. 4; 5 Moore, Ind. App. 234.

Ship—Collision—Limitation of Damages.]—Sections 504 and 514 of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, limiting the damages to be recovered in cases of collision, by reference to the value of the vessel doing the injury, and the freight, do not apply to a collision on the high seas between foreign ships of which the owners are foreigners. Cope v. Doherty, 2 De G. & J. 614; 27 L. J., Ch. 600; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 699; 6 W. R. 695.

Where, therefore, two foreign ships, of which the owners were foreigners, came into collision with each other at sea, and a bill was filed by the owners of the ship inflicting the injury against the owners of the injured ship, for the purpose of restricting, under the provisions of the 17 & 19 Vict. c. 104, the liability of the owners of the former ship to the value of such ship and its freight, the court dismissed, with costs, an appeal from the decision of the Vice-Chancellor, allowing a demurrer to such bill. Ib.

Quære, whether the demurrer would have been allowed if one of the two ships had been British, or if the collision had taken place in a British river or a British port. Ib.

c. EVIDENCE.

Proof of Foreign Laws.]—Foreign laws must be proved as facts, if a question arises on their existence. Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 174.

In an action founded on foreign laws properly brought before the courts here, they will receive evidence of such laws, and give judgment accordingly upon the contract. Crawford v. Witten, Lofft, 154; 1 Dougl. 4, n.

The law of France, as to marriage, proved by the production of a book, purporting to be published at the royal printing office, stated by oral testimony to be authorised to print the laws of France by the government; the book also being proved by the same testimony to contain the law of France. Lacon v. Higgins, 1 D. & R., N. P. 38; 3 Stark. 17; 25 R. R. 779.

A professional or an official witness, giving evidence as to a foreign law, may refer to foreign law books to refresh his memory, or to correct or confirm his opinion; but the law itself must be taken from his evidence. Sussex Peerage, 11 Cl. & F. 85; 8 Jur. 793.

A foreign written law may be proved by parol evidence of a witness learned in the law of that country. De Bode (Baron) v. Reg., 8 Q. B. 208; 10 Jur. 217.

When the question at issue in an English court is what is the foreign law on the subject, and an expert refers in his evidence to sections of the foreign code, as supporting the propositions for which he vouches, the English court may refer to and construe those sections. Concha v. Murietta, 40 Ch. D. 543; 60 L. T. 798—C. A. But see Cocks v. Purday, 2 Car. & K. 269.

As cases arise, in which the rights of parties litigating in English courts cannot be determined without ascertaining to some extent what is the foreign law applicable in such cases, foreign law and its application, like any other results of knowledge and experience in matters of which no knowledge is imputed to a judge, must be proved as facts are proved, by appropriate evidence, i.e. by properly qualified witnesses, or by witnesses who can state from their own knowledge and experience, gained by study and practice, not only what are the words in which the law is expressed, but also what is the proper interpretation of those words, and the legal meaning and effect of them as applied to the case in question. Nelson (Earl) v. Bridport (Lord), 8 Beav. 527; 10 Jur. 871.

Witnesses, in giving their testimony on a foreign law, may, if they think fit, refer to laws or to treaties, for the purpose of aiding their memory upon the subject of their examination; but, in general, it is the testimony of the witness, and not the authority of the law or of the text writer, detached from the testimony of the witness, which is to influence the judge. Ib.

An inquiry as to the nature and extent of the jurisdiction exercised by her majesty at Cape Coast Town, in the administration of personal estate of persons dying there intestate, and the manner of exercising such jurisdiction, directed to the colonial office, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 94. Herrey v. Fitzpatrick, Kay, 421; 2 Eq. R. 444; 23 L. J., Ch. 564; 2 W. R. 338.

—— Burden of Proof.]—Where reliance is placed upon a difference between the law of England and the law of a foreign state, the party is bound, by witnesses or books of authority, to shew that there is such a difference. Smith v. Gould, 4 Moore, P. C. 21; 6 Jur. 543.

Locus regit actum is a canon of general jurisprudence, and must be assumed, in the absence of contrary evidence, to apply to a system of foreign law. Guepratte v. Young, 4 De G. & S. 217.

Where the cause of action accrues in Scotland, and infancy is pleaded, the defendant must shew that infancy is a legal defence to that demand, by proving the law of that country in that respect. Male v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 163; 6 R. R. 823.

—— Who competent to prove.]—The law of a foreign country on a given subject may be proved by any person who (though not a lawyer or a person who, by reason of his having filled any public office, may be presumed to be acquainted with the law) is or has been in a position to render it probable that it would make himself acquainted with it. Vander Donckt v. Thellusson, 8 C. B. 812; 19 L. J., C. P. 12.

Therefore, an hotel-keeper in London, a native of Belgium, who stated that he had formerly carried on the business of a merchant and commissioner of stocks in Brussels, was permitted to prove the law of Belgium on the subject of the presentment of a promissory note made in that country, payable at a particular place. Ib.

A Roman Catholic bishop, holding the office of coadjutor to a vicar-apostolic in this country, is, in virtue of that office, to be considered as a person skilled in the matrimonial law of Rome, and, therefore, admissible as a witness to prove that law. Sussex Peerage, 11 Cl. & F. 85; 8 Jur. 793.

An opinion of a Scotch advocate was in evidence. The judge considering that there was implied therein an opinion on a question of Scotch law raised in the suit, decided the question on that evidence. Macdonald v. Macdonald,

On a trial for bigamy a woman was called as a witness, who stated that she was present at a ceremony performed in a private house in Scotland, by a minister of some religious denomination; that she herself was married in the same way, and that parties always married in Scotland in private houses:—Held, that she was not a competent witness to prove the law of Scotland as to marriage, and that her evidence did not prove the fact of a marriage. Reg. v. Povey, Dears. C. C. 32; 22 L. J., M. C. 19; 17 Jur. 120; 1 W. R. 40; 6 Cox, C. C. 83.

A Jewess may be permitted to give parol evidence of her own divorce in a foreign country, according to the custom of the Jews there. Ganer v. Lanesborough (Lady), 1 Peake, 18; 3 R. R. 647.

A witness whose knowledge of the law of a foreign country is derived solely from his having studied it at a university in another country, is incompetent to prove what the law of that foreign country is. Bristow v. Sequeville, 5 Ex. 275; 19 L. J., Ex. 289; 14 Jur. 674; 3 Car. & K. 64.

A witness whose knowledge of the law of a foreign country is derived solely from having studied it, is incompetent to prove the operation or effect of such law. Bonelli, In Goods of, 45 L. J., P. 42; 1 P. D. 69; 34 L. T. 32; 24 W. R. 255.

An English barrister practising in Canadian appeals before the privy council is not competent to give evidence as an expert as to the validity, according to the law of Canada, of a marriage solemnised in that country. Cartwright v. Cartwright, 26 W. R. 684.

Foreign Contract in Foreign Language.]—Where a contract is made in a foreign country, and in a foreign language, an English court, having to construe it, must first obtain a translation of the instrument; secondly, an explanation of the terms of art (if any); thirdly, evidence of the foreign law applicable to it; and, fourthly, evidence of any peculiar rules of construction which may exist in that law; and must then itself interpret the instrument on ordinary principles of construction. Di Sora (Duchess) v. Phillips, 10 H. L. Cas. 624; 33 L. J., Ch. 129—H. L. (E.)

Question for Judge or Jury.]—Foreign law and the construction of a foreign contract, just as much as the construction of an English contract, are matters for the decision of the judge, after having the foreign law, or the language of the foreign contract interpreted to him, by the evidence of foreign experts, and are not in any case questions for the jury. Copin v. Adamson, 43 L. J., Ex. 161; L. R. 9 Ex. 345; 31 L. T. 242; 22 W. R. 658.

d. Other Matters.

Criminal Proceedings preceding Civil Remedy.]—If by the laws of a foreign state there is a civil remedy for a wrong done there, the fact that by those laws criminal proceedings must precede the civil remedy there, constitutes no bar or defence to an action in this country. Scott v. Seymour (Lord), 31 L. J., Ex. 457; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 568; 6 L. T. 607; 10 W. R. 739. Affirmed on appeal, 1 H. & C. 219; 1 N. R. 129; 32 L. J., Ex. 61; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 522; 8 L. T. 511; 11 W. R. 169—Ex. Ch.

Matter of Defence arising Abroad.]—To an action by a trustee of a Scotch bankrupt for money received by the defendant for the use of the plaintiff, as trustee, after the bankruptcy, and for interest upon money due from the defendant to the plaintiff, as trustee, forborne to the defendant at his request, it is a good defence that there were mutual credits between the bankrupt and the defendant, and that, by the Scotch law, the trustee is only entitled to sue for the balance. Macfarlane v. Norris, 2 B. & S. 783; 31 L. J., Q. B. 245; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 74; 6 L. T. 492.

Pleading—Action on Bond—Executed Abroad informally.]—To an action on a bond the defendant pleaded that the bond was executed at Calais, in France, where he was domiciled; that certain forms in the plea mentioned were not adopted on its execution, nor did he belong to certain classes of persons therein described; and that by reason of the premises, by the law of France, the bond never was binding upon the defendant:—Held, that the plea was argumentative, and inferential in its mode of stating the law of France, and therefore bad. Benham v. Mornington (Earl), 4 D. & L. 213; 3 C. B. 133; 13 L. J., C. P. 221; 10 Jur. 618.

—— Pleading Matters of Procedure.]—To an action against a single defendant, for a breach of an agreement to build a vessel, entered into between the plaintiffs and C. & Co., the defendant pleaded that there was a trading partnership or firm domiciled and carrying on business in Scotland by the name of C. & Co., and that the agreement was an agreement made in Scotland by the plaintiffs with the firm, and was to be performed wholly in Scotland without the jurisdiction of the English courts and within the jurisdiction of the Scotch courts; and by the law of Scotland the firm was and is a distinct person from any or the whole of the individual members of whom it consists, and of whom the defendant is one; and the firm, by the law of Scotland, is capable of maintaining the relation of debtor and creditor separate and distinct from the obligations of the partners as individuals, and can hold property, and has the capacity of suing and being sued as such separate person by the name of C. & Co.; that the agreement was made by the firm as such separate person and not jointly and severally by the individual members; that at the date of the agreement the firm consisted of certain individual members, who are all domiciled in Scotland; and that by the law of Scotland the defendant was, as a partner in C. & Co., in the making of the agreement, liable to the plaintiffs for the satisfaction of any judgment which might be obtained against the firm or the whole of the individual partners jointly for any breaches of the agreement, and it is a condition precedent to any individual liability attaching to the defendant as an individual member of the firm in respect of the agreement that the firm, as such person, or the whole individual partners jointly, should first have been sued and that judgment should have been recovered against the firm or the whole of the partners jointly, and that the plaintiffs have not sued the firm of C. & Co., nor the whole of the partners jointly, nor recovered judgment against it or them:—Held, that the matters stated in the plea were matters of procedure, and that the plea was therefore bad. Bullock v. Caird, 44 L. J., Q. B. 124; L. R. 10 Q. B. 276; 32 L. T. 814: 23 W. R. 827.

Interpretation of Foreign Law.]—Foreign law and the construction of a foreign contract, just as much as the construction of an English contract, are matters for the decision of the judge, after having the foreign law, or the language of the foreign contract, interpreted and explained to him by the evidence of foreign experts, and are not in any case questions for a jury. Copin v. Adamson, 43 L. J., Ex. 161; L. R. 9 Ex. 345; 31 L. T. 242; 22 W. R. 658.

Revenue Laws.]—The courts of this country will not take notice of the revenue laws of foreign states. Planché v. Fletcher, 1 Dougl. 251.

XI. FOREIGN JUDGMENT.

General Principles on which enforced.]—The courts of this country consider the defendant bound:—

(1.) Where he is a subject of the foreign country in which the judgment has been obtained.

(2.) Where he was resident in the foreign country when the action began.

(3.) When the defendant in the character of plaintiff has selected the forum in which he is afterwards sued.

(4.) Where he has voluntarily appeared.

(5.) Where he has contracted to submit himself to the forum in which the judgment was obtained.

(6.) And possibly where the defendant has real estate within the foreign jurisdiction, in respect of which the cause of action arose whilst he was within that jurisdiction. Rousillon v. Rousillon, 49 L. J., Ch. 338; 14 Ch. D. 351; 42 L. T. 679; 28 W. R. 623; 44 J. P. 663.

The true principle on which foreign judgments are enforced in England is, that there is a duty or an obligation to submit to the decree of a court of competent jurisdiction, and anything which negatives that duty is a defence to the action. Schibsby v. Westenholz, 40 L. J., Q. B. 73; L. R. 6 Q. B. 155; 24 L. T. 93; 19 W. R. 587.

The sentence of a foreign court of competent jurisdiction, is evidence of res judicata, and is not to be called in question in a collateral cause in the courts of this kingdom. Hamilton v. Dutch East India Co., 8 Bro. P. C. 264—H. L. (Sc.)

A foreign judgment of a competent court is conclusive, and not open to examination by another court, unless the judgment impeached carries on the face of it manifest error; as if it is shewn to have been obtained by fraud, or to be wanting in the condition of natural justice. Such judgment cannot be applied to persons other than those who were parties to the litigation decided by it, except in cases where the judgment is in rem. Messina v. Petrococchino, 41 L. J., P. C. 27; L. R. 4 P. C. 144; 26 L. T. 561; 20 W. R. 451.

A judgment of a foreign court is conclusive, inter partes, where there is nothing on the face of the judgment which a court here can inquire into. Simpson v. Fogo, 1 H. & M. 195; 1 N. R. 422; 32 L. J., Ch. 249; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 403; 8 L. T. 61; 11 W. R. 418.

But the courts of this country may disregard a foreign judgment, inter partes, if it appears on the record: 1. To be manifestly contrary to natural justice. 2. Or to be based on domestic legislation not recognised by foreign countries. 3. Or to be founded on a misapprehension of what is the law of this country. 4. Or to be founded upon a distinct refusal to recognise the laws of the country under which the title to the subject-matter of litigation arose. Ib.

The same rules apply to judgments of colonial courts. Ib.

As to the third ground, however, see contra, Castrique v. Imrie, 39 L. J., C. P. 350; L. R. 4 H. L. 414; 23 L. T. 48; 19 W. R. 1—H. L. (E.)

The judgment of a foreign court on a subject-matter not within its jurisdiction is not binding in this country. Price v. Dewhurst, 4 M. & Cr. 76; 8 L. J., Ch. 57.

The courts of this country will not take notice of the penal laws of foreign countries. Folliott v. Ogden, 1 H. Bl. 123, 135; 3 Term Rep. 726; 4 Bro. P. C. 111; 2 R. R. 736—H. L. (E.)

The acts of confiscation passed in the several states of North America, after the declaration of independence and before the treaty of peace, by which this country acknowledged their independence, are to be considered as a nullity in courts of law in this country. Ib.

Upon the effect of judgments in foreign courts, see Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. Bl. 402; 2 R. R. 353—Ex. Ch.

Effect of.]—A foreign judgment is primâ facie evidence of a debt, and that everything was done in the court in which it was obtained that was necessary to support it. Arnott v. Redfern, 3 Bing. 353; 11 Moore, 209; 4 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 89; 2 Car. & P. 88.

A foreign judgment is only evidence of a debt. Hawksford v. Giffard, 56 L. J., P. C. 10; 12 App. Cas. 122; 56 L. T. 32.

The judgments of courts of concurrent jurisdiction are evidence only where the very same matter comes distinctly in issue between the same parties. Mackintosh v. Smith, 4 Macq. H. L. 913.

The judgments of courts of exclusive jurisdiction are evidence, whether the matter arises incidentally, or is the matter directly in issue. Ib.

—— Foreign Judgment in Personam.]—The Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice cannot entertain a suit in rem on a foreign judgment in personam for damages arising out of a collision:—Semble, a foreign judgment in rem for damages by collision can be sued upon in England in rem. The City of Mecca, 50 L. J., P. 53; 6 P. D. 106; 44 L. T. 750; 4 Asp. M. C. 412—C. A.

—— As an Estoppel.]—Judgment was given by competent tribunals in France against Garcias, in an action brought by him against persons with whom he had been connected in a loan transaction, for the purpose of obtaining from them an account and payment of his share of the profits of the loan. He afterwards filed a bill in the Court of Chancery against some of the same persons, and for the same purposes, charging that the proceedings and judgment of the French tribunals were contrary to justice, and were not final and conclusive, and also that subsequently to the date of the said judgment further profits accrued to the defendant from the said loan, and he claimed a right to a share of them :—Held, that a plea of the foreign proceedings and judgment—set forth in substance and effect—filed by the defendants to the bill, supported by averments that the matters in issue in the foreign tribunals were the same as the matters put in issue by the bill, covered the whole of the matters comprised in the bill, and was a sufficient answer thereto. In pleading a foreign judgment, it is not necessary to set forth the proceedings and judgment at length. Ricardo v. Garcias, 12 Cl. & F. 368 ; 9 Jur. 1019.—H. L. (E.)

Statute of Limitations.]—If a man recovers a judgment or sentence in France for money due to him, the debt must be considered here only as a debt on simple contract, and the Statute of Limitations will run upon it. Dupleix v. de Roven, 2 Vern. 540.

Unreasonable Delay in enforcing a Foreign Judgment.]—A foreigner resident abroad will not be assisted, after the lapse of thirteen years, to enforce a foreign judgment in England against the executors of a foreigner who had died domiciled here, when the party against whom the foreign judgment was obtained survived it four years without any proceedings having been taken to enforce it in England, and when his estate, since his death, had been administered in England. Reimers v. Druce, 23 Beav. 145 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 196 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 147 ; 5 W. R. 211. On appeal, the suit was compromised, 23 Beav. 158, n. ; 26 L. J., Ch. 201, n. ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 229 ; 5 W. R. 402.

What Judgments enforceable—Must be final and conclusive.]—An action cannot be brought in this country upon a foreign judgment for the recovery of a debt, if the judgment does not finally and conclusively (subject to an appeal to a higher court) settle the existence of the debt so as to become res judicata between the parties. Nouvion v. Freeman, 59 L. J., Ch. 337 ; 15 App. Cas. 1 ; 62 L. T. 189 ; 38 W. R. 581—H. L. (E.) Cp. Patrick v. Sheddon, col. 340, post.

By Spanish law in certain cases summary or "executive" proceedings can be taken to recover a debt, and the plaintiff if successful obtains a "remate" judgment for the recovery of a sum of money. Such a judgment is final in those proceedings unless reversed or varied on appeal. In such proceedings the defendant can plead certain limited defences, but cannot set up any defence affecting the validity of the contract. Either plaintiff or defendant, if unsuccessful in the "executive" proceedings, may in the same court and in respect of the same subject-matter take ordinary or "plenary" proceedings, in which all defences and the whole merits of the matter may be gone into. In the "plenary" proceedings the "remate" judgment cannot be set up as res judicata or otherwise. A "remate" judgment can be enforced by the plaintiff on giving security, although either an appeal or "plenary" proceeding may be pending. A "plenary" judgment renders the "remate" judgment inoperative and requires restoration of any moneys paid under it :—Held, that since a "remate" judgment does not finally and conclusively establish the existence of a debt no action can be brought upon it in this country. Ib.

A plea of judgment recovered in a foreign court of competent jurisdiction must shew that the judgment is final and conclusive between the parties, according to the law of the place where such judgment is pronounced. Frayes v. Worms, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 149.

An action will not lie upon a judgment of a foreign court, unless it clearly appears by the transcript of the proceedings that the defendant was subject to the jurisdiction of the foreign court, and that the judgment pronounced against him was final, and for a definite sum. Obicini v. Bligh, 1 M. & Scott, 477 ; 8 Bing. 335 ; 1 L. J., C. P. 99. Overruling Molony v. Gibbons, 2 Camp. 502 ; 11 R. R. 778.

An action will not lie on a decree of a foreign court whereby the defendant is ordered to pay a certain sum of money to the plaintiff on a certain day, first deducting thereout the defendant's costs, to be taxed by the proper officer, where the defendant's costs have not been taxed either at his own request or upon an ex parte proceeding at the instance of the plaintiff. Sadler v. Robins, 1 Camp. 253.

Process of Attachment.]—Quære, whether a plea to an action brought against a defendant in this country, upon a contract made and executed in France, that the debt had been attached (saisie arrêtée), pursuant to the Code de Procédure Civile, by creditors of the plaintiff in that country, is any answer, either legal or equitable. Simian v. Miller, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 686.

Judgment having been signed on the ground that such a plea was not issuable, the court set aside the judgment only upon the terms of the defendant bringing the amount claimed into court. Ib.

—— Political and Penal Laws.]—The courts of this country will not take notice of the penal laws of foreign countries. Folliott v. Ogden, 1 H. Bl. 123, 135 ; 3 Term Rep. 726 ; 4 Bro. P. C. 111 ; 2 R. R. 736—H. L. (E.)

The acts of confiscation passed in the several states of North America, after the declaration of independence and before the treaty of peace, by which this country acknowledged their independence, are to be considered as a nullity in courts of law in this country. Ib.

An ordinance made by the government of Denmark, pending hostilities with Great Britain, whereby all ships, goods, money, and money's worth, of or belonging to English subjects, were declared to be sequestrated and detained ; and all persons were commanded within three days to transmit an account of debts due to English subjects, in default of which they were to be proceeded against in the exchequer ; in consequence of which, a suit depending in a Danish court for recovering a debt due from a Danish to a British subject was not further prosecuted, and the debt was afterwards paid by the Danish subject, at the rate specified by the ordinance, to commissioners appointed in virtue of the ordinance to receive payment, upon production of whose receipt the Danish court quashed the suit :—Held, to be no answer to an action against the Danish subject to recover the same debt in the courts of this country, for the ordinance, not being conformable to the usage of nations, was void. Wolff v. Oxholm, 6 M. & S. 92 ; 18 R. R. 313.

By the law of New York, 1875, c. 611, s. 21, it is provided that if any certificate by an officer of a corporation is false in any material representation, the officer who shall have signed the same shall be liable for the debts of the corporation.

The appellant having obtained judgment in an action against the respondent in New York for the unpaid balance of a loan to a company, of which the respondent was an officer, on the ground that the respondent had given a false certificate, sued the respondent in the High Court of Ontario to enforce this judgment :—Held, that a proceeding, to come within the rule that the courts of one country do not execute the laws of another, must be in the nature of a suit in favour of the state whose law has been infringed, and that the action in New York was not penal in such a sense as to oust the jurisdiction of a foreign court. Huntington v. Attrill, 62 L. J., P. C. 44; [1893] A. C. 150; 68 L. T. 326; 41 W. R. 575; 57 J. P. 404—P. C.

—— Judgment in rem.]—The master of a ship owned by an English joint-stock company, limited, which was loading cargo at Bombay for Hamburg, was induced by a fraud perpetrated upon him to sign bills of lading for goods which in fact were never put on board. The defendants, whose registered place of business was in England, became the indorsees of the bills of lading for value and without notice of the fraud. Before the arrival of the ship at Hamburg a petition for winding up the plaintiff company was filed, upon which a winding-up order was subsequently made. The defendants had notice of the winding-up proceedings. By German law a claim for non-delivery of cargo confers a legal lien upon the ship. Upon the arrival of the ship at Hamburg she was arrested under proceedings taken against her in Germany on behalf of the defendants to enforce this lien. The German court ordered the ship to be sold, declared that the defendants had a lien upon her in priority to all creditors except those claiming for necessaries and wages, and ordered the lien to be satisfied out of the proceeds of the sale. Neither the plaintiff company nor the liquidator were parties to the proceedings in the German court. In an action by the liquidator in the name of the company to recover from the defendants the monies paid to them in satisfaction of their lien by order of the German court as moneys received to the use of the company :—Held, that the proceedings in the German court being proceedings in rem, the judgment was binding upon all persons, whether parties to the proceedings or not, and consequently the defendants were entitled to retain as against the company or the liquidator the moneys paid to them under the judgment. Oriental Inland Steam Co., In re, Scinde Ry., Ex parte (43 L. J., Ch. 699; L. R. 9 Ch. 557), distinguished. "Minna Craig" Steamship Co. v. Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, 66 L. J., Q. B. 339; [1897] 1 Q. B. 460; 76 L. T. 310; 45 W. R. 338—C. A.

How far Examinable.]—An adjudication of a foreign court, acting within the jurisdiction conferred upon it by the state within whose lawful control the subject-matter adjudicated upon is found, is conclusive against all the world, even though it professes to proceed on an assumption of the law of another country and that assumption is erroneous. Castrique v. Imrie, 39 L. J., C. P. 350; L. R. 4 H. L. 414; 23 L. T. 48; 19 W. R. 1—H. L. (E.) S. P., Godard v. Gray, 40 L. J., Q. B. 62; L. R. 6 Q. B. 139; 24 L. T. 89; 19 W. R. 348.

If the intention of the foreign court was to deal with the subject-matter of the suit, an inference arises that the adjudication was in rem, though the proceedings may have been instituted inter partes. Ib.

Such an intention will be inferred in the case of proceedings to enforce a maritime lien in a state subject to a code founded on the civil law, or where the supposed owners of the chattel, the property in which is dealt with by such court, have been necessarily summoned to attend the proceedings. Ib.

The master of a British ship drew a bill of exchange upon his owner for necessaries supplied to the ship in the course of her voyage. The owner, who had in the meantime mortgaged the ship and then become bankrupt, declined to accept the bill, and it was dishonoured at maturity. Afterwards, the ship having put into Havre, the holder of the bill indorsed it to a French subject, who commenced a suit upon it in the court there against the master and against the ship, and obtained judgment against the master, with privilege upon the ship, and the judgment having been affirmed by the superior court there, the vessel was sold. By the French law a mortgage or sale of the property in a ship while on its voyage, to the prejudice of creditors for necessaries supplied in the course of the voyage, is not recognised unless the transaction appears on the ship's papers. Also, in proceedings in a French court to enforce a maritime lien by sale of the ship, all who appear to be the owners of the ship must be summoned. The original owner and his assignee in bankruptcy were cited accordingly before the court at Havre, but they did not appear. After the decree for sale was made, the mortgagee instituted proceedings at Havre to replevy the ship; but his claim to intervene was disallowed in consequence of a mistaken view of English law adopted by the French court, though evidence of the English law was produced and admitted before it :—Held, that the judgment of the foreign court was a judgment in rem, and passed the property in the ship; and, as there was no suggestion of fraud, was unimpeachable in an English court of justice. Ib.

A British ship was duly mortgaged in England, and remained in the possession of the mortgagor, who afterwards sent her to New Orleans. There she was attached by a citizen of Louisiana, a creditor of the mortgagor, in an action commenced for the recovery of his debt, not being a proceeding in rem. The mortgagee intervened in the action, and claimed possession of the ship. The Supreme Court of Louisiana refused to recognise his title, though good by the law of England, assigning as a reason, on the face of the judgment, that the law of Louisiana did not recognise transfers of property in chattels without delivery of possession; that to admit the claim would be prejudicial to the citizens of Louisiana, and that the comity of nations did not extend to the case. The ship was then sold under a writ, in the nature of a fi. fa. in the action, and the proceeds were applied in favour of the creditors to the exclusion of the mortgagee. The ship having been brought to England, the mortgagee, whose debt was admitted to exceed the value of the ship, filed his bill to establish his claim against F. :—Held, that the judgment of the court of Louisiana was examinable for error on the face of it, by reason of its disregard of the comity of nations, and that the mortgagee was entitled to the ship. Simpson v. Fogo, 1 H. & M. 195; 1 N. R. 422; 32 L. J., Ch. 249;

9 Jur. (N.S.) 403; 8 L. T. 61; 11 W. R. 418. And see S. C., 1 John. & H. 18; 29 L. J., Ch. 657; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 949: 2 L. T. 594; 8 W. R. 407.

Held, also, that the judgment was of the nature of a judgment, inter partes, as regarded the intervener. Ib.

Semble, that a foreign judgment, even in rem, may be examined and disregarded, if it appears on the face of it to have been founded on a perverse disregard of English law in a case properly subject to that law by the comity of nations. Ib.

A declaration stated that the captain of an English ship while on a voyage drew a bill of exchange on the owners for the necessary disbursements of the ship, and the bill was dishonoured at maturity; that the plaintiff had in the meantime become mortgagee of the ship; that by the French law a bonâ fide holder for value of such a bill, if a French subject, can take proceedings in rem in the French courts, and attach and sell the ship in a French port in order to pay the bill; that the defendants, being English subjects, and the holders of the bill after it had been dishonoured, conspired with a French subject, that they should indorse the bill to him without value, and that he should take proceedings in the French courts, and falsely represent that he was a bonâ fide holder for value; that this was accordingly done, and orders were thereby obtained from the French courts, that the ship should be attached and sold in a French port, and the plaintiff thus deprived of his property in lien:—Held that the declaration was bad, as an action could not be maintained while judgment in rem, though in a foreign court, and obtained as alleged, remained unreversed. Castrique v Behrens, 3 El. & El. 709; 30 L. J., Q. B. 163; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1024; 4 L. T. 52.

Although, in an action in this country on a foreign or colonial judgment, the judgment is examinable to a certain extent, as for the purpose of shewing want of jurisdiction, or that the defendant was not summoned, or that the judgment was fraudulently obtained, yet such judgment is not examinable upon the merits, as, for the purpose of shewing that the contract sued upon was not made, or was procured by fraud, or that the judgment was erroneous. Bank of Australasia v. Nias, 16 Q. B. 717; 20 L. J., Q. B. 284; 15 Jur. 967.

A foreign judgment cannot, as between the same parties, be impeached in this country on the ground that it proceeded on a mistake of law. A foreign judgment binds, notwithstanding the discovery of fresh evidence, for the courts of this country will not either re-hear cases tried by, or hear appeals from, foreign tribunals; and if the judgment of a foreign court is erroneous the regular mode provided by every system of jurisprudence, of procuring it to be examined and reversed, ought to be followed. Trufort, In re, Trafford v. Blanc, 57 L. J., Ch. 135; 36 Ch. D. 600; 57 L. T. 674; 36 W. R. 163.

In an action to indemnify the plaintiff from all debts due from the late partnership of the plaintiff, the defendant, and B., and from all suits, proof of a copy of the proceedings in a foreign court in a suit there, instituted against the late partners for the recovery of a partnership debt, in which a decree passed against them for want of answer, per quod a sequestration issued against the plaintiff's estate, and he was obliged to pay the debt, is conclusive against the defendant; and the defendant is not at liberty to shew that the proceedings were erroneous. Tarleton v. Tarleton, 4 M. & S. 20.

The judgment of a foreign court having jurisdiction over the subject-matter cannot be questioned here, on the ground that the foreign court has mistaken the law of its own country, or has come, on the evidence, to an erroneous conclusion as to the facts. Scott v. Pilkington, 2 B. & S. 11; 31 L. J., Q. B. 81; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 557; 6 L. T. 21.

A judgment of a foreign court, having jurisdiction over the parties and subject-matter of the suit, cannot be impeached on the ground that it is erroneous upon the merits. De Cosse Brissac v. Rathbone, 6 H. & N. 301; 30 L. J., Ex. 238.

—— Omnia ritè esse acta.]—The presumption with regard to the judgment of a foreign court is that it is correct according to the law of the country to which it belongs, but when it is admitted by the parties that the law of the foreign tribunal has not been correctly declared by its judgment, such judgment will not be binding on an English court. Meyer v. Ralli, 45 L. J., C. P. 741; 1 C. P. D. 358; 35 L. T. 838; 24 W. R. 963.

The presumption when a foreign court has purported to act properly and within its jurisdiction, is omnia ritè esse acta. Taylor v. Ford, 29 L. T. 392; 22 W. R. 47.

A Greek ship with a cargo on board consigned to Malta, the port of destination, having encountered severe weather in her passage down the Black Sea, was obliged, for the preservation of her cargo, to jettison her boats, spars and cables, and being disabled, put into Constantinople, where the captain applied to the Greek consular court, and obtained an order for a survey of the ship and cargo, and a sentence of average settlement, with the appointment of a curator, who, by virtue of the authority conferred on him, hypothecated the cargo, and caused a bottomry bond to be executed thereon for freight and the necessary expenses of transhipping and forwarding the cargo. The cargo having been transhipped, arrived at Malta, where proceedings were taken in the court of commerce by the consignee to set aside the sentence of average settlement and to annul the bottomry bond. The court of commerce declared its incompetency to decide regarding the average settlement, but pronounced the bottomry bond null and void. On appeal to the court of appeal at Malta, that court reversed the decree of the court of commerce, so far as regarded its competency to decide the average act and settlement, and ordered, as regarded the decision of the nullity of the bottomry bond, that such decision should be set aside until a definite sentence on the average act and settlement should have been come to by the court of commerce. The court of commerce gave a decision on the case thus remitted against the consignee, which was equivalent to a nonsuit. On appeal from this decision, the appellate court at Malta was of opinion, that the captain having taken the legal course before the consular tribunal at Constantinople, and that court having, on the report of experts, appointed a curator of the cargo, and declared the voyage ended at Constantinople, such curator was the attorney for the owners of the cargo, and had authority to hypothecate the same; that where the formalities of a consular authority and verbal process justifying the expenses necessitating the loan are observed the lender on bottomry is exonerated from justifying the necessity for the loan, or making inquiry as to the facts causing such necessity; and decided for the validity of the bond:—Held, that the Greek consular court at Constantinople being a competent court, having jurisdiction over a Greek ship and a cargo owned by Greek subjects, the sentence of that court was not open to examination by the court of commerce at Malta, and that it must be presumed, in the absence of manifest error or fraud, that the Greek consular court rightly interpreted and applied the Greek law, by which they had the power they exercised of deciding that Constantinople should be considered the place of the ship's destination, and the average adjusted according to the law in force at that place; and that the bottomry bond was, under the circumstances, necessary and valid. Messina v. Petrococchino, 41 L. J., P. C. 27; L. R. 4 P. C. 144; 26 L. T. 561; 20 W. R. 451.

How far Impeachable.]—A foreign court may settle the conditions on which it will exercise its jurisdiction; those conditions being fulfilled, it may exercise that jurisdiction, but the judgment given under such circumstances cannot claim extra-territorial authority unless pronounced in accordance with the rules of international public law. Shaw v. Gould, 37 L. J., Ch. 433; L. R. 3 H. L. 55; 18 L. T. 833—H. L. (E.)

The repugnancy to natural justice in respect of which a foreign judgment is impeachable in an action thereon is a repugnancy to natural justice in reference to the conduct or mode of procedure of the foreign court, and not in reference to the merits of the action. Crawley v. Isaacs, 16 L. T. 529.

A court which is called on to enforce a foreign judgment, may examine into that judgment, to see whether it has been rightfully obtained or not. Don v. Lippmann, 5 Cl. & F. 1—H. L. (Sc.)

A foreign judgment of a competent court is conclusive, and not open to examination by another court, unless the judgment impeached carries on the face of it manifest error; as if it is shewn to have been obtained by fraud, or to be wanting in the condition of natural justice. Such judgment cannot be applied to persons other than those who were parties to the litigation decided by it, except in cases where the judgment is in rem. Messina v. Petrococchino, 41 L. J., P. C. 27; L. R. 4 P. C. 144; 26 L. T. 561; 20 W. R. 451.

The transfer of personal property must be regulated by the law of the owner's domicil, and the disregard of that law by the courts of a foreign country is an infraction of the comity of nations, which justifies the Court of Chancery in decreeing a restitution, upon the property coming within its jurisdiction. Liverpool Marine Credit Co. v. Hunter, 37 L. J., Ch. 386; L. R. 3 Ch. 479; 18 L. T. 749; 16 W. R. 1090.

But if a creditor pursues the chattel of his debtor to a foreign country in which he knows that the rights of a third party will be disregarded, the Court of Chancery cannot interfere to restrain the proceedings taken by the creditor in the foreign country. Ib.

—— Defence in Foreign Court.]—That which constitutes a defence in a foreign court is not pleadable in an action upon the judgment in the courts of this country. Vanquelin v. Bouard, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 341; 3 N. R. 122; 33 L. J., C. P. 78; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 566; 9 L. T. 582; 12 W. R. 128. Cp. Kelsall v. Marshall, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 241; 26 L. J., C. P. 19; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1142; 5 W. R. 114.

—— Fraud.]—Where an action is brought in England to enforce a foreign judgment, the defendant may raise the defence that the judgment was obtained by the fraud of the plaintiff even though the fraud alleged is such that it cannot be proved without re-trying the questions adjudicated upon by the foreign court. Vadala v. Lawes, 25 Q. B. D. 310; 63 L. T. 128; 38 W. R. 594—C. A.

A plea of fraud is a good defence to an action on a foreign judgment; and therefore the Court of Chancery will not, on the ground that such a judgment was obtained by fraud, interfere with the action. Ochsenbein v. Papelier, 42 L. J., Ch. 861; L. R. 8 Ch. 695; 28 L. T. 459; 21 W. R. 516.

When a foreign judgment by default, fraudulently obtained against a person who, at the time of the commencement of the action, was temporarily residing in a foreign country, is sought to be enforced by an action in England, if it appears that there is a good defence which may be pleaded at law, the Court of Chancery will not interfere by injunction to restrain the action, although it has concurrent jurisdiction in the matter. Ib.

The plaintiff sued upon a foreign judgment; the defendant alleged that the judgment had been obtained by the plaintiff by a fraudulent misrepresentation to the foreign court:—Held, upon demurrer, that this was a good ground of defence. Abouloff v. Oppenheimer, 52 L. J., Q. B. 1; 10 Q. B. D. 295; 47 L. T. 325; 31 W. R. 57—C. A.

A foreign judgment being equally conclusive against the debtor as an English judgment, may be set aside in equity for fraud. Therefore, where a bill is brought against a banker by his customer for an account, and for an injunction to restrain on a foreign judgment obtained by the banker from the customer in respect of their mutual dealings, and it appeared by specific allegations in the bill, that, notwithstanding the judgment, the balance of accounts was in favour of the customer:—Held, that the case made by the bill was primâ facie a case of fraud in the banker, which he was bound to answer, and, consequently, his demurrer was overruled, without reference to the question whether the bill was sustainable for the account. Bowles v. Orr, 1 Y. & C. 465. And see Castrique v. Behrens, 3 El. & El. 709; 30 L. J., Q. B. 163; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1024; 4 L. T. 52.

—— Obtained in Absence of Defendant.]—A judgment of a foreign court, obtained in default of appearance against a party, cannot be enforced in an English court, when he, at the time when the suit was commenced, was not a subject of nor resident in the country in which the judgment was obtained; for there existed nothing imposing on the party any duty to obey the judgment. Schibsby v. Westenholz, 40 L. J., Q. B. 73; L. R. 6 Q. B. 155; 24 L. T. 93; 19 W. R. 587. S. P., Turnbull v. Walker, 5 R. 132; 67 L. T. 767.

The defendant, a Swiss subject, entered into an agreement with the plaintiffs, French subjects residing in France, when he was in France on a temporary visit, he being then domiciled in Switzerland but residing in England. The plaintiffs afterwards obtained judgment against him in a French court for breach of the agreement. He was not in France at the commencement of or at any time during the action, and he had no notice of the proceedings, though the plaintiffs knew his address in England, where he was then still residing:—Held, that the judgment could not be enforced by an English court. Rousillon v. Rousillon, 49 L. J., Ch. 338; 14 Ch. D. 351; 42 L. T. 679; 28 W. R. 623; 44 J. P. 663.

Though the Court of Chancery will not enforce a decree of a foreign court obtained against a party in his absence and without notice, yet where it finds that the proceedings in the foreign court were rendered necessary by his resistance to a proper demand, it will order him to pay the costs of those proceedings by way of damages. Griffin v. Brady, 39 L. J., Ch. 136; 18 W. R. 130.

No territorial legislation can give jurisdiction which any foreign courts ought to recognise against absent foreigners who owe no allegiance or obedience to the power which so legislates. In all personal actions the courts of the country in which the defendant resides, not the courts of the country where the cause of action arose, should be resorted to. Sirdar Gurdyal Singh v. Faridkote (Rajah), [1894] A. C. 670; 11 R. 340—P. C.

In an action on a judgment or a decree of the Tribunal of Commerce at Brussels, a plea that the defendant was not at any time served with any process issuing out of that court, at the suit of the plaintiff, for the causes of action upon which the judgment or decree was obtained, nor had he at any time notice of any such process, nor did he appear in the court to answer the plaintiff, is bad, inasmuch as the plea does not shew that the proceedings against the defendant in the Belgian court were so conducted as to deprive the defendant of the opportunity of defending himself therein. Reynolds v. Fenton, 3 C. B. 187; 16 L. J., C. P. 15; 10 Jur. 668. Cp. Buchanan v. Rucker and other cases post, col. 343.

A. and his wife, who were by birth British subjects, but were afterwards domiciled at St. Croix, belonging to Denmark, returned to England, and there made a joint will, disposing of a mortgage at St. Croix, which belonged to them jointly; they afterwards made separate wills, which were proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. After the death of the survivor, certain proceedings were instituted at St. Croix, by the executors named in the joint will, and a judgment was obtained for the establishment of that will. The court being of opinion that the court at St. Croix had no authority to decide as between the contending parties, the executor of the joint will, having come over to this country, was held liable to account to the parties beneficially interested under the separate wills for the assets of A., received at St. Croix. Price v. Dewhurst, 4 Myl. & Cr. 76; 8 L. J., Ch. 57; 2 Jur. 1006.

The judgment of a foreign court on a subject not within its jurisdiction is not binding in this country. Ib.

—— Qualified Appearance.]—It is no answer to an action upon the judgment of a foreign court that at the time of the proceedings in the foreign court the defendant was not resident or domiciled or under allegiance in the foreign country, and appeared in the foreign court as defendant merely to protect his property from seizure in case judgment by default should be given against him in the foreign court. Voinet v. Barrett, 55 L. J., Q. B. 39; 34 W. R. 161—C. A.

—— Agreement to elect Domicil Abroad—No Notice of Proceedings.]—To a declaration claiming a sum recovered by a judgment in a French court, the defendant pleaded that he was not a native of France, or at any time before judgment resident or domiciled within the jurisdiction of the French court, or served with any process or summons in the suit, nor did he appear therein; nor had he any notice or knowledge of any process or summons, or any proceedings in the suit, or any opportunity of defending himself. Replication, that the defendant was the holder of shares in a company having its legal domicil in Paris, and thereby became subject to all the liabilities, rights and privileges attaching or belonging to shareholders, and in particular to the conditions contained in the statutes or articles of association. That by those statutes or articles, it was provided and agreed that all disputes arising during the liquidation of the company between the shareholders of the company, the administrators, the commissioners, or between the shareholders themselves, with respect to the affairs of the company, should be submitted to the jurisdiction of the French court; that every shareholder provoking a contest must elect a domicil at Paris, and in default election might be made for him at the office of the imperial procurator of the civil tribunal of the department in which the office of the company was situated, and that all summonses should be validly served at the domicil formally or impliedly chosen. That the company became bankrupt, and by the law of France the amount unpaid upon the defendant's shares became payable to the plaintiff as the company's assignee in bankruptcy; that the defendant made default, and provoked a contest; that he never elected a domicil; that the plaintiff thereupon caused a summons to be served at the office aforesaid, which summons required the defendant to appear in the French court to answer the plaintiff's claim; that by the law of France that office was the defendant's implied domicil of election for the purpose of service, and the service was regular; and that the defendant was bound to appear, but did not, whereupon the plaintiff recovered judgment by default against him for the amount unpaid on his shares:—Held, that the replication was good, although it did not allege that the defendant ever had any notice or knowledge of the statutes or articles, or of their provisions. Copin v. Adamson, 45 L. J., Ex. 15; 1 Ex. D. 17; 33 L. T. 33; 24 W. R. 85—C. A. Cp. Becquet v. McCarthy, 2 B. & Ad. 951.

—— In Cases of Divorce.]—See ante, col. 226.

—— Condemnation as Prize of War.]—The sentence of a foreign court of admiralty, condemning a ship or goods as lawful prize, is not conclusive in the courts in this country as to the ground of condemnation, unless stated upon the face of it without ambiguity. It is competent to our courts to examine the sentence carefully, to see whether it proceeds on that which would be a just ground of condemnation by the law of nations, or on another ground which would amount only to a breach of the municipal regulations of the condemning country. Hobbs v. Henning, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 791; 5 N. R. 406; 34 L. J., C. P. 117; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 223; 12 L. T. 205; 13 W. R. 431.

Procedure—Ord. XIV.]—An action upon a foreign judgment is an action for debt arising out of a contract within the meaning of Ord. III. r. 6, in which leave may be given to the plaintiff under Ord. XIV. to sign final judgment for the amount claimed. Hodsoll v. Baxter (28 L. J., Q. B. 61) followed. Grant v. Easton, 53 L. J., Q. B. 68; 13 Q. B. D. 302; 49 L. T. 645; 32 W. R. 239—C. A.

Pleading—Plea of no Jurisdiction.]—To a count upon a foreign judgment, a plea that the foreign court had no jurisdiction, because the defendant in the action there was not a trader and was not resident within a certain district, is bad, inasmuch as, consistently with it, the foreign court had jurisdiction over the person of the defendant and the subject-matter of the action, which was sufficient. Vanquelin v. Bouard, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 341; 3 N. R. 122; 33 L. J., C. P. 78; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 566; 9 L. T. 582; 12 W. R. 128.

—— Prout patet per recordum.] — A plea stating a judgment recovered in a foreign court, prout patet per recordum, is not a sufficient averment that such court was a court of record. Smith v. Nicolls, 7 Scott, 147; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 208; 7 D. P. C. 282; 1 Arn. 474; 8 L. J., C. P. 92.

A vice-admiralty court abroad is not a court of record. Ib.

—— Pleading Foreign Judgment as a Defence to Proceedings Here.]—Where a foreign judgment is relied upon as a defence to an action here, the defence should shew that the plaintiffs were subjects of, or resident in, or were present in, the foreign country when the action there was commenced, so as to be bound by reason of allegiance, or domicil, or temporary presence, by a decision of the court in which judgment was pronounced. General Steam Navigation Co. v. Guillon, 11 M. & W. 877; 13 L. J., Ex. 168.

C. being ordered by the Court of Probate to declare his interest to sustain a testamentary suit in respect of certain moneys in the English funds, alleged in his declaration, that by the law of Portugal the natural child of a man, not noble, dying intestate, and a bachelor is entitled to all the movable and immovable property of his father; and that C., in a suit of filiation and inheritance in the Portuguese courts, to which the defendant and her husband were parties, obtained a decree declaring C. to be the natural son of H. C., and to be entitled to his property, and ordering them to deliver to C. all property of H. C. which they had in their possession. The defendant admitted that the judgment of the Portuguese courts was in fact obtained. C. demurred on the ground that the judgment admitted by the plea established his interest:—The court held, that the judgment as pleaded was not conclusive as to C.'s interest to sustain a suit, overruled the demurrer without costs, and directed the parties to prove their respective cases. Doglioni v. Crispin, 35 L. J., P. 129; L. R. 1 H. L. 301; 15 L. T. 441. See also cases post, col. 347.

—— Notice of Proceedings.]—To an action upon a French judgment the defendant pleaded, that at the time of the commencement of the suit, and thence down to its termination, he was absent from France; and that he was not summoned to appear in, nor had he any notice or knowledge of, any of the proceedings. The plaintiff replied that the defendant was for a long time before the commencement of the suit resident in France; and there became indebted to the plaintiff who was a French subject; and that, by the French law, when a defendant is absent from the jurisdiction, a copy of the process in the action is served upon the procureur impérial, and another posted upon the door of the tribunal; and that then, if the defendant makes default, the plaintiff may proceed to judgment; that the defendant, after the accrual of the cause or action left France, and at the commencement of the action had no domicil or known place of abode in France; that the plaintiff instituted a suit against the defendant, and pursued the procedure before stated; that default was made by the defendant, and judgment recovered; and that the judgment was a valid and binding one by the law of France:—Held, that the defence was bad, as, consistently with its averments, the defendant might have been resident in France, or have had property there when the cause of action accrued; or might, through an agent, have been served with process. Maubourquet v. Wyse, Ir. R. 1 C. L. 471.

Held, by Fitzgerald and Hughes, BB., that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment, the plea being bad, and its defects not being aided by the replication. Ib.

Held, by Pigot, C.B., that the plaintiff, having alleged certain grounds of jurisdiction in his replication, they implicitly excluded all others; that the grounds so alleged were insufficient, the plaintiff having shewn that he had no cause of action; and that judgment ought to be for the defendant. Ib.

To an action on a French judgment the defendant pleaded, first that he was not duly served with process, that he had no notice of the action, nor had he the opportunity, according to the law, rules and regulations of the foreign court in which the judgment was obtained, of defending himself. The defendant pleaded, secondly, that the action upon which the judgment was obtained was upon a contract entered into in this country and not elsewhere; that before the judgment he was never resident or domiciled within the jurisdiction of the court, nor was he a native of France, nor did he ever owe allegiance to the country, nor was he at the time of contracting the alleged obligation in France or within the jurisdiction of the court:—Held, that the first of these two pleas was bad; and that the second was good. Duflos v. Burlingham, 34 L. T. 688.

—— Judgment not applying to whole Cause of Action.]—A first count was upon a contract to sell and deliver sound tares: breach, that the tares delivered were unsound. A second count was upon a promise properly to ship the tares: breach, that they were improperly shipped, and thereby damaged. Plea, that the plaintiff impleaded the defendant in a foreign court for not performing the identical promises in these counts, and that the court adjudged that the plaintiff had no cause of action in respect of the non-performance of the promises; and that such judgment was final and conclusive. In support of the plea a judgment of the foreign court was produced, "That the plaintiff be barred of his claim against the defendant on account of a cargo of tares received by the ship M. S." From a statement of reasons appended to this judgment, and which was, in fact, a statement of the case, it appeared that part of the tares contracted for reached the plaintiff; that he had refused to accept them by reason of their unsound condition; that he had sold them under protest, and that he had instituted that suit to rescind the contract and recover back the money from the defendant; but that he was barred by lapse of time, having brought the suit too late by the law of the country in which the court sat, and in which the goods were shipped, and in which the defendant resided:—Held, first, that the judgment did not support the plea, inasmuch as it clearly was not applicable to the cause of action contained in the second count. Callendar v. Dittrich, 4 Man. & G. 68; 4 Scott (N.R.) 682; 1 D. (N.S.) 730.

Held, secondly, that the plea could not be taken divisibly, so as to be considered as applicable to the first count only. Ib.

—— Replication to Plea.]—To an action on a French judgment, the defendant pleaded that he was not during the accruing of the cause of action, or any part of the proceedings, resident in France, or within the jurisdiction of the court, nor subject to the laws of France; that he was never served with any process or notice whatever, nor had he any notice whatever of the proceedings in the action, nor did he appear in court or have any opportunity of defending himself against the claim, and the proceedings were taken in his absence, and without his knowledge, privity, and consent. Replication, that the defendant became a shareholder in a company in France, subject to all the liabilities and rights attaching thereto; that the defendant was resident in England, and by reason thereof, it became necessary, by the law of France, for the defendant to elect a domicil in France, at which the directors of the company might notify to him all proceedings relative to the company or the defendant as such shareholder; that by the law of France all legal proceedings affecting any person having his real domicil out of that kingdom, left for him at such elected domicil, were as valid as if left at his real domicil in France; that the defendant made election of a domicil at a place in Paris, and gave notice thereof to the plaintiff; that the assets of the company being insufficient to discharge their debts, the defendant as a shareholder was, by the law of France, liable to pay a certain sum, and to be sued for the same by the plaintiff; that the plaintiff for the recovery thereof caused a summons to be left at his elected domicil, requiring him to appear in court at a certain time and place; and that the defendant did not appear, according to the exigency of the summons, whereupon the plaintiff recovered judgment by default:—Held, first, that the facts stated in the replication afforded an answer to the plea. Vallee v. Dumergue, 4 Ex. 290; 18 L. J., Ex. 398.

Held, secondly, that the word notice in the plea meant actual notice alone, and consequently the replication did not amount to an argumentative denial of that notice, but consisted of a statement of facts, shewing that no such notice need be given. Ib.

To an action on a judgment recovered in Belgium, the defendant pleaded that he was not at any time resident or domiciled within the jurisdiction of the court wherein the judgment was recovered; nor was he a native of Belgium; and that he was not, at any time before the recovery of the judgment, served with any process or summons; nor did he appear in the action; nor had he, at any time before the recovery, any notice of or any means of defending himself against the action. Replication, that the judgment was founded upon a bill of exchange, drawn in Belgium, according to the laws in force in that country, and accepted by the defendant, payable at the house of a person, at Bruges, in Belgium; and that at the time of the acceptance the defendant resided in Belgium at such house, which was his last domicil and residence there; and that, by the law of Belgium, where a bill is accepted, payable at a particular place, such place may, for all purposes, and in all actions relating to such bill, be deemed the elected domicil of such acceptor; and further, that the summons by which the action was commenced was duly served upon the defendant at the abovementioned house; and that, by the law of Belgium, such service is good and sufficient to give the court jurisdiction; and that the issuing of the process, the service of the summons, and the proceedings in the action, were in accordance with the law of Belgium; and according to such law the judgment is valid and binding on the defendant:—Held, that the replication was bad for not stating what the law of Belgium was at the time of the acceptance of the bill of exchange. Meens v. Thellusson, 8 Ex. 638; 22 L. J., Ex. 239; 1 C. L. R. 157.

Pendency of Appeal.]—Where an action is brought on a judgment of a foreign court, the pendency of an appeal in the foreign court against such judgment is no bar to the action, although it may afford ground for the equitable interposition of the English court in which the action is brought to prevent the possible abuse of its process, and on proper terms to stay execution. Scott v. Pilkington, 2 B. & S. 11; 31 L. J., Q. B. 81; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 557; 6 L. T. 21.

Discovery in aid of Defence.]—A foreign judgment cannot be questioned in the courts in this country; therefore, a bill for a discovery and a commission to examine witnesses abroad, in aid of the plaintiff's defence to an action brought in this country on a foreign judgment, is demurrable. Martin v. Nicolls, 3 Sim. 458.

What Recoverable.] — The plaintiff, in an action on a foreign judgment, has a right to recover in sterling a sum which, according to the rate of exchange between England and the foreign country at the time of the judgment, would at that time be equal to the sum if paid in the currency of that country. Scott v. Bevan, 2 B. & Ad. 78; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 152.

Equitable Execution.]—Creditor by judgment in Jamaica, filing bill here (for satisfaction from rents and profits remitted, and to be remitted), must shew his judgment to differ from judgment here, so that he cannot affect the land. Cathcart v. Lewis, 1 Ves. J. 463; 3 Bro. C. C. 516.

Other Matters.]—When the rules of pleading in a court in a foreign country having jurisdiction over British subjects, are by petition and answer, the several paragraphs of the answer can be read together, and not as in English pleadings treated as separate pleas. Hart v. Gumpach, 9 Moore, P. C. (N.S). 241; 42 L. J., P. C. 25; L. R. 4 P. C. 439; 21 W. R. 365.

The defendants, a French company, being indebted to the plaintiffs, allowed judgment to go against them by default on 4th April. On 8th April a receiver was appointed in England of the property (then in this country) the subject of the action, in which the defendants had an interest. On 15th April the defendants were declared by a French court to be in liquidation and a liquidator was appointed. By French law the appointment of a liquidator dates back ten days earlier than the date of his appointment:—Held, that the appointment of a liquidator in France could not be held to relate back so as to override the appointment by an English court of a receiver of property situate in England. Mason and Barry v. La Société des Métaux, 37 W. R. 735.

XII. SCOTCH AND IRISH JUDGMENTS.

a. Scotch Judgments.

Action on.]—An action lies on a Scotch judgment of horning against a Scotchman born, for a debt contracted in Scotland. Douglas v. Forrest, 4 Bing. 686: 1 M. & P. 663; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 157; 29 R. R. 695. S. P., Hay v. Fisher, 2 M. & W. 722; M. & H. 286; 6 L. J., Ex. 217; 1 Jur. 287.

An action may be maintained against a defendant resident in this country for costs awarded against him, after appearance, by a decree of the Court of Session in Scotland, in a suit for a divorce. Russell v. Smyth, 9 M. & W. 810; 1 D. (N.S.) 929; 11 L. J., Ex. 308.

But an interim or interlocutory order for payment of expenses made under 48 Geo. 3, c. 151, ss. 17, 18, in a suit in Scotland, by the Lords of Session, pending an appeal to the House of Lords, is an interlocutory order, on which an action cannot be maintained in England. Patrick v. Shedden, 2 El. & Bl. 14; 22 L. J., Q. B. 283; 17 Jur. 1154. S. P., Paul v. Roy, 15 Beav. 433; 21 L. J., Ch. 361. Cp. Nouvion v. Freeman, ante, col. 325.

—— Plea as to Jurisdiction.]—To an action upon a decree obtained against a party in the Court of Session, in Scotland, a plea that he was not, at the time of the commencement of the suit in that court, or at any time during the proceedings therein, in Scotland, or at any place within the jurisdiction of that court; nor was he at any time before the pronouncing of the decree, in any manner, according to the course and practice of the court, notified, nor did he know, of the proceedings, so that he might by himself, his proctor, attorney or agent, appear or plead, or in any way defend himself in the action; nor did he appear in or to any of the proceedings, whereby the decree was contrary to natural justice, and wholly inoperative and void against the defendant, is ill. Cowan v. Braidwood, 1 Man. & G. 288; 2 Scott (N.R.) 138; 9 D. P. C. 27; 10 L. J., C. P. 42.

Held, that the statement in the plea, that the decree was contrary to natural justice, was to be regarded as a mere conclusion of law from the facts previously alleged, and, consequently, not traversible. Ib.

—— Sufficiency of Pleading.]—Action on a policy of insurance, by assignees of a bankrupt. A plea as to 78*l.*, that the policy was made in Scotland, and that that sum was duly fenced and arrested, according to the law of Scotland, at the suit of G., for a debt due to him, until sufficient caution should be found in the books and session, that the same should be forthcoming to G.; that thereupon the sum became and was, according to the law of Scotland, in custody of the law, and subject to the order of the Court of Session; that such proceedings were afterwards had, that G. obtained final judgment; that the proceedings were regularly conducted, and that the judgment was final and conclusive against the assignees; and that, according to the law of Scotland, they are precluded from suing for that sum, and are, by reason of the premises, wholly barred,—is sufficient, without setting out the Scotch law. M'Leod v. Schultze, 1 D. & L. 614; 13 L. J., Ex. 321.

—— Decree of Divorce—Conclusive upon the Merits.]—The English courts will recognise as valid the decision of a competent foreign Christian tribunal dissolving the marriage between a domiciled native in the country where such tribunal has jurisdiction and an English woman when the decree of divorce is not impeached by collusion or fraud. And this, although the marriage may have been solemnised in England, and may have been dissolved for a cause which would not have been sufficient to obtain a divorce in England. Harvey v. Farnie, 52 L. J., P. 33; 8 App. Cas. 43; 48 L. T. 273; 31 W. R. 433; 47 J. P. 308—H. L. (E.)

Other Matters.]—In 1886 a company registered in Queensland issued debentures to the Union Bank of Australia conferring a charge on its uncalled capital. No notice of these debentures was given to the shareholders. Later in 1886 the capital was called up and made payable by instalments in 1887. In February, 1887, a Scotch company sued the Queensland company for negligence, and served upon the Scotch shareholders of the Queensland company a process called "arrestment on the dependence of the action," which by Scotch law operated as a complete assignment of the calls to the Scotch company, in the event of their making good their claim, as from the date of service. Orders having been made both in Queensland and England for the winding-up of the Queensland company, an order was made in the English winding-up to restrain the Scotch company from proceeding with their action, but without prejudice to any security obtained by the arrestment; and the Scotch court, having regard to the terms of the English order, recalled the arrestment. Both the Scotch company and the bank established claims against the Queensland company in the winding-up. It was proved on the appeal that by Scotch law and international law as administered by the Scotch courts, the Scotch company were entitled to priority over the bank:—Held, that inasmuch as the Scotch court in recalling the arrestment intended that the claim of the Scotch company should be decided in the same way as if the Scotch proceedings had gone on, the Scotch company were entitled to priority. Queensland Mercantile Co., In re, Australasian Investment Co., Ex parte, 61 L. J., Ch. 145; [1892] 1 Ch. 219; 66 L. T. 433—C. A.

b. IRISH JUDGMENTS.

Action on.]—An action lies upon a judgment recovered in Ireland, as such judgment is not a record in England. Harris v. Saunders, 6 D. & R. 471 ; 4 B. & C. 411 ; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 239 ; 28 R. R. 310.

How far Conclusive.]—The 13 Vict. c. 18, s. 9, applies to incorporated companies registered and carrying on business in England and also in Ireland by means of an agent there. Sheehy v. Professional Life Insurance Co., 3 C. B. (N.S.) 597 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 233 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 27 ; 6 W. R. 103—Ex. Ch.

Therefore, where in an action against such a company, the Queen's Bench in Ireland made an order authorising substitution of service by delivering a copy of the writ and a copy of the order to the agent in Dublin, and by sending through the post like copies to the London agent, and the plaintiff had an appearance entered for the company, and obtained judgment, and afterwards brought an action upon the judgment in England :—Held, that the court in Ireland had authority to make the order, and that the judgment obtained by the plaintiff was irregular. Ib.

Held, also, that even if the order was irregular, the court would not interfere. Ib.

A plea of nul tiel record, pleaded to an action of debt on an Irish judgment, tenders an issue of fact, even since the Act of Union. Collins v. Mathew (Viscount), 5 East, 473 ; 2 Sm. 25.

Plea to Jurisdiction.]—In an action on a judgment of one of the superior courts in Ireland, the defendant, though he cannot contest the merits of the action, or the propriety of the decision, may shew that the court had not properly jurisdiction as to the defendant under the circumstances. Ferguson v. Mahon, 11 A. & E. 179 ; 3 P. & D. 143 ; 9 L. J., Q. B. 146.

Therefore, where a defendant pleaded to such action, that he was never arrested upon or served with, nor at any time had notice of any process at the suit of the plaintiff for the cause of action on which the judgment was obtained, nor ever appeared in the action :—Held, that the plea was a good defence. Ib.

Declaration on an Irish judgment. Plea, that the defendant was never served with any writ of summons, nor had he any notice of the action. Replication, that the court, under the provisions of an act of parliament in that behalf, and upon an affidavit of the plaintiff's attorney, made an order directing that personal service of the writ of summons in the action on the defendant's attorney, and the transmission of copies thereof, and of the order in a registered letter to the defendant, addressed to his place of business in London, should be deemed good service of the writ upon him, unless cause was shewn to the contrary in six days after service of the rule making the order on his attorney and such transmission by post as aforesaid, and that such service and transmission were effected as directed by the court, and that the rule of court making the order was made absolute :—Rejoinder, that the order of the court was obtained on the strength of the affidavit of the plaintiff's attorney, which affidavit was untrue, and that the plaintiff never had any right of action against the defendant in respect of the cause of action in respect of which the judgment was obtained :—Held, that the rejoinder was bad, and that the replication was good. Crawley v. Isaacs, 16 L. T. 529.

To an action of debt on an Irish judgment the defendant pleaded that the judgment was entered up on a warrant of attorney given to the plaintiff to secure payment on a bond ; that after the bond and warrant of attorney were given, and before judgment was entered up, the plaintiff became bankrupt, and the debt in question was vested in his assignee, who had brought an action on the judgment before that commenced by the plaintiff, and that the same was still depending :—Held, that the plaintiff was the person by whom the judgment ought to have been entered up, though after his bankruptcy ; that in so doing, and in bringing the action, he must be considered as a trustee for the creditors ; and the pendency of the other action, as here pleaded, was no defence. Guinness v. Carroll, 1 B. & Ad. 459 ; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 11.

—— English Judgment—Action in Ireland.]—The creditors of a person resident in Ireland filed a bill in the English Court of Chancery, and obtained a decree for an account, &c., and afterwards (the property of the debtor lying chiefly in Ireland) filed a bill in the Court of Chancery there, praying to have the full benefit of the proceedings in the English suit. The Court of Chancery in Ireland dismissed such second bill as for want of jurisdiction :—Held, that the judgment of the Court of Chancery in Ireland was erroneous ; that the proceedings in the English Court of Chancery were in the nature of a foreign judgment, and were to be treated as such in Ireland, namely, as primâ facie evidence of the right in the party who had obtained the judgment. Houlditch v. Donegall (Marquis), 2 Cl. & F. 470 ; 8 Bli. (N.S.) 301.

English Judgment entered in Ireland.]—When a certificate of an English judgment had been entered in the Common Pleas in Ireland, pursuant to 31 & 32 Vict. c. 54, on motion to set aside the judgment entered in the Common Pleas, on the ground that the English judgment, on which the certificate was founded, was irregularly entered up as a final judgment, while demurrers to some of the pleas were still undecided :—Held, that there was no judgment of the Irish court, but merely an entry of record of the certificate of an English judgment. Bailey v. Welply, Ir. R. 4 C. L. 243.

Held, also, that the certificate of the proper officer in England was conclusive on such a motion that there was such a final judgment. Ib.

Held, also, that a subsequent order of the officer in England, staying all proceedings on the English judgment while the demurrers remained undisposed of, had no application to the registry of the certificate in Ireland, which had been regularly done at the date of the order. Ib.

A judgment obtained in an inferior court of record in England was removed into the Court of Queen's Bench, and a certificate purporting to be under the Judgments Extension Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 54), but omitting the material allegation that the judgment was obtained "after appearance" or "after service," was signed by the Master of the Queen's Bench at Westminster, and was registered by the Master of the Common Pleas at Dublin ; the court, acting under s. 4, set aside the registration, and all subsequent proceedings founded upon it. Part v. Scannell, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 426.

XIII. COLONIAL JUDGMENT.

In General.]—The same rules are applicable respecting the enforcement of colonial judgments as are applicable respecting the enforcement of foreign judgments. Simpson v. Fogo, 1 H. & M. 195; 32 L. J., Ch. 249; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 403; 8 L. T. 61; 11 W. R. 418; 1 N. R. 422.

Defendant must have been Served with Process.]—An action is not maintainable on a colonial judgment, unless it appears that the defendant was regularly served with process, and had an opportunity of defending the suit, even although it appears to be the practice of that court not to give personal notice. Buchanan v. Rucker, 9 East, 192; 1 Camp. 65; 9 R. R. 531. Cp. Schibsby v. Westenholz, and other cases, ante, col. 332.

For, the law will not raise an assumpsit upon such a judgment obtained by default against a party who, upon the face of the proceedings, appeared only to have been summoned by nailing up a copy of the declaration at the court-house door; it not appearing that he had ever been present in the colony, or subject to the jurisdiction of the colonial court at the time the suit commenced and afterwards, although by a law of the colony, if a defendant is absent from the island, and without an attorney, manager, or overseer there, such mode of summoning him shall be deemed a good service. Ib.

A judgment of a colonial court against a party absent from the place, and not represented by any agent upon whom the process of the court could be served, is primâ facie void. Smith v. Nicolls, 7 Scott, 147; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 208; 7 D. P. C. 282; 1 Arn. 474; 8 L. J., C. P. 92.

Declaration on a decree of the Supreme Court of Newfoundland. Plea, that the decree was made in respect of an amended bill; and that, before the filing thereof, the defendant was out of the jurisdiction of the court, and has so continued; that he was not served with a copy of such bill, and had no notice of any process therein, and that the proceedings were taken in his absence and ex parte. Replication, that, at the commencement of the suit, the defendant was within the jurisdiction, and was duly served with process in respect of the original bill in the suit, and appeared and appointed H. E. to be attorney for him, the defendant, in the suit: and H. E. accordingly became the attorney of the defendant, and authorised to conduct his defence; and that he had notice of the amended bill. Rejoinder traversed that H. E. had notice of the amended bill:—Held, after verdict for the plaintiff, that the defendant, by merely traversing the notice, admitted that H. E. had authority from the defendant to act as attorney for him, as well in respect of the amended as of the original bill; and that such authority, given by the defendant about to leave the jurisdiction, would support the decree. Henderson v. Henderson, 11 Q. B. 1015; 17 L. J., Q. B. 209; 12 Jur. 773.

—— Service on Person as Agent for absent Party.]—To render a colonial judgment void, on the ground that it is contrary to the law of the country where it was given, it must be shewn clearly and unequivocally to be so. Becquet v. MacCarthy, 2 B. & Ad. 951. Cp. Copin v. Adamson, 1 Ex. D. 17; 45 L. J., Ex. 15; 33 L. T. 560; 24 W. R. 85—C. A.

Where the law of a British colony required that, in a suit instituted against an absent party, the process should be served upon the king's attorney-general in the colony; but it was not expressly provided that the attorney-general should communicate with the absent party:—Held, that such law was not so contrary to natural justice as to render void a judgment obtained against a party who had resided within the jurisdiction of the court at the time when the cause of action accrued, but had withdrawn himself before the proceedings were commenced. Ib.

—— Company—Colonial Act enabling Chairman to Sue and be Sued.]—An act of the legislature of New South Wales enabled the chairman of a company to sue and be sued on behalf of the company, and provided that execution upon any judgment in such an action against the chairman might be issued against the goods and lands of any member of the company in like manner as if such judgment had been obtained against him personally:—Held, first, that the colonial legislature had authority to make such an act, and that it contained nothing repugnant to the law of England or to natural justice. Bank of Australasia v. Nias, 16 Q. B. 717; 20 L. J., Q. B. 284; 15 Jur. 967. S. P., Bank of Australasia v. Harding, 9 C. B. 661; 19 L. J., C. P. 345; 14 Jur. 1094.

Held, secondly, that the specific mode provided for enforcing the judgment by execution against a member of the company could not be obtained against a shareholder out of the colony. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the judgment against the chairman might be made the foundation of an action against a member beyond the territory of the colony in the same manner as if he had been personally served in the colony, and the judgment had been against him as a party to the record. Ib.

—— Indian Act enabling Secretary to Sue and be Sued.]—By an act of the council of India, to enable a banking company to sue and be sued in the name of their secretary, it was enacted that all actions against the company should be brought against the secretary for the time being as the nominal defendant; that a memorial of the names of the directors and secretary, and proprietors of the bank, should be inrolled; and that every judgment in any action in India against the secretary should (subject to the express provisions of the act) "have the like effect and operation upon and against the property and funds of the bank, as if such judgment had been made or pronounced against all its members, and as if all the members had been parties to such action, and as if the act had not passed." The act provided that, in case execution upon any judgment in such action, obtained against the secretary, should be ineffectual for obtaining satisfaction against the funds of the bank, execution might issue; first, against proprietors for the time being, and, that proving ineffectual, against persons who were proprietors at the time of the contract; provided that no such execution should issue against any other person than the actual party to the suit, without leave of the court in which the action was brought:—Held, that there was nothing in the act to prevent a creditor, having obtained a judgment against the secretary of the bank in India, from enforcing it by action against a shareholder in this country; the provisions as to execution merely regulating the mode of procedure in India, and that the non-inrolment of a memorial was no answer to an action upon the judgment here. Kelsall v. Marshall, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 241; 26 L. J., C. P. 19; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1142; 5 W. R. 114.

How far Examinable.]—A judgment of a colonial court is not open to examination, as to the merits of it, in an action brought upon it in the courts of this country. Henderson v. Henderson, 6 Q. B. 288; 13 L. J., Q. B. 274; 9 Jur. 755. Cp. Castrique v. Imrie, and other cases, ante, col. 327.

Nul tiel Record.]—A plea of nul tiel record to an action upon a judgment of a colonial court is bad. Philpott v. Adams, 7 H. & N. 888; 31 L. J., Ex. 421.

A plea of nul tiel record cannot be pleaded to an action on a colonial judgment. Chapman v. Sherrie, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 36.

Merger.]—A colonial judgment obtained against a co-contractor cannot be insisted on by way of merger in an action on such judgment. Bank of Australasia v. Nias, 16 Q. B. 717; 20 L. J., Q. B. 284; 15 Jur. 967.

Insolvent Person — Sequestration.]—To an action on a judgment at the Cape of Good Hope, the defendant pleaded that by an ordinance in that colony relating to insolvents, it was enacted that the court might, on the petition of an insolvent, place his estate under sequestration, and that further execution of any judgment against him or his estate for any debt should, after lodging the order for sequestration, be stayed during the pendency of such sequestration; and that all actions pending against any insolvent for any debt provable against his estate should, upon any order being made for sequestration, be stayed. The plea stated the petition of the defendant, the surrender of his estate, it being placed under sequestration, and that the estate was distributed, and upon such distribution the plaintiff received a dividend of 1*s.* 6*d.* in the pound on the amount of the judgment debt in the action:—Held, that the plea was bad, as it merely shewed a temporary suspension of the execution during the pendency of the sequestration, but not a discharge of the person or estate of the insolvent. Frith v. Wollaston, 7 Ex. 194; 21 L. J., Ex. 108.

Action on—Allegation of Jurisdiction.]—A declaration on a judgment of a colonial court need not state that the court had jurisdiction over the parties or the cause. Robertson v. Struth, 5 Q. B. 941; D. & M. 773; 8 Jur. 404.

—— In Assumpsit.]—A declaration on a colonial judgment framed in assumpsit did not aver the plaintiff's readiness to perform his part of the contract, but it disclosed a good cause of action for malfeasance:—Held, that a court of equity would not treat the judgment as void, though the objection to the declaration might have been good on general demurrer. Jack v. Tease, 12 Ir. Ch. Rep. 279.

—— Appeal.]—Where the time for appealng from the judgment had elapsed, the court gave time to the parties to apply to the judicial committee of the privy council in England for liberty to appeal, or to apply to a court of law for liberty to plead to an action which had been commenced on the judgment. Ib.

The question upon the construction of a contract for a security, by way of mortgage, over land in a colony, having been before a court of competent jurisdiction in the colony, and a foreclosure and judicial sale directed, the allegation of fraud merely general and denied, an injunction was refused. White v. Hall, 12 Ves. 321; 8 R. R. 326.

A mortgage deed was established by a decree of the privy council, which reversed the decree of the court of Grenada in a suit to which the mortgagor and the first and second mortgagees were parties. The mortgagor was not a party to the appeal to the privy council, but was held to have been so far represented in interest by the second mortgagee, as not to be entitled to file a bill in England impeaching the deed so upheld. Furquharson v. Seton, 5 Russ. 45.

The next of kin of an intestate filed their bill in equity in the supreme court of Newfoundland against A., the brother and deceased partner of the intestate, for an account of the estate of the father of A., and of the intestate possessed by A., and an account of the partnership transactions and the dealings of A. with the estate since the death of the intestate; the bill was taken pro confesso against A. in the colonial court; and, on a reference, the master reported that certain sums were due to the several next of kin on the account of the estate of the intestate's father possessed by A., but that no account between A. and the intestate had been laid before him. The supreme court decreed that the sums found by the master to be due to the next of kin, and the costs, should be paid to them by A. The next of kin brought their actions in this country against A. upon the decree. A. then filed his bill in this court against the next of kin and personal representative of the intestate, stating that the intestate's estate was indebted to him on the partnership accounts and on private transactions; alleging various errors and irregularities in the proceedings in the supreme court; and that A. intended to appeal therefrom to the privy council; and praying that the estate of the intestate might be administered, the partnership accounts taken, the amount of the debt due to A. ascertained and paid, and the next of kin restrained by injunction from proceeding in their actions. Demurrer, for want of equity, allowed on the ground that the whole of the matters were in question between the parties, and might properly have been the subject of adjudication in the suit before the supreme court of Newfoundland; that inasmuch as the privy council is the court of appeal from the colonial court, and has jurisdiction to stay the execution of the decree pending the appeal, the court will not interfere by injunction on the ground of error or irregularity in the decree of the colonial court. Quære, whether, in a case of error shewn in the judgment of the court of a foreign country, from which there was no appeal to any of her Majesty's courts, the decision would be the same. Henderson v. Henderson, 3 Hare, 100. S. C., 6 Q. B. 288; 13 L. J., Q. B. 274; 9 Jur. 755, post.

—— Defence in Foreign Court.]—Any pleas which might have been pleaded to the original action cannot be pleaded here to an action on a colonial judgment. Kelsall v. Marshall, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 241; 26 L. J., C. P. 19; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1142; 5 W. R. 114. Cp. Vanquelin v. Bouard, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 341; 3 N. R. 122; 33 L. J., C. P. 78; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 566; 9 L. T. 582; 12 W. R. 128.

No Estoppel to Action brought in England.]—A judgment obtained by a defendant in a colonial court cannot be pleaded by way of estoppel to a declaration in this country for the same cause of action, unless it is shewn that the judgment so obtained would be final and conclusive in the colony. Plummer v. Woodburne 7 D. & R. 25; 4 B. & C. 625; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 6.

A judgment obtained in a colonial court is no estoppel, nor is it pleadable in bar to an action brought in England for the same cause. Bank of Australasia v. Harding, 9 C. B. 661; 19 L. J., C. P. 345; 14 Jur. 1094.

A plea of a judgment recovered in the vice-admiralty court at Sierra Leone, is no bar to an action brought for the same cause in this country. Smith v. Nicolls, 7 Scott, 147; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 208; 7 D. P. C. 282; 1 Arn. 474; 8 L. J., C. P. 92.

Administration — Judgment — Creditor.]—A colonial judgment having been obtained against the personal representatives (called executors dative) of an intestate, who died in a British colony, leaving assets in the colony and in Ireland:—Held, in a suit instituted in Ireland for the administration of the personal estate of the deceased, that—assuming the executors dative to have been duly appointed and the judgment to have been regularly obtained, according to the law of the colony—no privity existed between the executors dative and the administrator in Ireland of the personal estate of the intestate, and that consequently the colonial judgment was not, against the Irish administrator, evidence of the debt claimed by the judgment creditor, on the foot of which the judgment had been recovered. Tighe v. Tighe, Ir. R. 11 Eq. 203.

As to Balance of Account.]—An action lies upon the decree of a colonial court of equity for the balance of an account between partners. Henley v. Soper, 2 Man. & Ry. 153; 8 B. & C. 16; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 210.

An action is maintainable upon a decree of a colonial court of equity, in a suit which has terminated in ascertaining a clear balance, whereby one party is ordered to pay a sum certain to the other. Henderson v. Henderson, 6 Q. B. 288; 13 L. J., Q. B. 274; 9 Jur. 755. S. C., 3 Hare, 100, supra.

A. BY SHERIFF.

1. When Entitled to Relief.

Infant Claimant.]—The court has power to give a sheriff relief, though the claimant is an infant. Claridge v. Collins, 7 D. P. C. 698; 3 Jur. 894.

Not when Interested.]—Where the sheriff is placed in circumstances which give him an interest in either side, the court will not relieve him. Duddin v. Long, 1 Scott, 281; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 299; 3 D. P. C. 139.

The court refused to interfere in favour of the sheriff, where the under-sheriff's partner appeared to be concerned for some of the parties. Ib.

If the under-sheriff is the execution creditor, or partner in business of the execution creditor, the sheriff is not entitled to relief. Ostler v. Bower, 4 D. P. C. 605; 1 H. & W. 653.

Conduct of.]—A sheriff is entitled to call upon an execution creditor and claimants to interplead, unless he has acted dishonestly, or his conduct has prejudiced either of the parties. Holt v. Frost, 3 H. & N. 821; 28 L. J., Ex. 55.

The fact, therefore, that the sheriff had, down to the seizure of the execution debtor's goods, acted as the attorney of a claimant, and had given him notice of the execution, is not alone sufficient to prevent his calling on the parties to interplead. Ib.

Where an under-sheriff, who was acting as attorney for certain creditors of the defendant, informed them of a fieri facias at the suit of the plaintiff having been placed in his hands to execute, by which means the issuing of a fiat in bankruptcy against the defendant was accelerated, and the plaintiff's execution thereby defeated, the court refused to grant the sheriff relief. Cox v. Balne, 2 D. & L. 718; 14 L. J., Q. B. 95; 9 Jur. 182.

Possession of Goods or Proceeds—Intention to Seize.]—A sheriff can only interplead while he is in possession of goods seized under a fi. fa., or intends to seize goods or holds the proceeds of an execution. Ord. LVII. rr. 1 (b) 16-17, does not alter the practice in this respect under the Interpleader Act (1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58), s. 6, and the Common Law Procedure Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 126). Moore v. Hawkins, 15 R. 166; 43 W. R. 235.

An actual seizure of goods by the sheriff under an execution is not required to give the court jurisdiction—an intended seizure of them by him is sufficient. Lea v. Rossi, 11 Ex. 13; 24 L. J., Ex. 280; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 384. S. P., Day v. Carr, 7 Ex. 883.

Where the sheriff, after having gone to the premises of the defendant to take the goods under a fi. fa., has withdrawn without seizing them, on notice of an adverse claim, and has not the goods in his possession when he applies to the court, he is not entitled to relief. Holton v. Guntrip, 3 M. & W. 145; 6 D. P. C. 130; M. & H. 324.

The sheriff cannot apply, unless the goods or money in dispute be actually in his hands. Scott v. Lewis, 2 C. M. & R. 289; 4 D. P. C. 259; 1 Gale, 204; 5 Tyr. 1083; 4 L. J., Ex. 321.

Goods having been seized and sold under an execution, and the proceeds paid over to the execution creditor, the sheriff cannot apply for relief, though he had no notice of the claim until after the sale. Inland v. Bushell, 2 H. & W. 118; 5 D. P. C. 147.

If a sheriff has paid over the produce of an execution to a judgment creditor, after notice of a claim, he is too late to move for relief. Anderson v. Calloway, 1 C. & M. 182; 1 D. P. C. 636; 3 Tyr. 237; 2 L. J., Ex. 32.

If, having seized goods in execution, which are claimed by another party, the sheriff delivers up part of the goods to the claimant, he thereby precludes himself from relief. Braine v. Hunt, 2 D. P. C. 391; 2 C. & M. 418; 3 L. J., Ex. 85. S. P., Kirk v. Almond, 2 L. J., Ex. 13.

—— Seizure of Equity of Redemption.]—Where goods seized in execution by a sheriff under a fi. fa. have been previously assigned by the execution debtor to a third person as security for a debt, the sheriff is not bound to interplead and thereby enable proceedings to be taken for an order to sell being made by a judge under s. 13 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1860, but is at liberty to withdraw, though the value of the goods seized exceed the sum secured by the bill of sale, and the execution debtor, therefore, has an equity of redemption which is valuable. Scarlett v. Hanson, 53 L. J., Q. B. 62; 12 Q. B. D. 213; 50 L. T. 75; 32 W. R. 310—C. A.

—— Withdrawing.] — The sheriff is not entitled to call upon parties to interplead where he has already exercised a discretion in the matter, as by withdrawing from the goods. Crump v. Day, 4 C. B. 760.

Where, after the making of an interpleader order, the sheriff, with the consent of the execution creditor and the claimant, temporarily withdrew from possession:—Held, that the goods were no longer in custodiâ legis, and that the landlord was entitled to distrain upon them, although he knew that the interpleader proceedings were pending. Cropper v. Warner, 1 Cab. & E. 152.

Notice to Sheriff—Sufficiency.]—Notice from some person whose name is not mentioned, that a fiat has been issued against the defendant, does not amount to a sufficient claim to entitle the sheriff to protection under the Interpleader Act. Bentley v. Hook, 2 C. & M. 426; 4 Tyr. 229; 3 L. J., Ex. 87.

Not Party against whom Process issued.]—Where a seizure by a sheriff under a fi. fa. is disputed, on the ground that the goods on which the levy was made were held by the defendant, not in his own right, but merely as an executor in trust for others, the defendant is to be considered as "not being the party against whom the process issued," and the sheriff may apply for an interpleader rule. Fenwick v. Laycock, 1 G. & D. 532; 2 Q. B. 108; 11 L. J., Q. B. 146; 6 Jur. 341.

The circumstance of the goods seized being in the possession of a stranger, and not of the defendant against whom the execution issued, does not prevent the sheriff from applying for relief. Allen v. Gibbon, 2 D. P. C. 292.

On the 20th August the sheriff, under a fi. fa. against A., took possession of B.'s furniture in A.'s house. Both before and after seizure B. gave formal notice to the sheriff that the furniture was his, and on the 23rd issued the writ in this action against the sheriff for an injunction and damages. On the 25th August the sheriff issued an interpleader summons, under which an issue was directed and an order made for the sheriff withdrawing from possession on payment of 100*l.* into court. The sheriff accordingly withdrew from possession on the 1st September. B.'s title was afterwards admitted by the judgment creditor, and the 100*l.* paid out of court to B. B. now brought this action to trial against the sheriff for damages and costs:—Held, that the sheriff had not exceeded the scope of his duty in retaining possession till ordered to withdraw under the interpleader order, and that the action must be dismissed, but without costs, on the ground that the sheriff might have applied to the judge, under the interpleader order, to dispose of the matters in question between him and the plaintiff. Aylwin v. Evans, 52 L. J., Ch. 105; 47 L. T. 568.

Where a sheriff's officer had notice, at the time of the seizure under a fi. fa., that the goods seized were not the goods of the person against whom the writ issued, the court will not interfere to protect the sheriff. Tufton v. Harding, 29 L. J., Ch. 225; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 116; 1 L. T. 264; 8 W. R. 122.

Money Paid without Levy.]—Where the sheriff seized goods under a fi. fa., and a person other than the person against whom the process issued claimed the goods and paid out the sheriff under protest:—Held, that the money so paid to the sheriff under protest was the proceeds of goods taken in execution within the meaning of Ord. LVII. r. 1 (b.), and that therefore the sheriff was entitled to interplead in respect thereof. Smith v. Critchfield, 54 L. J., Q. B. 366; 14 Q. B. D. 873; 54 L. T. 122; 33 W. R. 920—C. A.

Execution against Tenant—Landlord.]—Where an execution has been levied, and a landlord makes a claim upon the sheriff for rent, which the execution creditor has not expressly disputed, although the claim may be disputable, whether as regards the amount of rent due, or as regards the liability of the property which has been seized to distress, the sheriff is not entitled to an interpleader, at all events unless the landlord claims any part of the property. Bateman v. Farnsworth, 29 L. J., Ex. 365; 2 L. T. 390.

Indemnity.]—Where a sheriff has seized goods under a fi. fa., and a claim to them is put in by another person, he is not bound to accept an indemnity from the execution creditor, but may obtain relief. Levy v. Champneys, 2 D. P. C. 454.

Where the sheriff seized goods in execution which were under distress for rent due to the landlord, the court refused to grant him relief, though he had applied for indemnity to the execution creditor, which had been refused. Haythorn v. Bush, 2 C. & M. 689; 2 D. P. C. 641; 3 L. J., Ex. 210.

Time for Application.]—The sheriff need not wait for proceedings to be taken against him before he applies for relief. Green v. Brown, 3 D. P. C. 337.

But he must not apply before claim made. Isaac v. Spilsbury, 10 Bing. 3; 3 M. & Scott, 341; 2 D. P. C. 211.

—— Where Delay.]—A sheriff will not be entitled to relief, unless he comes "immediately" on receiving notice of an adverse claim. Devereux v. John, 1 D. P. C. 548.

He must come as soon as possible. Cook v. Allen, 2 D. P. C. 11; 3 Tyr. 586; 1 C. & M. 542; 2 L. J., Ex. 199. S. P., Tufton v. Harding, 29 L. J., Ch. 225; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 116; 1 L. T. 264; 8 W. R. 122.

Where there was great delay on the part of the sheriff in applying to the court, in consequence of negotiations between the parties, and the execution creditor afterwards abandoned his claim, the court refused to make the latter pay costs. Dixon v. Ensell, 2 D. P. C. 621.

Where a sheriff took possession under a fi. fa. in November, and, a few days afterwards, had notice that the goods belonged to a trustee, and kept possession until the 28th January, and did not apply to the court till Easter term:—Held, that an issue, at the instance of the sheriff, could be granted only upon paying the costs of both the other parties, as the sheriff ought to have applied in the term next after the claim was made. Beale v. Overton, 5 D. P. C. 599; 2 M. & W. 534; M. & H. 172; 6 L. J., Ex. 118; 1 Jur. 544.

On the 16th January, 1847, the sheriff seized the goods and moneys of the defendant under a fi. fa., the net proceeds of which he handed over to the plaintiffs in part satisfaction of their judgment. He at the same time seized bills of exchange and a promissory note, which, not being due, he retained. On the 3rd February he received a notice that a fiat in bankruptcy had issued against the defendant. On the 4th he was ruled to return the writ; and on the 11th he returned what he had done under the writ. On the 18th he received notice that assignees had been appointed; and the bills and note were claimed on their behalf. After some negotiation with the solicitor to the fiat, the sheriff took out an interpleader summons on the 29th April:—Held, that he had by his laches disentitled himself to relief. Mutton v. Young, 4 C. B. 371; 16 L. J., C. P. 165; 11 Jur. 414.

Where it appeared that the sheriff had been guilty of neglect, the court refused to relieve him from any liability occasioned thereby. Brackenbury v. Laurie, 3 D. P. C. 180.

Nature of Claim.]—The court will not interfere, for the sheriff, quia timet, unless a claim to property is actually made. Isaac v. Spilsbury, 10 Bing. 3; 3 M. & Scott, 341; 2 D. P. C. 211.

Giving notice of a fiat in bankruptcy having issued is not equivalent to a claim by the assignees to the goods sold. Bently or Bartley v. Hook, 2 D. P. C. 339; 2 C. & M. 426; 4 Tyr. 229; 3 L. J., Ex. 87.

Where goods were taken in execution, and a claim was set up under a bill of sale which bore date after the levy, the court discharged the sheriff's application for relief, and made him pay the costs of the execution creditor. Oxfordshire (Sheriff), In re, 6 D. P. C. 136.

A plaintiff having obtained a judgment against the defendant for a sum less than 50*l.*, including costs, was ordered to pay to the defendant the costs of abortive bankruptcy proceedings commenced under a debtor's summons for that debt. The amount was ordered to be paid to the sheriff, and the plaintiff claiming to set off that sum against his judgment debt, the defendant commenced an action against the sheriff to have the amount paid over to him. An interpleader order was thereupon made to decide whether the plaintiff or the defendant was entitled to the funds in the sheriff's hands:—Held, that this was not a case for interpleader at all, there being no claim by the plaintiff to the goods and chattels taken in execution, so as to bring the case within 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, c. 6. Smith v. Saunders, 37 L. T. 359.

—— Equitable Claims.]—See infra, col. 357.

—— Lien.]—The court will relieve the sheriff in the case of conflicting claims on property seized by him, though that claim is only of a lien, and not of the whole property. Ford v. Baynton, 1 D. P. C. 357.

—— Next of Kin.]—The court will not grant an interpleader rule on behalf of a sheriff who has been served with notice of a claim to goods taken in execution, made by a party who claims a share in them as one of the next of kin to a person deceased, to whom the defendant has taken out administration, and who had previously obtained an injunction in equity against the defendant's disposing of the property taken in execution. Roach v. Wright, 8 M. & W. 155; 1 D. (N.S.) 56; 10 L. J., Ex. 267; 5 Jur. 755.

—— Interest as Partner.]—A sheriff is not entitled to apply for relief, on the ground of claim set up in respect of an interest as a partner, in goods seized under a writ of execution. Holmes v. Mentze, 5 N. & M. 563; 4 D. P. C. 300; 4 A. & E. 127; 1 H. & W. 608; 5 L. J., K. B. 62.

So, although the claim states that the balance of accounts is so much in favour of the claimant, as to give him the sole beneficial interest in the property seized. Ib.

But where the execution creditor refuses either to admit or to deny the alleged partnership, the court will enlarge the time for the sheriff's return to the writ until he is indemnified. Ib.

—— Various Writs.]—Where the sheriff has levied under a fi. fa., and while in possession he receives notice that other writs of execution have been issued against the defendant's goods, and that the first execution creditor is not entitled to the whole proceeds of the levy, the sheriff is not entitled to relief. Salmon v. James, 1 D. P. C. 369.

Where a sheriff seizes under one fi. fa., and the question is whether that writ ought to have precedence of another, the court will not grant the sheriff relief. Day v. Wildock, 1 D. P. C. 523.

An order was made under the statute, where goods had been taken by the sheriff under a fi. fa. and sold by him, another fi. fa. having issued in the meantime against the same goods, and where a party claimed title to the property against both the plaintiffs, the defendant and the sheriff, and complained that the goods had been sold improvidently, and in spite of notice from the owner. Slowman v. Back, 3 B. & Ad. 103.

Inquiry by Sheriff.]—Before the sheriff applies he is bound to inquire into the nature of the claims set up; and, therefore, if he brings parties before the court in consequence of a claim which is clearly bad in point of law, the court will compel him to pay the costs. Bishop v. Hinxman, 2 D. P. C. 166.

Notice of Adverse Claim.]—A sheriff, who has seized goods, cannot file a bill of interpleader, without first acquainting the creditor with the adverse claim, in order to give him an opporunity of withdrawing his claim. Dutton v. Furniss, 35 Beav. 461; 35 L. J., Ch. 463; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 386; 14 L. T. 319; 14 W. R. 600.

Protection of Sheriff.]—The sheriff, having seized goods under a fi. fa. which were claimed by a third person, gave notice of the claim to the execution creditor, who five days afterwards gave him notice to admit the claim and to withdraw from possession. The sheriff did not withdraw, but took out an interpleader summons, upon the hearing of which the judge made no order, and refused to order that no action should be brought against the sheriff:—Held, that the judge had properly refused to make an order protecting the sheriff from any action. Sodeau v. Shorey, 74 L. T. 240—C. A.

Where an interpleader order provided that no action should be brought against the sheriff, and the order was subsequently rescinded, owing to the default of the execution creditor to return the issue:—Held, that the claimant had no cause of action against the sheriff for the original seizure. Martin v. Tritton, 1 Cab. & E. 226.

Where the sheriff in the execution of a fi. fa. enters the premises of a person other than the execution debtor, and there seizes goods, believing erroneously that such goods belong to the execution debtor, the sheriff may, upon interpleader proceedings, be protected against an action for trespass to the land as well as against an action for seizure of the goods, if no substantial grievance has been done to the person whose premises are wrongfully entered. Hollier v. Laurie (3 C. B. 334) discussed, and Winter v. Bartholomew (11 Ex. 704) approved. Smith v. Critchfield, 54 L. J., Q. B. 366; 14 Q. B. D. 873; 33 W. R. 920—C. A.

—— On Bankruptcy.]—Where there are conflicting claimants to property seized under a fi. fa., the defendant having become bankrupt, the court will interfere and protect the sheriff. Parker v. Booth, 1 M. & Scott, 156. S. P., Northcote v. Beauchamp, 1 M. & Scott, 158.

—— Trespass — Striking out Claim.]—A judge's order directed goods seized under a fi. fa. to be sold, and the money to be paid into court, to abide the event of an issue between the claimant and the execution creditor. A verdict was found for the claimant, who thereupon brought an action against the sheriff for breaking and entering his dwelling-house, and seizing and converting his goods. The court made absolute a rule to strike out of the declaration so much as charged the defendant with seizing and converting the plaintiff's goods. Abbott v. Richards, 15 M. & W. 194; 3 D. & L. 487; 15 L. J., Ex. 330.

Where, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 118, a judge of a county court adjudicated in favour of a claimant whose house had been broken and entered, and his goods seized and taken away, as the goods of an execution creditor in the county court:—Held, that the claimant was afterwards entitled to proceed in an action for the special damage occasioned by the wrongful breaking and entry, but not for the trespass in taking away his goods. Chater v. Chignell, 15 Q. B. 217; 19 L. J., Q. B. 520; 14 Jur. 697.

—— Stay of Proceedings.]—A judge on an interpleader order has authority to restrain an action against the execution creditor, as well as against the sheriff. Carpenter v. Pearce, 27 L. J., Ex. 143.

A sheriff entered the house of A. and seized therein his goods, and also goods belonging to the execution debtor. A. brought an action against the sheriff, who thereupon obtained an interpleader summons, and the judge ordered that the execution creditor be barred as to the goods of A., and that all further proceedings be stayed:—Held, that the judge had power to stay proceedings, and the power was properly exercised, it not appearing that the sheriff had committed any excess. Winter v. Bartholomew, 11 Ex. 704; 25 L. J., Ex. 62; 4 W. R. 264.

Where goods are seized under an execution issued on a judgment in a county court and sold, and an interpleader summons is taken out at the instance of the high bailiff, under the County Courts Act, 1867, s. 31, the county court judge has power to adjudicate upon the damages, to which the claimant of the goods may be entitled, arising out of the execution, although the goods have been sold, and therefore are no longer in the control of the county court; and any action against the officers of the court for wrongfully depriving the plaintiff of his goods will be stayed; but an action against the purchasers of the goods from the officers of the county court will not be stayed. Hills v. Renny, 49 L. J., Ex. 710; 5 Ex. D. 313; 42 L. T. 610—C. A.

The court will not stay proceedings in an action for damage arising out of a seizure under a county court execution, merely because there has been an interpleader order in the county court in favour of the plaintiff; the plaint containing no claim for damages, and there having been no adjudication except as to the right to the goods so taken. Jones v. Williams, 4 H. & N. 706; 28 L. J., Ex. 324.

Goods seized by a sheriff under a fi. fa. against A. out of the Exchequer, were claimed by B., to whom they were restored upon the establishment of her right upon an issue directed at the sheriff's instance. B. afterwards brought an action against the sheriff for breaking and entering her house on the occasion of the seizure. The court refused to stay the proceedings, holding the relief and protection afforded to the sheriff by 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 6, to be confined to disputed claims to the goods seized, or to their proceeds. Holler v. Laurie, 3 C. B. 334; 4 D. & L. 205; 15 L. J., C. P. 294; 10 Jur. 860.

2. Sale of Goods Seized.

Jurisdiction—Bill of Sale—Order for Application of Proceeds.]—Goods having been taken in execution under a judgment of the high court, and a claim made to them under a bill of sale, by which less than one month before the date of the execution the execution debtor had assigned them by way of security for the repayment of 130*l.* and interest thereon at 60 per cent. per annum, agreeing to pay the principal sum with interest by monthly instalments of 6*l.* each for seventeen months, and the balance a month later, a judge made an order under Ord. LVII. r. 12 that the sheriff should sell the goods, and out of the proceeds pay to the claimant the amount of his claim with interest up to the date of payment, and to the execution creditor the amount of his execution, and the residue to the defendant:—Held, that on the true construction of the words of the rule, "and direct the application of the proceeds of sale in such manner, and upon such terms, as may be just," the judge had jurisdiction to make the order, and that his jurisdiction was not limited by the practice of the courts of equity as to the repayment of an unwilling mortgagee. Forster v. Clowser, 66 L. J., Q. B. 693; [1897] 2 Q. B. 362; 76 L. T. 825—C. A.

Where goods subject to a bill of sale have been seized by the sheriff at the instance of an execution creditor, and it is doubtful whether the security is sufficient, the court will not interfere with the rights of the bill of sale holder, and will not order a sale under Ord. LVII. r. 12, unless the execution creditor guarantees him against loss. Forster v. Clowser (supra) explained. Stern v. Tegner, 66 L. J., Q. B. 859; [1898] 1 Q. B. 37; 77 L. T. 347; 46 W. R. 82—C. A.

Where a trustee in bankruptcy has not called upon the sheriff under s. 11 (1) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, to deliver to him goods taken in execution which are subject to a bill of sale, the execution is not at an end, and the jurisdiction given by Ord. LVII. r. 12 to order a sale still continues. Ib.

Order for.]—An order was not made for the sale of goods under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, s. 13, except under special circumstances. Pearce v. Watkins, 2 F. & F. 377.

Where, after an interpleader order directing a sheriff to sell goods, the execution debtor was adjudicated a bankrupt, on his own petition, before the time limited by the order for the sale, and, upon the messenger entering, the sheriff withdrew, leaving him in possession, the court refused to issue an attachment against the sheriff at the suit of the execution creditor, for contempt in not proceeding to a sale pursuant to the interpleader order. Collins v. Cliff, 8 L. T. 466; 11 W. R. 786.

Receiver and Manager instead of Sale.]—An interpleader issue being ordered to try the right to goods seized in execution, the court or a judge may, under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 8, and Ord. LVII. r. 15, order that, instead of a sale by the sheriff, a receiver and manager of the property be appointed. Howell v. Dawson, 13 Q. B. D. 67.

Particulars of Claim.]—Where, upon an interpleader summons by the sheriff, a claimant alleges that he is entitled, under a bill of sale, or otherwise by way of security for a debt, to the goods seized in execution, and an order is made for the sale of the goods and the satisfaction of the claim out of the proceeds of the sale, the claimant is not entitled to demand from the sheriff any sum not included in the particulars of claim on which the order was made. Hockey v. Evans, 56 L. J., Q. B. 253; 18 Q. B. D. 390; 56 L. T. 179; 35 W. R. 265—C. A.

Liability of Execution Creditor.]—An execution creditor is not liable to the person whose goods have been wrongfully taken in execution for any damage sustained by him in consequence of their sale under an interpleader order. Walker v. Olding, 1 H. & C. 621; 32 L. J., Ex. 142; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 53; 7 L. T. 633; 11 W. R. 186.

The plaintiff's goods having been wrongfully seized by the defendants under a fi. fa. directed against the goods of the execution debtor, and in default of payment of their value or security for the amount by the plaintiff (the claimant) having been sold by the sheriff under an interpleader order, and the proceeds paid into court to await the result of an interpleader issue, which was subsequently determined in the plaintiff's favour:—Held, that he was entitled to recover from the execution creditors damages only up to the time of the interpleader order, and that they were not liable for any loss or damage resulting from the sale, or any proceedings subsequent to such order. Ib.

If a sheriff's officer, without any direction from an execution creditor, or any interference by him, in executing a fi. fa. seizes a stranger's goods, who makes a claim, and the officer takes out an interpleader summons, and the execution creditor appears and accepts an issue to try the ownership of the goods, the execution creditor does not thereby become liable to an action for the wrongful act of the sheriff's officer in taking the goods. Woollen v. Wright, 1 H. & C. 554; 31 L. J., Ex. 513; 7 L. T. 73; 10 W. R. 715—Ex. Ch.

3. Expenses of Possession.

Rule not Enlarged.]—A sheriff, having taken goods in execution which were claimed by a third party, obtained an interpleader rule. The parties appeared; and a rule was made that the parties should appear in the next term, and maintain or relinquish their claims, and that, in the meantime, the sheriff should continue in possession till further order of the court, and proceedings against him be stayed; and that a feigned issue should be tried between the claimants at the next assizes. The issue was tried and the third party obtained a verdict against the execution creditor. The latter obtained a rule for a new trial, which rule, after the lapse of five terms, was discharged. The sheriff had, by direction of the execution creditor, quitted possession before the rule for a new trial was discharged. The interpleader rule had never been enlarged, or in any manner formally continued:—Held, that the court might nevertheless act upon the interpleader rule, for the purpose of awarding to the successful party his costs of appearing to the sheriff's rule, and costs of keeping possession of property incurred by such party. Levy v. Champneys, 4 A. & E. 365.

What Expenses.]—The sheriff will be allowed his costs of keeping possession, after applying to the court, where it is for the benefit of the parties, and not in furtherance of his duty. Underton v. Burgess, 4 D. P. C. 104.

The term "possession money" does not include the expense of the keep of cattle seized by the sheriff. Gaskell v. Sefton, 14 M. & W. 802; 3 D. & L. 267; 15 L. J., Ex. 107; 9 Jur. 996.

When a judge has ordered that the claimant as a condition of a relief shall pay possession money, the claim of an overcharge is not an extortion, but a ground for relief on taxation of costs. Long v. Bray, 10 W. R. 841.

Non-appearance of Parties.]—Where neither the plaintiff nor claimant appears, the court will discharge the sheriff from actions by either of those parties, and permit him to levy his poundage and expenses, and abandon the remainder of the levy. Eveleigh v. Salisbury, 5 D. P. C. 369 ; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 298 ; 3 Scott, 674.

If the execution creditor does not appear upon a rule to relieve the sheriff, the court will order the sheriff to withdraw from possession, but will not direct the execution creditor to pay the sheriff the costs of keeping possession. Field v. Cope, 2 C. & J. 480 ; 1 D. P. C. 567 ; 2 Tyr. 548 ; 1 L. J., Ex. 175.

Where Seizure Wrongful.]—The court will allow a sheriff to deduct the expenses of a sale effected by the authority of the court, although it appears on the trial of an issue that the seizure was wrongful. Bland v. Delaus, 6 D. P. C. 293 ; 1 W. W. & H. 75.

Unsuccessful Execution Creditor—Repayment to Claimant.]—The execution creditor who is unsuccessful in an interpleader issue is liable to repay to the claimant the charges of the sheriff which he has deducted from the amount of the levy. Blaker v. Seager, 76 L. T. 392.

4. Interfering with Sheriff.

Contempt of Court.]—Sheriff's officers went to the house of a party to execute a fieri facias, and took possession of his goods. An auctioneer and others claimed them under a bill of sale, and proceeded to sell them, notwithstanding the resistance of the officers, whom they treated with considerable violence ; whereupon the sheriff took out an interpleader summons, and served it. They disregarded this, and completed the sale and removed the goods :—Held, a contempt of court, both at common law and under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58. Cooper v. Asprey, 3 B. & S. 932 ; 32 L. J., Q. B. 209 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1198 ; 8 L. T. 355 ; 11 W. R. 641.

B. IN OTHER CASES.

Unliquidated Damages.]—Actions for unliquidated damages are not within s. 1 of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58. Walter v. Nicholson, 6 D. P. C. 517.

Equitable Claims.]—An equitable claim is not the subject of an interpleader summons. Hurst v. Sheldon, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 750. S. P., Sturgess v. Claude, 1 D. P. C. 505. Rouch v. Wright, 8 M. & W. 155 ; 1 D. (N.S.) 56 ; 10 L. J., Ex. 267. Putney v. Tring, 5 M. & W. 425 ; 7 D. P. C. 81 ; 8 L. J., Ex. 271.

On an interpleader issue, a common law court can take notice of equitable rights, and determine which party is to be preferred to the other according to such rights. Englebach v. Nixon, 44 L. J., C. P. 396 ; L. R. 10 C. P. 645 ; 32 L. T. 831. S. P., Duncan v. Cashin, 44 L. J., C. P. 225 ; L. R. 10 C. P. 554 ; 32 L. T. 497 ; 23 W. R. 561. See now Judicature Act, 1873, s. 24, sub-s. 3, and s. 25, sub-s. 11.

The Interpleader Act applies only to those cases where the opposite claims depend on legal rights, and not on matters peculiarly of equitable jurisdiction. Langton v. Horton, 3 Beav. 464.

A bill of interpleader cannot be sustained upon equities ; the claims must be founded on legal rights, and must refer to precisely the same subject-matter, and not to collateral demands arising out of the right immediately in dispute. Barclay v. Curtis, 9 Price, 661.

Chose in Action.]—Semble, that a chose in action may be the subject of interpleader. Robinson v. Jenkins, 59 L. J., Q. B. 147 ; 24 Q. B. D. 275 ; 62 L. T. 439 ; 38 W. R. 360—C. A.

Conflicting Claims.]—It is no objection to a bill of interpleader that one party's right is legal, and the other's equitable ; but they must both claim the same subject adversely, not under each other. Glynn v. Locke, 3 Dr. & War. 11 ; 2 Con. & L. 21 : 5 Ir. Eq. R. 61.

Where a bill of interpleader stated a case for relief as between two of the defendants, but also set up the claim of a third, which was paramount and adverse to the claims of the two others :—Held, that although this last claim might be one which could not support the bill, the introduction of it did not expose the bill to a successful demurrer on the part of one of the first-named defendants. Farebrother v. Beale, 3 De G. & Sm. 637 ; 19 L. J., Ch. 149 ; 14 Jur. 215.

Where a fund in the hands of a stakeholder was contested by three parties, one of whom claimed the whole of it, and the other two claimed it in certain proportions, and the stakeholder filed a bill of interpleader against the three claimants, the court at the hearing dismissed the bill with costs as against one of the parties claiming a part of the fund, and decreed that the other two parties should interplead as to the other part. Hoggart v. Cutts, Cr. & Ph. 197 ; 10 L. J., Ch. 314.

A mere pretext of a conflicting claim will not support a bill of interpleader ; the court is bound to see that there is a question to be tried. Cochrane v. O'Brien, 2 Jo. & Lat. 380 ; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 241.

It is not necessary that the right claimed by the third party should be an absolute right of property. Harwood v. Betham, 1 L. J., Ex. 180.

A plaintiff in an interpleader is not bound to shew the existence of an apparent title in each of the defendants claiming the property. East and West India Dock Co. v. Littledale, 7 Hare, 57.

Different Debts.]—Debts that are different in their original nature and constitution, could not be made the subject of interpleader. Glyn v. Duesbury, 11 Sim. 139 ; 9 L. J., Ch. 365 ; 4 Jur. 1080.

B. undertook to pay A. the sum of 365*l.* at a particular time, and afterwards paid him 40*l.* on account. A. then assigned the sum of 365*l.* alleged to be due to him from B. both to C. and D., and C. and D. claimed to be paid this sum from B. B. filed a bill of interpleader against C. and D., stating the payment of 40*l.*, and requiring them to interplead as to the 325*l.* :—Held, that on account of the difference of the two sums of 365*l.* and 325*l.*, interpleader did not lie. Diplock v. Hammond, 23 L. J., Ch. 550 ; 2 W. R. 500—L.JJ.

To give the court jurisdiction under the act there must be cross claims on one and the same subject-matter, and the party applying must shew that he cannot in any case be liable to both the claims. Farr v. Ward, 2 M. & W. 844 ; 6 L. J., Ex. 213.

Applicant not to be harassed.]—It is sufficient to support a bill of interpleader, that each of the defendants has a claim to the matter in question, although one only can maintain an action at law; the principle being, to prevent a plaintiff from being doubly vexed. It is therefore not necessary that he should have been actually sued. Morgan v. Marsack, 2 Mer. 107.

Interpleader upon notice of a variety of claims by persons, amongst whom an entire charge upon an estate was split, though no suit instituted, and but one legal right of entry; the principle being, not merely that the payment cannot be safely made, but that the party entitled to be discharged by a single payment should not be harassed by a number of suits. Angell v. Hadden, 15 Ves. 244.

No Possession.]—Plaintiff having parted with the property, cannot sustain an interpleading bill against different claimants, upon an undertaking to pay over the value to the party entitled. Burnett v. Anderson, 1 Mer. 405.

Claim of Lien.]—A lien attaching upon the goods in dispute does not prevent the party who holds them from applying for relief. Cotter v. Bank of England, 3 M. & Scott, 180; 2 D. P. C. 728; 2 L. J., C. P. 158. See Attenborough v. St. Katharine's Docks, post, col. 369.

A wharfinger, who claims a lien on goods for wharfage cannot interplead if the lien only attaches upon one of the parties by whom the goods are claimed. Braddick v. Smith, 9 Bing. 84; 2 M. & Scott, 131; 1 L. J., C. P. 154.

In an action against an auctioneer by his employer, for the proceeds of goods intrusted to him for sale, he having sold after notice of a claim by a third party, and claiming a lien on a certain sum only as portion of the proceeds for his commission and expenses:—Held, entitled to an interpleader as to the residue. Best v. Heys, 3 F. & F. 113.

Stakeholder.]—When there are two or more claimants of goods in the hands of a stakeholder, the only way in which he can protect himself is by filing a bill of interpleader. If, instead of doing so, he litigates with the claimants separately, he must pay the costs of the successful claimant. Laing v. Zeden, 43 L. J., Ch. 626; L. R. 9 Ch. 736; 31 L. T. 284.

A mere stakeholder is justified, if there is the slightest doubt or risk arising from conflicting claims, in calling upon the person really interested on either side to indemnify him against such risk, and, if he refuses or neglects to do so, in filing a bill of interpleader in equity. Nelson v. Barter, 2 H. & M. 334; 33 L. J., Ch. 705; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 832; 12 W. R. 999.

—— After Action brought.]—The court cannot give relief to stakeholders, who are only threatened with proceedings; an action must be brought, and the plaintiff declare, before the court will interfere. Parker v. Linnett, 2 D. P. C. 562.

—— Illegal Race.]—The court will not grant an interpleader where an action has been brought against the holder of a stake deposited with him to abide the event of an illegal race. Applegarth v. Colley, 2 D. (N.S.) 223; 10 M. & W. 723; 11 L. J., Ex. 350.

—— Title Deeds.]—The holder of title deeds cannot apply for protection against opposing claims. But trover for title deeds is within the act. Smith v. Wheeler, 3 D. P. C. 431; 1 Gale, 15, 163.

Bankers—Interest.]—A. being in possession of a house, deposited the title deeds with a bank, as a security for a loan. Amongst them was what purported to be a grant to B., deceased, in fee. A. died; B.'s heir demanded the grant from the bank, claiming it as his property. A.'s heir, who was in possession of the house, paid off the advance, and demanded the deeds deposited. The bank gave up all but the grant claimed by B.'s heir, which the bank refused to give to either party. B.'s heir brought trover against the bank. A.'s heir threatened to sue the bank. The court relieved the bank, though in the relation of bailee to the person represented by the claimant. Roberts v. Bell, 7 El. & Bl. 323; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 662.

A bill of exchange was drawn by the Melbourne branch of the Bank of Australasia, upon their house in London, in favour of a married woman, and remitted to her by her husband, and duly accepted by the London house. After the bill had been so accepted, and had been indorsed by the wife for value, but before its maturity, the husband (who had in the meantime arrived in this country) gave notice to the bank not to pay it, his wife having eloped. The bill becoming due, and the bank being sued by the indorsee:—Held, not a case for an interpleader, the bank having an interest in the subject-matter of the suit, and the question whether or not the bank was estopped from contesting the payee's right to indorse not being one which could be tried in an issue between the plaintiff and the claimant. Baker v. Bank of Australasia, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 515; 26 L. J., C. P. 93; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 187; 5 W. R. 253.

A sum of money had been deposited by the plaintiff while sole with the defendants, who were bankers; they were afterwards served with a notice by M., that the plaintiff was married to him, and that they should not pay over the money to her. The plaintiff disputed the marriage:—Held, that the case was within 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 1. Crellin v. Leland, 6 Jur. 733.

Interests of Husband and Wife.]—A defendant who is sued on a promissory note given to the plaintiff for money due to a married woman, to enable her to have the benefit of it, and not her husband, cannot obtain relief on the ground that he expects the husband to sue for the money. Newton v. Moody, 1 W. W. & H. 554; 7 D. P. C. 582; 3 Jur. 42.

A married woman lodged several sums of money in a bank in her own name upon deposit receipts representing herself to be a widow. Her husband and a transferee from her both afterwards claimed and brought actions for the recovery of the deposits:—Held, a proper case for interpleader. Costello v. Martin, 15 W. R. 548.

Estate Agents—Commission.]—Two claims by different estate agents against the same person for different sums in respect of commission, on the sale of the same house to a purchaser, are not such opposing or conflicting claims to the same debt as entitle the defendant to an interpleader order under Ord. XVII. r. 13 of the County Court Rules, 1889. Greatorex v. Shackle, 64 L. J., Q. B. 634; [1895] 2 Q. B. 249; 15 R. 501; 72 L. T. 897; 44 W. R. 47.

Charge on Lands.]—The owner of lands subject to a charge is entitled to file a bill against persons setting up conflicting claims to the benefit of the charge to have their rights declared and the estate discharged on payment of the money charged. Vyvyan v. Vyvyan, 4 De G. F. & J. 183; 31 L. J., Ch. 158; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 3; 5 L. T. 511; 10 W. R. 179.

Conduct of Party.]—A party, who, by his own act, is placed in a situation to be sued, cannot call on the court to substitute another defendant. Belcher v. Smith, 1 L. J., C. P. 167; 9 Bing. 82; 2 M. & Scott, 184.

Semble, on the doctrine of interpleader, that where the double claim has been occasioned by the act of the stakeholder, he has no right to file a bill of interpleader. Desborough v. Harris, 5 De G. M. & G. 439; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 986; 3 Eq. R. 1058; 4 W. R. 2.

A party cannot obtain relief where he has incurred a personal liability to either of the contending parties. Patorni v. Campbell, 12 M. & W. 277; 1 D. & L. 397; 13 L. J., Ex. 85; 7 Jur. 1139.

Purchaser from Factor.]—A. consigned goods to B., a factor, who sold them to C. B. having become bankrupt, his assignees sued C. for the price of the goods, which were also claimed by A.:—Held, that C. was entitled to the benefit of the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 1. Johnson v. Shaw, 4 Man. & G. 916; 12 L. J., C. P. 112.

Ownership of Shares.]—An action having been brought by A. against a railway company to recover dividends due upon certain consolidated stock of the company, and B. claiming to be the registered proprietor of the stock in respect of which the dividends were sought to be recovered by A.:—Held, that the company was not entitled to relief. Dalton v. Midland Ry., 12 C. B. 459.

The plaintiff was registered proprietor of shares in a public company, and held a certificate that he was registered as owner of the shares. He executed a transfer to the defendants, who were brokers, to enable them to sell the shares, and handed to them the certificate and transfer for that purpose. The claimant gave the defendants notice that he claimed the shares, and the plaintiff demanded back the certificate and transfer. The defendants applied for an interpleader order:—Held, that, as the claimant was in effect claiming the documents, the defendants were entitled to interplead. Robinson v. Jenkins, 59 L. J., Q. B. 147; 24 Q. B. D. 275; 62 L. T. 439; 38 W. R. 360—C. A.

Title to Reward.]—Where two parties claim to be entitled to a reward, the defendant, when sued by one of them to recover it, is not entitled to relief under the act. Collis v. Lee, 1 Hodges, 204; 5 L. J., C. P. 83. S. P., Grant v. Fry, 4 D. P. C. 135.

A reward was offered by a parish to any party who should give information which should lead to the conviction of the party who had murdered a female. A party claimed to have given the information and brought an action against the vestry clerk of the parish (who was liable to be sued under a local act). Other parties also claimed to have given the information. The court, at the instance of the defendant, granted a rule under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 1. Guy v. Pittman, 5 Scott, 795; 1 Jur. 775.

Title to Bill of Exchange.]—Actions were commenced by two persons, claiming to be lawful owners of a bill of exchange, against the acceptor. The court directed an issue to try who was lawfully entitled to recover on the bill, and relieved the acceptor from all claim in respect of costs. Regan v. Serle, 9 D. P. C. 193; 1 W. P. C. 31.

A defendant, having purchased cattle from the plantiff, accepted a bill in payment, with a blank for the name of the drawer, and remitted it by post to the plaintiff. The bill subsequently came into the hands of B. & S. for a valuable consideration. The plaintiff, denying that he had ever authorised payment by an acceptance, or that he had ever received the bill or indorsed it, brought an action against the defendant for the price of the cattle. B. & S. also threatened to commence an action against him on the bill:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to relief. Furr v. Ward, 2 M. & W. 844; M. & H. 244; 6 L. J., Ex. 213.

When two parties claim a right to a vessel which has been sold, and part of the proceeds is in the hands of a third party, in the form of a bill of exchange, that is a case for interpleader. Gibbs v. Gibbs, 6 W. R. 415.

M. & Co. were sued by G. as acceptors on a bill of exchange. M. & Co. had handed the bill to L. & Co. for full value received. L. & Co. had really obtained the bill for one H. in consideration of the value of a cargo sent by G. to England from Russia, which H. instructed L. & Co. to sell on commission. H. obtained possession of the cargo on handing over the bill to G.'s agents in England. The bill was then forwarded to G. in Russia, and being duly presented, was dishonoured, whereupon G. sued M. & Co. as acceptors. L. & Co. meantime give M. & Co. notice not to pay the bill, on the ground that they, L. & Co., had parted with the bill through the fraud of H., and that, the cargo being deteriorated, they had not received full value for the bill, and claimed to be recouped for their loss on its sale from the moneys handed to M. & Co. for the bill. M. & Co. applied for an interpleader issue to be ordered, which the Master granted, and on which he substituted L. & Co. as defendants in lieu of M. & Co.:—Held, that M. & Co., being "persons seeking relief who were under liability for a debt in which they were, or expected to be, sued by two or more parties making adverse claims" within the terms of Or. LVII. r. 1 (a), there was jurisdiction for the court or judge to exercise a discretion in ordering an interpleader issue, and that such discretion had been rightly exercised. Gerhard v. Montagu, 61 L. T. 564; 38 W. R. 76.

Claims under Life Policy.]—A life insurance company received notice of an assignment by an insurer of a policy which the company had granted, and the insurer afterwards became bankrupt. Soon after the death of the person whose life was assured, the party to whom the assignment had been made applied for the payment of the sum due upon the policy, and the company inquired of the assignees of the bankrupt whether there was any objection to payment being made to the claimant. The assignees did not assent to the payment, but made no positive claim to the policy. In the meantime an action was brought upon the policy by the claimant, in the name of the bankrupt, against the company:—Held, that it was a case in which the company were entitled to file their bill of interpleader against the plaintiff in the action, the bankrupt, and his assignees, and that the assignees, who had in the suit shewn no title to the policy, must pay the costs. Fenn v. Edmonds, 5 Hare, 314.

In 1825 H. effected a policy upon the life of G., and subsequently assigned it, and real estate, by way of mortgage, to Messrs. S. to secure a sum of money. Due notice of the assignment was given by Messrs. S. to the assurance office. In 1830 Messrs. S. took possession of the real estate, and have ever since remained in possession of it. In 1834 H. became insolvent. In 1853 G., the life assured, died. The assurance office refuse to pay Messrs. S. the sum assured, alleging that both H. and his assignee in insolvency claimed the fund; and they filed a bill of interpleader against all the parties. It appeared that H., the insolvent, did not deny the validity of Messrs. S.'s security, but only alleged that after payment of all his debts there would be a surplus; and that the insolvent assignee did not actually claim the fund or object to the payment of it to Messrs. S., but declined to consent to the payment:—Held, that this was not a case for interpleader. Desborough v. Harris, 5 De G. M. & G. 439; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 986.

Claim by Uncertificated Bankrupt.]—Where an uncertificated bankrupt brought an action for work done by him, and on a reference a certain sum was found to be due to him, which his assignees thereupon claimed from the defendant:—Held, that on a fresh action being brought by the bankrupt, the defendant might call upon the assignees, by an interpleader rule, to support the claim. Jones v. Turnbull, 2 M. & W. 601; 5 D. P. C. 591; M. & H. 106; 6 L. J., Ex. 166.

When Indemnity given.]—Where a defendant has been idemnified by a third party for not delivering up property in his possession, he has no right to relief. Tucker v. Morris, 1 C. & M. 73; 1 D. P. C. 639; 2 L. J., Ex. 1.

The plaintiff in interpleader is not bound to show the existence of an apparent title in each of the defendants claiming the property, and a stakeholder is entitled to relief by suit of interpleader, and is not bound to accept an indemnity from either of the claimants, though the claimant offering it shows an apparent title. East and West India Dock Co. v. Littledale, 7 Hare, 57.

"Collusion."]—The objection that a stakeholder has, by merely taking an indemnity from one of two rival claimants to property in his hands, disentitled himself to relief under the Interpleader Acts because he had identified himself with and must be taken to "collude" with the claimant who gave the indemnity, cannot be raised by that claimant himself, and the decisions in Tucker v. Morris (1 Cr. & M. 73), and Belcher v. Smith (9 Bing. 82), do not apply. Thompson v. Wright, 54 L. J., Q. B. 32; 13 Q. B. D. 632; 51 L. T. 634; 33 W. R. 96.

Where an applicant for relief by way of interpleader has made an agreement with one of two contending parties to assist him in his endeavour to defeat the claim of the other, he so far identifies himself with the first party as to be guilty of "collusion" within the meaning of r. 2, sub-s. (b) of Ord. LVII. Collusion under this order does not necessarily imply any moral wrong. Murietta v. South American Co., 62 L. J., Q. B. 396; 5 R. 380.

Disclaimer—Interest in Part.]—In an action for an obstruction in collecting tolls of a mine, with a count in trover for the ore against the adventurers who claimed an interest in the ore, but disclaimed as to the tolls:—Held, that the court could not entertain an application by them under the act. Lawrence v. Mathews, 2 H. & W. 123; 5 D. P. C. 149.

—— By one of two.]—In a joint action of trover against two, one of them who claims no title to the goods is entitled to relief. Gladstone v. White, 1 Hodges, 386.

Claiming Interest in Subject-matter.]—A claim for warehouse rent is not such an interest in the subject-matter of a suit as will exclude a defendant from the protection of the Interpleader Act. Harwood v. Betham, 1 L. J., Ex. 180.

Where the depositary of a fund has a personal interest in contesting a question relating to part of the fund with one of the claimants of it, he cannot properly file a bill of interpleader respecting it. Moore v. Usher, 7 Sim. 384; 4 L. J., Ch. 205.

Defendant, the proprietor of a horse repository, sold there by public auction a horse to the plaintiff, warranted quiet to ride and in harness, but subject to a condition, by which, if considered by the buyer incapable of working from any infirmity or disease, it might be returned on the second day after the sale, and the matter determined by veterinary surgeons according to the terms provided for in such condition. The horse was returned accordingly by plaintiff, who demanded to have back the money he had paid for the purchase, and this being refused, he brought an action against defendant for damages for breach of the warranty. A. B., who had placed the horse at the repository for sale, claimed of defendant the proceeds of the sale, stating that the horse had left the repository perfectly sound:—Held, that defendant was not entitled to an interpleader order. Wright v. Freeman, 48 L. J., C. P. 276; 40 L. T. 134; Id. 358—C. A.

An auctioneer sold for the plaintiff some furniture, and paid him a part of the proceeds; but whilst the balance was in his hands, G. gave him notice that the furniture belonged to her. The plaintiff having brought an action against the auctioneer for the balance, he sought to deduct his charges for commission, and applied for an interpleader order between the plaintiff and G., as to the residue, G. being willing to allow him his charges:—Held, that a judge had power to make the interpleader order, if not under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, under the 23 & 24 Vict, c. 126, s. 12. Best v. Hayes, 1 H. & C. 718; 32 L. J., Ex. 129; 11 W. R. 71.

An auctioneer sold, by the instructions of the plaintiff, some furniture, after he had received notice of a claim to it under a bill of sale; and disposed of a portion of the proceeds according to the plaintiff's direction; subsequently a claim was made to the balance by the holder of the bill of sale, and the auctioneer obtained a summoning order:—Held, that the state of facts did not entitle him to an interpleader order; and that the rival claimants were not entitled to the costs of affidavits which went solely into the merits of the case as between themselves. Poland v. Coall, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 108.

Stakeholder, seeking to retain part of stake, cannot file interpleader. If an action is brought against an auctioneer for a deposit, he cannot file a bill of interpleader if he insists upon retaining either his commission or the duty. Mitchell v. Hayne, 2 Sim. & S. 63; 25 R. R. 151.

Auctioneer, being a mere stakeholder, ordered to pay deposit money into court, on retaining his own claims on it, without prejudice. Yates v. Farebrother, 4 Madd. 239.

Part only of a single Claim.]—A debtor against whom an action has been brought, and who has had notice of assignment of the debt, may interplead as to part only of the claim, and may dispute the residue. His application for relief may either be made in the action under Ord. LVII. rr. 1, 4, or by a separate proceeding under s. 25, sub-s. 6, of the Judicature Act, 1873. If an interpleader order be made on a separate proceeding under s. 25, sub-s. 6, of the Judicature Act, 1873, the judge making the order has no power to stay the proceedings in an action already commenced against the debtor. Reading v. London School Board, 16 Q. B. D. 686; 54 L. T. 678; 34 W. R. 609.

Claims not Identical.]—A court of law was not bound by the principles which governed courts of equity upon a bill of interpleader, and might give relief although one of the parties had incurred to another a personal obligation independently of the questions of property, and the claims were not identical. Best v. Hayes, 1 H. & C. 718; 32 L. J., Ex. 129; 11 W. R. 71.

Deposit—Pledge.]—A. sued the defendant, to whom he had intrusted a policy for certain purposes, and declared in trover and detinue, and specially on the contract. B., who had pledged the policy with A., then brought an action against the defendant for the recovery of the policy. An interpleader order was made, directing that the proceedings in the first action should be stayed till further order, that A. should be at liberty to defend the second action, indemnifying the defendant, and that B. should give the defendant security for costs:—Held, that the order was rightly made. Tanner v. European Bank, 35 L. J., Ex. 151; L. R. 1 Ex. 261; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 414; 14 L. T. 414; 14 W. R. 675.

Work and Labour.]—A plaintiff in his own name contracted with the defendant to do works, for which he was to be paid by instalments. The works proceeded, and some instalments were paid, when the defendant received notice from C. that the plaintiff was but his agent in making the contract and doing the work, and that further payments to the plaintiff would be at the defendant's peril. The work was completed by the plaintiff, who brought an action for the balance admitted by the defendant to be due to some one:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to relief by way of interpleader. Meynell v. Angell, 32 L. J., Q. B. 14; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1211; 11 W. R. 122.

Contract, with whom.]—Where work is done under a contract, and an action is brought for the amount of it by one party, but another claims to be entitled to be paid for it, and gives notice thereof to the defendant:—Semble, that such a case is not within the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 1; and it is the fault of the defendant, who made the contract, that he does not know with whom he contracted. Turner v. Kendal Corporation, 13 M. & W. 171.

A. being in possession of iron lying on the premises of the defendants, who were wharfingers, transferred it to the plaintiff; whereupon they, at the plaintiff's request, placed it to his account in their books, and informed him that they had done so. A claim to the iron having been made by other parties, suggesting that it had been fraudulently transferred by A. to the plaintiff, the defendants refused to deliver the iron to the plaintiff, who brought an action against them:—Held, that they having agreed to hold the iron for the plaintiff, were not entitled to an interpleader order. Horton v. Devon (Earl), 7 D. & L. 206; 4 Ex. 497; 19 L. J., Ex. 52.

The plaintiff sold to the defendant a rick of hay, belonging to a deceased person. S. afterwards took out administration to the effects of the deceased, and claimed the price of the hay:—Held, that the defendant could not be relieved. James v. Pritchard, 7 M. & W. 216; 8 D. P. C. 890; 10 L. J., Ex. 92; 4 Jur. 1188. See Meynell v. Angell, supra.

Landlord and Tenant.]—E. hired a farm, and his son resided on and managed it, paying rent, and taking receipts in his own name. The defendant gave the son notice to quit, and a valuation of tenant-right was made by valuers appointed by the defendant and the son. The father gave the defendant notice not to pay the amount of the valuation to any one but himself, and the son having commenced an action to recover the amount of the valuation, the defendant applied for an interpleader order:—Held, that this was a case for interpleader, and that if the father was dissatisfied with the valuation, he might apply to the court for relief. Evans v. Wright, 12 L. T. 77; 13 W. R. 468.

Upon the death of a landlord, the tenant, in ignorance of the rights of the parties, attorned to and paid rent to A., who claimed as devisee. The right of A. to the property was afterwards disputed by B., the heir:—Held, that the tenant might maintain a bill of interpleader against A. and B. Jew v. Wood, Cr. & Ph. 185; 3 Beav. 579; 10 L. J., Ch. 261; 5 Jur. 954. S. P., Rickard v. Hyde, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 299.

A tenant cannot file an interpleading bill against his landlord. Where one claimant seeks a certain rent from the tenant in possession, and the other unliquidated damages for use and occupation, he cannot make them interplead. Johnson v. Atkinson, 3 Anstr. 798.

The rule that a tenant cannot compel the landlord to interplead, does not prevail where the claim of a third person arises by the act of the landlord, subsequent to the commencement of the relation of landlord and tenant. Clarke v. Byrne, 13 Ves. 383.

Tenant cannot file a bill of interpleader against his landlord on notice of ejectment by a stranger, under a title adverse to that of the landlord. Dungey v. Angove, 2 Ves. J. 304; 2 R. R. 217.

To support a bill of interpleader by a tenant, two persons must claim the same rent in privity of tenure and contract, as in the case of mortgagor and mortgagee, trustee and cestui que trust, &c. S. C., 2 Ves. J. 312.

Two parties claiming adversely an estate under the limitations of a settlement which contained a power of leasing, brought actions against a tenant for rent, reserved by a lease made under the power:—Held, that the case was a proper one for an interpleader. Bermingham v. Tuite, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 221.

A tenant cannot sustain a bill of interpleader against his landlord, unless the title is affected by some act done by the landlord subsequently to the lease. Cook v. Rosslyn (Earl), 1 Giff. 167; 28 L. J., Ch. 833; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 973; 7 W. R. 537.

It is no objection to a bill of interpleader by tenant, that it appears by his bill that the rent was adversely demanded by two persons, one of whom had a primâ facie legal right to receive it, as devisee and executrix of the lessor, and the other a mere equitable claim as heir-at-law, where the adverse claimants were litigating, and the tenant threatened with distress. Doran v. Everitt, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 28.

Two parties claimed a real estate under different wills, the validity of which was in controversy. An action being brought against the tenant by one of the claimants, he filed a bill of interpleader against both claimants, and obtained an injunction, on bringing his rent into court. The court directed an issue to determine the rights of the defendants, and continued the injunction on the tenant continuing to pay his rent into court. Townley v. Deare, 3 Beav. 213. S. P., Glover v. Reynolds, 16 L. T. 113.

Ship—Captain—Claim to Goods.]—Where a suit has been instituted in the Court of Admiralty by arrest of a ship, on behalf of a person claiming to be the owner of goods, on the ground of breach of duty on the part of the master in not delivering the goods to him, and a like proceeding has been instituted in the same court by another claimant in respect of the same goods :—Semble, that a bill of interpleader by the captain of the ship will not lie, on the ground that the proceedings are not against him, but against the ship, and that the Court of Admiralty has jurisdiction to decide the whole question. Sablicich v. Russell, L. R. 2 Eq. 441 ; 14 W. R. 913.

Captain of the ship may file interpleader where parties claim adversely under bill of lading ; but otherwise where paramount to it. Lowe v. Richardson, 3 Madd. 277.

Agents and Bailees.]—Agent to receive particular moneys, is bound to pay same over to principal, notwithstanding claims of third persons ; therefore, he cannot file bill of interpleader. Nicholson v. Knowles, 5 Madd. 47 ; 21 R. R. 276.

Where goods in the hands of a bailee have been subsequently so treated and dealt with by the bailor, as to constitute or acknowledge an apparent title to them, in two distinct parties, the rule which prevents an agent from filing a bill of interpleader against his principal does not apply. Pearson v. Cardon, 2 Russ. & M. 606.

Interpleader allowed by a factor against both defendants residing abroad, and one not appearing. The subject, a policy on a cargo lost, for effecting which the plaintiffs claimed to be reimbursed their expenses. Martinius v. Helmuth, Coop. 245 ; 2 Ves. & B. 412, n.

One of several part owners of a ship, acting as ship's husband, directs a broker to effect an insurance upon the entirety of the ship ; a loss happens, and the insurance money being paid to the broker, who knew what other persons were part owners of the ship, one of the other part owners demands payment of his proportion of the insurance money, and commences an action against the broker to recover it ; and the part owner who directed the insurance demands payment of the whole, and commences an action to enforce such demand :—Held, that the broker could sustain a bill of interpleader against the two claimants. Stuart v. Welch, 4 Myl. & C. 305 ; 3 Jur. 237. And see Brack v. Douglas, 4 Myl. & C. 320, n.

A. delivered goods to B., a wharfinger, to be kept for him, and afterwards directed B. to transfer them to C., which was done. D. then gave notice to B. not to deliver the goods to anyone but him, and thereupon B. refused to deliver the goods to C., upon which C. brought trover against B., and B. filed a bill of interpleader. Afterwards D. abandoned all claim to the goods, and withdrew his notice :—Held, that the case was a proper case of interpleader, and that D., who had occasioned the suit, must pay to the plaintiff and the other defendants their costs at law and in equity. Mason v. Hamilton, 5 Sim. 19.

A. deposited certain iron with B. & Co., who were wharfingers, and afterwards directed them to deliver it to C. C. applied to B. & Co. to know the particulars of the iron held by them on his account ; and B. & Co. then wrote a letter to C., saying, that in compliance with his request, they annexed a note of the landing weights of the iron transferred into his name by A., and now held by them (B. & Co.) at his (C.'s) disposal. B. & Co. subsequently received notice from D. that the iron belonged to him, and that it had been deposited with A. as an agent for sale, and that he had without authority pledged it to C. B. & Co. then filed a bill of interpleader against C. and D. :—Held, on demurrer, that after B. & Co.'s letter to C., they could not maintain a bill of interpleader against him. Crawshay v. Thornton, 2 Myl. & C. 1 ; 6 L. J., Ch. 179 ; 1 Jur. 19.

500*l.* was placed in the hands of a party to be applied by him in carrying a divorce bill through parliament ; part was paid to the solicitor employed in carrying the bill through parliament, but before the remainder had been applied, the depositor died : the executrix of the depositor claimed from the depositary the whole deposit ; the solicitor claimed the sum remaining in the hands of the depositary :—Held, that, under the circumstances, a bill of interpleader could not be sustained. Moore v. Usher, 7 Sim. 384 ; 4 L. J., Ch. 205.

A. having a claim to certain property in India, agreed with B. that B. should undertake the trouble and expense of recovering it, and that if successful he should receive half the value of the property recovered. Afterwards, A.'s title having been established, A., with B.'s concurrence, sent a power of attorney to C. to receive the money, with instructions to remit it to England. C. accordingly received the money and transmitted a bill of exchange for the amount to his agent in England. A. having refused to perform the agreement, B. filed a bill against him, and A. brought an action at law against C. for the amount of the bill. C. thereupon filed a bill of interpleader against A. and B. :—Held, that C. having become possessed of the property solely as A.'s agent, it was not a proper case for interpleader, and the court refused to allow C. a lien for his costs on the fund. Watts v. Hammond, 3 Eq. R. 641 ; 3 W. R. 312.

Warehousemen being private agents, and not holding goods as the possessors of a public bonded warehouse, cannot maintain a bill of interpleader ; but where goods are deposited in a public bonded warehouse, a bill of interpleader may be maintained against contending claimants. Cooper v. De Tastet, Taml. 177.

Where a principal has created a lien in favour of another person, on funds in the hands of an agent, the agent may file a bill of interpleader against his principal and the other claimant. Smith v. Hammond, 6 Sim. 10.

Issue as to Right to Goods, although one Claimant also claims Damages.]—S. was the agent of L., a wine merchant in Spain, and was induced by the fraudulent representations of three persons acting in collusion to enter into separate contracts with them for the sale of wine. S. transmitted the orders for the wine to L., who shipped the wines, and sent the bills of lading to S.; the bills of lading were handed by S. to the three persons respectively on account of the contracts entered into with them. The wine so obtained was deposited with a dock company, who issued warrants for the same: some of the wine therein mentioned was made deliverable to the order of one of the three persons, and the rest to the order of another of them. The warrants were then pledged with the plaintiff to secure advances. L. afterwards served notice upon the dock company not to part with the wine; thereupon the company refused to give up the wine when it was demanded of them by the plaintiff, who commenced actions claiming damages in addition to the value of the wines:—Held, that the dock company was entitled to an interpleader order under 1 & 2 Will. 4 c. 58. s. 1, and the C. L. P. Act, 1860, s. 12, for the right to the wine might be determined as between the plaintiff and L., and the actions might be stayed as to that, and might be continued as to the claims for damages, and by issuing the dock warrants the dock company had not debarred itself from obtaining relief under those statutes. Attenborough v. London and St. Katharine Dock Co., 47 L. J., C. P. 763; 3 C. P. D. 450; 38 L. T. 404; 26 W. R. 583—C. A.

Discretion of Judge.]—The plaintiff sued an auctioneer for breach of warranty of a horse sold by auction, and also for personal damages caused through the horse's vice. B., the owner of the horse, gave the defendant notice not to return or part with the purchase-money of the horse, the plaintiff having sent it back to the defendant. The defendant took out a summons under Ord. I. r. 2, that the plaintiff and B. should interplead. A judge in chambers refused to make the order:—Held, that the judge's discretion was properly exercised. Wright v. Freeman, 48 L. J., C. P. 276; 40 L. T. 134; Id. 358—C. A.

Before 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, s. 12.]—The 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 1, did not apply to the case of a party sued by one person for the price of goods, and by another for the goods themselves. Slaney v. Sidney, 3 D. & L. 250; 14 M. & W. 800; 15 L. J., Ex. 72; 9 Jur. 995.

Before the above statute, the court would not grant to a defendant an interpleader rule, on the ground that the claimant set up a right of action against him in respect of the same subject-matter, where it appeared that the plaintiff's claim against the defendant rested not merely upon the right of property, but also on the personal contract of the defendant. Lindsey v. Barron, 6 C. B. 291.

A., professing to act as agent of B., obtained from C. an advance of money, upon the security of plate in A.'s possession belonging to B.; after A.'s death, C. brought detinue for the plate against his executors; B. also demanded it of the executors:—Held, not a case for an interpleader. Ib.

The Crown.]—The court refused a rule applied for by a defendant, upon affidavit, stating that the debt sought to be recovered in the action had been, under a writ of extent, issued against the plaintiff, returned by the jury as seized for the Crown. Candy v. Maugham, 6 Man. & G. 710; 1 D. & L. 745; 7 Scott (N.R.) 401; 13 L. J., C. P. 17; 7 Jur. 1040.

The provisions of the Interpleader Act do not apply where the Crown is a party interested. Ib.

There being considerable doubts as to the title to certain money, believed to be the proceeds of a robbery, the court made a decree that the Crown and the other claimants should interplead, and gave directions for inquiries as to the title to the money. Reid v. Stearn, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 267.

Foreigners.]—Semble, that a foreigner, residing abroad, cannot be compelled to come in under the act. Patorni v. Campbell, 12 M. & W. 277; 1 D. & L. 397; 13 L. J., Ex. 85; 7 Jur. 1139. S. P., Lindsey v. Barron, 6 C. B. 291. But see Belmonte v. Aynard, 4 C. P. D. 352; 27 W. R. 789—C. A. Affirming 40 L. T. 627.

Colonists.]—Semble, per Parke, B., that the act does not extend to the colonies. Colonial Bank v. Warden, 5 Moore, P. C. 340; 10 Jur. 745.

Married Women.]—A married woman may maintain a claim on an interpleader issue, in which the issue is, whether the goods are hers, as against the execution creditor. Shingler v. Holt, 7 H. & N. 65, n.; 2 F. & F. 487; 30 L. J., Ex. 322; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 866; 4 L. T. 76; 9 W. R. 871.

W., by will, gave real and personal chattels to his daughter, L. B., a married woman (the plaintiff), for life, for her sole and separate use, appointing her executrix. L. B. carried on the business (a colliery), the whole of which came into her possession (part under the will and part under a conveyance from a third person), as she alleged, for her own benefit, assisted by her husband. Some of these chattels, which were used in the colliery, having been seized by C., the now defendant, and execution creditor of her husband, under a judgment revived against him, the present issue was directed to try whether the chattels so seized were the property of the now plaintiff as against the now defendant. At the trial the judge left it to the jury to say whether the plaintiff really carried on the business on her own account, or whether it was her husband's. The jury having found a verdict for the plaintiff, the court discharged a rule obtained to set it aside. Bird v. Crabb, 30 L. J., Ex. 318; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 866; 5 L. T. 76.

C. PRACTICE ON.

1. PARTIES.

Cestui que trust.]—A cestui que trust who is in possession of settled goods, by virtue of an authority from the trustees, is entitled to the same as against the sheriff seizing them for the execution creditor of a debtor living in the houses wherein such goods are, and it is not necessary for the trustees to be parties to an interpleader issue directed in order to determine the right of possession. Schroeder v. Hanrott, 28 L. T. 704.

Married Woman.]—A married woman may be a claimant in an interpleader issue. Shingler v. Holt, 7 H. & N. 65; 30 L. J., Ex. 322; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 866; 4 L. T. 76; 9 W. R. 871. S. P., Bird

v. Crabb, 30 L. J., Ex. 318; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 866; 5 L. T. 76.

Claimants.]—Counsel for the purchaser from the claimant will not be heard. Gayton v. Espin, 1 F. & F. 722.

Semble, that in an issue the claimant should be the plaintiff, and the execution creditor the defendant. Bartley v. Hook, 4 Tyr. 229.

Where a new claim is raised, after a rule nisi has been obtained, the sheriff may make the new claimant a party to the rule. Kirk v. Clarke, 4 D. P. C. 363.

Where the sheriff applies to the court for protection, no one has a right to be heard against the rule, unless he is called upon by the rule, though he is in fact a claimant; and if he is called on in one character he cannot appear in another. Clarke v. Lord, 2 D. P. C. 55.

—— Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—If, after an interpleader issue has been settled, the execution debtor files a petition for liquidation, and the trustee under the liquidation claims the goods in respect of which the issue has been directed, the trustee will, upon his application, be added as a claimant in the trial of the issue. Bird v. Mathews, 46 L. T. 512—C. A.

A sheriff having levied on the goods of the defendant, received notice of his bankruptcy, and of a claim by the provisional assignee, "or of any other persons who might be appointed assignees." After the assignees were appointed, the sheriff obtained an interpleader rule, calling on the provisional assignee only to appear:—Held, that the assignees were entitled to appear on that rule. Ibbetson v. Chandler, 9 D. P. C. 250.

Where an interpleader rule was obtained, and afterwards a claim was made by a curator appointed by the Scotch law to the property of a deceased person, the court enlarged the rule to enable the defendant to make such claimant a party thereto. Walker v. Ker, 12 L. J., Ex. 204; 7 Jur. 156.

Substituting Names.]—Where a plaintiff does not proceed to the trial of an interpleader issue, the court will not permit another person's name to be substituted without making the originally appointed plaintiff a party to the rule. Lydal v. Biddle, 5 D. P. C. 244; 2 H. & W. 302.

A horse, pointed out by A., an execution creditor, as the property of B., the execution debtor, having been seized under a fi. fa., C. claiming property, brought trespass against the sheriff, who applied for relief. The court, instead of directing an issue, ordered that the action should proceed, and that A.'s name should be substituted for that of the sheriff, subject to the terms usually imposed where an issue is directed. Brown v. Ludham, 6 Man. & G. 169; 6 Scott (N.R.) 934.

—— Limiting Defences.]—There is no jurisdiction under Ord. LVII. r. 7, to limit the defences of the claimant, who is substituted as defendant, to such defences as the original defendant could raise, since the words of Ord. LVII. r. 7, empowering the court or judge to substitute any claimant as defendant "in lieu of" the applicant, the original defendant, do not mean that such claimant should stand "in the actual place of," but instead of, such defendant. Gerhard v. Montagu, 61 L. T. 564; 38 W. R. 76.

Execution Creditor.]—An execution creditor, served with a sheriff's rule, is not bound to appear when there are no goods liable to his execution. Glazier v. Cooke, 5 N. & M. 680.

If the execution creditor does not appear upon a rule to relieve the sheriff, the court will order the sheriff to withdraw from possession, but will not direct the execution creditor to pay the sheriff the costs of keeping possession. Field v. Cope, 2 C. & J. 480; 1 D. P. C. 567; 2 Tyr. 458; 1 L. J., Ex. 175. See also Eveleigh v. Salisbury. 5 D. P. C. 369; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 268; 3 Scott, 674,

2. Application.

Jurisdiction—District Registry.]—The Judicature Rules confer no jurisdiction upon a district registrar of the High Court to make an interpleader order. Hood v. Yates, 63 L. J., Q. B. 218; [1894] 1 Q. B. 240; 70 L. T. 557; 42 W. R. 412.

—— Liverpool Court of Passage.]—The rules of the Court of Passage do not give that court the jurisdiction in interpleader contained in Ord. LVII. r. 8, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, and that even if rules had been framed to that effect they could not give such a jurisdiction, as they would be in that respect ultra vires. The power to decide summarily without consent questions in interpleader is not a "rule of law" within the meaning of s. 91 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Speers v. Daggers, 1 Cab. & E. 503.

Service of Summons out of the Jurisdiction.]—Where the plaintiffs sued for goods in the possession of the defendant, and it appeared that a foreigner residing out of the jurisdiction claimed the right to the same goods, and would probably sue the defendant in respect of them, the court gave the defendant leave to serve an interpleader summons out of the jurisdiction upon the foreigner. The effect of service out of the jurisdiction in such a case is to give the foreigner notice of the proceedings within the jurisdiction, so that he may appear and prosecute his claim, or, if he does not appear, so that any future claim prosecuted by him against the defendant in respect of the subject-matter of the action within the jurisdiction may be barred. Credits Gerundense v. Van Weede, 53 L. J., Q. B. 142; 12 Q. B. D. 171; 32 W. R. 414; 48 J. P. 184.

Affidavits—Form.]—An affidavit to ground an interpleader rule should shew that the application is made before plea; but the objection may be waived, or the affidavits amended. Frost v. Hayward, 2 D. (N.S.) 801; 12 L. J., Ex. 242; 7 Jur. 179.

A claimant called upon by a rule under the Interpleader Act to come in and state his claim, must give the particulars upon his affidavit, to enable the court to decide even whether he is to be made a party to an issue. Powell v. Lock, 3 A. & E. 315; 1 H. & W. 281; 4 N. & M. 852.

Upon a motion in an interpleader rule, the affidavits should be entitled in the original cause. Pariente v. Pennell, 7 Scott (N.R.) 834. S. P., Levi v. Coyle, 2 D. (N.S.) 932; 7 Jur. 725.

A party seeking the benefit of the act must state in his affidavit the specific sum or goods in his hands that are claimed by a third person. Butler v. ——, 3 L. J., C. P. 62.

—— Application by Sheriff.]—In applying for an interpleader summons a sheriff need not, as a general rule, file an affidavit in support of his application, such affidavit being wholly unnecessary, and if he does so file an affidavit he will not be entitled to the costs of the same. His proper course is to wait and see if an affidavit is necessary, in which case he can ask for and obtain an adjournment for an affidavit to be filed. Stocker v. Heggerty, 67 L. T. 27.

The sheriff or other officer need not, in the affidavit in support of the application, deny collusion with the claimants. Donniger v. Hinxman, 2 D. P. C. 424. S. P., Dobbins v. Green, 2 D. P. C. 509; Bond v. Woodhall, 2 C. M. & R. 601; 4 D. P. C. 351; 1 Tyr. & G. 11; 5 L. J., Ex. 9.

—— Claimant or Execution Creditor.]—An affidavit from a claimant himself is not necessary to entitle him to call upon the judge to make an order for a feigned issue. Webster v. Delafield, 7 C. B. 187; 6 D. & L. 597; 18 L. J., C. P. 186; 13 Jur. 635.

It is not necessary for an execution creditor, appearing upon a motion, to produce an affidavit. Angus v. Wootton, 3 M. & W. 310; 1 H. & H. 46; 7 L. J., Ex. 82.

—— No Collusion.]—Where a bill of interpleader is filed by the officer of a company on behalf of the company, the affidavit annexed ought to state, not that the plaintiff does not collude, but that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, the company do not collude with the defendants. Bignold v. Audland, 11 Sim. 23; 9 L. J., Ch. 266; 5 Jur. 51. See also 10 L. J., Ch. 91.

The plaintiff in an interpleader suit being abroad, leave was given, valeat quantum, to file the bill without his affidavit of no collusion, but with an affidavit by his solicitor of his belief that there was no collusion. Larabrie v. Brown, 1 De G. & J. 204; 26 L. J., Ch. 416; 5 W. R. 538; Affirming 23 Beav. 607.

Where in an interpleader suit there are several plaintiffs residing in different parts of the country, and there is evidence that they all conducted their business through the same agent in London, and solicitor, the court will allow the bill to be filed upon an affidavit of no collusion by such agent and solicitor only, but will not thereupon grant the ordinary injunction till the hearing, but merely an interim order for a reasonable time upon an understanding that the plaintiffs will themselves in the meantime make the requisite affidavit. Nelson v. Barter, 2 Hem. & M. 334; 33 L. J., Ch. 705; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 611; 10 L. T. 491; 12 W. R. 857.

Where it appeared that there was not sufficient time subsequently to settling the bill, for all of the plaintiffs to make the usual affidavit as to collusion between themselves and the defendants. The court permitted the bill to be filed upon the affidavit of some of the plaintiffs only. Glover v. Reynolds, 16 L. T. 84.

An interpleader bill cannot be filed without an affidavit by all the plaintiffs as to no collusion, unless a satisfactory reason can be given why some of the plaintiffs have not joined in such affidavit. Gibbs v. Gibbs, 5 W. R. 243.

—— Trial by.]—Where an application is made to the court by the sheriff, the court cannot try the rights of the different claimants upon affidavit but must direct an issue. Allen v. Gibbon, 2 D. P. C. 292; Bramadge v. Adshead, 2 D. P. C. 59; 3 L. J., Ex. 54.

Time for.]—An action of trover was commenced on the 29th of December, and the delaration was delivered on the 12th of January, after which the defendant twice obtained time to plead:—Held, that a rule obtained by the defendant on the 23rd was not too late. Barnes v. Bank of England, 1 W. W. & H. 50.

A bill of interpleader ought to be filed immediately after or before the commencement of proceedings at law, and not to be delayed till after a judgment or verdict has been obtained. Cornish v. Tanner, 1 Y. & J. 333. S. P., Larabrie v. Brown 1 De G. & J. 204; 26 L. J., Ch. 605; 5 W. R. 538.

The institution of a suit in equity, by one of two claimants of a fund, without making the other claimant a party, for the purpose of enforcing payment from a stakeholder, is no bar to the subsequent institution by the stakeholder of an interpleader suit, or to the obtaining by him in the interpleader suit of an injunction extending as well to the prior proceedings in equity as to proceedings at law. Prudential Assurance Co. v. Thomas, 37 L. J., Ch. 202; L. R. 3 Ch. 74; 16 W. R. 470.

It is no objection to a bill of interpleader that it is filed after verdict at law, where the effect of the action at law was to ascertain the quantum of damages due on the claim of the plaintiff at law (a defendant in equity). Hamilton v. Marks, 5 De G. & Sm. 638.

Where a plaintiff in an interpleader suit had previously set up a claim of lien, and had pleaded it in defence to an action:—Held, that this was no bar to an interpleader order being made on the terms of the plaintiff withdrawing his plea and paying the costs at law and in equity up to the time of such withdrawal. Jacobson v. Blackhurst, 2 John. & H. 486.

Particulars of Goods Seized by Plaintiff.]—A sheriff seized certain goods as the property of the defendant, which were claimed by the defendant's wife as her separate property. The wife applied for an order that the sheriff should deliver particulars of the goods seized:—Held, that the application must be refused. Bauly v. Krook, 65 L. T. 377.

Varying Order—Reference.]—On an application to a judge an order was made, by consent of all parties, to refer the cause on certain terms to a barrister, instead of an issue being directed. The court refused to grant a rule nisi for varying the order, by introducing a fresh term into the reference, in consequence of information which one of the parties (an administratrix) had obtained since the hearing at chambers. Drake v. Brown, 2 C. M. & R. 270; 5 Tyr. 1067; 4 L. J., Ex. 313.

Order to Withdraw.]—A judge at chambers has power to order a sheriff to withdraw without directing an issue. Englebach v. Nixon, 44 L. J., C. P. 396; L. R. 10 C. P. 645; 32 L. T. 831.

Issue of Writ Pending Hearing.]—Pending the hearing of an interpleader summons by a judge in chambers, a plaintiff issued a writ of summons, and the defendant gave an undertaking to appear to it:—Held, that the writ was properly issued. Hooke v. Ind, Coope & Co., 36 L. T. 467.

Ruling Sheriff to return Writ pending Issue.]—Pending an interpleader issue as to the property in goods seized by a sheriff under a fi. fa., the execution creditor has not an absolute right to an immediate return of the writ. Angell v. Baddeley, 47 L. J., Ex. 86; 3 Ex. D. 86; 37 L. T. 653; 26 W. R. 137—C. A.

A sheriff having seized goods under a fi. fa., three different persons put in claims to separate portions of the goods. The sheriff interpleaded, and three separate interpleader orders were made. One of the claimants, in pursuance of the order, paid into court the value of the goods claimed by him, to an amount sufficient to answer the debt. The other two claimants disobeyed the order; but the sheriff, instead of selling the goods claimed by them, abandoned possession of the whole. The execution creditor, thereupon, obtained a side-bar rule calling on the sheriff to return the writ:—Held, that he had no right to such return, and that the side-bar rule ought to be set aside. Ib.

3. Barring Claims.

Claimant not Appearing.]—Claimants neglecting to appear are precluded by the terms of the rule from enforcing their claims. Ford v. Dillon, 2 N. & M. 662; 5 B. & Ad. 885.

Goods consigned to A., and warehoused at the London docks, were claimed by B. The dock company required an indemnity from A., the original consignee, before they delivered them to him. A. refused, and brought an action of trover, with counts for special damage, for the detention. On motion by the company for relief, B., upon due notice, not appearing, the court held, that the claim of B. against the company was barred, but that A. ought not to be precluded from recovering for his special damage, if any. The rule was made that, on the defendant's undertaking to deliver up the goods, then if A. should accept the same, the action should be discontinued on payment of costs by the defendant; but if A. should go on with the action, the count in trover should be struck out, and A. proceed for the special damage only. Lucas v. London Dock Co., 4 B. & Ad. 378.

—— Costs.]—When an adverse claim is set up to goods seized by the sheriff, and the latter applies to the court for relief, and the adverse party does not appear to support his claim, the court will bar his claim as to the sheriff, and make him pay the judgment creditor his costs of appearing on the sheriff's rule, but will not allow the sheriff his costs. Bowdler v. Smith, 1 D. P. C. 417. See also cases post, col. 390.

Execution Creditor.]—When an execution creditor does not appear on being served with the sheriff's rule, the court cannot bar his claim. Danniger v. Hinxman, 2 D. P. C. 424.

Goods being seized by the sheriff under a fi. fa. were claimed adversely to the execution creditor. On an interpleader rule, obtained by the sheriff, the claimant and the sheriff appeared, but not the execution creditor. The claimant supported his title by affidavit. The court refused to order generally that the execution creditor should be barred of his demand; but made a rule that the sheriff should withdraw from possession, and the execution creditor take no proceedings against him in respect of the goods non-claimed. Doble v. Cummins, 7 A. & E. 580; 2 N. & P. 575; W. W. & D. 682; 7 L. J., Q. B. 12.

—— Misconduct.]—Where the execution creditor did not appear, and it was doubtful whether the sheriff, who had acted under his express direction, had not misconducted himself subsequently to the seizure, the court made an order that the execution creditor should be barred against the claimant, and the goods restored to the latter; the claimant to be at liberty to bring an action against the sheriff for misconduct, provided it should turn out that he had been guilty of any; and also if there had been any misconduct in the execution creditor in giving directions to the sheriff, to bring an action against him. Lewis v. Jones, 2 M. & W. 203; 2 Gale, 211; 6 L. J., Ex. 51.

Estoppel.]—A sheriff levied upon goods in the possession of the defendants, who were agents for their sale, and who proceeded with the sale which had then been advertised. The defendants, by inadvertence, failed to appear upon an interpleader summons taken out by the sheriff in the action concerning which he was obeying the writ of fi. fa., and the defendants were barred. They subsequently attempted to rescind the order, but failed, and their appeal to the court was also dismissed. This action was brought to recover the proceeds of the sale:—Held, that the defendants could not set up as a defence to the action the facts by which they claimed to be entitled to the goods upon which the sheriff had levied. Williams v. Richardson, 36 L. T. 505.

4. Issue.

Mistake in.]—A mistake appearing on the face of an interpleader issue, as to the statute under which it is directed, does not invalidate the issue. Saunderson v. Perrin, 22 L. T. 419.

Particulars, Order for.]—When an interpleader issue is settled in the common form to try whether the goods seized "or any part thereof" were at the time of the seizure the property of the claimant, and it appears that the claimant claims a part only, the goods seized being more than sufficient to satisfy the judgment of the execution creditor, the claimant will be ordered to specify the goods claimed by him. Price v. Plummer, 25 W. R. 45.

When a claimant in an interpleader issue did not claim all the goods seized, and he had been ordered to specify which of the goods he claimed, but had neglected to do so, and gone to trial claiming all:—Held, a verdict having been found for the claimant as to a portion only of the goods, that he and not the execution creditor was entitled to the amount paid into court under the interpleader order. Plummer v. Price, 39 L. T. 657—C. A. Reversing 26 W. R. 682.

Interrogatories.]—Interrogatories may be delivered in an interpleader issue. White v. Watts, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 267; 31 L. J., C. P. 381; 6 L. T. 387.

Form of Issue.]—A feigned issue, in the form of a wager, directed under the Interpleader Act, is not illegal by the prohibition of actions upon wagers by virtue of the above statute. Luard v. Butcher, 2 C. B. 858; 3 D. & L. 815; 15 L. J., C. P. 187.

The form of issue given in the schedule to the act is not compulsory. Ib.

—— Title of Parties.]—An issue is for the purpose of informing the conscience of the court as to whether the plaintiff or the defendant is entitled to the goods in dispute; therefore, the court will not allow either party to give evidence of a jus tertii. Carne v. Brice, 7 M. & W. 183; 8 D. P. C. 884; 1 H. & W. 23; 10 L. J., Ex. 28; 4 Jur. 1115.

Under a feigned issue brought to try the right of property in goods which had been seized under an execution against A.:—Held, that the question for the jury was not, whether the goods were the property of the plaintiff in a feigned issue, or of A., but merely, whether they were or were not the property of the former. Green v. Rogers, 2 Car. & K. 148.

In an issue directed between the partners of a banking company and certain defendants, to try whether the defendants, as partners in a joint-stock company, were indebted to the banking company:—Held, that it was no defence to shew that some of the defendants were also partners in the banking company, as the issue was directed to ascertain the fact of the defendants being indebted and was not to be determined, like an action, by the legal rights of the parties. Bosanquet v. Woodford, D. & M. 419; 5 Q. B. 310; 13 L. J., Q. B. 93.

—— Fact of Bankruptcy.]—On a feigned issue between execution creditor and assignees, the declaration reciting an execution and fiat in bankruptcy, and a wager on the question "whether the execution was valid against the fiat," the plaintiff is not entitled by the terms of the issue to dispute the bankruptcy. Linnet v. Chaffers, 4 Q. B. 762; D. & M. 14.

Goods of S. having been taken under a fi. fa., the assignees of S. (who has been declared a bankrupt) preferred a claim; whereupon an issue was directed, in which the assignees were the plaintiffs, and the execution creditors the defendants, to try whether, "at the time of the seizure, the plaintiffs were entitled to the goods, as against and free from the execution, or whether the goods were subject and liable to be so seized and levied under the writ or not as against the plaintiffs":—Held, that this put in issue all the requisites of the bankruptcy. Lott v. Melville, 3 Scott (N.R.) 346; 3 Man. & G. 40; 9 D. P. C. 882; 10 L. J., C. P. 279; 5 Jur. 436.

Where goods had been purchased by a married woman out of the produce of her separate estate, which goods had been seized by the sheriff under an execution against her husband, and an issue had been directed between the execution creditor and the trustees of the marriage settlement, for the purpose of trying their respective rights; but the form of the issue was, whether the goods in question were the goods of the husband—the court would not allow the trustees to give in evidence that the husband had become a bankrupt a second time, and had not paid 15*s.* in the pound, for the purpose of shewing that the property in the goods was not in him, but in his assignees. Carne v. Brice, 7 M. & W. 183; 1 H. & W. 23; 8 D. P. C. 884; 10 L. J., Ex. 28; 4 Jur. 1115.

Goods seized under a fi. fa., issued by A. against B., were claimed by C. In a feigned issue between C. and A., to try whether the goods were, at the time of the seizure, the goods of C., it is competent to A. to negative the title of C., by shewing that the goods, though seized by A., and claimed by C., passed to the assignees of B. by relation to an act of bankruptcy committed by B. before the seizure, and before the conveyance under which C. claims. Chase v. Goble, 2 Man. & G. 930; 3 Scott (N.R.) 245; 10 L. J., C. P. 216.

—— Validity of Execution—Prior Claims.]—On the 4th of March the sheriffs of London entered upon premises of A. under a fi. fa., at the suit of B., A.'s goods being then already under seizure, upon an execution of the suit of C., by an officer of the Lord Mayor's Court, and the landlord of the premises being also in for rent. On the 9th a fiat in bankruptcy was awarded against A. On 6th April the landlord sold all the goods, and after paying C.'s execution, and retaining the amount due to himself for rent, paid the residue into court, to abide the event of an issue between A.'s assignees and B., as to whether at the date and issuing of the fiat, the assignees were entitled to the goods as against B.:—Held, that it was not competent to the assignees, under this issue, to set up either the prior execution or the distress to defeat the claim of B. Belcher v. Patten, 6 C. B. 608; 6 D. & L. 370; 18 L. J., C. P. 69.

Onus of Proof—Issue between Trustee for Creditors and Execution Creditor—Irrevocability of Deed.]—When a debtor has made an assignment of his property to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors generally, and when the trustee sets up this deed of assignment against an execution creditor, the onus of proving that the deed is irrevocable and binding, as against such execution creditor, lies on the trustee; that is, the trustee has to prove that the deed has gone beyond the stage of being revocable, by shewing that it has been communicated to a creditor, and assented to, or at least not dissented from, by him. The burden of giving such affirmative evidence lies on the person setting up the deed against the execution creditor. Adnitt v. Hands, 57 L. T. 370.

Jus tertii.]—Upon the trial of an issue under a sheriff's interpleader between a claimant and the execution creditor, in the absence of any evidence of title on the part of the claimant, or if the claimant's interest be shewn to have passed to a third person, the execution creditor is entitled to succeed. Richards v. Jenkins, 56 L. J., Q. B. 293; 18 Q. B. D. 451; 56 L. T. 591; 35 W. R. 355—C. A.

A mortgagor of a house with the trade fixtures subsequently granted to the claimant a bill of sale of the chattels, including the trade fixtures upon the premises. The trade fixtures and other chattels were taken in execution under a judgment against the mortgagor. In an interpleader issue between the claimant and the execution creditor:—Held, that the claimant having become possessed of the equity of redemption in the goods under the bill of sale was entitled to them as against the execution creditor. Richards v. Jenkins (18 Q. B. D. 451), distinguished. Usher v. Martin, 59 L. J., Q. B. 11; 24 Q. B. D. 272; 61 L. T. 778.

—— Prior Bills of Sale.]—Upon an interpleader issue, whether goods and chattels seized in execution were "at the time of the seizure the goods and chattels of the plaintiff," the plaintiff proved a bill of sale of the goods to himself:—Held that the defendant by way of answer, might set up a prior bill of sale to a third party. Gadsden v. Barrow, 9 Ex. 514; 2 C. L. R. 1063; 23 L. J., Ex. 134; 2 W. R. 241.

An interpleader issue between an assignee of goods and execution creditors, stated the question to be "whether, at the time of the delivery of the writ to the sheriff, the goods seized by him and claimed respectively by the claimants, were the property of the respective claimants": —Held, that the meaning of the issue was whether the assignor had any goods which the plaintiff had a right to take in execution; and that it was not competent to the defendant to defeat the plaintiff's title by shewing a prior bill of sale to a third party, which was void on account of non-compliance with 17 & 18 Vict. c. 36, s. 1. Edwards v. English, 7 El. & Bl. 564; 26 L. J., Q. B. 193; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 934; 5 W. R. 507.

A. conveyed goods by bill of sale to B. By a second bill of sale A. conveyed the same goods to C. A. having become bankrupt, and the first bill of sale not having been duly registered, A.'s assignees brought trover for the goods:—Held, that B. could not set up the bill of sale to C. against the assignees. Nicholson v. Cooper, 3 H. & N. 384.

Validity of Assignment—Ultra vires.] — A railway company being sued by the assignee of a Lloyd's bond given by them, compromise the action before judgment by assigning their rolling stock to secure the money advanced by the assignee. Some of the rolling stock was afterwards taken in execution by another creditor of the company:—Held, in an interpleader issue between the two creditors, that evidence ought not to be admitted which tended to shew that the bond was illegal, the assignee having taken it without notice of any illegality; and that whether the assignment of the rolling stock was ultra vires and illegal or not, still, as it was made in lieu of judgment, its legality was not in question on this issue, and the assignee was entitled to the rolling stock as against the execution creditor. Blackmore v. Yates, 36 L. J., Ex. 121; L. R. 2 Ex. 225; 16 L. T. 288; 15 W. R. 750.

Married Woman Living apart.]—On an interpleader at the instance of a sheriff, an issue was tried, whether certain goods seized were the property of the claimant as against the execution creditor, when it appeared that the claimant was a married woman living apart from her husband in adultery with the execution debtor, and the goods were seized in a house in which they were living together. The judge told the jury that the question was whether, looking at the subject as if the claimant had been a single woman as between her and the execution debtor, the goods belonged to him. The jury having found a verdict for the claimant:—Held, that the verdict was right, notwithstanding that the claimant was a married woman. Shingler v. Holt, 7 H. & N. 65; 30 L. J., Ex. 322; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 866; 4 L. T. 76; 9 W. R. 871.

Goods Lent.]—In an interpleader issue, to try whether goods were the property of the plaintiff, as against the execution creditor, it was proved that the goods were at the time of the seizure, in the possession of the execution debtor, to whom they had been let by the plaintiff. The goods were, in fact, the property of W., who had lent them to the plaintiff, who was his agent, allowing her to let them, as owner, to whom she would:—Held that the plaintiff had sustained her claim. Green v. Stevens, 2 H. & N. 146; 5 W. R. 497.

Title to Deeds — Duress.] — The defendants issued a commission of lunacy against the plaintiff, and at the hearing before the commissioner, an agreement was entered into, that the proceedings should be dropped in consideration of the plaintiff assigning her property to trustees. This agreement was signed by her counsel, and in order to carry it out, her title-deeds were placed in the defendants' hands. On the trial of an issue, as to whether the plaintiff was entitled to the deeds notwithstanding the agreement:—Held, first, that it was not open to the defendants to dispute the title of the plaintiff to the deeds independently of the agreement. Cummings v. Ince, 11 Q. B. 112; 17 L. J., Q. B. 105; 12 Jur. 331.

Held, secondly, that the agreement was entered into under duress, and was not binding on the plaintiff, notwithstanding the consent of her legal advisers. Ib.

Evidence of Title.] — The question being between a claimant under a bill of sale from the sheriff and an execution creditor, the bill of sale, though it may not, per se, be sufficient primâ facie evidence of the title of the claimant, is so coupled with some evidence of a prior seizure by the sheriff. Hornidge v. Cooper, 27 L. J., Ex. 314.

On an interpleader issue between the plaintiff, the claimant of goods and the execution creditor, the plaintiff claiming the goods under an assignment made to him by the debtor, as a security for previous advances, an admission of the debt made by the debtor before the assignment, in the absence of the defendant, is not receivable for the plaintiff. Coole v. Braham, 3 Ex. 183; 18 L. J., Ex. 105.

Where goods are claimed under an agreement, the terms of which are contained in a written instrument, which is inadmissible by reason of its not being stamped, parol evidence cannot be received of the claimant's title to such goods. Yorke v. Smith, 21 L. J., Q. B. 53; 16 Jur. 63.

In an action by A. against B., the court, upon a motion made by B., directed that an action for money had and received should be brought by C. against A., to try the right to certain money:—Held, that in an action brought in pursuance of such order, a special agreement might be given in evidence, which in ordinary cases would be admissible only under a special count. Pooley v. Goodwin, 5 N. & M. 466; 1 H. & W. 567.

Proceedings transferred to County Court — Jurisdiction—Order on Sheriff to pay Costs.]—Where interpleader proceedings are transferred, by an order in the ordinary form, to the county court, the sheriff is not a party to the interpleader issue, and the county court judge has no jurisdiction to order him to pay costs. On the making of such an order the sheriff should apply for a prohibition, and is not entitled to appeal. Temple v. Temple, 63 L. J., Q. B. 556; 10 R. 251.

Estoppel by.] — Where on an interpleader issue to try the question whether the beneficial interest in certain goods bequeathed to plaintiff for her separate use had been transferred by her to her husband, a verdict was found for the plaintiff:—Held, that this did not decide the question whether the goods which the wife had in her separate right, and to which the husband was entitled merely in his marital right, were subject to an execution against him. Bird v. Crabb, 4 L. T. 368.

Where goods of a less value than the judgment debt have been seized by an execution creditor, and the claimant in an interpleader proceeding in the county court has deposited their value to avoid a sale, and the execution creditor being successful in the interpleader, has received the money so deposited by the claimant, upon a second seizure of the same goods in execution of the same judgment and a second issue between the same creditor and the same claimant, the execution creditor is estopped from denying that the goods are the goods of the claimant. Haddow v. Morton, 63 L. J., Q. B. 431; [1894] 1 Q. B. 565; 9 R. 275; 70 L. T. 470—C. A.

An assignee of book debts sued a debtor for the debt assigned and the assignor's trustee claimed the money; an interpleader issue was ordered, and at the trial the trustee disputed the assignment on the ground of notice of an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that after the issue was decided against the trustee, he could not set up any other ground upon which the assignment could be impeached. March, Ex parte, Hilton, In re, 67 L. T. 594; 9 Morrell, 286.

Trial—Agreement to withdraw Juror.]—A bond given to the plaintiff under an interpleader order by two defendants, as security for a claimant of goods seized at the suit of the plaintiff, contained a condition, that if at the trial of the issue the goods should be found to have been the property of the claimant, or if he should "proceed to try," according to the order, or any further order, or should pay the value of the goods, the bond should be void. A declaration in an action on the bond after setting out the condition, stated, that when the issue came on to be tried, the parties agreed to withdraw a juror; that afterwards an order was made, directing the claimant to proceed to trial at a certain sittings, and that he did not proceed to trial, or try:—Held, that the declaration was good; that the condition meant that the claimant should try, and was not satisfied by the first proceeding to trial, and that there was a sufficient breach. Williams v. Gray, 9 C. B. 730; 19 L. J., C. P. 382.

—— Right to Begin.]—Where the question was, whether goods which had been seized by the sheriff under a fi. fa., issued upon a judgment, were the property of the plaintiffs as assignees of a bankrupt, or of the defendant, the execution creditor, the defendant pleaded that by virtue of the fi. fa., and as against the plaintiffs, he was entitled to the proceeds of the goods:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to begin at the trial. Edwards v. Matthews, 4 D. & L. 721; 16 L. J., Ex. 291; 11 Jur. 398.

Mode of Trial—Jury.]—An interpleader issue having been directed, the issue was drawn up for trial with a jury, and the trial took place before a judge and jury. A new trial having been ordered, the plaintiff gave notice of trial before a judge alone. The defendant did not give a counter-notice, but objected at the trial to the jurisdiction of the judge to try the case without a jury:—Held, that it was not competent for the plaintiff to give such notice, and that the issue could not be tried by a judge without a jury. Hamlyn v. Betteley, 50 L. J., Q. B. 1; 6 Q. B. D. 63; 43 L. T. 790; 29 W. R. 275—C. A.

Issue Not an "Action."]—An interpleader issue is not an action within the meaning of s. 100 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and the rules of court made under that act. Ib.

5. Summary Adjudication.

Consent of Parties.]—The court had no power, under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, to dispose summarily of the matter in dispute between the parties who appeared on the sheriff's rule, without the consent of both plaintiff and claimant. Curlewis v. Pocock, 5 D. P. C. 381.

Goods of a debtor seized by a sheriff under an execution having been claimed by a third party, the sheriff brought the plaintiff and the claimant before a judge, who decided that the property belonged to the claimant, and ordered the plaintiff to pay the costs of the claimant and of the sheriff, and the goods to be delivered up to the claimant. The order was not stated on the face of it to have been made by consent, but was, in fact, so made; and the plaintiff paid the costs accordingly; but having discovered that there was other property in the debtor's possession not belonging to the claimant, he ruled the sheriff to return the writ, and, on his returning nulla bona, brought an action for a false return:—Held, first, that the judge had no power under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 6, to make such an order without the consent of the parties. Harrison v. Wright, 13 M. & W. 816; 2 D. & L. 695; 14 L. J., Ex. 196.

Held, secondly, that although the order was bad, as no consent appeared upon the face of it, still that it was binding upon the parties as a decision of the judge in the nature of an award, and made by consent. Ib.

Reference by Judge to Court.]—A judge at chambers referred an interpleader summons to a divisional court. The court barred the claimant and decided the case without ordering an interpleader issue:—Held, that such decision was given in exercise of the summary jurisdiction of a court or judge under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 126), s. 14, and was therefore final and without appeal. Turner v. Bridgett, 51 L. J., Q. B. 377; 9 Q. B. D. 55; 46 L. T. 517; 30 W. R. 586—C. A.

Reviewing Decision on Appeal.]—Where a judge disposes summarily of an interpleader order, by consent of the parties, under the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 6, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 45, s. 2, the court has no jurisdiction to review his decision. Shortridge v. Young, 12 M. & W. 5; 1 D. & L. 416; 13 L. J., Ex. 30; 7 Jur. 996. Burgh v. Schofield, 2 D. (N.S.) 261; 9 M. & W. 478; 11 L. J., Ex. 382. S. P., Dodds v. Shepherd, and Tarn, In re, post, col. 385. Contra, Teggin v. Langford, 2 D. (N.S.) 467; 10 M. & W. 556; 12 L. J., Ex. 76.

6. Payment into and out of Court.

Payment out—At what Time.]—Where money has been paid into court by a stakeholder to abide the event of a feigned issue, the party succeeding cannot take the money out before judgment is signed. Cooper v. Lead Smelting Co., 1 D. P. C. 728; 9 Bing. 634; 2 M. & Scott, 810.

—— When Title clear.]—An interpleader order having been made for payment into court of a sum of money, the freight of a ship, in a dispute between shipowners and charterers, the court, on its appearing that the larger portion was plainly due to the former, ordered it to be paid out of court to them, and directed an action to try the question between the parties (instead of an issue), in order that a commission might issue to examine the master, who was about to sail on a voyage. Mersey Dock Board, In re, 11 W. R. 283.

Where a judge's order has been obtained, ordering the payment of a sum of money out of court to a person claiming under an interpleader rule, the court will not refuse to enforce the order of the judge, though a suit of a creditor, against the claimant, is pending in chancery; for the right of the receiver cannot be recognised where no injunction has been served upon the officers of the court. Smith v. Clinch, 2 D. (N.S.) 48; 7 Jur. 129.

—— Application, to whom.]—Where a judge has directed money to be paid into court to abide the event of an issue, and has reserved the question of costs, an application for payment of the money out of court must be made to the same judge, and not to the court. Marks v. Ridgway, 1 Ex. 8; 16 L. J., Ex. 241.

Order on Claimant to pay Sum to Sheriff to abide Order—No Order made—Right of Sheriff to hold Money.]—In interpleader proceedings at the instance of a sheriff the claimant and the execution creditor were ordered to proceed to the trial of an issue in the county court, and the claimant was ordered to pay a sum of money to the sheriff to abide the order of the county court judge. The execution creditor having withdrawn his claim, the claimant applied to the sheriff for repayment of the money:—Held, that the sheriff was justified in refusing to pay until the county court judge made an order for payment. Discount Banking Co. v. Lambarde, 63 L. J., Q. B. 21; [1893] 2 Q. B. 329; 4 R. 537; 69 L. T. 223; 42 W. R. 50; 58 J. P. 39.—C. A.

Payment in.]—If a part of a sum claimed by the parties has been paid to one of them before adverse claim made, the adverse claimant has a right to have the whole sum he claims paid into court, on the holder applying for relief under the act. Allen v. Gilby, 2 D. P. C. 143.

Where a rule is obtained, calling on a party in a certain cause to pay money into court, the affidavits should be entitled in the original action, and not in the names of the parties to the interpleader rule. Levi v. Coyle, 2 D. (N.S.) 932; 7 Jur. 725. S. P., Pariente v. Pennell, 7 Scott (N.R.) 834.

Costs.]—Upon a motion to obtain out of court money paid in under an interpleader rule, the successful party is entitled to the costs of the application, though cause is shewn in the first instance. Cusel or Cusal v. Pariente, 8 Scott (N.R.) 240; 7 Man. & G. 527.

Where a party succeeds on an issue, he has a right to his costs of applying to take the proceeds of the sale out of court, although he has not applied to the opposite side for a consent to take the money out. Meredith v. Rogers, 7 D. P. C. 596; 2 W. W. & H. 69; 3 Jur. 1191.

So the successful party as against the unsuccessful is entitled to the costs of applying to the court in order to obtain the property in dispute from the stakeholder: an application having been made to the latter, and he having properly awaited the decision of the court before he gave it up. Barnes v. Bank of England, 7 D. P. C. 319; 1 W. W. & H. 291.

7. Appeal.

From Judgment at Trial.]—An appeal will lie to the Court of Appeal from a judgment on the trial of an interpleader issue tried in the ordinary way. Witt v. Parker, 46 L. J., Q. B. 450; 36 L. T. 538; 25 W. R. 518—C. A.

The 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 32, authorises error to be brought upon a judgment upon a special case, stated by consent, upon the trial of an interpleader issue. Gumm v. Tyrie, 6 B. & S. 298; 34 L. J., Q. B. 124; 13 W. R. 436—Ex. Ch.

The right of appeal given by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 34, applies to an interpleader issue. Withers v. Parker, 4 H. & N. 810; 28 L. J., Ex. 383; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 22; 2 L. T. 601—Ex. Ch.

No writ of error lay on a judgment signed in a feigned issue, directed under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, and the exchequer chamber quashed such a writ for a variance between the writ and the record brought up in pursuance of it, the judgment signed in pursuance of s. 7 not being a judgment in an action. King v. Simmonds, 7 Q. B. 289; 14 L. J., Q. B. 248; 9 Jur. 761—Ex. Ch. S. C., and S. P., in Dom. Proc., 1 H. L. Cas. 755; 12 Jur. 903. S. P., Thorpe v. Plowden, 2 Ex. 387.

—— To what Court.]—Where it is sought to impeach the judgment of a judge on the trial of an interpleader issue with respect only to the finding of the facts or the ruling of the law, and not with respect to the final disposal of the whole matter of the interpleader proceedings, an appeal will lie from such judgment under s. 19 of the Judicature Act, 1873, as it will from any other judgment or order of a judge. Dawson v. Fox, 54 L. J., Q. B. 299; 14 Q. B. D. 377; 33 W. R. 514—C. A. See now 53 & 54 Vict. c. 44, s. 1.

When an interpleader issue has been tried by a judge and jury and upon the finding of the jury the judge has, under Ord. LVII. r. 13, pronounced judgment disposing of the whole matter of the interpleader proceedings, but has given leave to appeal, a party to the issue who is dissatisfied with both the finding of the jury and the judgment of the judge may appeal under Ord. XL. r. 5, to a divisional court of the Queen's Bench Division, and under the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, s. 19, from that court to the Court of Appeal:—Semble, that Burstall v. Bryant (12 Q. B. D. 103) was wrongly decided. Robinson v. Tucker, 53 L. J., Q. B. 317; 14 Q. B. D. 371; 50 L. T. 380; 32 W. R. 697—C. A.

The appeal from a judgment of the court or a judge in any action or any issue ordered to be tried or stated in an interpleader proceeding, or from the decision of the court or a judge in a summary way in an interpleader proceeding, lies direct to the Court of Appeal, and in no case to the divisional court; and it is immaterial whether the judge whose judgment is appealed against gives or refuses special leave to appeal. Burstall v. Bryant, 12 Q. B. D. 103; 49 L. T. 712; 32 W. R. 495; 48 J. P. 119.

Proceedings transferred to County Court—Jurisdiction of Court of Appeal.]—Interpleader proceedings were transferred under the Judicature Act, 1884, s. 17, from the Queen's Bench Division to a county court. On appeal from the judgment of the county court the Queen's Bench Division affirmed that judgment but gave leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal:—Held, that the Court of Appeal had jurisdiction under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 45, to hear the appeal, that jurisdiction not having been taken away by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876, s. 20. Crush v. Turner (3 Ex. D. 303) approved. Thomas v. Kelly, 58 L. J., Q. B. 66; 13 App. Cas. 506; 60 L. T. 114; 37 W. R. 353—H. L. (E.)

County Court—Amount not exceeding £20.]—In an interpleader proceeding under s. 157 of the County Courts Act, 1888, the value of the goods claimed was less than 20*l.*, and the claimant claimed damages, exceeding 20*l.*, against the high bailiff and the execution creditor. At the hearing the judge gave judgment for 15*l.* for the claimant against the execution creditor, and did not grant leave to appeal:—Held, that the execution creditor had no right of appeal under s. 120, which provides that there shall be no right to appeal in proceedings in interpleader where the money claimed, or the value of the goods and chattels claimed, or of the proceeds thereof, does not exceed 20*l.*, unless the judge shall grant leave to appeal. Lumb v. Teal, 58 L. J., Q. B. 298; 22 Q. B. D. 675; 60 L. T. 451.

An appeal does not lie, even by leave of the judge, from the decision of a county court in proceedings in interpleader, where neither the money claimed, nor the value of the goods and chattels claimed, or of the proceeds thereof, exceeds 20*l.* Collis v. Lewis, 57 L. J., Q. B. 167; 20 Q. B. D. 202; 57 L. T. 716; 36 W. R. 472.

Where in an interpleader proceeding in a county court the claimant deposits the amount of the value of the goods claimed as fixed by appraisement under s. 72 of the County Courts Act, 1856, he cannot, if the amount so deposited be less than 20*l.*, claim to appeal under s. 68 of the act on the ground that the value of the goods was over 20*l.*, and that a less amount was deposited because it was sufficient to satisfy the execution creditor's judgment. White v. Milne, 58 L. T. 225.

Summary Decision.]—Where upon an interpleader summons, the question is one of law, and the judge decides it under Ord. LVII. r. 9, without directing an issue or a special case, his decision is final and conclusive, and no appeal lies therefrom. Tarn, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 564; [1893] 2 Ch. 280; 2 R. 407; 68 L. T. 311; 41 W. R. 397—C. A.

When a judge at chambers disposes of the merits of an interpleader in a summary manner under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1860, s. 14, his decision is, by s. 17, final, and he cannot, even with consent of parties, give a right of appeal to the court; and no alteration in this respect is made by the Judicature Act, 1873, ss. 19 and 50, taken together with Ord. I. r. 2. Dodds v. Shepherd, 45 L. J., Ex. 457; 1 Ex. D. 75; 34 L. T. 358; 24 W. R. 322.

A summary decision under Ord. LVII. r. 8, by a judge at chambers, on an interpleader summons, is final and conclusive, and no appeal lies from such decision, and there is no power to give leave to appeal. Lyon v. Morris, 56 L. J., Q. B. 378; 19 Q. B. D. 139; 57 L. T. 324; 35 W. R. 707—C. A.

—— At Chambers—From Divisional Court to Court of Appeal.]—By the combined operation of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1860, s. 17, and of the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876, s. 20, no appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from a decision of the Queen's Bench Division upon an appeal from the summary decision at chambers of an interpleader summons, and r. 11 of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. LVII., does not confer any power to give leave to appeal. Waterhouse v. Gilbert, 54 L. J., Q. B. 440; 15 Q. B. D. 569; 52 L. T. 784—C. A.

On an interpleader summons at chambers the master decided, at the request of one of the parties, and having regard to the value of the subject-matter in dispute, to dispose of the claims in a summary manner, and he adjourned the summons for the production of evidence. The claimant objected that it was a case for an issue, and appealed to a judge at chambers, who dismissed the appeal on the ground that the decision of the master was final. An appeal from the judge at chambers to the divisional court was dismissed. On appeal to the Court of Appeal:—Held, that the decision of the master was a summary decision within Ord. LVII. r. 8, and that therefore Waterhouse v. Gilbert (15 Q. B. D. 569) applied, and the Court of Appeal could not entertain the appeal. Quære, whether under Ord. LIV. r. 21, all decisions of a master, including a decision in a summary way in interpleader, are not the subject of appeal to a judge at chambers. Bryant v. Reading, 55 L. J., Q. B. 253; 17 Q. B. D. 128; 54 L. T. 524; 34 W. R. 496—C. A. S. C., 54 L. T. 300.

—— Reference by Judge to Court.]—A judge at chambers referred an interpleader summons to a divisional court. The court barred the claimant and decided the case without ordering an interpleader issue:—Held, that such decision was given in exercise of the summary jurisdiction of a court or judge under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict. c. 126), s. 14, and was therefore final and without appeal. Turner v. Bridgett, 51 L. J., Q. B. 377; 9 Q. B. D. 55; 46 L. T. 517; 30 W. R. 586—C. A.

—— Appeal by Sheriff.]—The 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, s. 17, makes a summary decision under the act final and conclusive "against the parties," but this does not apply to the sheriff; therefore a sheriff can appeal from an order made in a summary way. Smith v. Darlow, 53 L. J., Ch. 696; 26 Ch. D. 605; 50 L. T. 571; 32 W. R. 665—C. A.

—— Master to Judge.]—Where a master summarily decides an interpleader matter under Ord. LVII. r. 8, and gives leave to appeal, a judge at chambers has jurisdiction to entertain such appeal by virtue of the provisions of Ord. LVII. r. 11. Webb v. Shaw, 55 L. J., Q. B. 249; 16 Q. B. D. 658; 54 L. T. 216; 34 W. R. 415.

Upon the true construction of Ord. LIV. rr. 12 and 21, and Ord. LVII. rr. 8 and 11, an appeal lies from a summary decision of a master in an interpleader proceeding to a judge at chambers. Clench v. Dooley, 56 L. T. 122. See also Bryant v. Reading, supra.

Within what Time.]—An order made on an interpleader issue, though it substantially decides the dispute between the parties, is an interlocutory order, an appeal against which cannot, except by special leave of the Court of Appeal, be brought after the expiration of twenty-one days. McAndrew v. Barker, 47 L. J., Ch. 340; 7 Ch. D. 701; 37 L. T. 810; 26 W. R. 317—C. A.

An appeal from the decision of a judge on an interpleader issue tried by him without a jury must, under Ord. LVIII. r. 15, be brought within twenty-one days. McNair v. Audenshaw Paint Co., 60 L. J., Q. B. 770; [1891] 2 Q. B. 502; 65 L. T. 292; 40 W. R. 26—C. A.

The judgment of a divisional court affirming the judgment of the county court in an interpleader issue transferred to the county court under s. 17 of the Judicature Act, 1884, is a "final order" within Ord. LVIII. r. 3. Hughes v. Little, 56 L. J., Q. B. 96; 18 Q. B. D. 32; 55 L. T. 476; 35 W. R. 36—C. A.

Power to order Judgment to be entered.]—The Court of Appeal has power under Ord. XL. r. 10, to order judgment in an interpleader action to be entered for the execution creditor without directing a new trial. Williams v. Mercier, 51 L. J., Q. B. 594; 9 Q. B. D. 337; 47 L. T. 140; 30 W. R. 720—C. A.

No Order to Pay pending Appeal.]—Property taken in execution, being claimed by the assignees of the debtor who had become bankrupt, the sheriff obtained an interpleader rule, and an issue was directed, the assignees to be the plaintiffs, and the execution creditor the defendant, the money levied being in the meantime paid into court. On trial of the issues the assignees recovered, but the defendant having tendered a bill of exceptions, error was brought in the Exchequer Chamber. The court gave judgment quashing the writ of error. The assignees then moved the Queen's Bench to make an order for payment of money to them; but before cause shewn the defendant brought error in the House of Lords. There being no proof that the last writ of error was frivolous, the court refused to make such order pending the writ. King v. Birch, 7 Q. B. 669.

As to Costs.]—See infra.

8. New Trial.

There is no difference between interpleader issues and other actions, as regards the terms upon which rules for a new trial will be granted where the verdict is against the evidence. Janes v. Whitbread, 2 L. M. & P. 407; 11 C. B. 406; 20 L. J., C. P. 217; 15 Jur. 612.

9. Security for Costs.

General Rules.]—The rules in regard to security for costs on interpleader issues follow the analogy of the rules on the same subject in actions, and no special jurisdiction to require security for costs in interpleader is given by Ord. LVII. r. 15. Rhodes v. Dawson, 55 L. J., Q. B. 134; 16 Q. B. D. 548; 34 W. R. 240—C. A.

In an interpleader issue directed upon an application by a sheriff, who has received a notice of a claim to goods seized by him under a writ of fieri facias in execution of a judgment, both the plaintiff and the defendant in the issue are really in the position of the plaintiffs in an ordinary action, and, therefore, the defendant in the interpleader issue may be ordered to give security for costs in any case in which a plaintiff may be so ordered, and the rule, that a defendant cannot be compelled to give security for costs, does not apply. Tomlinson v. Land and Finance Corporation, 53 L. J., Q. B. 561; 14 Q. B. D. 539—C. A.

Foreigner Abroad.]—Where one of the defendants in an interpleader issue is really interested in the result thereof as if he were a plaintiff in an action, he is not entitled to call upon the plaintiff in the issue to give security for costs upon the ground that the latter is a foreigner residing abroad. Belmonte v. Aynard, 4 C. P. D. 352; 27 W. R. 789—C. A. Affirming 40 L. T. 627. See Workmeister v. Healy, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 451.

In an interpleader issue, the sheriff having paid money into court, and the defendant not having obeyed an order of the court to give security for costs, the defendant, who was residing abroad, was, after a lapse of six months, ordered to give security for costs within fourteen days, otherwise the claimant to be allowed to take the money paid in, out of court. Melin v. Dumont, 20 L. T. 366; 17 W. R. 673.

A sheriff being in possession of the goods of B., under a fi. fa. at the suit of A., who was resident in Scotland, a fiat in bankruptcy issued against B., and his assignees claimed the goods. Upon an application by the sheriff, a judge made an order directing an issue, in which the assignees were to be the plaintiffs, and A., the execution creditor, the defendant, and ordering that security for costs should not be required:—The court amended the order by striking out the latter words, and directed that A. should give security for costs. Williams v. Crosling, 3 C. B. 957; 4 D. & L. 660; 16 L. J., C. P. 112.

Application by Auctioneer—Insolvent Vendor.]—Where an auctioneer, against whom an action was brought to recover the deposit on a sale by auction of real estate, upon the ground that the vendor's title was defective, applied for an interpleader rule, and it appeared that the vendor had no other property except that of which the title was disputed, the court refused the application, unless the defendant gave security for costs; and refused to allow him his costs of the application out of the deposit. Deller v. Prickett, 15 Q. B. 1081; 20 L. J., Q. B. 151; 15 Jur. 168.

Insolvent Debtor.]—The assignee of an insolvent debtor sued the defendant for the proceeds of goods intrusted to him by the insolvent before his insolvency, for sale. The insolvent claimed them as executor, and the assignee and the insolvent were ordered to interplead, on the defendant bringing the money into court. The court refused to make it a condition of the order, that the insolvent or the defendant should give security for costs. Ridgway v. Jones, 29 L. J., Q. B. 97; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 223; 1 L. T. 368; 8 W. R. 185.

In an action by the assignees of a bankrupt against a banker, to recover money deposited with him as being part of the bankrupt's estate, a claim having been made to this money by a third party, as part of a trust fund, of which the bankrupt was trustee; the court on an interpleader rule ordered an action to be brought in the name of the bankrupt against the assignees, the cestui que trust to find security for the defendant's costs. Frost v. Hayward, 2 D. (N.S.) 801; 12 L. J., Ex. 242; 7 Jur. 179.

Withdrawal of Sheriff—Sufficiency.]—By an interpleader order, the sheriff was ordered to withdraw from possession of goods seized under a fi. fa. upon payment into court by the claimant of 50*l.*, or upon his giving security for that amount, to the satisfaction of the master. On the last day for giving security, the claimant's attorney, without giving notice to the execution creditor, tendered to the master a bond with two sureties, at the same time untruly informing him that the sureties were approved by the execution creditor. The master accepted the security; and the claimant's attorney, on the same day, gave the sheriff notice to withdraw, as security had been given pursuant to the interpleader order. The sheriff immediately withdrew from possession. It was afterwards on the same day discovered that the bond was unstamped, and notice of that fact was at once given to the claimant's attorney, and he on the following morning accompanied a messenger from the master's office to Somerset House with the bond, and got it stamped:—Held, that, as between the sheriff and the execution creditor, the sheriff was justified in withdrawing from possession. Darby v. Waterlow, 37 L. J., C. P. 203; L. R. 3 C. P. 453; 18 L. T. 525; 16 W. R. 864.

10. Costs.

Applicants.]—The costs of an applicant, where he has acted bonâ fide, will, in the first instance, be directed to be paid out of the fund or the produce of the thing in dispute, to be repaid by the party ultimately unsuccessful. Ducar v. Macintosh, 3 M. & Scott, 174; 2 D. P. C. 730. S. P., Cotter v. Bank of England, 3 M. & Scott, 180; 2 D. P. C. 728; 2 L. J., C. P. 158.

A stakeholder, who bonâ fide applies for relief, is entitled to his costs out of the funds or the produce of the subject-matter in dispute, to be repaid by the party ultimately unsuccessful. Reeves v. Barraud, 7 Scott, 281. S. P., Parker v. Sinnett, 2 D. P. C. 562.

A stakeholder interpleading, who acts with good faith, is entitled, although not a defendant in an action, to deduct from the fund in dispute the costs occasioned by the interpleader proceedings. Clench v. Dooley, 56 L. T. 122.

An auctioneer who has acted bonâ fide, but who is sued for deposit-money received on a purchase, and who pays it into court under an order for the vendor and purchaser to interplead, is entitled, upon the termination of proceedings between the vendor and purchaser, to receive his costs out of the deposit-money. Pitchers v. Edney, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 721; 6 Scott, 582; 1 Arn. 267; 7 L. J., C. P. 276.

A defendant being sued for rent in arrear, and having received notice from a mortgagee not to pay the rent to the plaintiff, obtained a rule for the mortgagee to interplead; the mortgagee having declined to appear to the rule, the court ordered that each party should pay his costs of the rule. Murdock v. Taylor, 6 Bing. (N.C.) 293; 8 Scott, 604; 9 L. J., C. P. 188.

Payment to Applicant for "Charges."]—The court or a judge has power under Ord. LVII. r. 15, to make an order for payment of the charges of a wharfinger who has interpleaded. De Rothschild v. Morrison, 59 L. J., Q. B. 557; 24 Q. B. D. 750; 63 L. T. 46; 38 W. R. 635—C. A.

Claimant not Appearing.]—If a claimant does not appear, the court will not order him to pay the costs of applying to the court, or such costs to be paid out of the fund in dispute. Lambert v. Cooper, 5 D. P. C. 547; W. W. & D. 204.

Where the claimant does not appear, the judgment creditor is entitled to have his costs from the claimant, but the sheriff has no costs. Perkins v. Burton, 2 D. P. C. 108; 3 Tyr. 51. See also Bowdler v. Smith, 1 D. P. C. 417; Oram v. Sheldon, post, col. 392.

What is an Appearance.]—Upon the hearing of an interpleader summons, the claimant's attorney appeared without an affidavit, and after the statement of the defendant's case, he said that he would consent to an order, barring the claim, but asked that the order might provide that no action should be brought by or against either party concerning the goods in question. The claim had been persisted in until the moment of the hearing. The judge made an order barring the claimant, and directing him to pay all costs:—Held, that although a judge has jurisdiction upon an interpleader summons to order a claimant to pay costs only when he appears to litigate his claim, these facts raised a question for his discretion as to whether this was such an appearance. Rooda v. Gun and Shot Wharves Co., 28 L. T. 635.

Where an application has been made to a judge, and the parties do not go before the judge at the instance of the execution creditor, and he having made inquiries abandons his execution, the court will not grant summarily to the claimant the costs of attending at the judge's chambers, but will leave him to his action. Swaine v. Spencer, 9 D. P. C. 347; 5 Jur. 319.

When an issue is directed to be tried between an execution creditor and a claimant, but the latter refuses to try, and abandons his claim, he will be liable to pay the execution creditor's costs down to the time of the claim being abandoned, and of applying to take the money paid in by the sheriff out of court. Wills v. Hopkins, 3 D. P. C. 346.

Execution Creditor Abandoning Execution.]—Where upon execution of a fi. fa., a claim is made to the goods seized, and upon the return to a summoning order the claimant appears and the execution creditor abandons the execution, the execution creditor must pay the costs of the interpleader summons to the claimant and the expenses of execution to the sheriff. Hyland v. Lennox, 28 L. R., Ir. 286.

Sheriff's Charges—Successful Claimant.]—A successful claimant on an interpleader issue is entitled as against an unsuccessful execution creditor to the amount of the sheriff's charges incurred in the matter of a levy and sale. Goodman v. Blake, 56 L. J., Q. B. 441; 19 Q. B. D. 77; 57 L. T. 494; 35 W. R. 812.

—— Claimant Failing—Form of Order.]—Where an interpleader has been directed on the application of the sheriff, and the claim of the third party fails, the strict form of order, upon which the sheriff is entitled to insist, is to direct the execution creditor to pay the sheriff's charges of the interpleader, with a remedy over to the execution creditor against the third party, though it is a common form of order simply to order the third party to pay them to the sheriff. Smith v. Darlow, 53 L. J., Ch. 696; 26 Ch. D. 605; 50 L. T. 571; 32 W. R. 665—C. A.

Where a sheriff obtains an interpleader order, and the claim by the third party fails, the sheriff is entitled to have his costs of the order against the execution creditor, and the execution creditor has his remedy for them over against the unsuccessful claimant. Todd v. M'Keevir, [1895] 2 Ir. R. 400—C. A.

A claim having been made to goods of an execution debtor in the possession of the sheriff under a writ of fieri facias taken out by the execution creditor, the sheriff applied for and obtained an order for an interpleader issue to be tried. Subsequent to this order the landlord of the debtor claimed the goods for rent. The execution creditor declined to pay the rent, and, the goods being distrained by the landlord, the trial of the issue was not proceeded with. The sheriff applied for a discharge of the order and for his costs to be paid by the execution creditor. The execution creditor applied for an order to bar the claimant's claim and for payment of his costs by the claimant:—Held, that the execution creditor should first pay the sheriff's costs, and that the claimant should then pay to the execution creditor half the sheriff's costs from the date of the claim. Lawson v. Carter, 63 L. J., Q. B. 159.

—— Receiving Order, Notice of.]—Notwithstanding the pendency of an interpleader order, a sheriff is not entitled to any costs of execution under s. 11, sub-s. 1, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, after he is served with a notice that a receiving order has been made against the judgment debtor. Essex (Sheriff), Ex parte, Harrison, In re, 62 L. J., Q. B. 266; [1893] 2 Q. B. 111; 5 R. 367; 68 L. T. 590; 41 W. R. 512; 10 Morrell, 106.

—— Right to.]—The sheriff is not entitled to his costs on an application under the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 6; and his claim to poundage depends on the legality of the seizure. Barker v. Dynes, 1 D. P. C. 169.

Where the sheriff applies for relief, and no blame appears to attach either to the execution creditor, the claimant, or the sheriff, each party will pay his own costs. Morland v. Chitty, 1 D. P. C. 520.

Although the sheriff is not actually allowed costs, yet, where he has retained possession of the goods seized at the request of the execution creditor, and has sold them with consent of all the parties, and the execution creditor afterwards abandons his claim, the sheriff is entitled to receive from him his costs of such possession and sale. Dabbs v. Humphries, 1 Scott, 325; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 412; 3 D. P. C. 377; 1 Hodges, 4; 4 L. J., C. P. 101. See further cases, ante, cols. 356, 357.

—— Ordered to Pay Costs.]—The court will, on proper grounds shewn, order the sheriff, or the execution creditor, to pay a third party appearing and successfully prosecuting his claim, his costs of such appearance. Ford v. Dilly, 5 B. & Ad. 885; 2 N. & M. 662.

The sheriff having taken goods in execution while there was rent due to the landlord, which he claimed from the sheriff, the latter brought the landlord, with other claimants, into court: the court ordered the sheriff to pay the rent, upon the landlord's giving security, and also to pay his costs:—Held, that the sheriff was liable to pay the expense of the security. Clark v. Lord, 2 D. P. C. 227; 3 L. J., Ex. 20.

—— Where Claimants do not Appear.]—The court will not allow the sheriff applying to be relieved his costs, where the claimant does not appear. Oram v. Sheldon, 1 Scott, 697; 3 D. P. C. 640; 1 Hodges, 92. S. P., Beswick v. Thomas, 5 D. P. C. 458.

Nor will the plaintiff be allowed his costs, except in the event of extremely improper conduct in the parties. Ib.

If the claimant does not appear, and is therefore barred, the sheriff is not entitled to costs against the claimant. Jones v. Lewis, 8 M. & W. 264; 10 L. J., Ex. 320; 5 Jur. 873.

—— Claimant Abandoning.]—Where a claimant abandons his claim after an issue directed, the sheriff is entitled to his costs from the time of directing the issue and of the application for those costs. Scales v. Sargeson, 4 D. P. C. 231.

—— Claimant neglecting to give Security.]—Where, in consequence of a claim made to goods seized by a sheriff in execution, the court ordered the claimant to proceed to trial upon paying a sum of money into court, which he neglected to do, and a rule was then obtained to compel him to pay the costs occasioned by his false claim:—Held, that he was liable to pay those costs as well as the costs of that rule, though no previous application had been made to him. Scales v. Sargeson, 3 D. P. C. 707.

—— Non-appearance of Execution Creditor.]—Where a fi. fa. has been issued, and goods seized under it, and, an adverse claim being set up, the sheriff has applied for relief, and the execution creditor does not appear to support his fi. fa., the court will order the costs of the adverse claimant's appearing to support his claim to be paid by the execution creditor, but not those of the sheriff; yet, if the execution creditor afterwards appears and opens the rule, the court will grant the sheriff the costs of his second appearance. Bryant v. Ikey, 1 D. P. C. 428.

—— Arrangement between Parties.]—If a sheriff, having levied under a fi. fa., makes an application, and an order of a judge is obtained to pay a certain portion of the money levied into court, to abide the event, and certain other proceedings are directed, but, in consequence of an arrangement between the parties, not carried into effect, the sheriff is not entitled to his costs, unless it can be shewn that the demand made by the first claimant was altogether groundless and fraudulent. Cox v. Fenn, 7 D. P. C. 50; 8 L. J., Ex. 25; 2 Jur. 945.

—— Claim by Agent.]—If a claim to goods seized by a sheriff is made by the defendant on behalf of another, which does not appear to be well founded, the court will make him pay the costs of the sheriff's application. Lewis v. Eicke, 2 D. P. C. 337; 2 C. & M. 321; 4 Tyr. 157; 3 L. J., Ex. 23.

Where a claim is made by one on behalf of another to goods seized by the sheriff in execution, and, upon a rule being obtained, neither party appears to shew cause, the plaintiff is not entitled to receive his costs from the sheriff, but the sheriff and the plaintiff are both entitled to their costs from the claimant or his agent, upon a rule to shew cause. Philby v. Ikey, 2 D. P. C. 222.

—— On Appeal.]—A sheriff seized, under an execution, goods which were claimed by the holder of a bill of sale. In interpleader proceedings the bill of sale was held to be void, and the holder thereof was ordered to pay the costs of the sheriff who had appeared at the hearing. The bill of sale holder appealed from the decision against the validity of his bill of sale, and served the sheriff with notice of appeal, which asked that the execution creditor might be ordered to pay the sheriff's costs. There was no suggestion that the execution creditor was less able than the bill of sale holder to pay the costs. The sheriff appeared on the hearing of the appeal, and asked for his costs:—Held, that it was an error to serve him with notice of appeal, but that he ought not to have appeared on the appeal, and was not entitled to costs. Webster, Ex parte, Morris, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 375; 22 Ch. D. 136; 48 L. T. 295; 31 W. R. 111—C. A.

In an appeal from the chief judge in bankruptcy on an interpleader order to the Court of Appeal, the sheriff's costs of the appeal were ordered to be paid by the party who should ultimately be decided to be in the wrong. Streeter, Ex parte, Morris, In re, 19 Ch. D. 216; 45 L. T. 634; 30 W. R. 127—C. A.

Power of Master to award in Action.]—Under the Rules of 1883, Ord. LIV. r. 12 (i), limiting the power of the master to award costs other than those of any proceedings before him or specially authorised—the master in making an order barring the claimant upon an interpleader summons under Ord. LVII., when the applicant is a defendant, has no power under rule 15 to make it a term of the order that the plaintiff shall pay the costs of the defendant in the original action, apart from those in the interpleader proceedings, and an order to this effect is, notwithstanding 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, s. 49, subject to appeal. Hanson v. Maddox, 53 L. J., Q. B. 67; 12 Q. B. D. 100; 50 L. T. 123; 32 W. R. 183.

At what Time.]—No costs in matters arising out of interpleader motions are allowed until the termination of the proceedings. Hood v. Bradbury, 6 Man. & G. 981; 7 Scott (N.R.) 892.

Affidavit on Application for.]—An issue was directed, and afterwards the claim was abandoned:—Held, on an application to the court for costs, that an affidavit in support of it must be entitled in the names of the parties in the original cause. Elliott v. Sparrow, 1 H. & W. 370.

Costs of Issues.]—Where an issue is tried, the unsuccessful party is liable for the costs. Bowen v. Bramidge, 2 D. P. C. 213.

An application by the successful party for costs may be made before judgment actually signed, but the rule cannot be drawn up except on condition of its being signed. Bland v. Delaus, 6 D. P. C. 293; 1 W. W. & H. 75.

—— Apportionment of.]—The court will, when necessary, apportion the costs of an issue among the different parties, according to the result of the issue upon their different interests. Dixon v. Yates, 2 N. & M. 177; 5 B. & Ad. 313; 2 L. J., K. B. 198.

—— Claimant Defeated.]—Where the claimants of goods taken in execution fail upon an issue, directed to try the validity of the claim, the course is to require them to pay the costs of the application, and of the subsequent proceedings. Melville or Lott v. Smark, 3 Man. & G. 57; 5 Scott (N.R.) 357.

So, where the claimants set up a claim as assignees of a bankrupt, and they fail upon the insufficiency of proof of the bankruptcy. Ib.

—— Success as to Part.]—An issue was directed between A., the claimant, and B., the execution creditor, to try whether five horses, or one or some of them, were or was, when taken in execution, the property of A. The jury found that two horses only belonged to A. A. obtained a rule nisi for payment to him of the general costs of the issue, the costs of the application under the Interpleader Act, and the costs of the rule. The court gave neither party the general costs of the issue, nor the costs of the trial, but gave to each such portion of the costs as applied to the part on which he had succeeded, and allowed A. his costs of the application under the Interpleader Act. Lewis v. Holding, 2 Man. & G. 875; 3 Scott (N.R.) 191; 9 D. P. C. 652; 10 L. J., C. P. 204.

Where a plaintiff claimed 182*l.*, and recovered only 50*l.*, and a judge, in the exercise of the discretion given to him by the statute, directed each party to pay his own costs, the court refused to grant a rule to set aside the order. Ker v. Edwards, 8 Scott, 337; 8 D. P. C. 29.

An issue was directed between the claimant and execution creditor, the costs of the issue to abide the order of the court. The claimant claimed the whole of the goods seized, but proved his right to part only:—Held, that he was entitled, notwithstanding, to the general costs of the issue, as if he had been plaintiff in trover; and also to the costs of the original and subsequent application to the court. Staley v. Bedwell, 2 P. & D. 309; 10 A. & E. 145; 8 L. J., Q. B. 233.

—— Mixed Witnesses.]—Upon the taxation of costs on an issue between the claimant of goods and an execution creditor, to try whether goods taken in execution were the property of the claimant, where the claimant succeeds as to part, and the execution creditor as to the other part, the rule as to the costs of mixed witnesses which prevails in an action does not apply. Davis v. Clifton, 6 El. & Bl. 392; 25 L. J., Q. B. 344; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 490; 4 W. R. 546.

C. claimed property seized under a fi. fa. in an action of D. against A. The sheriff having applied under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 6, a judge ordered an issue to try C.'s right, C. to be the plaintiff and D. the defendant. By the verdict, C.'s claim was affirmed for more than five-sixths, but negatived as to the residue. The court directed the costs to be taxed, upon the principle of each party having succeeded as to a part without reference to the fact which was the plaintiff and which the defendant. Ib.

The correct rule is to ascertain the extent to which each party has substantially succeeded, without reference to the question which party is plaintiff or defendant. Ib.

—— Of Right to Bill of Exchange.]—Where an issue has been directed, to try the right to a bill of exchange, the bonâ fide owner of it is entitled to the amount of the bill and all costs from the wrongful claimant, so as completely to indemnify himself. Jones v. Regan, 9 D. P. C. 580 ; 5 Jur. 607.

Scale—Payment into Court—Value of Goods.]—Where a claimant is successful in interpleader proceedings, he is entitled to costs on the value of the goods seized, as assessed by the county court judge, and not merely on the amount he has paid into court to meet the amount of the execution and costs. Studham v. Stanbridge, 64 L. J., Q. B. 473 ; [1895] 1 Q. B. 870 ; 15 R. 406 ; 43 W. R. 543.

Interest.]—Plaintiffs in an interpleader suit are not liable to interest lost to the successful party, after payment of the fund into court during the litigation between the defendants. East India Co. v. Campion, 4 Cl. & F. 616 ; 11 Bli. (N.S.) 158 ; reversing in part 6 L. J., Ch. 37. And see Campion v. Colvin, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 789 ; 5 L. J., C. P. 317.

Appeal from Order as to.]—No appeal lies from a judge's order dealing with the costs of an interpleader issue made as between the parties. Hartmont v. Foster, 51 L. J., Q. B. 12 ; 8 Q. B. D. 82 ; 45 L. T. 429 ; 30 W. R. 129—C. A.

Jurisdiction of Judge.]—A summons was taken out, after verdict, for the costs of an interpleader issue. The judge at chambers referred the summons to the judge before whom the trial took place ; the latter judge made an order on the summons at Westminster :—Held, that he had jurisdiction to make such order. Hartmont v. Foster, supra.

After an interpleader order had been made by which the question of costs was reserved, the defendant obtained an order to discharge the interpleader order unless the plaintiff took certain steps within a given time. The plaintiff failed to take these steps within the time, and the defendant then obtained an order that the plaintiff should pay the costs :—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to make the order, as an interpleader order does not remove the case from the control of the court. Wicks v. Wood, 26 W. R. 680.

Where a sheriff is relieved, and an issue is directed to try the rights of adverse claimants, the court may adjudicate after the trial on the costs of appearing to the sheriff's rule and of the issue. Seaward v. Williams, 1 D. P. C. 528.

—— Of Master.]—At the hearing of an interpleader summons before a master, the claimant abandoned his claim. The master thereupon ordered that his claim be barred, and that the defendant in the original action pay the amount claimed after deducting his costs. The plaintiff appealed to the judge at chambers, who dismissed the appeal, on the ground that the master's decision was final, but on appeal to the divisional court :—Held, that the master had exceeded his jurisdiction, for that although by Ord. LIV. r. 12 (i), he was empowered to deal with the costs of the interpleader proceeding before him, he was not, either under that order or under Ord. LVII. r. 15, empowered to deal with the costs of the action, and therefore an appeal would lie. Hanson v. Maddox, 53 L. J., Q. B. 67 ; 12 Q. B. D. 100 ; 50 L. T. 123 ; 32 W. R. 183.

Enforcing Payment of.]—A party entitled to costs under an interpleader order is not bound to take out execution under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 7, but may make the order a rule of court, and issue execution under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, c. 18. Cetti v. Bartlett, 9 M. & W. 840 ; 1 D. (N.S.) 928 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 293.

A party in an interpleader issue who has obtained an order for his costs under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 7, is a judgment creditor within 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, ss. 60, 61. Hartley v. Shemwell, 1 B. & S. 1 ; 30 L. J., Q. B. 223 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 774 ; 9 W. R. 520.

The costs of an interpleader rule were not "expenses of the execution," within the 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 5. Hammond v. Navin or Nairn, 1 D. (N.S.) 351 ; 9 M. & W. 221 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 14.

Spirits—Manufacture.]—Spirits manufactured in Jersey, partly from materials not the produce of the United Kingdom, were imported and the proper duty paid for them, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 52, s. 40:—Held, that they were subject to the regulations of excise in the same manner as spirits manufactured in England, and that the importer must deliver a request note under 2 Will. 4, c. 16, ss. 5 and 6, for obtaining a permit. Reg. v. Excise Commissioners, 6 Q. B. 975; 14 L. J., Q. B. 179; 9 Jur. 618.

—— What are.]—The term "spirits" in 6 Geo. 4, c. 80, ss. 107, 133; 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 32; and 2 Will. 4, c. 46, s. 10, signified an inflammable liquid produced by distillation, either pure, or mixed only with ingredients which did not convert it into some article of commerce not known, in common parlance, under the appellation of "spirits." Att.-Gen. v. Bailey, 1 Ex. 281; 17 L. J., Ex. 9.

Sweet spirits of nitre were not within 6 Geo. 4, c. 80, ss. 6 and 7, by which penalties were imposed for distilling spirits without a licence, and the spirits were forfeited, and might be seized; or within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 52, s. 32, which enacts forfeiture of excisable goods deposited in any place with intent to defraud the revenue. Bailey v. Harris, 12 Q. B. 905; 18 L. J., Q. B. 115; 13 Jur. 341.

A person who distils spirits for the purpose of making, by the addition of nitric acid, sweet spirits of nitre for sale, is a distiller of spirits within 6 Geo. 4, c. 80, ss. 6, 7, requiring an excise licence and liable to the penalties imposed by s. 39 on persons having any private or concealed still for making or distilling low wines or spirits. Att.-Gen. v. Bailey, 16 M. & W. 74; 16 L. J., Ex. 63.

—— Validity of Contracts.]—The 6 Geo. 4, c. 80, s. 124, enacted that no dealer in British spirits shall sell, send out, &c., any plain British spirits exceeding the strength of twenty-five above proof, or any compounded spirits (except shrub) exceeding that of seventeen under proof, on pain of forfeiting such spirits:—Held, that this section did not apply to a distiller or rectifier; and, therefore, that when a rectifier had sold and sent out plain British spirits of the strength of twenty-seven and a half, such contract of sale was not illegal, nor were the spirits prohibited goods, and the seller might recover the price. Wetherell v. Jones, 3 B. & Ad. 221; 1 L. J., K. B. 139.

A contract was made for spirits to be paid for by bills at three months from delivery; but no opportunity for delivery was given by the purchaser till a new duty was imposed on spirits by 43 Geo. 3, c. 81:—Held, that the distiller was entitled to charge the amount of the additional duty on spirits. Haig v. Napier, 1 Dow, 255.

Wines—Legatee and Executor.]—A legatee, under a bequest of wines, which arrived in the port of London in a ship before the death of the testator, the report of the arrival of the ship being made before, but the entry of the wines not being made until after the death of the testator, is not subject to the payment of the duties, the executor being bound to pay them out of the assets. Sewart v. Denton, 2 Chit. 456.

—— Imported by Ambassador.]—Where a foreign ambassador on the termination of his embassy and departure from this country, employed an agent to dispose of certain wines by auction, which he had imported duty free, and such agent employed a broker and an auctioneer, who effected the sale:—Held, that the latter was personally liable to pay the duties in respect of such wines, although he had, from time to time, as he received the proceeds of the sale, paid over the net amount to his immediate employer, the agent. Att.-Gen. v. Thornton, 13 Price, 805; 1 M'Clel. 600.

The ambassador's privilege ceased to protect the wines from duty when so sold to a purchaser. Ib.

Foreign Wines—What are—"Sweets"—Sale of "Best Sherry, British."]—A., who held a licence for retailing "sweets and made wines," but had no licence for the sale of foreign wines, on being asked for a bottle of best sherry, sold a bottle of liquor labelled "Best Sherry, British." He was thereupon charged with selling foreign wine without a licence:—Held, that the justices, in dismissing the information against him on the ground that the liquor was not sold as being foreign wine, were wrong, and that the case must be remitted to them. Sherry is the name of a foreign wine, therefore, under 23 Vict. c. 27, s. 21, liquor labelled "Best Sherry, British," must, as against the seller, be deemed to be foreign wine. Richards v. Banks, 58 L. T. 634; 52 J. P. 23.

Beer—What is—Botanic Beer.] — The appellant sold a liquor called "botanic beer" without having a retail licence for the sale of beer. It contained sugar, herbs and water, but no hops or malt, and had six per cent. of proof spirit:—Held, that such a liquor was "beer" within the meaning of s. 4 of 48 & 49 Vict. c. 51, and that the appellant was rightly convicted. Howorth v. Minns, 56 L. T. 316; 51 J. P. 7.

Excisable Liquors—Sweets and made Wines.]—By 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 18, a penalty is imposed on every person who shall without a licence sell any excisable liquor by retail to be drunk on the premises; and by s. 37, excisable liquor is to include sweets or wines, which now are or hereafter may be charged with duty either by customs or excise. By 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 77, s. 9, the excise duty on sweets or made wines is repealed; but the duty on licences to be taken out by retailers is continued, and all such licences shall still be taken out:—Held, that a person who, since 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 77, sold sweets or made wines by retail without a licence, could not be convicted under s. 18 of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, sweets and made wines being no longer excisable liquors. Reg. v. Lancashire JJ., 7 El. & Bl. 839; 26 L. J., M. C. 171; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1095; 5 W. R. 658.

—— Beer — Billiard Licence.] — Excisable liquors are liquors subject to the duty of excise; and, therefore, beer, upon which an excise duty is no longer paid, is not an excisable liquor. A person was licensed under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, to keep a house for billiard playing; and the licence provided that he should not knowingly allow the consumption of excisable liquors in the house by persons resorting thereto. He was also licensed under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, and 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, to sell beer, wine, &c., to be consumed in the house. He had allowed the consumption of beer by persons resorting to the house for the purpose of playing billiards, and was convicted of an offence against the tenor of his billiard licence:—Held, that he had not been guilty of selling excisable liquor, and was wrongly convicted. Jones v. Whittaker, 39 L. J., M. C. 139; L. R. 5 Q. B. 541; 22 L. T. 535; 18 W. R. 1197.

Excise Licence—Right to—Music Hall.]—The proprietors of a music hall, having duly obtained a music and dancing licence, applied as being the proprietors of a place of public entertainment licensed by justices of the peace, to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for an excise licence to sell by retail, beer, spirits and wine on the premises under s. 7 of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 39:—Held, that the commissioners had properly refused to grant an excise licence until a licence of justices had first been obtained under the Licensing Act of 1872; that s. 7 of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 39, had been repealed by the later act (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), except so far as the rights of proprietors of theatres were concerned; and that a music hall was not a theatre. Reg. v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, Empire Theatre, In re, 57 L. J., M. C. 92; 21 Q. B. D. 569; 59 L. T. 378; 36 W. R. 696; 52 J. P. 390.

Refreshment Houses — Licences for.] — See REVENUE.

B. SALE BY RETAIL.

1. RETAIL DEALER.

Retail Dealer, who is.]—If a person takes a house or part of a house either in his own name or in the name of any other person, and there personally, or by his agent, makes sales of spirits by retail, he carries on business there as a retailer of spirits, even though no spirits are actually stored on the premises. Stallard v. Marks, 47 L. J., M. C. 91; 3 Q. B. D. 412; 38 L. T. 566; 26 W. R. 694.

—— Wine and Spirit Merchant's Traveller.]—S. and S. were convicted under 6 Geo. 4, c. 81, s. 2, for retailing spirits in Cheltenham without a retailer's excise licence. They carried on business as wine and spirit merchants in Worcester, and held all the necessary licences for dealing in and retailing spirits there. They did not hold a licence to retail spirits at Cheltenham; but they caused premises at Cheltenham to be let to D., one of their travellers, for their own use, took out a licence for the purpose of carrying on there the business of dealers in beer, and put up a board inscribed with their names as "Distillers, Wine Merchants and Brewers, Worcester." D. took orders for spirits at these premises and transmitted them to Worcester, where S. and S. executed them by sending spirits from Worcester:—Held, that the conviction must be affirmed, for S. and S. must be taken to carry on business at Cheltenham as retailers of spirits, although the spirits they sold were kept in and delivered from a store in another town. Ib.

A traveller for a fully-licensed firm of wine and spirit merchants at B. occupied an office and premises at C., where he resided, and where amongst other places he solicited and obtained orders, which he forwarded to his employers at B., who delivered the goods so ordered direct to the purchaser. The firm neither rented nor occupied any premises at all at C., nor did they store goods upon their traveller's premises. Upon an information being exhibited by an inland revenue officer against the traveller under the above acts, charging him with taking an order for spirits at his office at C., without having in force a proper licence authorising him so to do:—Held, that he was a bonâ fide traveller taking orders for his employers who were duly licensed to sell spirits, &c., and therefore not liable to take out a licence. Stuchbery v. Spencer, 55 L. J., M. C. 141; 51 J. P. 181.

"Licensed to sell Beer by Retail."]—The holder of a licence to sell beer under 26 & 27 Vict. c. 33, s. 1, is a person "licensed to sell beer by retail" within the meaning of s. 18 of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, Shoolbred v. St. Pancras JJ., 59 L. J., M. C. 63; 24 Q. B. D. 346; 62 L. T. 287; 38 W. R. 399; 54 J. P. 231.

Wholesale Licence—Measure of Quantity.]—The holder of an excise licence under the Excise Act, 1825 (6 Geo. 4, c. 81), is entitled to sell strong beer only in casks containing not less than 4½ gallons imperial standard gallon measure, or in not less than two dozen reputed quart bottles at one time, to be drunk elsewhere than on his premises. The Inland Revenue Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 33), s. 1, provides that the holder of such a licence may take out an additional licence to sell beer "in any less quantity or in any other manner"; and by s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), it is declared to be an offence to sell intoxicating liquor by retail unless authorised by licence so to do. "Sale by retail" is defined by the Beer Act, 1834 (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85), s. 19, as a sale in any less quantity than 4½ gallons. Appellant, the holder of an excise licence under the Excise Act of 1825, having no additional licence, sold beer in quantities at one time exceeding the quantity prescribed in the licence, but in pint and half-pint bottles; and in respect of such sale was convicted by justices of having sold by retail without a licence, in contravention of s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872 :—Held, that the conviction was bad, a sale at one time of a quantity exceeding 4½ gallons not being a sale by retail within that section. Fairclough v. Roberts, 59 L. J., M. C. 54 ; 24 Q. B. D. 350 ; 62 L. T. 700 ; 38 W. R. 330 ; 54 J. P. 421.

2. SALE WITHOUT LICENCE.

Sale of Wine—Wine Dealer's Licence.]—A shopkeeper, holding a wine dealer's excise licence, granted under 6 Geo. 4, c. 81, s. 2, and for which the annual duty of 10*l.* 10*s.* is payable, is entitled without any certificate from justices, to sell by retail wine to be consumed off the premises. Palmer v. Thatcher, 47 L. J., M. C. 54 ; 3 Q. B. D. 346 ; 37 L. T. 784 ; 26 W. R. 314.

Clubs—Supply of Liquor to Member.]—The appellant was manager of an institution carried on bonâ fide as a club, under rules by which members paid an entrance fee and subscription ; trustees were appointed, in whom all the club property was vested, and there was a committee of management (for whom the appellant acted) to conduct the general business. The club was not licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquors, but these were supplied, at fixed prices, to members for consumption on and off the premises, 33 per cent. above the cost price being charged for liquors to be consumed off the premises, and the money produced thereby going to the general funds of the club. The appellant having, in the course of his employment as manager, supplied intoxicating liquors to a member (who paid for them) for consumption off the premises :—Held, that the appellant did not "sell by retail" intoxicating liquors within the meaning of s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872, and therefore was not liable to conviction for an offence under the section. Graff v. Evans, 51 L. J., M. C. 25 ; 8 Q. B. D. 373 ; 46 L. T. 347 ; 30 W. R. 380 ; 46 J. P. 262.

The manager of a club in the form of a limited company—the shareholders in which constitute the members of the club—is not liable criminally, under the Licensing Act, 1872, for the sale at the club of intoxicating liquors to members. Newell v. Hemingway, 58 L. J., M. C. 46 ; 60 L. T. 544 ; 16 Cox, C. C. 604 ; 53 J. P. 324.

—— Supply of Liquors to Person while "Honorary Member"—Subscription paid—Person afterwards rejected as Member.]—A limited company carrying on a proprietory club had no licence, the election of members being in the hands of a committee. Liquor was supplied by the company to and paid for by a person who had been elected an "honorary member" pending inquiries and pending his election as a member, and had paid his subscription. He was subsequently not elected as a member, and his subscription was returned :—Held, that there was a sale by retail of the liquor by the company for which the company were liable in penalties. Bowyer v. Percy Supper Club, [1893] 2 Q. B. 154 ; 5 R. 472 ; 69 L. T. 447 ; 42 W. R. 29 ; 17 Cox, C. C. 669 ; 57 J. P. 470.

—— Sale by Member to Stranger.]—A stranger entered a working-men's subscription club, by one of the rules of which visitors were forbidden to pay money direct to the manager. W., a member, entered the stranger's name as a visitor ; the stranger then put down 8*d.*, asking for two pints of ale. W. received the money, and the ale was supplied to the stranger :—Held, that W. sold liquor to the stranger without a licence. Stevens v. Wood, 54 J. P. 742.

—— Unauthorised Sale by Club Steward—Liability of Trustees.]—The appellants, who were trustees and members of the managing committee of a club, were convicted under the Licensing Acts for selling liquor without a proper licence to persons not members of the club. It appeared that the liquor was sold in the club premises by the steward of the club, who in selling it acted contrary to the orders of the appellants, and without their knowledge or assent. The money which he received for the liquor was paid by him to the account of the club :—Held, that the conviction was wrong, for the appellants were not, under the circumstances, responsible for the act of the steward. Newman v. Jones, 55 L. J., M. C. 113 ; 17 Q. B. D. 132 ; 55 L. T. 327 ; 50 J. P. 373.

—— Sale to Agent of Member.]—Certain premises which had been licensed as a beerhouse were, on the refusal of a renewal of the licence, formed into a working-men's club. In the bar of the club was a placard stating that no payment would be received for refreshments from any person other than bonâ fide members. The wife of a member, however, having been provided with money by her husband went to the club, paid for and was supplied with beer, having first been asked if it was for her husband and she stating that it was. The justices found that there had been a sale of intoxicating liquor, and that the person to whom it was sold was not a member of the club ; they therefore convicted the club steward who supplied the liquor :—Held, that on the facts the conviction was right. Woodley v. Simmonds, 60 J. P. 150.

—— "Second Offence."]—The manager of a club was duly convicted under s. 17 of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, of selling beer by retail without having an excise retail licence. Subsequently he was convicted under s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872, of selling intoxicating liquor, to wit beer, without a licence. Upon the hearing of the latter charge the magistrate treated it as a second offence, and imposed the full penalty of 100*l.* authorised in the case of "the second offence" by s. 3, sub-s. 2, of the Licensing Act, 1872 :—Held, that there could only be a conviction under s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872, for a second offence where the conviction for the first offence had been under the same statute, and that the second conviction was therefore bad. Authers or Anthers, In re, 58 L. J., M. C. 62 ; 22 Q. B. D. 345 ; 60 L. T. 454 ; 37 W. R. 320 ; 16 Cox, C. C. 588 ; 53 J. P. 116.

Pretended Club—Manager the Proprietor.]—E. was summoned under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 4, for selling liquors without a licence. Over the door a signboard was painted "The C. Working Men's Club." The interior was fitted up like a public-house, and E. professed to be manager, and ordered everything on the credit of the club, but could not tell who were members, nor how the accounts were kept, and neither committee nor secretary had any means of checking him :—

Held, that there was evidence to justify the justices in holding that it was only a pretended club, and that E. was the real proprietor. Evans v. Hemingway, 52 J. P. 134.

Rebuilding Premises—Adding Strip of Land.]—The holder of a beer licence rebuilt his premises and made them more commodious. In doing so he advanced the frontage and took in a strip of garden, five feet wide, on which a part of the new bar stood. The justices convicted him of selling at a place where he was not authorised:—Held, that the justices were wrong and that there was no evidence to support the conviction, the premises not being substantially altered in rebuilding. Deer v. Bell, 58 J. P. 513.

Sale at Nominal Price.]—The 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 13, which imposed a penalty on persons selling beer by retail without a licence, applied to persons selling beer at 1½*d.* the quart. Read v. Storey, 6 H. & N. 423; 30 L. J., M. C. 110; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 344; 3 L. T. 674; 9 W. R. 418.

"Illegally Dealing in Intoxicating Liquor"—Purchaser as well as Seller.]—The provision in s. 17 of the Licensing Act, 1874, that persons found upon suspected premises entered by a constable in pursuance of a warrant to search for liquors sold or kept for sale contrary to law, shall be presumed to be guilty of "illegally dealing in intoxicating liquor" until the contrary be shewn, is not confined to a seller, but applies also to a buyer, of such liquors McKenzie v. Day, 62 L. J., M. C. 49; [1893] 1 Q. B. 289; 5 R. 161; 68 L. T. 345; 41 W. R. 384; 17 Cox, C. C. 604; 57 J. P. 216.

Husband's Liability for Wife's Acts.]—Upon an information for unlawfully selling beer under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 17, it was proved that the appellant's wife had actually supplied the beer to three persons who had asked the appellant for beer, and to whom he had said whilst pointing to his wife, "You must ask her":—Held, that upon this evidence the conviction was right. Reg. v Smith, 7 W. R. 162.

A. was charged under s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872, with selling intoxicating liquor without a licence. A. kept a tobacco shop and refreshment house, but had no licence to sell liquors by retail. A.'s wife sold bottles of ale to customers, but there was no evidence that A. knew anything of her so acting. The justices held A. liable for the acts of his wife and convicted A.:—Held, the justices were wrong. Allen v. Lumb, 57 J. P. 377.

Aiding and Abetting.]—The owner of licensed premises obtained possession of them after the licence-holder had absconded and put in a new tenant, to whom he supplied liquors for sale. The new tenant had not obtained a licence:—Held, that the owner was rightly convicted of aiding and abetting the new tenant in selling liquors without a licence under s. 5 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, and s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872. Owen v. Langford, 55 J. P. 484.

At Races—Special Licence.]—A person duly licensed by the justices and by the excise to sell beer by retail in town, but having no licence to sell beer at races in the adjoining borough, is rightly convicted of selling beer at a regatta in the borough, and is not protected by 6 Geo. 4, c. 81, s. 11. Ash v. Lynn, 7 B. & S. 255; 35 L. J., M. C. 159; L. R. 1 Q. B. 270; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 485; 14 L. T. 224; 14 W. R. 583.

—— Public Races, what are.]—Races were held in a field occupied by an individual who let it for that purpose, and any one of the public, on payment of a small sum, was admitted into the field:—Held, that these races were "public races," within 6 Geo. 4, c. 81, s. 11, which enables any person licensed to sell beer by retail to be drunk on the premises to carry on his business in booths, tents or other places at the time and place of holding any public races. Boughey v. Rowbotham, 4 H. & C. 711; 15 L. T. 222; 15 W. R. 75.

At Fairs.]—The right by custom, prescription, or charter to sell beer at fairs without an excise retail licence is abrogated by 25 & 26 Vict. c. 22, s. 12. Huxham v. Wheeler, 3 H. & C. 75; 33 L. J., M. C. 153; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 545; 10 L. T. 342; 12 W. R. 713.

An alehouse-keeper, who has obtained an ordinary justice's and excise licence, may, by virtue of such licence, sell beer in booths at any lawful fair. It is not necessary to get a special excise licence for that purpose. Haywood v. Holland, 28 L. T. 702; 21 W. R. 920.

Irregularity in obtaining Licence.]—By 25 & 26 Vict. c. 22, s. 13, and 26 & 27 Vict. c. 33, s. 20, sub-s. 1, an occasional licence for the sale of intoxicating liquors is to be granted by an officer of excise upon the written consent of a justice "usually acting at the petty sessions for the petty sessional division within which the place of sale is situate." S. obtained from a duly authorised officer of excise an occasional licence for the sale of intoxicating liquors; the justice who signed the written consent did not usually act for the petty sessional division within which the place of sale was situate. S. having sold intoxicating liquors at the time and place mentioned in the occasional licence, was convicted by justices of selling intoxicating liquors without a licence. It was not proved that he had acted otherwise than bonâ fide:—Held, that although an irregularity had been committed in obtaining the licence, yet it protected him from penal consequences, and that the conviction was wrong. Stevens v. Emson, 45 L. J., M. C. 63; 1 Ex. D. 100; 33 L. T. 821—C. A.

At Public Ball—Occasional Licence.]—A licensed victualler, within the metropolitan police district, who had obtained an occasional licence from the excise, with the consent of a justice of the peace, under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 22, s. 13, and 26 & 27 Vict. c. 33, s. 20, required also an occasional licence from the commissioner of police under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 64, s. 5, in order to enable him lawfully to supply excisable liquors at a public ball held, off his own premises, on premises which were neither a public-house nor a refreshment-house. Hannant v. Foulger, 8 B. & S. 425; 36 L. J., M. C. 119; L. R. 2 Q. B. 399; 15 W. R. 787.

Temporary Authority to Sell—Proposed Transferee.]—The grant to a proposed transferee of a beerhouse of a temporary authority to sell beer under s. 1 of the Licensing Act, 1842, does not operate to cancel the existing licence, and while the licence-holder remains in possession of the premises he cannot be convicted under s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872, of selling intoxicating liquor without being duly licensed. Andrews v. Denton, 66 L. J., Q. B. 520; [1897] 2 Q. B. 37; 76 L. T. 423; 45 W. R. 500; 61 J. P. 326.

Exemption from Penalties—Age of "Heir"—Death of Licence-holder.]—A person under the age of twenty-one may be an "heir" within the meaning of s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict, c. 94), which provides certain exemptions from penalties on the death of the licence-holder. Rose v. Frogley, 62 L. J., M. C. 181; 5 R. 530; 69 L. T. 346; 57 J. P. 376.

3. Sale under 20*s*. Value or on Credit.

No Action Maintainable—In what Cases.]—The 24 Geo. 2, c. 40, s. 12, extends to spirits mixed with water. Scott v. Gillmore, 3 Taunt. 226; 12 R. R. 641.

That statute extends to a score for grog, beer and herrings, as to such part as was for the grog, but not to the other items, which consequently may be recovered. Gilpin v. Rendle, 1 Selw. N. P. 61.

In an action for the amount of a tavern bill, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover for any items under 20*s*. for spirits supplied to his guests. Burndyeat v. Hutchinson, 5 B. & Ald. 241; 24 R. R. 345.

But the statute does not apply to spirits supplied by a hotel-keeper to a guest who is resident in his hotel. Proctor v. Nicholson, 7 Car. & P. 67.

The statute applies not only to liquors sold for the personal consumption of the purchaser, but to liquors sold to a publican to sell again. Hughes v. Done or Doane, 4 P. & D. 708; 1 Q. B. 294; 5 Jur. 837.

If a person sells two sorts of spirits at the same time to an amount above 20*s*., he may recover the price, although the amount of each species of spirits is under 20*s*. Owens v. Porter, 4 Car. & P. 367.

It is a defence to an action on a bill of exchange against the acceptor, that it was accepted for the amount of spirits sold to him by the plaintiff in quantities under the value of 20*s*. Scott v. Gillmore, 3 Taunt. 226; 12 R. R. 641.

But at nisi prius, it was held that a bill accepted by an officer in the recruiting service, in payment of small quantities of spirits under the value of 20*s*., supplied by a publican, to be used out of his house, to recruits and others under the command of the acceptor, was valid. Spencer v. Smith, 3 Camp. 9.

Pleas to a declaration on a bill, with counts for goods sold; first, that part of the consideration of the bill was spirituous liquors, sold at different times in quantities less in value than 20*s*.; and secondly, that the plaintiff and defendant accounted together, and that the latter had given the former a bill for the amount of the goods mentioned in the common counts, which bill was still outstanding and unsatisfied, are issuable pleas, and cannot be treated as nullities, so as to entitle the plaintiff to sign judgment as for want of a plea. Gaitskill v. Greathead, 1 D. & R. 359.

A publican took from a person, who boarded and lodged in his house, a bill and a note, both at one time, for a score, part of which consisted of a demand for spirits; but not to the amount of either bill or note; money was also paid on account:—Held, in action on the securities, that, although they were given at the same time, the publican might recover on one of them, and also that he might apply the money paid in reduction of the demand for spirits, although such demand could not be recovered. Crookshank or Cruickshanks v. Rose, 5 Car. & P. 19; 1 M. & Rob. 100.

Where parties, having cross demands, settle and balance their accounts, it is no defence to an action brought for the balance, that a great part of the amount was for spirituous liquors, delivered in quantities under 20*s*. in value. Dawson v. Remnant, 6 Esp. 24.

The vendor of spirits in small quantities, for the price of which he is disabled from recovering, who has another demand against the vendee, may apply a payment made to him by his debtor to the price of the spirits, unless at the time of payment the debtor directs a different appropriation of it. Philpott v. Jones, 4 N. & M. 14; 2 A. & E. 14; 4 L. J., K. B. 65.

In the absence of such contemporaneous directions by the debtor, the creditor may so apply the payment at any time afterwards. Ib.

C. Qualification for Licences.

1. Persons.

a. Residence.

When Unnecessary.]—M., who held a strong beer licence, applied to licensing justices for a certificate to take out a retail licence to sell beer, wine and spirits, not to be consumed on the premises. The justices refused the licence under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 8, sub-s. 4, on the ground that the applicant was not qualified as by law is required by reason of his intention not to reside on the premises:—Held, that as the holder of a strong beer licence was entitled, under 26 & 27 Vict. c. 33, s. 1, to the retail licence without any other qualification, residence was not required; and that as the justices, therefore, had not determined according to law, a mandamus must be granted to them to hear and determine the application according to the statutes in that behalf. Reg. v. De Rutzen, 45 L. J., M. C. 57; 1 Q. B. D. 55; 33 L. T. 726; 24 W. R. 343.

Certificate of.]—The 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 2, which enacts that every applicant for a licence to retail beer shall produce to the officer of excise a certificate from an overseer that he is the real resident holder and occupier of the house in which he shall apply to be licensed, is directory only; and therefore a licence may be valid, notwithstanding the certificate omits to state that the applicant is such householder. Thompson v. Harvey, 4 H. & N. 254; 28 L. J., M. C. 163; 7 W. R. 281.

But a licence granted to a person who is not in fact such householder is void, the first section being imperative. Ib.

—— Discretion of Overseer.]—An overseer to whom application is made to certify that a person applying for a licence to retail beer in a dwelling-house is a real resident holder and occupier of the house is not compelled to certify, but has a discretion, Reg. v. Kensington, 12 Q. B. 654; 17 L. J., Q. B. 332; 12 Jur. 747.

Overseers have not an arbitrary discretion to grant or refuse certificates, but are bonâ fide to inquire into and certify as to the rating and occupancy of persons requiring licences for the sale of beer. Reg. v. Withyham, 2 C. L. R. 1657.

—— Refusal to Certify — Mandamus.] — In November a person applied to the overseers to certify that he was resident occupier of premises in their parish. They found that the premises were not wholly in his occupation, and consequently refused their certificate. In the May following he made another similar application, but they again refused it, believing him not entitled to any certificate, as no notice had been given to them that any alteration had been made in the occupation, although it was probable that the applicant had in fact become the occupier during the interval. The applicant thereupon obtained a mandamus directing the overseers to inquire whether he was the occupier in May, and to certify accordingly. They returned that they had inquired, but could not ascertain whether he was occupier in May, but stated that he was then the occupier of the premises. The court refused to grant the applicant the costs of the mandamus, as the refusal of the overseers in May to certify was not wrongful, and it was even doubtful whether he was at that time entitled to a certificate. Reg. v. Langridge, 3 C. L. R. 361 : 24 L. J., Q. B. 73 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 64 ; 3 W. R. 165.

—— Certiorari to remove Licence.]—A certiorari will not lie to remove a licence for the sale of beer granted by a collector or supervisor of excise without the production of the overseers' certificate. Reg. v. Salford Overseers, 18 Q. B. 687 ; 21 L. J., M. C. 223 ; 16 Jur. 907.

Retail Off-Licences — Wholesale Beer and Spirit Dealers—Unlicensed Servant of Licensed Limited Company.] — The servant of a limited company which is duly licensed in the name of three directors to deal in beer and spirits wholesale, not being himself so licensed, is not duly qualified as an applicant for additional retail off-licenses in respect of a branch establishment belonging to the company and managed by him on their behalf. Reg. v. Jones, Davies, Ex parte, 59 J. P. 87.

b. Character.

Conviction for Felony.]—By 33 & 34 Vict. c. 29, s. 14, every person convicted of felony shall for ever be disqualified from selling spirits by retail, and no licence shall be granted to any person who shall have been so convicted ; and if any person, after having been so convicted, shall take out or have a licence, the same shall be void to all intents and purposes ; and every person who, after having been so convicted, shall sell spirits by retail shall incur the penalty for doing so without a licence :—Held, that the section applied to a person convicted of felony either before or after the act passed ; and that licences held by a person convicted before the act became void on the passing of the act. Reg. v. Vine, 44 L. J., M. C. 60 ; L. R. 10 Q. B. 195 ; 31 L. T. 842 ; 23 W. R. 649 ; 13 Cox, C. C. 43.

Pardon.]—By s. 14 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act Amendment Act, 1870, "Every person convicted of felony shall for ever be disqualified from selling spirits by retail, and no licence to sell spirits by retail shall be granted to any person who shall have been so convicted as aforesaid" :—Held, that a person who had been convicted, but who had received a free pardon under the Queen's sign manual, was not disqualified by the above section from holding a licence, inasmuch as the effect of the pardon was to absolve such person not only from the punishment awarded him, but also from all disqualifications attaching to the offence. Hay v. Tower Division JJ. or Middlesex JJ., 59 L. J., M. C. 79 ; 24 Q. B. D. 561 ; 62 L. T. 290 ; 38 W. R. 414 ; 54 J. P. 500.

Conviction for selling Spirits without Licence.] —Where an applicant for the removal of a licence from a fully licensed public-house has been convicted of selling spirits without licence, an order of justices "authorising him to apply for and hold any excise licences that may be held by a publican" is valid. Whether the applicant would be liable to penalties for selling beer and wine under the publican's licence, quære. Reg. v. Roper, 63 L. J., M. C. 68 ; 10 R. 598 ; 70 L. T. 409 ; 58 J. P. 512.

Living in Concubinage.]—A. was convicted under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 6, of having obtained a licence to retail beer by means of a certificate, the matters certified therein being false. The certificate stated that he was a person of good character. He was, however, proved to be living with a woman in a state of open concubinage, and had three illegitimate children by her :—Held, that he was improperly convicted ; that the mere proof of such immorality did not constitute a person not to be a person of good character. Leader v. Yell, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 584 ; 33 L. J., M. C. 231 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 731 ; 10 L. T. 532 ; 12 W. R. 915.

c. Holding other Licences.

Refreshment and Wine Licence.]—A beer-house-keeper having obtained a refreshment-house licence, applied for a wine licence under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 27, s. 7, when an objection was taken that he was not entitled to such licence as not coming within that section. He provided travellers and others who came to his house with bread and cheese and other victuals as they required them :—Held, that he was entitled to a wine licence. Munn v. Southall, 7 L. T. 356.

"Keeping Shop for Sale of Goods other than Foreign Wine."]—Semble, that a person who has a spirit-dealer's retail licence to sell spirits in bottles, and who has a wholesale beer-dealer's licence authorising the sale of casks of ale of four and a half gallons, sufficiently fulfils the description of "a person who keeps a shop for the sale of goods and commodities other than foreign wine," and therefore is entitled to a certificate of justices authorising the sale of wine by retail, pursuant to 23 Vict. c. 27, s. 3. Reg. v. Bishop, 50 J. P. 167.

Confectioner.]—A confectioner who has held a wine licence for consumption on the premises, and who supplies luncheons, is sufficiently within the description of persons entitled to apply for and hold a publican's licence within 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 1, being a person about to keep an inn, alehouse or victualling-house. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 52 J. P. 423.

Publican and Grocer.]—The 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 38 (Irish), s. 3, prevents a person who is already a publican from obtaining a licence to carry on the business of a grocer on the same premises, as absolutely as it does to prevent a person licensed as a grocer from carrying on in the same premises the business of a publican. M'Kenna v. Pape, 1 H. L. Cas. 6.

d. Fraud.

A licence, though obtained by fraud, is valid, unless the fraud is practised by the party to whom it is granted. Rex v. Minshall, 1 N. & M. 277.

e. Custom.

Beer—Customary Rights.]—The 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 64, does not supersede the custom of a borough, that no person shall carry on the trade of an alehouse-keeper therein who is not a burgess. Leicester Corporation v. Burgess, 2 N. & M. 131; 5 B. & Ad. 246; 2 L. J., K. B. 187.

f. Exemption.

Exemption from Obligation to Obtain Licence—Children of Officers in Peninsular War.]—The statute 56 Geo. 3, c. 67, which enables children of the officers and men who served his majesty in the Peninsular war to set up and exercise a trade in any city, town, or place within this country, without let, suit, or molestation, notwithstanding any statute, law, ordinance, custom, or provision to the contrary, does not exempt this class of persons from the provisions of the general public statutes, and therefore a person of this class is not relieved from the necessity of obtaining a licence to sell intoxicating liquors; the statute has reference only to customs, charters, by-laws, and the like existing in particular localities. Killin v. Swatton, 76 L. T. 55; 45 W. R. 235; 18 Cox, C.C. 477; 61 J. P. 150.

2. Houses.

Rating—Sufficiency of.]—The appellant was the owner of a house, part of which was situate in the township of C., in the city of M., and was rated thereto on an annual value of 8*l.*, and the other part of which house was situate in the township of M., not within the city, and was rated to such township on an annual value of 8*l.* 10*s.* Both townships, which each contained a population exceeding 10,000, were situate in the same parish and poor-law union, to which union the rates of both townships, though separately levied and collected, were paid over. The justices having refused the owner's application for a certificate for the renewal of a beer licence under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, on the ground that her house was not sufficiently rated within the city of M. in the amount required by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 1:—Held, that the justices were right. The house, though rated in two separate sums of 8*l.* and 8*l.* 10*s.*, was not rated in "one sum of 15*l.* at the least," and so did not come within the words of s. 1 of the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, and was not therefore within that act; nor did it come within s. 4 as an "extra-parochial or other place where no rates were made or collected." Jennings v. Manchester JJ., 22 L. T. 412.

An application for a licence to sell beer by retail not to be consumed on the premises was refused by justices, on the ground that the house was not duly qualified by law, not being of sufficient value under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 1. The Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, s. 8, requires the justices, where such an application is refused on the ground that the house is not duly qualified as by law required, to specify in writing to the applicant the grounds of their decision. A minute of the decision, with the grounds of it, was made and read out by the chairman in court, in the presence of the applicant, but no copy was delivered to him. On a rule for a mandamus to the justices to hear and determine the application:—Held, that the provisions as to the rating qualification for houses for the sale of beer and cider for consumption off the premises under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 1, had not been affected by the Licensing Act, 1872, s. 45, which must be construed as applying only to premises licensed before the act, or to be licensed under it, for the sale of intoxicating liquor thereupon. Reg. v. Cumberland JJ., 51 L. J., Q. B. 142; 8 Q. B. D. 369; 30 W. R. 178; 46 J. P. 7.

A beerhouse situated in a township having a population of less than 10,000 inhabitants, according to the last parliamentary census, must, if such township is within a parish containing more than 10,000 inhabitants, be rated at one sum to the rate for the relief of the poor of the township in which such house is situate on a rent or on an annual value of 15*l.* per annum at the least, or otherwise the licence is null and void under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 1. Preston v. Buckler, 39 L. J., M. C. 105; L. R. 5 Q. B. 391; 22 L. T. 653; 18 W. R. 1104.

Justices cannot refuse an off wine and spirit licence on the ground that the house is not of the annual value of 30*l.*, or that there is an internal communication with other premises. Reg. v. Morison, 55 J. P. 87.

Where an indoor beer licence which had been renewed since 1869, was refused to be renewed by the licensing justices on the ground that though the house was of sufficient annual value when the application was heard at the adjourned annual meeting, yet it had not been so on 25th August, the date of the original general annual meeting, the value having been increased during the interval:—Held, that the justices had exceeded their jurisdiction, and a rule for a mandamus was made absolute. Reg. v. Montagu, 49 J. P. 55.

—— House and Shop.]—G. occupied a house and a shop, which were together rated in 15*l.*; the house and shop were attached to and communicated with each other, and the shop was used for the sale of groceries and beer:—Held, that the shop was part of the premises occupied with the house within the meaning of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 1, and that in ascertaining the ratable value of the house the value of the shop might be taken into account. Garatty v. Potts, 40 L. J., M. C. 1; L. R. 6 Q. B. 86; 23 L. T. 554; 19 W. R. 127.

D. GRANTING OF LICENCES BY JUSTICES.

1. Original Licence.

Jurisdiction—In Boroughs.] — Borough justices have no jurisdiction to grant licences for inns and alehouses under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, except in such boroughs as have separate courts of quarter sessions. Candlish v. Simpson, 1 B. & S. 357; 30 L. J., M. C. 178; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 34; 4 L. T. 437; 9 W. R. 745.

A borough may be a town corporate within 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 1, though it has no separate court of quarter sessions. Brown v. Nicholson, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 468 ; 28 L. J., M. C. 49 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 99 ; 7 W. R. 88.

A licence was granted by justices of a borough, a place having a separate commission of the peace, but no separate court of quarter sessions, at a licensing meeting held on the 7th of September, which had been duly appointed by them as they had always been accustomed to do :—Held, that the licence so granted was valid, notwithstanding that the justices for the county (who had concurrent jurisdiction in the borough) had previously appointed a licensing meeting for the 8th. Ib.

—— Division of County—Island in British Channel.]—H. had a house in an island in the British Channel, and had for thirty-eight years, without having a justices' or excise licence, sold intoxicating liquors to all visitors there, no other house being in the island. He was summoned for selling without a licence :—Held, that the island was part of the county to which it was nearest, and that the licensing justices of any division of the county had jurisdiction to grant the ordinary licences to sell intoxicating liquors there. Wright v. Harris, 49 J. P. 628.

—— Concurrent.]—By charter, the mayor and some of the aldermen of London have jurisdiction in Southwark ; but, as the charter contains no non-intromittent clause as to the justices of the county of Surrey, the latter have a concurrent jurisdiction with the former. Where there were two sets of magistrates having a concurrent jurisdiction, and one appointed a meeting to grant ale licences, their jurisdiction attached so as to exclude the others appointing a subsequent meeting ; but they might all meet together on the first day. But if, after such appointment, the other set of magistrates met on a subsequent day, and granted other licences, their proceeding was illegal, and the subject of an indictment. Rex v. Sainsbury, 4 Term Rep. 451 ; Nolan, 8 ; 2 R. R. 433.

Disqualification of Justices by reason of Interest.]—W. having applied to the licensing justices for a licence for a new hotel, and the three justices who were sitting having refused it, afterwards applied to the court for a mandamus to have the case heard again on the ground that B., one of the justices, was interested as owner in one of the licensed houses near the proposed hotel. The affidavits shewed that B.'s wife had succeeded to the licensed house, and was tenant for life, but it was a small house without hotel accommodation, and not likely to be injured by the new licence being granted :—Held, (a) that a mandamus could not be granted, because the decision not having been set aside or quashed on certiorari, the case could not be heard again. (b) If a certiorari were applied for, the affidavits ought to state that the party applying and his solicitor did not know at the time that one of the justices was interested. Reg. v. Kent JJ., 44 J. P. 298.

See further, JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

—— Penalty—Election of Licensing Committee.]—Voting at an election of a licensing committee by a justice who is a common brewer within the licensing district exposes such justice to the penalty imposed by s. 60 of the Licensing Act, 1872. Att.-Gen. v. Willett, 60 J. P. 643.

Discretion of Justices.]—On an application under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, for a certificate for a licence to sell beer to be consumed on the premises, in respect of a house not previously licensed, the justices have the same discretion as to granting or refusing the certificate as they have in granting or refusing a licence under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61 ; and they may and ought to take into consideration the number of houses in the neighbourhood already licensed, and refuse the certificate if they think an additional beerhouse unnecessary or undesirable in the interest of the public. Reg. v. Lancashire JJ., Tyson, In re, 40 L. J., M. C. 17 ; L. R. 6 Q. B. 97 ; 23 L. T. 461 ; 19 W. R. 204.

Sect. 8 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, which enacts that certificates for off retail licences under that act are only to be refused upon one of the four grounds therein specified, is repealed by s. 1 of the Beer Dealers Retail Licences Act, 1880, only so far as it relates to beer licences ; and the discretion of licensing justices as to the granting of certificates for off retail wine or spirit licences is still subject to the limitations imposed by s. 8 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869. Reg. v. Scott, 58 L. J., M. C. 78 ; 22 Q. B. D. 481 ; 60 L. T. 231 ; 37 W. R. 301 ; 53 J. P. 119.

When a licence or a certificate of a house licensed on the 1st of May, 1869, has afterwards dropped or been refused, the justices, on the true construction of s. 19 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27 (the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869), have the same discretion to refuse a fresh certificate for a licence to sell beer to be consumed on the premises as if the application was in respect of a house which had not been licensed on the 1st of May, 1869, and the repeal of the declaratory sect. 3 of 34 & 35 Vict. c. 88, is immaterial. Reg. v. Curzon, 42 L. J., M. C. 155 ; L. R. 8 Q. B. 400 ; 29 L. T. 32 ; 21 W. R. 886.

Although, under the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 19, justices cannot refuse to grant a certificate in respect of a house which was licensed on the 1st May, 1869, except for one of the causes mentioned in s. 8, yet, if the licence has been actually forfeited, they may treat a subsequent application for a certificate as an original application, and may exercise a discretion in refusing it. Hargreaves v. Dawson, 24 L. T. 428.

A house had an existing licence on the 1st May, 1869, but at the licensing meeting in August the licence was lost on account of the personal misconduct of the then tenant. At the licensing meeting in August, 1870, the present tenant applied for a certificate, which was refused on the ground that he had not shewn the necessity for such a house in the neighbourhood :—Held, that the justices were justified in treating such application as an original one, and in exercising their discretion in refusing it. Ib.

The occupier of a house licensed under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, having been fined for an offence against the tenor of his licence, was ejected by his landlord on the 17th of May. In June, H. was let into possession, and on the 5th of June the petty sessions refused to indorse the licence to H., under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 44. H. then gave up possession, and at the general licensing meeting on the 4th September the house was unoccupied, and no application was made for a licence. A. afterwards became tenant, and applied at the special sessions on the 20th of November for a new licence, but after hearing the case on the merits the justices refused to grant a new licence. On appeal, the quarter sessions, finding him to be a proper person, dismissed the appeal, on the ground that the granting or refusing of such new licence was within the discretion of the justices at special sessions :—Held, that the justices had a discretion to grant or refuse the licence. Reg. v. Rowell, 41 L. J., M. C. 175 ; L. R. 7 Q. B. 490 ; 26 L. T. 732.

Upon an application to licensing justices for a certificate for a licence to sell wine to be consumed on the premises, it appeared that on May 1, 1869, a licence was in force with respect to the house for the sale of beer to be consumed on the premises :—Held, that upon the true construction of s. 19 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, the discretion of the justices in refusing the application was unlimited, for the existence of a licence with regard to the sale of beer did not confer any privilege upon an application for a certificate in respect of the sale of either wine or cider. Reg. v. King, 57 L. J., M. C. 20 ; 20 Q. B. D. 430 ; 58 L. T. 607 ; 36 W. R. 600 ; 52 J. P. 164—C. A.

Provisional Licence—Final Order—Deviation from Plans—Duty of Justices.]—A provisional licence was granted upon plans submitted to the justices, but before building was commenced it was discovered that the plans had been drawn for a level site, whereas the actual site was on a slope. The justices having refused to sanction the requisite alterations, the house was built as nearly in accordance with the original plans as the site allowed. The justices refused the final order on the ground, after the confirming committee had approved the plans submitted, they had no power to permit any alteration :—Held, that the justices had power to make the final order, which they were bound to exercise if the building was substantially in accordance with the plans ; that the building was substantially in accordance with the plans, and therefore that the justices were bound to make the final order. Reg. v. Pownall, 63 L. T. 418 ; 54 J. P. 438.

"Special Occasion"—Exemption from Closing—Discretion.]—It is for the justices (being the local authority under the Licensing Act, 1872), to determine what is a "special occasion" in their own district, on which a licence exempting a licensed victualler from the provisions of the above statute relating to the closing of his premises, may be granted. Devine v. Keeling, 34 W. R. 718 ; 50 J. P. 551.

Grant on Conditions.]—Justices have no power to grant a licence to sell excisable liquors with the condition attached that they are not to be drunk or consumed on the premises, or to any other class of houses than inns, hotels, alehouses and victualling houses wherein the liquors may be drunk or consumed upon the premises. Reg. v. Wilkinson, 10 L. T. 370.

—— Sunday Closing.]—The condition under the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 49, requiring the licensed premises therein mentioned to be closed during the whole of Sunday, can only be inserted in a new licence if the applicant for it himself applies to the licensing justices to insert such condition. Reg. v. Kirkdale JJ., 56 L. J., M. C. 24 ; 18 Q. B. D. 248 ; 51 J. P. 214.

Refusal—Statement of Grounds for.]—By 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27 (the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869), s. 8, no application for a licence to sell beer by retail not to be consumed on the premises shall be refused, except upon one or more of four grounds specified. Justices, on refusing a licence, declined to state on which of the grounds they refused it :—Held, that they were bound to state the ground, and that, not having done so, they had not heard and determined the application according to law ; and a mandamus was granted commanding them to hear and determine the application. Reg. v. Sykes, 45 L. J., M. C. 39 ; 1 Q. B. D. 52 ; 33 L. T. 566 ; 24 W. R. 141.

By the provisions of the statutes relating to licensing, certain licences for the sale of intoxicating drinks not to be consumed on the premises are not to be refused, except on one or more of four grounds specified. Justices on refusing to grant such a licence did not state any ground for such refusal. They were not, however, asked to state the ground for such refusal ; and on an application for a mandamus against them to hear and determine the application for the licence, the chairman of the justices made an affidavit that they had in fact acted on one of the grounds on which they were empowered to refuse the licence :—Held, that the justices were bound to state their grounds at the time of refusing the application, and the mandamus therefore went. Smith, Ex parte, 3 Q. B. D. 374 ; 26 W. R. 682. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Chertsey JJ., 47 L. J., M. C. 104.

An application for a licence to sell beer by retail not to be consumed on the premises was refused by justices, on the ground that the house was not duly qualified by law, not being of sufficient value under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 1. The Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, s. 8, requires the justices, where such an application is refused on the ground that the house is not duly qualified as by law required, to specify in writing to the applicant the grounds of their decision. A minute of the decision, with the grounds of it, was made, and read out by the chairman in court, in the presence of the applicant, but no copy was delivered to him. On a rule for a mandamus to the justices to hear and determine the application :—Held, that, in the absence of any request by the applicant for a writing shewing the reasons for the decision of the justices, the notice was sufficient. Reg. v. Cumberland JJ., 51 L. J., Q. B. 142 ; 8 Q. B. D. 369 ; 30 W. R. 178 ; 46 J. P. 7.

If justices omit to state the grounds of their refusal, it constitutes a substantial defect in their decision. Reg. v. Eales, 42 L. T. 735 ; 44 J. P. 553.

Notice of Application — Sufficiency.] — An applicant to licensing justices for a certificate under the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 27), authorising the grant to him of a licence to sell by retail beer to be consumed off his premises, under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, was already the holder of a certificate and additional licence for the same purpose under 26 & 27 Vict. c. 33. In the notice required by s. 7 of the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, he had set forth his name and address, and the situation of his shop, but merely stated his intention to apply for a certificate to sell by retail beer to be consumed off the premises. The justices refused a certificate on the ground that the notice was insufficient : — Held, that the applicant under the circumstances was entitled to the certificate he applied for. Reg. v. Over Darwen JJ., 39 L. T. 444.

—— Description of Situation of Premises in Notice.]—By s. 7 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, an applicant for a justices' certificate to sell by retail wine, &c., to be consumed off the premises, shall in his notice set forth a description of the situation of his house or shop:—Held, that the section merely requires that the situation should be described in the notice in such a way that the house or shop can be identified; and that it is in the discretion of the justices to permit, in the case of a house or shop situate in a small country town, a modification of description appropriate to large cities. Reg. v. Penkridge JJ., 61 L. J., M. C. 132; 66 L. T. 371; 56 J. P. 87.

—— Time for Giving.]—The holder of a licence to sell beer in a house of which he was occupier, gave the notices required by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 7, of his intention to apply for a certificate authorising a licence under that act for the sale of beer in that house. On his application at the general annual licensing meeting on the 20th of August, the certificate was refused upon the ground that he had been convicted of misconduct when occupying another licensed house. The meeting was adjourned to the 17th September. On the 25th August A. gave notice that he should apply at the adjourned meeting for a certificate in respect of the same house then occupied by him. The justices refused to hear the application, and upon appeal to the quarter sessions the appeal was dismissed on the ground that the notice was too late:—Held, first, that under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 3, a notice of application for a certificate under that act may be given twenty-one days before an adjourned meeting. Reg. v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., Drake, Ex parte, 10 B. & S. 840; 39 L. J., M. C. 17; L. R. 5 Q. B. 33; 21 L. T. 490; 18 W. R. 259.

Held, secondly, that, reading together 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 3, and 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, ss. 5, 7, the notice by A. of his application for a certificate under the latter act was in time. Ib.

—— Computation of Time.]—The twenty-one days' notice required by s. 7 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, to be given by persons intending to apply for new licences is not to be reckoned from the first day of the general annual licensing meeting but from the day on which the application is actually heard. Reg. v. Pownall, 62 L. J., M. C. 174; [1893] 2 Q. B. 158; 5 R. 486; 70 L. T. 138; 57 J. P. 424.

—— Service of Notice of Application on Police.]—An application was made for a new wine "off" licence, and objection was taken that no notice had been given by the applicant to the superintendent of police of the division. The notice was not sent to the superintendent's residence, as he did not reside or have an office in the division, but was merely left for him at one of several police-stations in the division:—Held that the service of the notice was invalid, and that the justices were right in refusing to hear the application. Reg. v. Riley, 53 J. P. 452.

A petty sessional division included a borough; the borough had a superintendent of police, there being another superintendent for the rest of the division:—Held, that an applicant for a new licence in respect of premises within the borough should serve the notice upon the superintendent of the borough. Reg. v. Birley, 55 J. P. 88.

—— Adjournments—Jurisdiction of Justices.]—An applicant for a new licence to sell wine and beer to be consumed on or off the premises gave notice of his application for a general annual licensing meeting to be held on the 26th of August. He did not apply on that day, but appeared at the adjourned general annual licensing meeting held on the 30th of September, and made his application. The justices refused the licence, on the ground that they had no jurisdiction to grant it, and that the applicant must be taken to have abandoned his notice by not applying on the 26th of August:—Held, that the justices had jurisdiction to entertain the application, and that the notice for the first day of the general annual licensing meeting held good for all adjournments. The meeting continued for all purposes from the moment of its commencement to the last moment of the adjourned meeting or meetings as if they formed a single day. Reg. v. Armstrong, Duffy, Ex parte, 65 L. J., M. C. 35.

Duty of Hearing Parties.]—Justices at an annual licensing meeting are bound to hear the parties applying for licences, if they desire it, and cannot properly decide on the notices alone, or by a general resolution to grant no new licences in a particular locality. Reg. v. Walsall JJ., 2 C. L. R. 100; 3 W. R. 69.

Acting on a general resolution with respect to the granting or refusing of licences, prepared by the justices at the general annual licensing meeting, is not a hearing of the application for a licence, and the court will in such case interfere. Reg. v. Sylvester, 31 L. J., M. C. 93; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 484; 5 L. T. 794.

Second Application.]—A grocer applied at the general annual licensing meeting in August for a certificate to sell spirits under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 68, by retail off his premises. The application was refused on the ground that he did not hold a wholesale dealer's excise licence. He took out this licence, gave fresh notices, and applied again for a certificate at the adjourned sessions in September. The magistrates refused the application, on the ground that it had already been disposed of and could not be re-heard:—Held, that the second application ought to be heard, as it was not concluded by the previous decision. Maughan, Ex parte, 1 Q. B. D. 49; 33 L. T. 603; 24 W. R. 205. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Kirkdale JJ., 45 L. J., M. C. 36.

—— After Refusal to Holder.]—B., who was the holder of a licence granted to him under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, for the sale of beer in a beerhouse occupied by him, gave the proper notices required by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, of his intention to apply for a certificate to obtain a licence for the sale of beer in the house. He made his application at the general annual licensing meeting, but the certificate was refused upon the ground that he came within the 3rd sub-section of the 8th section of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27. The meeting was held upon the 20th of August, and was adjourned till the 17th September. On the 25th of August, D. gave notice that he should apply at the adjourned meeting for a certificate in respect of the same house, which he alleged was occupied by him. The justices refused to entertain the application, as they had already refused the certificate on the application of B. Upon appeal to quarter sessions, the appeal was dismissed without hearing it on the merits:—Held, that the refusal to grant the certificate to B., upon a ground personal to him, did not prevent D. from making an application for a certificate in respect of the same house. Reg. v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., Drake, Ex parte, supra, col. 415.

Confirmation, when Required.]—By the Licensing Act, 1872, 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 37, a new licence shall not be valid unless confirmed by the licensing committee. By s. 74, a new licence means a licence granted at a general annual licensing meeting in respect of premises not theretofore licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquors:—Held, that a licence to sell exciseable liquors under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, and the Licensing Act, 1872, upon premises theretofore licensed for the sale of wine and beer only, is a new licence within the above sections, and requires confirmation by the licensing committee. Marwick v. Codlin, 43 L. J., M. C. 169; L. R. 9 Q. B. 509; 30 L. T. 719; 22 W. R. 823.

Justices Equally Divided—Provisional Licence—Final Order.]—Licensing justices agreed to grant a provisional licence for a railway refreshment room according to plans shewn, though they directed change of site, which the applicant agreed to, but there was never any further assent of justices to any other site. At the application for the final order the eight justices were equally divided, and no adjournment was granted. A rule nisi for a mandamus being granted, the justices then met again, and agreed by a majority to make a final order:—Held, that the rule for the mandamus might be made absolute, but without costs, and not to be drawn up except on further application. Reg. v. Cox, 48 J. P. 440.

New Licence or Renewal.]—See Reg. v. Market Bosworth JJ., post, col. 427.

New Licence or Transfer.]—See Reg. v. Dublin (Recorder), post, col. 434.

2. REMOVALS.

Off-Licence—Order Sanctioning Removal—Notice of Application.]—The provisions of s. 50 of the Licensing Act, 1872, apply to off-licences; and where the removal of an off-licence from one house to another is applied for, the applicant must give the notice prescribed by the section to the owners of the house from which it is sought to remove the licence. Reg. v. Thornton, 66 L. J., Q. B. 774; [1897] 2 Q. B. 308; 77 L. T. 26; 61 J. P. 470.

3. RENEWALS.

Provisional Licence.]—A provisional licence granted under s. 22 of the Licensing Act, 1874, may be renewed in the same manner as an ordinary licence. Reg. v. County of London JJ., Buckle, Ex parte, 59 L. J., M. C. 71; 24 Q. B. D. 341; 62 L. T. 458; 38 W. R. 269; 54 J. P. 213.

A renewal of a provisional licence may be granted, notwithstanding that the premises have been completed, and that an application to have it declared final has been made and refused. Ib.

Application for—At what Sessions.]—Although a beerhouse-keeper may apply for a renewal of his certificate in the first instance to the justices at their adjourned meeting, he cannot, upon being refused a certificate at the original meeting, renew his application at the adjourned meeting. Rushworth, Ex parte, 23 L. T. 120.

A beerhouse-keeper applied at a licensing meeting for a certificate, which was unexpectedly opposed on the ground that his house was frequented by prostitutes, whereupon the justices refused his certificate. He thereupon gave fresh notices, and again applied for a certificate at the adjournment day, with evidence to rebut the charge, when the justices refused to hear his application, on the ground that they had heard and adjudicated upon it at the former meeting:—Held, that they were justified in their refusal. Ib.

—— Justices' Power to Adjourn.]—At the general annual licensing meeting justices in their private room decided to postpone the consideration of the applicant's licence till the adjourned licensing meeting. No reason was given in court for the postponement, and no objection was in fact made in court. Subsequently the clerk to the justices wrote to the applicant that an objection had been made to the renewal of her licence, and that such objection would be heard at the adjourned meeting. At a later date the chief constable, under direction of the justices, wrote to the applicant giving her notice to attend at the adjourned meeting, saying he would object, and giving the grounds of his objection. The applicant attended the adjourned meeting, and claimed that the justices had no power to refuse the renewal of her licence, as no objection had been made in open court at the general annual meeting:—Held, that the justices have full power and discretion to adjourn from time to time the consideration of the renewal of any licence, whether upon objection made by others, or under the discretionary powers entrusted to them. Reg, v. Anglesea JJ., 65 L. J., M. C. 12; 15 R. 614; 59 J. P. 743.

There is no objection to licensing justices meeting in their private room, not to receive objections made to them by others, but to discuss among themselves the expediency of adjourning for future consideration particular licences as to which they feel that discussion is necessary; but the instant a complaint is formally made the applicant ought to have notice of it, and a full opportunity to meet it. Ib.

Semble, under the proviso to section 42 of the Licensing Act, 1872, the justices cannot themselves be objectors, but if they may be objectors within the meaning of the proviso they must make their objection in open court. Ib.

—— Adjournment of Application—Conviction—Pending Appeal.]—Where due notice was given of opposition to the granting of the renewal of a licence on the ground that the applicant had been convicted of permitting drunkenness to take place on his premises, and the licensing justices adjourned the hearing of the application over the month of September, pending the hearing of an appeal to quarter sessions by the applicant against the conviction:—Held, that they had no power to do so, and a mandamus must be issued directing them to hear and determine the application. Webber v. Birkenhead JJ., 61 J. P. 664.

——Notice of Adjourned Meeting.]—G. applied, under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 42, for the renewal of a licence to sell beer by retail, to be drunk on the premises, and attended at the general licensing meeting in August, 1873, having received no notice of opposition, and not having been required to attend by the justices. He paid the fees to the justices' clerk, who said "All right," on which he left, supposing his licence would be renewed. The justices had by themselves considered the various applications for renewal, and had determined to adjourn eleven cases, amongst which was G.'s, for the purpose of satisfying themselves of the value; and they gave notice in open court that the eleven cases would be adjourned to the 24th of September, but knowledge of this was not brought home to G. On the 24th of September, G. not being present, the justices refused to renew his licence on the ground that the premises were not of the requisite value. He then applied for a mandamus to the justices to grant him a licence:—Held, that he was not entitled to the mandamus, as prayed: but that the justices were bound to have given him notice, and required his attendance at the adjourned meeting, and that a mandamus must be granted to hold an adjourned licensing meeting, and after notice to G., to hear and determine his application. Reg. v. Farquhar, L. R. 9 Q. B. 258.

Change of Occupation—Expiration of Licence.]—S., tenant of a house and licensed to sell exciseable liquors therein, made over the house in June, 1881, to W., who forthwith sub-let it to B. B. applied at a special sessions for a transfer of the licence, which was opposed by S., and refused. At the time of the general licensing meeting B. was in occupation, but was about to leave owing to illness in her family, and did not apply for a renewal of the licence. She left shortly afterwards, and the house was shut up, and no exciseable liquors had been sold there since June. In September, after the close of the licensing meeting, the landlord learnt that the house was vacant and took possession. The licence expired on the 10th of October. The landlord afterwards let it to D., who in January, 1882, applied to a special session for a renewal of the licence:—Held, that B., as occupier, though not holding a licence, was a person entitled to apply at the general sessions for a renewal of the licence, and that the event mentioned in 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14, of the occupier of a house being about to quit the same neglecting to apply at the general meeting for a licence to continue to sell exciseable liquors therein, had occurred, so that an application under that section could be made. Reg. v. Liverpool JJ., or Lancashire JJ., or Lawrence, 52 L. J., M. C. 114; 11 Q. B. D. 638; 49 L. T. 244; 32 W. R. 20; 47 J. P. 596—C. A.

Held, also, overruling Todd, Ex parte (3 Q. B. D. 407), and White v. Coquetdale JJ. (7 Q. B. D. 238), that it was not necessary that the application should be made before the expiration of the period for which the old licence was in force, and that the justices in special sessions had jurisdiction to grant the application. Ib.

By 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14: "If any person duly licensed under this act shall before the expiration of such licence . . . . remove from or yield up the possession of the house specified in such licence; or if the occupier of any such house, being about to quit the same, shall have wilfully omitted or shall have neglected to apply, at the general annual licensing meeting, or at any adjournment thereof, for a licence to continue to sell exciseable liquors by retail, to be drunk or consumed in such house, it shall be lawful for the justices assembled as aforesaid at a special session . . . . to grant to . . . . any new tenant or occupier of any house having so become unoccupied . . . . a licence to sell exciseable liquors by retail. . . ."—The licence-holder of an inn yielded up possession of the premises in December, 1890: at a special session in May, 1891, a new tenant unsuccessfully applied for a transfer of the licence; at the adjourned general annual licensing meeting in September, 1891, another new tenant unsuccessfully applied for a renewal of the licence; neither of the applicants appealed to quarter sessions. The then current licence expired on October 10, 1891. In March, 1892, the appellant, who had become tenant of the house, applied, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14, for a licence:—Held, that the justices had jurisdiction to grant the application. Reg. v. Liverpool JJ. (11 Q. B. D. 638), considered and followed. Baldwin v. Dover JJ., 61 L. J., M. C. 215; [1892] 2 Q. B. 421; 56 J. P. 423.

At a general licensing meeting in 1884, the justices refused to renew M.'s licence for an inn. The house was shut up, then sold in January to J., who in July, 1885, obtained a mandamus to hear the application. The justices in obedience to the rule reheard the case in January, 1886, and granted the renewal for the year ending October, 1885, but refused to renew the licence for the then current year ending October, 1886, as no application had been made at the general meeting in September, 1885:—Held, that though the justices had no power to renew the licence for 1886, yet the court would give them power by making absolute a second rule for a mandamus to hear the application. Reg. v. Miskin Higher JJ., 50 J. P. 247.

Grant on Conditions.]—At a general annual licensing meeting, the occupier of a house, licensed as a public-house, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, applied for a renewal of the licence. The justices renewed the licence, but with the following notice upon it:—"This licence is renewed on condition that the licensed premises shall, before the next general annual licensing meeting, be improved and made of the annual value of 30*l.*, in default of which this licence will not be renewed":—Held, that the justices had no power to impose such a condition; that the provision in the Licensing Act, 1872, s. 46, as to improving the premises does not apply to a house already licensed under 9 Geo. 4. c. 61, and that the condition was null and void. Reg. v. Exeter JJ., or Reg. v. Mann, 42 L. J., M. C. 35; L. R. 8 Q. B. 235; 27 L. T. 847; 21 W. R. 329.

—— Restriction to original Premises.]—For some time previous to February, 1874, an inn called "Newill's Hotel" was kept by N., part of the ground floor being let off as a shop. In February, 1874, N. transferred the licence of Newill's hotel to S., who had become tenant of the whole house, including the shop. In July, 1874, S. took in the shop to the inn, and in August applied for a renewal of his licence. The renewal was not opposed, nor was S. required to attend at the licensing meeting. The justices renewed the licence, but described the licensed premises thereon as Newill's hotel, consisting of such parts of the premises as were lately in the occupation of N., "and used by her under and for the purposes of the licence granted to her in renewal of which this licence is granted." S. appealed to the quarter sessions against the insertion of the description:—Held, that the licence was not irregular. Stringer v. Huddersfield JJ., 33 L. T. 568.

Grounds of Refusal—Statement of.]—When justices refuse an application for the licence of a beerhouse which was licensed on May 1st, 1869, and has been continuously so licensed, they are bound to state their grounds at the time of refusing the application, and if they do not so state them, a mandamus will be granted commanding them to hear and determine the application. Reg. v. Smith (L. R. 8 Q. B. 146) distinguished. Reg. v. Thomas or Bristol JJ., 61 L. J., M. C. 141; [1892] 1 Q. B. 426; 66 L. T. 289; 40 W. R. 478; 56 J. P. 151.

J., the holder of an "on" beer licence, was convicted in November, 1885, of allowing prostitutes to remain on his premises. He received notice of opposition to the renewal of his licence on that ground and gave up possession. T. became tenant on the 16th September, 1886, and gave notice that he would apply for a renewal. At the general annual licensing meeting on 24th September, 1886, the justices refused the renewal either to T. or to J. without stating any grounds. The quarter sessions confirmed the decision:—Held, that the justices must state the ground of their refusal. Tranter v. Lancashire JJ., 51 J. P. 454.

The licensing justices at the general meeting on hearing the report of the superintendent of police that the applicant for the renewal of an indoor beer licence had been convicted of permitting drunkenness on the premises, told him to come again at the adjournment day. Notice to attend was given, but no specific objection was stated. After hearing the superintendent on oath prove the conviction, and afterwards calling him into their private room, the justices refused the renewal, but gave no reason for their decision:—Held, that the justices had not heard and determined the case according to the statute, and a mandamus to hear the application was directed. Reg. v. Redditch JJ., 50 J. P. 246.

Grounds of Refusal, Sufficiency of.]—A court of quarter sessions, at an annual licensing meeting, refused to renew a licence to keep an inn, alehouse and victualling house, on the ground that the applicant declined to take out an excise licence for the sale of spirits:—Held, that this was not a sufficient legal ground for such refusal. Reg. v. Sylvester, 2 B. & S. 322.

—— Remoteness from Police Supervision—Character and Necessities of Neighbourhood.]—On the hearing of an application for the renewal of a licence for the sale of intoxicating liquors under the Licensing Acts, 1828, 1872 and 1874, the licensing justices have a discretion to refuse the renewal on the ground of the remoteness from police supervision, and the character and necessities of the neighbourhood. Sharpe v. Wakefield, 60 L. J., M. C. 73; [1891] A. C. 173; 64 L. T. 180; 39 W. R. 551; 55 J. P. 197—H. L. (E.)

—— No Necessity for Licence.]—The appellant, the occupier of a grocer's shop, had for several years past received a certificate authorising him to hold, and he still held, a licence for the sale by retail of beer not to be consumed on his premises, in pursuance of 1 Will. 4, c. 64, and the acts amending the same; it was admitted that he was a person of good character, that his shop was duly qualified by law, and that his application to justices at a general annual licensing meeting for the renewal of his certificate was duly made. He was duly served with notice of objection to his application, on the ground that such a licence was not required in his district; and the justices refused to renew his certificate on this ground only:—Held, upon a case stated by quarter sessions, after appeal thereto, that the refusal of the justices was justified by s. 1 of 45 & 46 Vict. c. 34. Kay v. Over Darwen JJ., or Reg. v. Kay, 52 L. J., M. C. 90; 10 Q. B. D. 213; 47 L. T. 411; 31 W. R. 273; 47 J. P. 388.

—— Long-closing of Premises.]—G. obtained a transfer of a licence in 1885, but never opened the premises owing to a pending negotiation with another tenant which ultimately fell through. In August, 1885, G. obtained a renewal on his promise to open the premises, but he did not re-open until 23rd August, 1886, when the negotiation ended. G. had some days previously been served with notice of objection, and on 26th August the justices refused the renewal on the ground that the re-opening was not bonâ fide. On appeal to quarter sessions this decision was affirmed:—Held, that the objection was relevant, and having been competently entertained and decided, the high court would not interfere with the decision. Griffiths v. Lancashire JJ., 35 W. R. 732; 51 J. P. 453.

Enlargement of Premises.]—W. bought a small two-storeyed house in an obscure cross street, and on applying to the justices for a transfer shewed them plans representing a three-storeyed house, which he had also bought in the leading thoroughfare, the back yard of which joined the back yard of the inn, and he proposed to join the two houses and use them as one. The justices approved and granted the transfer. At the next general annual meeting W. informed the justices that he had joined the two houses, thereby doubling the premises, and no one opposing, a renewal licence was granted. W. was then charged with selling liquors in the new house without a licence, and the justices dismissed the case, holding the new part of the premises covered by the licence:—Held, that as it was a question of fact for the justices whether the licence covered the added portion as well as the original inn, the court could not interfere in any way, and there was no question of law involved. Ballam v. Wiltshire, 44 J. P. 72.

A house licensed under the Licensing Act, 1872, (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), for the sale of intoxicating liquors by retail, was enlarged by the occupier, and the sale of such liquors was carried on in the part added:—Held, that the licence must be taken to include reasonable additions to the original premises, and that it was a question of fact whether, after such alterations, the premises were substantially the same as those licensed. Reg. v. Raffles, 45 L. J., M. C. 61; 1 Q. B. D. 207; 34 L. T. 180; 24 W. R. 536.

If a licensed alehouse has additions made to it, it does not follow that the occupier must give the notice provided for by 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 10, as "for a house not theretofore kept as an inn." It is a question of fact for the justices, whether by such additions the house has become a new house. Reg. v. Smith, 15 L. T. 178.

The occupier of a licensed house added to his premises the adjoining house, and made them all one establishment. Upon applying for a renewal of his licence, the magistrates refused, upon the ground that the premises were not the same, and that no notice had been given as for an original licence. Upon an appeal against this refusal, the quarter sessions renewed the licence, subject to a case as to whether, under the circumstances, the notices were necessary :—Held, that the sessions were right in renewing the licence. Ib.

Alteration of Premises—Old Beerhouse.]—In the case of a beerhouse coming within the provisions of s. 19 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, on an application for the renewal of the licence, the magistrates, in the absence of any objection within s. 8, have no choice but to grant a renewal without qualification, save where there have been such alterations in the premises since the last renewal as in the opinion of the justices destroy the identity of the premises, when they may treat the beerhouse as a new beerhouse, and grant or refuse a new licence for it at their discretion. Reg. v. Bradford JJ., 74 L. T. 287 ; 60 J. P. 265.

—— Res judicata.]—Where the occupier of a house licensed before 1 May, 1869, had been convicted for selling on an unlicensed addition, and the conviction had been quashed by a divisional court on the ground that the premises, though altered and rebuilt, were substantially the same as those licensed, the justices are bound by the decision of the divisional court, and cannot refuse a subsequent application for a renewal of the licence under s. 19 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, on the ground that the house had been rebuilt, and is a new house. Deer v. Wirral JJ., 64 L. J., M. C. 85 ; 15 R. 280 ; 43 W. R. 286.

Evidence—Character.]—If an applicant for a certificate for the renewal of a beerhouse licence does not produce evidence of good character, the justices may refuse the certificate on the ground that he has "failed to produce" such evidence, although no evidence has been given against him, and he has not been called upon for evidence of good character, and it has been the practice of the justices not to require an applicant to produce such evidence where a certificate for renewal of a licence is asked for. Morgan, Ex parte, 23 L. T. 605.

Justices in licensing sessions refused a certificate for the renewal of a licence, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 19, on the ground that the applicant had failed to produce satisfactory evidence of good character. The applicant then appealed to quarter sessions under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 27 :—Held, that fresh evidence of character was admissible before the quarter sessions, and if that was satisfactory he was entitled to a certificate. Reg. v. Pilgrim, 40 L. J., M. C. 3 ; L. R. 6 Q. B. 89 ; 23 L. T. 410 ; 19 W. R. 99.

O., the holder of an indoor beer licence which existed before 1869, received due notice before the general annual licensing meeting of opposition to the renewal on the ground merely that he had been convicted. The justices having refused the renewal on the first ground set forth in 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 8, O. appealed to quarter sessions, and produced witnesses who gave evidence of his good character. The quarter sessions dismissed the appeal, expressing the opinion that O. had proved his good character ; but, that in consequence of his conviction, he was not a fit person to hold a licence. On a rule for a mandamus to rehear :—Held, that the court of quarter sessions having acted not on the character of the applicant, but on the question whether he was a proper person to keep a beerhouse, they had exceeded their jurisdiction, and that a mandamus must issue. O'Brien, In re Reg. v. Lancashire JJ., 55 J. P. 580—C. A. Reversing in part, 64 L. T. 562 ; 55 J. P. 279.

—— Prostitutes frequenting House.]—S., before applying for renewal of his publican's licence, had been duly served with notice of opposition on the ground that the house was not conducted satisfactorily, it being the habitual resort of prostitutes. It was proved that several times seventeen prostitutes were seen in the house at one time and known to S., and no evidence was given that any refreshments were supplied. The quarter sessions refused the licence :—Held, there being evidence admissible as to prostitutes frequenting, and the justices having held that they did frequent, this court could not interfere with their refusal of the licence. Sharp v. Hughes, 57 J. P. 104.

—— "Disorderly Character"]—Upon an application for the renewal of a licence, the notice of objection stated the ground of objection, "That your house is of a disorderly character." Upon the hearing of the application the justices admitted evidence of three convictions against previous holders of the licence, but it was admitted that the applicant bore a good character :—Held, that the evidence was properly admitted, inasmuch as it was not necessary that evidence directed to the disorderly character of a licensed house should be confined to such matters only as affected the personal character of the applicant by showing that he himself had contributed to the disorderly character of the house. Reg. v. Miskin Higher, JJ., [1893] 1 Q. B. 275 ; 5 R. 121 ; 67 L. T. 680 ; 41 W. R. 252 ; 57 J. P. 263.

Notice of Objection—Necessity for.]—It is not competent for justices to refuse to grant the renewal of a licence on account of an objection originated by themselves, unless they have first given notice of objection and taken evidence in accordance with the provisions contained in the Licensing Act, 1872, s. 42, sub-ss. 2, 3. Gascoyne v. Risley, 36 W. R. 605.

The jurisdiction of justices as regards the refusal of renewals of off beer licences, under the Licensing Acts, 1872, 1874, and 45 & 46 Vict. c. 34, can only be exercised provided the applicant for renewal has been served with notice of objection, and the other requirements in the first two enactments above stated have been complied with. Reg. v. Essex JJ., 46 J. P. 761.

The appellant, who had for many years before and during 1869, held an excise licence for the sale of beer and cider, to be consumed on the premises, and had in each subsequent year regularly obtained the justices' certificate for the renewal of such licence in pursuance of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, s. 19, was, in December, 1878, convicted of Sunday trading at prohibited hours, and the conviction was indorsed upon the licence. At the annual licensing meeting in 1879, no notice having been served upon the appellant, the justices (who were the respondents) announced that the appellant having been convicted must attend personally at the adjournment, and caused a letter to be written by their clerk, by which they required the appellant to attend in person to make the application, if a renewal of the licence were applied for. At the adjournment, the appellant attended and made application for a certificate, but the respondents, without hearing any evidence on oath, refused the application, and then gave no ground for the refusal. Quarter sessions, upon appeal, affirmed the respondents' refusal, but stated a special case:—Held, that the only objection to the renewal of the appellant's licence being the indorsed conviction and the appellant having received no notice of an objection of which the grounds for refusal were authorised by s. 8 of the act of 1869, the respondents had not considered any sufficient grounds of objection as if due notice had been given within s. 42 of the Licensing Act, 1872, and s. 26 of the Licensing Act, 1874. Reg. v. Eales, 42 L. T. 735; 44 J. P. 553.

—— Person holding Protection Order.]—Sect. 42 of the Licensing Act, 1872, provides that, "where a licensed person applies for the renewal of his licence . . . . the justices shall not entertain any objection to the renewal of such licence, or take any evidence with respect to the renewal thereof, unless written notice of an intention to oppose the renewal of such licence has been served on such holder not less than seven days before the commencement of the general annual licensing meeting." The occupier of licensed premises being about to leave the same, an interim authority was granted to the appellant under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 44, s. 1, to carry on the business until the next special session for transfer of licences. Such session and the general annual licensing meeting being held simultaneously, the appellant made applications thereat for a transfer of the licence under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14, and also for a renewal of the licence. Both applications were refused by the justices, because they were not satisfied as to the appellant's good character. No notice of intention to oppose the renewal of the licence had been served upon the appellant:—Held, that the appellant was not a "licensed person" applying for a renewal of "his" licence within the meaning of the above-mentioned section, and therefore was not entitled to the notice therein mentioned. Price v. James, 61 L. J., M. C. 203; [1892] 2 Q. B. 428; 67 L. T. 543; 41 W. R. 57; 56 J. P. 471—C. A.

Notice of Objection—Sufficiency of.]—In the case of a beerhouse licensed before 1869, notice of opposition to renewal on the ground that the applicant has been convicted, is sufficient notice that he will be required to give evidence of his character. Reg. v. Lancaster JJ., 55 J. P. 580. Approving Reg. v. Birmingham JJ., 40 J. P. 132.

—— Power to Adjourn.]—By s. 42 of the Licensing Act, 1872, justices at the general annual licensing meeting shall not entertain any objection to the renewal of a licence, or take any evidence with respect to the renewal thereof, unless written notice of an intention to oppose the renewal has been served upon the holder of the licence in the prescribed manner: "Provided that the justices may, notwithstanding that no notice had been given, on an objection being made, adjourn the granting of any licence to a future day, and require the attendance of the holder of the licence on such day, when the case will be heard and the objection considered, as if the notice hereinbefore prescribed had been given":—Held, that an objection to the renewal of a licence made privately to justices before they came into court at the general annual licensing meeting was not a good "objection made" within the meaning of the proviso to s. 42, and that, therefore, the justices had no power to adjourn the case. Reg. v. Merthyr Tydvil JJ., 54 L. J., M. C. 78; 14 Q. B. D. 584; 49 J. P. 213.

M. applied for a renewal of a licence at a general annual licensing meeting, having received no notice of opposition. The justices refused the application, and M. obtained a mandamus commanding them to hold an adjourned meeting, and to hear and determine in pursuance of the statutes in that behalf the merits of the application for the renewal. To this writ the justices returned that such adjourned meeting had been held; that notice of opposition had been duly served not less than seven days before the said adjourned meeting, and that they had heard and determined the application. The licence was refused. M. pleaded that they had not heard and determined the application pursuant to the statutes in that behalf by reason that they had no jurisdiction to entertain the objection or refuse the licence:—Held, that the justices had jurisdiction to entertain the objection and to refuse the licence. Reg. v. Howard, 23 Q. B. D. 502; 60 L. T. 960; 37 W. R. 617; 53 J. P. 454.

A verbal objection to the renewal of a licence made in open court at the general annual meeting need not state the grounds of objection to give the justices jurisdiction to adjourn the hearing of the application. The proviso of s. 42, sub-s. 2 of the act of 1872 is not qualified by s. 26 of the act of 1874. Daykin v. Parker, 63 L. J., M. C. 246; [1894] 2 Q. B. 556; 9 R. 574; 71 L. T. 379; 42 W. R. 625; 58 J. P. 835—C. A.

Notice of Intention to Oppose—Mode of Service.]—Upon an application for a renewal of a licence, a written notice of intention to oppose the renewal was handed to a boy at the applicant's licensed premises, the applicant received the notice more than seven days before the annual licensing meeting:—Held, that the service of the notice was sufficient within s. 42 of the Licensing Act, 1872, and that the justices had therefore jurisdiction to entertain the objection. Portingell, Ex parte, 61 L. J., M. C. 1; [1892] 1 Q. B. 15; 65 L. T. 603; 40 W. R. 102; 56 J. P. 276—C. A.

—— Time for Service—Adjourned Meeting.]—The appellant, the holder of a public-house licence, was served with notice of opposition to the renewal of his licence "at the adjourned annual licensing meeting" for the part of the division in which his house was situated. The notice was served upon the appellant less than seven clear days before the commencement of the general annual licensing meeting for the division, but more than seven clear days before the commencement of the adjourned meeting. The appellant applied at the adjourned meeting for a renewal, when the justices, after hearing evidence for and against the application, refused it:—Held, that the commencement of the adjourned meeting was, for the purposes of s. 42, sub-s. 2, of the Licensing Act, 1872, "the commcenement of the general annual licensing meeting," that the notice was therefore served in time, and that the justices had jurisdiction to hear evidence in opposition to the renewal. Reg. v. Anglesey JJ., Williams, Ex parte, 61 L. J., M. C. 149; [1892] 1 Q. B. 850; 56 J. P. 440.

New or Renewal Licence—Effluxion of Current Licence after Refusal of Renewal—Application by new Tenant.]—At an adjourned general annual licensing meeting in 1885, the renewal of a public-house licence was refused to P. P. did not appeal to the quarter sessions, and his current licence expired on the 10th of October following. He closed the premises as a public-house, and continued to occupy them as his private residence until Midsummer, 1886, when he left and C. became tenant. At the general annual licensing meeting in 1886, C. applied for a licence, but the justices, considering his application to be one for the grant of a new licence, in their discretion, refused it, on the ground that there were already a sufficient number of licensed houses in the district. Upon an application by C. for a rule for a mandamus to be directed to the justices:—Held, that C.'s application was not an application for a "new" licence, but one for the "renewal" of a licence. The justices accordingly could not refuse it upon the ground they did, and they ought to hold an adjournment to hear and determine the application. Reg. v. Market Bosworth JJ., 56 L. J., M. C. 96; 57 L. T. 56; 35 W. R. 734; 51 J. P. 438.

Where a licensed person goes out of occupation of licensed premises and those premises are closed, the new occupier of those premises is entitled to apply at the general licensing session for a renewal to him of the licence, although he was not himself licensed before. Symons v. Wedmore, 63 L. J., M. C. 44; [1894] 1 Q. B. 401; 10 R. 118; 69 L. T. 801; 42 W. R. 301: 58 J. P. 197.

The holder of a licence of a beerhouse which had been licensed before and ever since May 1, 1869, applied at general licensing sessions for a renewal of the licence, and was refused, on the ground that he was not the real resident holder and occupier. The beerhouse was then closed to the public. At the adjourned general licensing sessions a person who had not been previously licensed, but was then the resident occupier of the premises under a lease from the owners, applied for a renewal of the licence to himself:—Held, that he was entitled so to apply. Price v. James, supra, col. 425, discussed; Reg. v. Liverpool JJ., supra, col. 419, followed. Ib.

—— Disqualification of Licensed Person—Application by Owner.]—Where a licensed person has become personally disqualified or has had his licence forfeited, the owner of the premises cannot apply under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14, for a renewal of the licence, but must apply under 37 & 38 Vict. c. 49, s. 15, for the grant of a new licence, and such application must be made to the next special sessions. Reg. v. Liverpool JJ., supra, col. 419, distinguished. Stevens v. Green, or Sharnbrook JJ., or Bedfordshire JJ., 58 L. J., M. C. 167; 23 Q. B. D. 143; 61 L. T. 240; 37 W. R. 605; 53 J. P. 423.

—— When Licence Expired.]—A new occupier of an inn licensed under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, was refused a transfer of the licence, on the ground of a conviction for drunkenness. Three years afterwards, at the first licensing meeting after the owner was able to obtain possession of the premises, the present applicant applied for a renewal of the previous licence, and was refused on the ground that the neighbourhood did not require it. Upon appeal, the quarter sessions, without hearing the merits, decided that this was an application for a new licence, and that they had no jurisdiction under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94:—Held, that the quarter sessions were right, and that the definition of renewal of a licence in s. 74 refers only to a licence existing during the previous year. Turbath, Ex parte, 31 L. T. 513.

—— Forfeiture.]—Although, under the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 19, justices cannot refuse to grant a certificate in respect of a house which was licensed on the 1st May, 1869, except for one of the causes mentioned in s. 8, yet, if the licence has been actually forfeited, they may treat a subsequent application for a certificate as an original application, and may exercise a discretion in refusing it. Hargreaves v. Dawson, 24 L. T. 428.

A house had an existing licence on the 1st May, 1869, but at the licensing meeting in August the licence was lost on account of the personal misconduct of the then tenant. At the licensing meeting in August, 1870, the present tenant applied for a certificate, which was refused on the ground that he had not shewn the necessity for such a house in the neighbourhood:—Held, that the justices were justified in treating such application as an original one, and in exercising their discretion in refusing it. Ib.

—— House not used as an Inn.]—A man who had had a public-house licence for many years was refused the renewal of it, on the ground that the neighbourhood was sufficiently supplied, he not having taken out an excise licence or used his house as an inn:—Held, that the application was not for a new licence, and that the justices had a discretion as to granting or refusing the application, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 1, and were not fettered by the limitations in ss. 8 and 19 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, which are confined to applications for licences for the sale of beer, cider, and wine. Reg. v. Smith, or Smith v. Herefordshire JJ., 48 L. J., M. C. 38; 39 L. T. 604.

No Appearance in support of Opposition.]—At the general annual meeting the hearing of an application for renewal was appointed for 10 a.m. Notice of opposition had been duly served, but, on the case being called, neither the opponent nor his solicitor was present. Justices, after sending for both, and they not attending, waited five minutes and then decided by a majority of five to four to renew the licence. The opponent and his solicitor then arrived and asked to be heard, but the justices refused to reopen the matter. On an order nisi for a mandamus:—Held, (1) that it was entirely a matter of discretion for the justices to treat the case as determined or to re-open it; (2) as no motion for a mandamus was made for three months, the court discharged the order nisi with costs. Reg. v. Robson, 57 J. P. 133.

Majority of Justices.]—The granting of a renewal certificate by justices presiding at licensing sessions must be the act of the majority of the court, and a minority or two or more of such justices is not competent to grant and sign the said certificate when the remaining justices form a majority, and object to the grant being made. In such cases the majority should make an order of refusal, and not merely record their dissent. Reg. v. O'Connell, 20 L. R., Ir. 625.

Upon an application to renew a licence six justices sat, the licence was granted and signed by four of such justices: the court refused to grant a certiorari on the ground that the justices were, as a fact, equally divided. Reg. v. Rogers, 56 J. P. 183.

Six-day Licence as a Seven-day Licence.]—The holder of a six-day licence, under the provisions of 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 49, is not entitled, on the renewal of his licence, to exchange it for an ordinary or seven-day licence. Reg. v. Cathcart, 4 L. R., Ir. 567. S. P., Reg. v. Dublin (Recorder), 2 L. R., Ir. 386; 44 J. P. 688—C. A.

Where a licence was originally granted subject to the condition under s. 49 of the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), requiring the licensed premises to be closed during the whole of Sunday, it can only be renewed subject to that condition, and cannot be renewed as an ordinary seven-day licence. Reg. v. Crewkerne JJ. or Sparks, 57 L. J., M. C. 127; 21 Q. B. D. 85; 60 L. T. 84; 36 W. R. 629; 52 J. P. 372—C. A.

T., a publican, held a six-day licence, which had existed as a six-day licence for three years only, a former holder thereof having held the ordinary licence for many years before that date. T. applied for a renewal without the six-day condition being inserted:—Held, that the justices were not bound to renew such licence as a seven-day licence. Reg. v. Liverpool JJ., 52 J. P. 376.

Appeal to Quarter Sessions—Costs.]—Licensing justices are not a court of summary jurisdiction, and where, on appeal to quarter sessions from their refusal, at the instance of an objector, to renew the licence, a renewal has been granted, there is no jurisdiction to give costs against the objector. Boulter v. Kent JJ., 66 L. J., Q. B. 787; [1897] A. C. 556; 77 L. T. 288; 46 W. R. 114; 61 J. P. 532—H. L. (E.)

4. Transfers.

Application to Special Sessions—9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14.]—The power of granting a licence at special sessions under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14, to a new tenant, where a person duly licensed under that act gives up possession of the house during the continuance of his licence, extends only to the period for which the former tenant's licence would have lasted. Todd, In re and Ex parte, 47 L. J., M. C. 89; 3 Q. B. D. 407.

F., duly licensed under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, on the 3rd of August, 1877, gave up possession of the licensed premises, and B. became tenant. The licence expired on the 10th of October following. At the general annual licensing meeting, held on the 28th of August, 1877, B. applied for a transfer of the licence to him, but the justices refused the application on the ground of his previous misconduct. On the 28th of September B. gave up his tenancy, and was succeeded by G., who on the 29th of November also gave up the tenancy, and was succeeded by T. After giving the proper notices, T. applied at a special sessions, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14, for a licence in respect of the premises. The justices declined to entertain the application on the ground that they had no jurisdiction:—Held, that, inasmuch as the application was made after the expiration of the period for which the previous licence remained in force, the decision of the justices was right. Ib. Overruled in Reg. v. Liverpool JJ., or Lancashire JJ., or Lawrence, infra.

K., licensed to sell intoxicating liquors under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, died on the 27th of September. At the general annual licensing meeting on the 2nd of October, application was made by the lessees of the house for a fresh licence, without giving the requisite notices under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, as there was no time to give them. This application was rejected, on the ground that they were not in occupation of or about to occupy the premises. K.'s licence expired on the 10th of October. On the 13th of November, W., as assignee of the heir of K., gave notice that he would apply at the special sessions on the 4th of December for a new licence in respect of the house under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14:—Held, following Simpkin v. Birmingham JJ. (L. R. 7 Q. B. 482), that the justices had no jurisdiction to entertain the application, as it was made after the expiration of the period for which the previous licence remained in force. White v. Coquetdale JJ., 50 L. J., M. C. 128; 7 Q. B. D. 238; 44 L. T. 715; 30 W. R. 16; 45 J. P. 539. See next case.

S., tenant of a house and licensed to sell excisable liquors therein, made over the house in June, 1881, to W., who forthwith sublet it to B. B. applied at a special sessions for a transfer of the licence, which was opposed by S., and refused. At the time of the general licensing meeting B. was in occupation, but was about to leave owing to illness in her family, and did not apply for a renewal of the licence. She left shortly afterwards and the house was shut up, and no excisable liquors had been sold there since June. In September, after the close of the licensing meeting, the landlord learnt that the house was vacant and took possession. The licence expired on the 10th of October. The landlord afterwards let it to D., who, in January, 1882, applied to a special sessions for a renewal of the licence:—Held, that B. as occupier, though not holding a licence, was a person entitled to apply at the general sessions for a renewal of the licence, and that the event mentioned in 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14, of the occupier of a house being about to quit the same neglecting to apply at the general meeting for a licence to continue to sell excisable liquors therein, had occurred, so that an application under that section could be made. Reg. v. Liverpool JJ., or Lancashire JJ., or Lawrence, 52 L. J., M. C. 114; 11 Q. B. D. 638; 49 L. T. 244; 32 W. R. 20; 47 J. P. 596—C. A.

Held, also, overruling Todd, Ex parte (3 Q. B. D. 407), and White v. Coquetdale JJ. (7 Q. B. D. 238), that it was not necessary that the application should be made before the expiration of the period for which the old licence was in force, and that the justices in special sessions had jurisdiction to grant the application. Ib.

Change of Tenancy.]—The tenant of a beerhouse, holding a beerhouse licence, assigned his interest in the premises to another, and gave up possession to him on the 14th of February. At the general licensing sessions, on the 6th of March, the old tenant applied for a certificate for a renewal of the licence, which was refused on the ground that he had been convicted of an offence under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 8. The new tenant had not time after the transfer to him to give the requisite notices to enable him to apply at the general licensing sessions :—Held, that he was entitled to apply at a special sessions, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 40 L. J., M. C. 184 ; L. R. 6 Q. B. 781 ; 25 L. T. 41 ; 19 W. R. 960.

A house in Middlesex having been licensed for some years under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, L., the licensed tenant, gave up possession on the 6th of February to T. At the adjourned general annual licensing meeting on the 24th of March, application for a licence was made on behalf of T. This was refused, and no appeal was made. The licence having expired on the 5th of April, the house was shut up. On the 4th of May T. applied to the special sessions, who refused the licence on the ground that the renewal of the licence had been refused at the general meeting. T. again applied on the 4th of July to the special sessions ; and the justices refused a licence on the ground that the case was not within s. 14. On appeal, the general sessions refused on the same ground : —Held, that having applied to the general licensing meeting and been refused, T. could not afterwards go to the special sessions. Reg. v. Taylor, 42 L. J., M. C. 13 ; L. R. 7 Q. B. 487.

Under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, where a house which has been kept as an hotel without a licence is transferred to a new occupier, the notices for a licence must be given by the new occupier. Bryant v. Beattie, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 254 ; 5 Scott, 751 ; 7 L. J., C. P. 78.

W., duly licensed under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, applied at a general licensing meeting on the 15th of September for a renewal of his licence, which was refused. The licence expired upon the 10th of October following, and he then ceased to sell excisable liquors, but continued in occupation of the house until the 13th of October ; he then gave up possession to S., who, after giving the proper notices, applied at a special sessions for a new licence in respect of the premises. The justices refused the application, on the ground that as W. was not licensed within the terms of s. 14 at the time of his removal from the house, they had no jurisdiction :—Held, that the decision of the justices was right. Simpkin or Reg. v. Birmingham JJ., 41 L. J., M. C. 102 ; L. R. 7 Q. B. 482 ; 26 L. T. 620 ; 20 W. R. 702.

Grant to New Tenant under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14—Second Application by same Tenant under same Section.]—On the 2nd of September, 1890, the duly licensed tenant of a country beerhouse removed from the house without having applied for the renewal of the licence at the general annual licensing meeting on the 30th of August. On the same day a new tenant entered into occupation of the house, and on the 5th of September obtained at petty sessions a temporary licence under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 44, until the 27th. On the 27th an adjournment of the general annual licensing meeting was held, and also a special session for the transfer of licences under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14, and at the latter the new tenant applied for and obtained under the section a licence until the 10th of October then next ensuing. On the 3rd of January, 1891, he again applied at a special transfer session held on that day under the same section for a grant of a licence to continue until the 10th of October, 1891 :—Held, that, having already held a licence in respect of the premises from the 27th of September to the 10th of October, 1890, he was not a "new tenant" within the meaning of the section, and that the justices had no jurisdiction to grant the application. Reg. v. Powell, 60 L. J., Q. B. 594 ; [1891] 2 Q. B. 693 ; 65 L. T. 210 ; 39 W. R. 630—C. A.

Successive New Tenants—Application by.]—The holder of a country publican's licence left the house in April. F., a new tenant, applied for a transfer in August, but the justices refused it and suggested an application for a new licence. The new licence was applied for, and being opposed was refused in September. W., a new tenant, went into occupation in October, and applied in November for a transfer, when the justices refused to hear W., on the ground that they had heard F.'s application and refused it, and that the matter was therefore res judicata : —Held, that the justices must hear W.'s application. Reg. v. Upper Goldeross JJ., 62 L. T. 112 ; 53 J. P. 823.

T., in October, 1888, applied for a transfer of an "on" beer licence, which was refused. He appealed to quarter sessions, and the quarter sessions held he had no right of appeal, but stated a case for the High Court on the point. The High Court, in October, 1889, held that T. had a right of appeal. T. then applied at transfer sessions, in November, 1889, for a transfer, but the justices refused to hear him on the ground that they had heard the same application before, in 1888 :—Held, that the justices were bound to hear the application, as it was made in a new licensing year. Reg. v. Welby, 54 J. P. 183.

Tenant giving up Possession—Application by Landlord—Appeal to Quarter Sessions.]—K., the licensed tenant of a public-house, abandoned possession in December, and the house was shut up. At the next general annual licensing meeting in September K. did not apply for a renewal, but the landlord asked for a renewal either in K.'s name or his own, which the justices refused. A new tenant, P., entered a few days after the adjourned annual licensing meeting, and applied at the next transfer sessions in October for a transfer of the licence, which was refused. P. then appealed to quarter sessions in January, when the refusal was confirmed. P. then applied in June for an order for a mandamus to the general annual licensing meeting to rehear his application :—Held, that P. was precluded from asking for a mandamus because of his appeal to quarter sessions, and that his application was for a mandamus to the wrong justices. Reg. v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne JJ., 51 J. P. 244—C. A.

Lapsed Licence—Discretion of Justices to refuse Transfer.]—On an application for a renewal or transfer of a licence, in order to limit the discretion of the justices to one of the four grounds of refusal mentioned in s. 8 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, it must be shewn that the licence has been continuously in force from May 1, 1869, down to the date of the application. Freer v. Murray, 63 L. J., M. C. 242; [1894] A. C. 576; 6 R. 237; 71 L. T. 444; 58 J. P. 508—H. L. (E.)

Where an application for renewal was made on September 10, 1891, and was refused, and the licence expired in the ordinary course on October 10, such licence is not "in force" within the meaning of s. 19 of the act of 1869, and, therefore upon an application on November 17th under s. 14 of the Licensing Act, 1828, the justices' discretion to refuse a transfer is not limited to the four grounds specified in s. 8 of the act of 1869. Reg. v. Curzon (L. R. 8 Q. B. 400) followed. Ib.

C. having a lease of a licensed house at M. till 1879, began in 1875 to build a new house of his own at I., for which he obtained a licence and allowed the licence at M. to drop. A new tenant entered the premises at M. in 1879, and applied from then until 1883 for a new licence, which was always refused; he then applied for a transfer of the licence at M. which had expired in 1877:—Held, that the justices had a discretion to refuse the transfer, and could not be compelled by mandamus to hear the application. Minnett, Ex parte, 51 J. P. 84.

Forfeiture, effect of — Beerhouse Licence existing before 1869—Discretion.]—A licence existing on 1st May, 1869, for the sale of beer to be consumed on the premises, was forfeited by the conviction of the holder under the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 15, for permitting the premises to be used as a brothel:—Held, that the licence was not "in force" within the meaning of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 27), s. 19, and that the licensing justices at special sessions had a general discretion to refuse applications by the landlord and a new tenant of the premises for a transfer of the licence, and were not limited to the four grounds of refusal specified in s. 8. Reg. v. West Riding JJ., 57 L. J., M. C. 103; 21 Q. B. D. 258; 36 W. R. 855; 52 J. P. 455.

Where Female Licensee Marries during the Year.]—P., a single woman, held a beerhouse licence under 1 Will. 4, c. 64, in the country, and in November she married H., who applied for a transfer to himself, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14, and the justices refused it, holding that, as P. was no longer the real resident occupier, the licence became void on her marriage:—Held, the justices were wrong, and that the licence remained good till its expiration on 10th October then next. Hazell v. Middleton, 45 J. P. 540.

Transfer to New Premises where original Premises required for Public Purposes.]—B., the holder of a beerhouse licence, in the country, under 1 Will. 4, c. 64, got notice to quit his house, as it was taken for a public purpose, and he quitted on the 4th October. On 5th November he entered on another house about two miles off, and at the next special transfer sessions, on 2nd December, applied to the justices for a transfer under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14, of the licence of the premises which had been taken to the new premises; but the justices refused it, on the ground that the locality of the new house was already fully supplied with licensed houses:—Held, that the justices had an absolute discretion, and that it could not be interfered with by the high court. Boodle v. Birmingham JJ., 45 J. P. 635.

The licensee of premises which had been continuously licensed for the sale of beer on and off the premises from a date prior to May 1, 1869, and which were about to be pulled down for a public purpose, applied at special sessions for a transfer of the licence to other premises:—Held, that the justices' power of refusing the transfer was not limited to the four grounds mentioned in s. 8 of the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869. Traynor v. Jones, 63 L. J., M. C. 31; [1894] 1 Q. B. 83; 10 R. 26; 69 L. T. 862; 42 W. R. 201; 58 J. P. 132.

Temporary Transfer—Conviction of Licensed Person.]—Under the Licensing Act, 1874, s. 15, application was made at a special licensing sessions by the owner of a beerhouse, licensed continually from a date anterior to 1869, the tenant of which had been convicted of felony, for the grant of a licence in respect of the same premises. The justices refused the application, on the ground that the house was of a disorderly character:—Held, that the justices at special licensing sessions, as well as the justices at the general annual licensing meeting, had discretion so to refuse the application. Reg. v. Rowell, (L. R. 7 Q. B. 490) followed. Reg. v. Moore, or Hertfordshire, JJ., 50 L. J., M. C. 121; 7 Q. B. D. 542; 45 J. P. 768.

New Licence or Transfer—Agreement for Sale subject to Transfer to Purchaser.]—R. & Co. had for several years carried on the business of family grocers, tea, wine and spirit merchants, in certain premises in S. Street, in the city of Dublin, and one of the firm had been each year duly licensed as a publican, to sell beer, wine and spirits for consumption upon the premises, but had never carried on business as publican. At the October sessions of 1883, their publican's licence had been duly renewed by H., one of their firm. In September, 1884, R. & Co. entered into an agreement with M. to sell to him the premises, and it was therein provided that M. should pay a deposit of 800*l.*, pending completion of the purchase, and making out title, &c.; and they also entered into a collateral agreement with M. that he should forthwith take all necessary steps to obtain, at the ensuing October licensing sessions, a transfer of the licence attached to the premises, and that, if M. obtained such transfer, the purchase should be completed on or before the 29th November, 1884, but that, if such transfer was refused, M. should be at liberty to rescind the contract, and be repaid his deposit. On the 2nd October, 1884, by an indorsement on the licence, H. purported to assign all his interest therein to M. No ad interim transfer of the licence to M. had been obtained. M. having applied to the recorder at the October licensing session of 1884 for a certificate enabling him to obtain a publican's licence, and such application having been opposed on the ground of the number of previously licensed houses in the neighbourhood:—Held, that the case was distinguishable from Reg. v. Dublin Recorder (Ir. R. 11 C. L. 412); that M.'s application was in substance, as well as in form, an application for a new licence, and that, therefore, the court, in dealing with it was entitled to take into consideration the number of existing licensed houses in the neighbourhood. Reg. v. Dublin Recorder, 16 L. R., Ir. 424—C. A.

Notice of Application—New Tenant—Licensing Act, 1828, s. 14.]—Sect. 40, sub-s. 2 of the Licensing Act, 1872 (requiring fourteen days' notice of an application for the transfer of a licence), does not apply to an application by a new tenant under s. 14 of the Licensing Act, 1828, for a licence in respect of a house, the licence-holder of which has yielded up possession before the expiration of the licence. Reg. v. Hughes, 62 L. J., M. C. 150; [1893] 2 Q. B. 530; 5 R. 518; 42 W. R. 94; 58 J. P. 151.

A., the holder of a publican's country licence, received notice to quit on the 29th of September, but before that date he obtained the renewal of his licence and refused to quit. The landlord expelled A. by force on the 8th of October, and J. entered into possession. At a special transfer sessions on the 27th of October, though J. had given no notices, the justices granted to J. a licence under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14. On certiorari to quash the licence:—Held, that a certiorari being matter of discretion, it would not be granted, as A.'s object seemed to be to blackmail his landlord. Held, also, that, as A. did not apply for the transfer, no notice was required by J. when he applied under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14. Semble, as no sale of liquor had taken place under A.'s renewed licence, J. was in strictness bound by the proviso in 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 14, to give the same notices as for a new licence. Reg. v. Wiltshire JJ., 57 J. P. 454.

Power of Adjournment.]—The Wine and Beerhouse Act (1869) Amendment Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 29), s. 4, sub-s. 4—which enacts that it shall be in the discretion of the justices to whom an application for a transfer of a licence is made either to allow or refuse the application, or to adjourn the consideration thereof—is intended only to affect the procedure as to adjournment at sessions for the transfer of licences. Therefore, on an application to justices at special sessions for a transfer of a licence to sell beer to be consumed on or off premises in respect of which such a licence was in force on the 1st of May, 1869, and has since been renewed from time to time, the discretion of the justices is limited, as it is on an application at the general licensing meeting for a grant by way of renewal of the licence, and the application for the transfer can only be refused on one or more of the four grounds specified in the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 27), ss. 8, 19. Simonds v. Blackheath JJ., 55 L. J., M. C. 166; 17 Q. B. D. 765; 35 W. R. 167; 50 J. P. 742.

Effect of previous Hearing.]—The holder of a licence to sell beer in a house of which he was occupier, gave the notices required by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 7, of his intention to apply for a certificate authorising a licence under that act for the sale of beer in that house. On his application at the general annual licensing meeting on the 20th of August, the certificate was refused upon the ground that he had been convicted of misconduct when occupying another licensed house. The meeting was adjourned to the 17th September. On the 25th August A. gave notice that he should apply at the adjourned meeting for a certificate in respect of the same house then occupied by him. The justices refused to hear the application, and upon appeal to the quarter sessions the appeal was dismissed, on the ground that the notice was too late:—Held, that the refusal of a certificate to the former occupier was no bar to the application by A. Reg. v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., Drake, Ex parte, 10 B. & S. 84; 39 L. J., M. C. 17; L. R. 5 Q. B. 33; 21 L. T. 490; 18 W. R. 259.

5. Personal Liability of Justices.

Refusal of Licence.]—A mandamus was refused where justices had refused an application for a licence, although it was suggested that their refusal proceeded from a mistaken view of their jurisdiction. Rex v. Farringdon Without JJ., 4 D. & R. 735. S. P., Giles, In re, 2 Str. 181.

An action does not lie against justices for refusing to grant a licence. Bassett v. Godschall, 3 Wils. 121.

An information was granted against justices of the peace for refusing to grant an ale licence from motives of resentment. Rex v. Harris, 3 Burr. 1716. And see Rex v. Young, 1 Burr. 556.

An information against a justice, upon a charge of refusing to grant a licence, will be refused if the reasons assigned for the refusal prove false in fact. Rex v. Athay, 2 Burr. 653.

An information was granted for refusing to grant licences to those publicans who voted against their recommendation of candidates for members of parliament for the borough. Rex v. Williams, 3 Burr. 1317. S. P., Rex v. Price, 3 Burr. 1716.

Improper Grant.]—An information will be granted against a justice of the peace, as well for granting as for refusing an ale licence improperly. Rex v. Holland, 1 Term Rep. 692; 1 R. R. 362.

Taking Illegal Fees.]—Where the mayor of an ancient borough, in which he was also a justice of the peace, took a fee of 4*s.* from a publican resident within the borough, for renewing his annual licence, and though for fifty-seven years a similar fee had been uniformly received by the mayor for the time being, from every publican within the borough applying to renew his licence:—Held, that such fee was illegal, and might be recovered as money had and received, as the payment could not be considered as voluntary, so as to preclude the party from recovering. Morgan v. Palmer, 4 D. & R. 283; 2 B. & C. 729; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 145; 26 R. R. 537.

6. Appeals.

To Quarter Sessions—Refusal to Renew.]—The right of appeal to quarter sessions from a refusal of licensing justices to renew a certificate for a licence to sell beer not to be consumed on the premises, has not been taken away by the Beer Dealers Retail Licences Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 34), s. 1. Reg. v. Schneider, or Downing v. Schneider, 52 L. J., M. C. 51; 11 Q. B. D. 66; 48 L. T. 482; 47 J. P. 376.

—— Refusal to Renew Provisional Licence.]—Appeal lies to quarter sessions against the refusal of justices to renew a provisional licence. Reg. v. County of London JJ., 59 L. J., M. C. 71; 24 Q. B. D. 341; 62 L. T. 458; 38 W. R. 269; 54 J. P. 213.

—— Refusal to Renew—When Proper Remedy.]—By the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, s. 8, all the provisions of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, ss. 27–29, as to appeal (to quarter sessions) from any act of any justice, shall, as far as may be, have effect with respect to the grant of certificates under this act. By the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 75, and schedule 2, ss. 27–29 of Geo. 4, c. 71, are repealed, "except in so far as the sections relate to the renewal or transfer of licences under ss. 4 and 14 of the same act":—Held, that as 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 8, was left wholly unrepealed, the appeal given under that section by reference to 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, ss. 27–29, remained, notwithstanding the repeal of those sections, and, therefore, justices having refused a certificate for a licence to sell beer, &c., not to be consumed on the premises, on other grounds than those prescribed by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 8, the court refused a mandamus on the ground that the applicant might have appealed to the quarter sessions. Reg. v. Smith, or Lancashire JJ., 42 L. J., M. C. 46; L. R. 8 Q. B. 146; 28 L. T. 129; 21 W. R. 382.

—— Refusal to Transfer.]—The holder of an "on" beerhouse licence existing since 1869, received notice of opposition to the renewal. He did not apply for the renewal either at the general annual licensing meeting or the adjournment, and went out of possession on the latter day, when a new tenant entered. The latter applied at the next transfer sessions for a grant of the licence under s. 14 of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, but the justices refused it. On appeal the quarter sessions held that no appeal would lie, as the case was not within the definition of "transfer" in the Licensing Act, 1872:—Held, that quarter sessions were wrong, and that there was an appeal preserved by the schedule of the Licensing Act, 1872, as to all applications under s. 14 of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61. Thornton v. Clegg, 59 L. J., M. C. 6; 24 Q. B. D. 132; 61 L. T. 562; 38 W. R. 160; 53 J. P. 742.

The appeal clauses of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61 (the Intoxicating Liquors Licensing Act, 1828), are incorporated in 37 & 38 Vict. c. 49 (the Licensing Act, 1874), s, 15, and therefore when the licence of a public-housekeeper is forfeited by conviction under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 9, and the owner of the premises duly applies under 37 & 38 Vict. c. 49, s. 15, to special sessions for a licence and it is refused, he has a right of appeal to quarter sessions Reg. or Newton v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., 52 L. J., M. C. 99; 11 Q. B. D. 417.

—— Illegal Procedure.]—When the decision of justices was defective by reason of illegal procedure, it was held that the court of quarter sessions had no jurisdiction to affirm it, as it was within their province to consider whether the procedure at the licensing meeting was legal or not. Reg. v. Eales, 42 L. T. 735; 44 J. P. 553.

—— Entry of Appeal—Rule of Sessions.]—A court of quarter sessions has no power to refuse to allow the entry of an appeal against the refusal of justices to grant a certificate for a licence, on the ground of noncompliance with a rule of the sessions requiring that appeals must be entered and the grounds of appeal given to the clerk of the peace three clear days before the first day of sessions, when all the requirements of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 27, have been complied with. Reg. v. Pawlett, 42 L. J., M. C. 157; L. R. 8 Q. B. 491; 29 L. T. 390.

A court of quarter sessions, having refused solely on such a ground to allow an appeal to be entered on the first day of sessions, made an order under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, for the payment of costs by the appellant to the respondents, as on an appeal which had not been entered or prosecuted:—Held, that the order for payment of costs must be quashed. Ib.

Person aggrieved—Who is.]—By 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 27, any person who shall think himself aggrieved by any act of any justices in execution of that act, may appeal against such act to the quarter sessions:—Held, that the words "person who shall think himself aggrieved" mean a person immediately aggrieved, as by refusal of a licence to himself, and not one who is consequentially aggrieved; and therefore, that where magistrates had granted a licence to a party to open a public-house not before licensed, within a very short distance of a licensed public-house, the occupier of the latter house could not appeal against such grant. Rex v. Middlesex JJ., 3 B. & Ad. 938.

—— Mortgagor and Mortgagee.]—The tenant and occupier of a house licensed for the sale of beer on the premises, in 1876 assigned all his interest in the premises for the residue of his term of years, and the benefit of the licence, to the appellants by way of first mortgage to secure the repayment of moneys advanced by them; and by the mortgage deed irrevocably constituted the appellants his attorneys, in his name, and as his act and deed, to do all acts necessary to procure a transfer of the licence. In 1883, the moneys secured by the mortgage being still unpaid the occupier sent a written application for a renewal of his licence to the justices at their annual licensing meeting, and they adjourned the hearing of the application. At the adjourned hearing the appellants applied, as mortgagees, and under their power of attorney, for a renewal of the licence to the occupier, who appeared, but stated that he did not wish for a renewal. No objection was made to the renewal on any of the grounds specified in 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, which act applied to the occupier's licence. The justices refused the application, and the appellants appealed to quarter sessions in their own names as mortgagees, and also as attorneys of the occupier and in his name, and for and on his behalf. At the hearing the occupier again appeared, and stated that he did not wish the licence to be renewed, and the quarter sessions thereupon affirmed the order of the licensing justices:—Held, first, that the appellants were persons aggrieved, within 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 27, by the refusal of the licensing justices to renew the occupier's licence, and were therefore entitled to appeal to quarter sessions; secondly, that upon the facts stated the licensing justices and the court of quarter sessions were bound to grant the application of the appellants for a renewal of the licence to the occupier. Garrett v. Middlesex JJ., or Reg. v. Garrett, 53 L. J., M. C. 81; 12 Q. B. D. 620; 32 W. R. 646; 48 J. P. 357.

Borough or County Sessions.]—Under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 27, an appeal lay to the county quarter sessions against the refusal of justices in special sessions to grant an alehouse licence. Reg. v. Deane, 2 Q. B. 96; 1 G. & D. 192; 10 L. J., M. C. 126

In a borough having a separate court of quarter sessions under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 103, the recorder cannot try an appeal against such refusal, that power being withheld from him by s. 105. Ib. S. P., Reg. v. Cockburn or Bristol Recorder, 4 El. & Bl. 265 ; 24 L. J., M. C. 43 ; 1 Jur. (N.S). 373 ; 3 W. R. 69.

But an appeal against refusal of a licence by justices of such borough may still be tried at the quarter sessions. Ib.

Admissibility of Fresh Evidence.]—An application for a licence for beer to be consumed on premises not licensed before, was refused on the ground that there was no want of a new beerhouse in the neighbourhood. On appeal to the quarter sessions the justices refused to receive evidence to support this ground of refusal :—Held, that this decision was wrong, and that such an inquiry may be gone into, this application not coming within either of the cases where, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, ss. 8, 19, the grounds of refusal are limited. Reg. v. Lancashire JJ., Tyson, In re, 40 L. J., M. C. 17 ; L. R. 6 Q. B. 97 ; 23 L. T. 461 ; 19 W. R. 204.

At an annual licensing meeting a certificate for the sale of beer, &c., to be consumed on the premises, was refused in respect of a house whereof a licence was in force on the 1st of May, 1869, for the sale by retail of beer, &c., to be consumed on the premises. The ground of refusal was that the applicant failed to give satisfactory evidence of character. At an appeal to the quarter sessions evidence not before given at the licensing meeting was tendered :—Held, that the appellant had a right to a rehearing of the case at the quarter sessions, and that fresh evidence was therefore admissible. Reg. v. Pilgrim, 40 L. J., M. C. 3 ; L. R. 6 Q. B. 89 ; 23 L. T. 410 ; 19 W. R. 99.

Fresh Ground of Objection.]—Where justices have refused a renewal of an "on" beer licence existing before 1869, upon one of the grounds specified in s. 8 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, the quarter sessions upon appeal may determine the case upon another of the grounds specified, provided the notice of objection sets out the latter ground. Whiffen v. Blyth, infra, col. 440.

The holder of an "on" beer licence existing before 1869 applied for a renewal. No notice of opposition was served upon him, but the justices refused the renewal on the ground of personal unfitness of the licensee. The licensee appealed to quarter sessions, and seven days before the hearing of the appeal a notice of opposition was given by the police :—Held, that the quarter sessions had no jurisdiction to entertain such grounds of opposition. Hoskings v. Powell, 55 J. P. 358.

—— Res Judicata.]—After the licensed tenant had gone out of occupation, and before the licence expired, H., as a new tenant, applied to the general annual licensing meeting for the renewal to him of a licence of a beerhouse, licensed before and continuously since 1st May, 1869, but it was refused on the ground of the disorderly character of the house. From this refusal H. appealed to quarter sessions, and the appeal was dismissed after a full hearing. After the expiration of the licence, H. applied to the special sessions for a new licence in his own name, which was refused on the same grounds after a full hearing. H. appealed to quarter sessions, who refused to rehear the evidence, and dismissed the appeal as res judicata. H. applied for a mandamus for a rehearing :—Held, that a mandamus should not be granted. Reg. v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., Hill, Ex parte, 59 J. P. 278.

—— Grounds of Refusal to renew Licence not stated—Duty of Quarter Sessions.]—Licensing justices refused to renew the licence of the appellant in respect of a beerhouse which had been licensed on and ever since 1st May, 1869, and stated no grounds for their refusal. On appeal, the court of quarter sessions declined to decide in favour of the appellant, merely on the ground that the licensing justices had not stated the grounds of their refusal. The appellant then withdrew from the proceedings, and the court of quarter sessions proceeded with the hearing of the appeal on its merits, and affirmed the decision of the licensing justices :—Held, that the court of quarter sessions had heard and determined the appeal, and that a rule nisi for a mandamus, requiring that court to hear and determine it, ought not to be granted. Gorman, Ex parte, 63 L. J., M. C. 84 ; [1894] A. C. 23 ; 6 R. 89 ; 70 L. T. 46 ; 58 J. P. 316—H. L. (E.)

Rehearing — Waiver of Irregularity by Appearance.]—At an annual licensing meeting an objection was raised to the renewal of the licence of the appellant, the tenant of a beerhouse licensed prior to 1st May, 1869, and the justices directed that notice of objection should be given to him, under s. 42 of the Licensing Act, 1872, and adjourned the meeting. This notice was given by the superintendent of police, and did not express on the face of it that it was given by direction of the justices. The grounds stated in the notice were that persons had been found drunk and disorderly on the premises, and that persons of bad character frequented the premises. The appellant attended at the adjourned meeting, and the justices refused to renew the licence on the ground that he had not produced satisfactory evidence of good character. On appeal to quarter sessions the court refused to renew the licence on the ground that the house was frequented by bad characters. On a case stated :—Held, that the absence of intimation that the notice was given by direction of the justices was an irregularity which was waived by the appearance of the appellant. Whiffen v. Blyth, 61 L. J., M. C. 82 ; [1892] 1 Q. B. 362 ; 66 L. T. 333 ; 40 W. R. 293 ; 56 J. P. 325—C. A.

Notice of Appeal—Irregularity.]—The notice would not have been irregular if it had stated that it was given by the superintendent of police, or by the clerk to the justices "by direction of the justices sitting at the general annual licensing meeting." Ib.

—— Invalid Notice—Mandamus to Petty Sessions.]—Where a person applies for the renewal of a licence that is refused, and he appeals to quarter sessions but gives an invalid notice of appeal, he is not entitled to a mandamus to petty sessions to rehear the application. Reg. v. Gloucester JJ., Reg. v. Bristol JJ., 5 R. 276 ; 68 L. T. 225 ; 41 W. R. 379 ; 57 J. P. 486.

—— On whom Served.]—Justices, when acting as licensing justices, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, are a "court of summary jurisdiction" within the meaning of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, and the Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 13, sub-s. 11; and consequently the provisions of s. 31 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, as to service of notice of appeal on the justices' clerk. Reg. v. Glamorganshire JJ., 61 L. J., M. C. 169; [1892] 1 Q. B. 621; 66 L. T. 444; 40 W. R. 436; 56 J. P. 437—C. A. But see Boulter v. Kent JJ., infra, col. 443.

—— Service of Notice on "the other Party"—Superintendent of Police opposing Renewal.]—Where a superintendent of police has served notice of opposition to the renewal of a licence, and has appeared before the licensing justices in support of his opposition, he is "the other party" to the proceedings within the meaning of s. 31 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879; a person aggrieved by the refusal of the justices to renew the licence must, therefore, as a condition precedent to the hearing of his appeal to quarter sessions, serve upon the superintendent notice of his intention to appeal. Reg. v. Glamorganshire JJ., supra; and Price v. James, infra, col. 442, followed. Reg. v. Gloucester JJ., Reg. v. Bristol JJ., 5 R. 276; 68 L. T. 225; 41 W. R. 379; 57 J. P. 486.

—— Time Prescribed.]—Notice of appeal from the licensing justices of quarter sessions under the Alehouse Act, 1828 (9 Geo. 4, c. 61), s. 57, should now be given in accordance with the provisions of s. 51, sub-s. 2, of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, within seven days after the day on which judgment was given. Reg. v. Yorkshire, W. R., JJ., Hawkins, Ex parte, 64 L. J., M. C. 192.

Majority of Justices present—Some Justices refusing to Vote.]—At an appeal to quarter sessions from a refusal to renew a licence, sixteen justices were present and heard the case, but two refused to vote, while eight were for renewing the licence, and six were against it:—Held, that the whole sixteen justices must be counted, and there being no majority in favour of the renewal, the result was that it was refused. Garton v. Southampton JJ., 57 J. P. 328.

Court equally divided—Withdrawal of one Justice.]—Upon hearing an appeal from a refusal by licensing justices to renew the licence of a public-house, the court of quarter sessions was equally divided. Ultimately a justice who was in favour of allowing the appeal withdrew from the court, and the remaining members of the court dismissed the appeal. The appellant applied for a rule nisi for a mandamus requiring the court of quarter sessions to hear and determine the appeal:—Held, (i.) that s. 9 of the Licensing Act, 1828 (9 Geo. 4, c. 61), did not apply to the determination of appeals at quarter sessions, and (ii.) that it was competent for the justices who composed the court after the withdrawal of the retiring member to decide the case; and that therefore the appeal had been heard and determined, and a rule nisi for a mandamus ought not to be granted. Evans, Ex parte, 63 L. J., M. C. 81; [1894] A. C. 16; 6 R. 82; 70 L. T. 45; 58 J. P. 260—H. L. (E.)

Appeal by way of Special Case—Power of Justices.]—Justices when acting as licensing justices are a "court of summary jurisdiction," and the provisions of s. 33 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, giving justices power to state a case on a question of law, apply to such a court. Reg. v. Glamorganshire JJ., 61 L. J., M. C. 169; [1892] 1 Q. B. 621; 66 L. T. 444; 40 W. R. 436; 56 J. P. 437—C. A. But see Boulter v. Kent JJ., infra, col. 443.

—— Parties — Respondent.]—When a case was stated in reference to the refusal of a licence, the superintendent of police of the division, who had appeared to oppose the licence before the justices, and to whom notice in writing of the appeal had been given by the appellant, was rightly constituted respondent. Price v. James, 61 L. J., M. C. 203; [1892] 2 Q. B. 428; 67 L. T. 543; 41 W. R. 57; 56 J. P. 471—C. A.

Costs.]—The sessions hearing an appeal against the refusal of justices to grant a licence, cannot adjourn such appeal to a subsequent session for the purpose of awarding costs there, after taxation in the interval. Reg. v. Belton, 11 Q. B. 379; 3 New Sess. Cas. 77; 17 L. J., M. C. 70.

Upon appeal against an order refusing a licence, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, the sessions in October dismissed the appeal, and ordered the appellant forthwith to pay to the respondents, or to whom they should appoint, certain costs. The order was drawn up with a blank for the amount of the costs. The sessions were adjourned to November, and in the interval the clerk of the peace taxed the costs, and inserted the amount in the order. The January quarter sessions estreated the recognizances of the appellant and his sureties, upon proof that a demand had been made of the costs, and non-payment:—Held, first, that 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 18, did not take away the jurisdiction given by 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 27, to order costs on appeal from a refusal to grant an alehouse licence, but gave an additional remedy for enforcing such order. Reg. v. Ely JJ., 5 El. & Bl. 489; 25 L. J., M. C. 1; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1017; 4 W. R. 5.

Held, secondly, that there was no forfeiture of the recognizances at the sessions in October or November, and that the January quarter sessions had jurisdiction to order the recognizances to be estreated, under 3 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 2. Ib.

Upon an appeal against a refusal of justices at petty sessions to grant an alehouse licence, the quarter sessions reversed such refusal, and ordered the licence to be granted, and the quarter sessions further ordered the justices to pay the appellant on demand 35*l.* 19*s.* 10*d.* for his costs:—Held, that that part of the order awarding costs was bad, inasmuch as it did not follow the directions as to the payment of costs contained in 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, and 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 27, which require the costs in the first instance to be paid to the clerk of the peace. Reg. v. Peek, 20 L. T. 393.

Where licensing justices, on an appeal to quarter sessions against the refusal of a licence, themselves act as objectors, and actively oppose the appeal, they become "parties" to the appeal, and the quarter sessions have jurisdiction to refuse them their costs, or even, semble, to order them to pay costs. Therefore, in such a case, though the appeal has been dismissed, a mandamus will not be granted requiring the quarter sessions to award to the licensing justices indemnity costs under s. 29 of the Licensing Act, 1828. But, semble, if the justices either do not appear at all on the appeal, or appear only for the purpose of informing the quarter sessions upon what grounds they acted, they are not parties, and are entitled if the appeal is dismissed, to indemnity costs: and therefore, in such a case a mandamus would go to compel the quarter sessions to award them such costs. Reg. v. County of London JJ., 64 L. J., M. C. 100; [1895] 1 Q. B. 616; 14 R. 246; 72 L. T. 211; 43 W. R. 387; 59 J. P. 820—C. A.

Licensing justices are not a court of summary jurisdiction, and when on appeal to quarter sessions from their refusal at the instance of an objector to renew the licence, a renewal has been granted, there is no jurisdiction to give costs against the objector. Boulter v. Kent JJ., 66 L. J., Q. B. 787; [1897] A. C. 556; 77 L. T. 288; 46 W. R. 114; 61 J. P. 532—H. L. (E.)

E. OFFENCES AGAINST LICENCE.

1. ADULTERATING LIQUORS.

Penalties for—Liability.]—A keeper of a beershop, licensed under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 64, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, is liable, not only to the penalties given by those acts for the adulterating or selling adulterated beer, but also to the penalties given by 56 Geo. 3, c. 58, s. 2, for having in his possession any of the prohibited articles therein specified, or any other article or preparation to be used as a substitute for malt or hops. Att.-Gen. v. Lockwood, 9 M. & W. 378; 6 Jur. 171. Affirmed in error, 10 M. & W. 464.

In order to render such a person liable to those penalties for having in his possession any of the articles enumerated in 56 Geo. 3, c. 58, s. 2, it is unnecessary to aver or prove, either that the party had them in his possession to be used as a substitute for malt or hops, or that he had them in his possession with any criminal intention. Ib.

But, where an information is for having in his possession any article not designated by name in that section, it is necessary to shew that it was intended to be used as a substitute for malt or hops in the adulteration of beer. Ib.

An information which on 56 Geo. 3, c. 58, s. 2, charged that a retailer of beer received and took into, and had in, his custody and possession, a large quantity of liquorice, is not double. Ib.

A publican sold, as a bottle of gin, liquid composed of 26 per cent. alcohol, 70 per cent. water, and 4 per cent. sugar. Evidence was adduced that gin was sold by retailers at varying strength from proof to 20 per cent. under proof. This liquid was 44 per cent. under proof, but the analyst said he should call it "gin whose alcoholic strength was exceedingly low." Justices convicted the publican under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 6:—Held, that the facts justified the finding that this liquid was not of the quality of gin, but that the excess of water was a fraudulent increase of the measure of the article within the enacting part of the section. Pashler v. Stevenitt, 35 L. T. 862.

A publican was convicted under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 6, for selling to the prejudice of the purchaser a pint of gin which was not of the nature, substance and quality of the article demanded by such purchaser. A person asked for a pint of gin at the publican's premises. He said that he had gin at 2*s.* and 1*s.* 4*d.* per pint. The purchaser bought a pint at the latter price. On analysis the gin was found to contain 43·15 per cent. of water, that is, it was 43·15 below proof, but the mixture was not injurious to health. The magistrate found that there was no recognised standard of alcoholic strength for gin, but that it varied from proof to twenty under proof:—Held, that whether the mixture in question was what a purchaser buying gin without any further description would reasonably expect to receive was a question of fact for the magistrate; and that there was sufficient evidence to justify the conviction. Webb v. Knight, 46 L. J., M. C. 264; 2 Q. B. D. 530; 36 L. T. 791; 26 W. R. 14—C. A.

By s. 6 of 42 & 43 Vict. c. 30, it is provided that "in determining whether an offence has been committed under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 63, s. 6, by selling to the prejudice of the purchaser spirits not adulterated otherwise than by the admixture of water, it shall be a good defence to prove that such admixture has not reduced the spirit more than . . . 35 degrees under proof for gin." The appellant sold to the respondent gin more than 35 degrees under proof, but, at the time of sale, brought to his knowledge a printed notice hanging up in the room to the effect that all spirits were sold "as diluted spirits, no alcoholic strength guaranteed":—Held, that although the appellant had not a good defence under 42 & 43 Vict. c. 30, s. 6, he was not by that section deprived of any defence which he would have had under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 63, and that the sale not having been to the prejudice of the purchaser, no offence had been committed under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 63, s. 6. Gage v. Elsey, 52 L. J., M. C. 44; 10 Q. B. D. 518; 48 L. T. 226; 31 W. R. 500; 47 J. P. 391.

Dilution of Beer by Publican—Mixing Beers of different Strengths.]—By s. 8, sub-s. 2, of the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1885, "a dealer in or retailer of beer shall not adulterate or dilute beer, or add anything thereto, except finings for the purpose of clarification." The appellant, a publican, had in his cellar a cask of beer supplied by a firm of brewers, and also a quantity of small beer of much less strength. He drew off a certain quantity from the cask of stronger beer, and filled it up with small beer, adding some finings for clarification; the result, as tested by the quantity of proof spirit in the two kinds of beer, was that the mixture was about 15 per cent. weaker than the beer which was in the cask as it came from the brewers. No water or any other matter or thing (except the finings) was added to the beer. On appeal against a conviction for "diluting" beer under the above section:—Held, that the mixing of the two kinds of beer amounted to a dilution of the stronger beer, and that the appellant was properly convicted. Crofts v. Taylor, 56 L. J., M. C. 137; 19 Q. B. D. 524; 57 L. T. 310; 36 W. R. 47; 16 Cox, C. C. 294; 51 J. P. 532, 789.

2. PERMITTING UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLIES.

Known Thieves.]—A beerhouse-keeper who occupied a place where excisable liquors were sold, allowed a meeting to be held there for the purpose of getting up a subscription in aid of the wife and children of a man charged with an offence, or for procuring means for his defence. At the meeting were several thieves, or reputed thieves, who were known by him to be such; but no disorderly conduct occurred, and the meeting was not held pursuant to any unlawful design:—Held, that such an assemblage is forbidden by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 99 (Habitual Criminals Act, 1869), s. 10, inasmuch as it affords opportunity and inducement to devise crimes, and that he was guilty of an offence within the meaning of the section. Marshall v. Fox, 40 L. J., M. C. 142 ; L. R. 6 Q. B. 370 ; 24 L. T. 751 ; 19 W. R. 1108.

Information—Witnesses.]—On the hearing of an information before two justices of the peace, against a person licensed to sell excisable liquors by retail, for that he did "unlawfully and knowingly permit and suffer persons of notoriously bad character to assemble and meet together in his house and premises" :—Held, that he was not a competent witness. Parker v. Green, 2 B. & S. 299 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 133 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 409 ; 6 L. T. 46 ; 10 W. R. 316 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 169.

3. Permitting Disorderly Conduct.

Suffering Prostitutes to Assemble.]—By the Towns Police Clauses Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 89), s. 35, every person keeping any house, shop, room, or other place of public resort for the sale or consumption of refreshments of any kind, who suffers prostitutes to assemble therein, is subject to a penalty :—Held, that the keeper of a licensed alehouse was within the section, which was therefore cumulative upon other enactments relating to such houses. Cole v. Coulton, 2 El. & El. 695 ; 29 L. J., M. C. 125 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 698 ; 2 L. T. 216 ; 8 W. R. 412.

Prostitutes, as such, are "persons of notoriously bad character" within the meaning of the licence granted under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61. Parker v. Green, infra.

—— Scienter.]—The fact that the same disorderly persons had been seen in the house of an innkeeper, charged for unlawfully permitting and suffering persons of notoriously bad character to assemble and meet together in his house against the tenor of his licence and in his presence, upon other occasions previously to the day to which the information related, was evidence of his knowledge of their character and pursuits. Parker v. Green, 2 B. & S. 299 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 133 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 409 ; 6 L. T. 46 ; 10 W. R. 316 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 169.

—— Purpose of the Assembly.]—The Dublin Police Act (5 & 6 Vict. c. 24, s. 7) provides that every person who shall have or keep any house where provisions, liquors or other refreshments are sold or consumed and who shall knowingly permit or suffer prostitutes or persons of notoriously bad character to meet or remain therein shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty of not more than 5*l*. To justify a conviction it is not enough that prostitutes assembled in the house, the magistrate must be satisfied also that they met there for the purpose of prostitution or other disorderly conduct. Murphy v. Ahern, 18 W. R. 71.

In order to convict a keeper of refreshment-rooms licensed under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 27, of the offence created by s. 32, of knowingly suffering prostitutes to assemble and continue upon his premises, it is not necessary that there should be any indecency in the house ; all that the magistrate has to determine is, whether the facts proved fairly lead to the inference that women came to the house to the keeper's knowledge, not merely to obtain refreshment, but for the purpose of meeting men, as prostitutes. Belasco v. Hannant, 3 B. & S. 13 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 225 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1226 ; 6 L. T. 577 ; 10 W. R. 867 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 203.

W., a freeman of the Vintners Company of London, selling foreign wines without licence, was subjected by a local act to the same penalties as those licensed to sell. In his house one night a constable saw forty prostitutes, about half of them taking refreshments, and talking with men, and he told W. what they were. An hour afterwards some of the women were there with other prostitutes, only a few of them taking refreshments, and they were going out and coming in with men. There was no indecent or improper behaviour :—Held, there was evidence sufficient to sustain a conviction against W. for suffering persons of notoriously bad character to assemble and meet together contrary to the licence. Whitfield v. Bainbridge, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 919.

—— Offence by Servant in Charge.]—If a keeper of a place of public resort leaves his place in the management of a servant, and prostitutes are suffered to meet together and remain in the house, contrary to 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 44, the mere relation of master and servant neither makes nor prevents the latter from being an aider and abettor in the offence ; and if the servant in knowingly suffering the prostitutes to meet together and remain is carrying out the master's orders, the master is guilty as principal and the servant as aiding and abetting, and the latter may be convicted under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 5. Wilson v. Stewart, 3 B. & S. 913 ; 32 L. J., M. C. 198 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1130 ; 8 L. T. 277 ; 11 W. R. 640 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 354.

Permitting House to be used as a Brothel—Evidence.]—P. was a licensed victualler, and during his absence elsewhere at work, the police noticed two prostitutes and two men enter the premises, where they proceeded a little later to occupy a double-bedded room, and after three hours the police, having entered the house, found the two women concealed in the bed with P.'s wife, and the men in a room by themselves. No evidence of previous misconduct against P. was given, and his wife and servants gave no rebutting evidence in his favour :—Held, that there was ample evidence that P. permitted the premises to be a brothel, though he was absent, and no previous case of a like kind was proved ; and that the justices were not bound to state a case, there being no point of law raised before them. Reg. v. Holland JJ., 46 J. P. 312.

4. Permitting Gaming.

Evidence of Knowledge.]—In order to support a conviction under the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 17), by which if any person licensed under the act "suffers any gaming or any unlawful game to be carried on on his premises" he is made liable to certain penalties—it is necessary to give some evidence of actual or constructive knowledge on the part of the person charged that gaming was carried on on his premises. Bosley v. Davies, 45 L. J., M. C. 27 ; 1 Q. B. D. 84 ; 33 L. T. 528 ; 24 W. R. 140.

At the hearing of an information against an hotel-keeper for suffering gaming on his licensed premises, it was proved that a police constable, about half-past twelve in the morning, was in the street in which the premises were situate.

Two of the windows had the blinds up, so that the constable could see three gentlemen, and from what they said it was evident that they were playing cards. He waited for about a quarter of an hour, when the front door was opened by one of the waiters, and he then entered and went upstairs to the room, and found six gentlemen round a table with a quantity of money on it. The manageress of the hotel said that she did not know that they were playing cards, and that they did not have the cards of her, and her statement was confirmed by the card-players, who were in a private room. The hotel-keeper having been convicted:—Held, that the case must be sent back to the justices with an intimation of the opinion of the court that, though actual knowledge on the part of the hotel-keeper or his servants, in the sense of seeing or knowing of, the card-playing, was not necessary to be shewn, yet that some circumstances must be proved from which it could be inferred that they connived at what was going on. Ib.

The offence of suffering gaming on licensed premises may be committed by connivance, either on the part of the principal or the person in charge. Redgate v. Haynes, 45 L. J., M. C. 65; 1 Q. B. D. 89; 33 L. T. 779.

A gentleman took a sitting-room and three bed-rooms in an hotel; one of these bed-rooms was occupied by himself, the other two by a horse trainer and jockey, both of whom lived in the immediate neighbourhood. The hotel-keeper retired to bed shortly before 11 P.M. and the hall porter was left in charge. Between 1.30 and 2.15 the following morning the three persons were discovered in the sitting-room playing cards for money, the noise they made having been heard outside the premises. During all this time the hall porter, whose duty it was to stay up and attend to customers, was in a parlour at the extreme end of the house where he could not hear what was going on:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence to convict the hotel-keeper of suffering gaming on her premises, and that it was unnecessary to prove an actual knowledge on her part of what was going on. Ib.

Where gaming had taken place upon licensed premises to the knowledge of a servant of the licensed person employed on the premises, but there was no evidence to show any connivance or wilful blindness on the part of the licensed person, and it did not appear that the servant was in charge of the premises:—Held, that the justices were right in refusing to convict the licensed person of suffering gaming on the premises under the Licensing Act, 1872, s. 17. Mullins v. Collins (L. R. 9 Q. B. 292) discussed. Somerset v. Hart, 53 L. J., M. C. 77; 12 Q. B. D. 360; 48 J. P. 327.

Where gaming had taken place upon licensed premises to the knowledge of a servant of the licensed person who was in charge of the premises, but without any knowledge or connivance on the part of the licensed person:—Held, that the licensed person had suffered gaming to be carried on on the premises within the meaning of s. 17 of the Licensing Act, 1872, and was rightly convicted. Somerset v. Hart (12 Q. B. D. 360) distinguished. Bond v. Evans, 57 L. J., M. C. 105; 21 Q. B. D. 249; 59 L. T. 411; 36 W. R. 767; 52 J. P. 612.

By Private Friends.]—A licensed person was after the hours of closing bonâ fide entertaining some private friends at his own expense, and these friends, in his company, were playing cards for money. He was convicted under the Licensing Act, 1872, s. 17, for suffering gaming to be carried on on his premises:—Held, that there was nothing in s. 30 of the Licensing Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 49), which exempts from liability for supplying intoxicating liquors to private friends, to render this conviction unlawful. Hare v. Osborn, 34 L. T. 294.

An innkeeper is guilty of an offence against the tenor of his licence if he allows friends, whom he has invited for the purpose, to play at cards for money in a private room. Patten v. Rhymer, 3 El. & El. 1; 29 L. J., M. C. 189; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1030; 2 L. T. 352; 8 W. R. 496.

Gaming, what is.]—A licensed person suffered to be played on the licensed premises a game called "puff and dart," the object in which is to hit a mark on a target with a small dart blown through a tube. The players each contributed 2*d.* as entrance money, the total sum so contributed being applied to the purchase of a rabbit as a prize for the winner of the game:—Held, that he was rightly convicted of suffering gaming on the licensed premises under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 17, sub-s. 1. Bew v. Harston, 47 L. J., M. C. 121; 3 Q. B. D. 454; 39 L. T. 233; 26 W. R. 915.

Four persons, including a licensed beerseller, played, on the licensed premises, twenty or thirty games at ten-pins for a pint of beer each game, the beer being supplied as it was won or lost, and being drunk by all the players, but paid for only by the losers:—Held, that this was an offence against his licence, which provided that he should not "knowingly suffer any unlawful games or any gaming whatsoever" (in 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, ss. 13 and 21) on the licensed premises, and that he had been rightly convicted. Danford v. Taylor, 20 L. T. 483.

9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 21, provides that an innkeeper shall not "knowingly suffer any unlawful games, or any gaming whatsoever," in his inn. A. was convicted upon an information that he did "knowingly suffer an unlawful game, to wit, the game of dominoes, to be played in his house":—Held, that the information charged no offence within 9 Geo. 4, c. 61. Reg. v. Ashton, 1 El. & Bl. 286; 22 L. J., M. C. 1; 17 Jur. 501.

The appellant, a licensed person, suffered a game of skill called "skittle-pool" to be played for small stakes of money on a billiard table in the licensed premises:—Held, that he could properly be convicted of suffering gaming under the Licensing Act, 1872, s. 17, sub-s. 1. Dyson v. Mason, 58 L. J., M. C. 55; 22 Q. B. D. 351; 60 L. T. 265; 16 Cox, C. C. 575; 53 J. P. 262.

"Opening, Keeping, or Using" Licensed House for Betting—Penalty.]—A licensed victualler is still liable to summary conviction and a penalty of 100*l.* under s. 3 of the Betting Houses Act of 1853, for "opening, keeping, or using his licensed house for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto," notwithstanding that by s. 17 of the Licensing Act, 1872, "any licensed person opening, keeping, or using" his house for the same purpose is liable to a penalty for the first offence of 10*l.*, and for any subsequent offence of 20*l.* together with the liability of having the conviction indorsed upon his licence, there being no implied repeal of s. 3 of the act of 1853 by s. 17 of the act of 1872, but, on the contrary, that section and its penalties being kept in full force and operation by s. 59 of the last-mentioned act. Sims v. Pay, 58 L. J., M. C. 39; 60 L. T. 602; 16 Cox, C. C. 609; 53 J. P. 420.

Suffering House to be used in Contravention of the Betting Houses Act.]—The keeper of a licensed house allowed a person who made bets near it to deposit in the house the stakes received by him; such stakes had been received by him outside the house:—Held, that the licensed person was not liable to be convicted for suffering his house to be used in contravention of the Betting Houses Act (16 & 17 Vict. c. 119). Davis v. Stephenson, 59 L. J., M. C. 73; 24 Q. B. D. 529; 62 L. T. 436; 38 W. R. 492; 17 Cox, C. C. 73; 54 J. P. 565.

5. Permitting Drunkenness.

Scienter.]—A person licensed to sell intoxicating liquors cannot be convicted of "permitting drunkenness" unless he has knowledge of the drunkenness complained of. Somerset v. Wade, 63 L. J., M. C. 126; [1894] 1 Q. B. 574; 10 R. 105; 70 L. T. 452; 42 W. R. 399; 58 J. P. 231.

Person Drunk on his own Premises.]—The term "licensed premises" as used in the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 12, means licensed premises while they are open to the public for the purposes of the licence; consequently, a licensed person who is found drunk on licensed premises in his own occupation, after licensed hours and when the premises are closed to the public, is not liable to a penalty under s. 12. Lester v. Torrens, 46 L. J., M. C. 280; 2 Q. B. D. 403; 25 W. R. 691.

A licensed person cannot be convicted of permitting drunkenness under s. 13 of the Licensing Act, 1872, by reason of getting drunk on his own premises. Warden v. Tye, 46 L. J., M. C. 111; 2 C. P. D. 74; 35 L. T. 852.

Evidence—No evidence of Drink being supplied to Drunken Person.]—To constitute the offence of permitting drunkenness on licensed premises within the meaning of s. 13 of the Licensing Act, 1872, it is unnecessary to prove that the drunken person had been actually served with drink on the premises by the landlord or his servants. Hope v. Warburton, 61 L. J., M. C. 147; [1892] 2 Q. B. 134; 66 L. T. 589; 40 W. R. 510; 56 J. P. 328.

—— Person Drunk away from the House.]—A licensed person may be convicted for permitting drunkenness on his premises upon evidence that a person who had been drinking on such premises was found drunk at some distance from them. Ethelstane v. Oswestry JJ., 33 L. T. 339.

—— Evidence of Sale to Drunken Person.]—A licensed person charged under s. 13 of the Licensing Act, 1872, with the offence of permitting drunkenness to take place on his premises, may be rightly convicted of that offence, although the evidence shews a sale of intoxicating liquor to a drunken person which is also an offence under the same section. Edmunds v. James, 61 L. J., M. C. 56; [1892] 1 Q. B. 18; 65 L. T. 675; 40 W. R. 140; 56 J. P. 40.

Sale of Liquor to Drunken Person.]—A publican was convicted by justices of selling intoxicating liquor to a drunken person, though at the hearing it had been proved that the liquor had been ordered and paid for by the sober companion of such drunken person:—Held, that the conviction was right and must be affirmed. Scatchard v. Johnson, 57 L. J., M. C. 41; 52 J. P. 389.

—— Sale by Barman—Absence of Licensee.]—The intention of s. 13 of the Licensing Act, 1872, is that responsibility should lie upon a licensed person for an act done by an employé within the scope of his employment. Therefore, if a barman employed by a licensed person sells intoxicating liquor to a drunken person, the licensed person is liable to the penalties imposed by the section, even though he is not present at the sale and has instructed the barman to refuse to supply intoxicating liquor to drunken persons. Metropolitan Police Commissioner v. Cartman, 65 L. J., M. C. 113; [1896] 1 Q. B. 655; 74 L. T. 726; 44 W. R. 637; 18 Cox, C. C. 341; 60 J. P. 357.

—— Knowledge of Condition of Customer.]—The Licensing Act, 1872, s. 13, makes it an offence for any licensed person to sell any intoxicating liquor to any drunken person. A publican sold intoxicating liquor to a drunken person who had given no indication of intoxication, and without being aware that the person so served was drunk:—Held, that the prohibition was absolute, and that knowledge of the condition of the person served with liquor was not necessary to constitute the offence. Cundy v. Le Coeq, 53 L. J., M. C. 125; 13 Q. B. D. 207; 51 L. T. 265; 32 W. R. 769; 48 J. P. 599.

Person found Drunk on Licensed Premises—Closing Hours.]—Sect. 12 of the Licensing Act, 1872, which imposes a penalty upon every person found drunk on licensed premises, applies to a person found drunk on licensed premises after closing hours. Reg. v. Pelly, 66 L. J., Q. B. 519; [1897] 2 Q. B. 33; 76 L. T. 467; 45 W. R. 504; 18 Cox, C. C. 556; 61 J. P. 373.

6. Supplying Liquor to Constables.

Act of Servant.]—The servant of a licensed victualler knowingly supplied liquor to a constable on duty, without the authority of his superior officer:—Held, that the licensed victualler was liable to be convicted under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 16, sub-s. 2, although he had no knowledge of the act of his servant. Mullins v. Collins, 43 L. J., M. C. 67; L. R. 9 Q. B. 292; 29 L. T. 838; 22 W. R. 297.

Mens rea.]—In order to convict the licensee of a public-house under sub-s. 2 of s. 16 of the Licensing Act, 1872, for serving a constable with liquor or refreshment while on duty, mens rea, or knowledge on the part of the defendant that the constable was on duty must be proved. Sherras v. De Rutzen, 64 L. J., M. C. 218; [1895] 1 Q. B. 918; 15 R. 388; 72 L. T. 839; 43 W. R. 526; 59 J. P. 440.

7. Selling Liquor to be Drunk on the Premises.

On the Premises, what is.]—A person who had a licence to sell beer not to be drunk on the premises delivered beer to a customer through a window which opened on a highway, who then sat down on the window sill and drank it:—Held, not a selling of beer to be drunk on the premises, within 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 13, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 4. Deal v. Schofield, 8 B. & S. 760; 37 L. J., M. C. 15; L. R. 3 Q. B. 8; 17 L. T. 143; 16 W. R. 77.

A person licensed to sell beer by retail, to be drunk or consumed off the premises, supplied a pint of beer to a traveller who sat upon a bench placed and fastened against the wall of the house, returning the mug in which he was served:—Held, that the beershop keeper was properly convicted of the offence of selling beer to be drunk on the premises, within 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 17. Cross v. Watts, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 239; 32 L. J., M. C. 73; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 776; 7 L. T. 463; 11 W. R. 210.

A person licensed to sell beer not to be drunk on the premises, sold beer to Y., who brought a jug for it and carried it across the highway to the cottage of S., about fourteen yards from the publican's premises, and handed the jug to S., who was standing in his own garden. S., having drunk some of the beer, returned the jug over the wall to Y. and others, who also drank of it standing on the pathway close to the wall. The jug was refilled two or three times, and the beer drunk in the same way. The publican received the money for the beer on each occasion, and saw or might have seen what was going on:—Held, that this evidence did not justify a conviction of the publican under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 5, for permitting drinking "on the premises where the beer was sold, or on any highway adjoining or near such premises, with the privity or consent of the seller." Bath v. White, 3 C. P. D. 175; 26 W. R. 617.

8. Selling during Prohibited Hours.

Applicable to what Houses.]—By the Licensing Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 49), s. 3, "All premises in which intoxicating liquors are sold by retail" are to be closed during certain hours:—Held, that this enactment was not confined to premises licensed by the justices to sell intoxicating liquors, but included premises in which intoxicating liquors were sold in pursuance of an excise licence granted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 21. Martin v. Barker, 50 L. J., M. C. 109; 45 L. T. 214; 29 W. R. 789; 45 J. P. 749.

Wholesale Dealer.] — Wholesale dealers in beer are not liable to the penalties in the licensing acts for selling four and a half gallon casks of beer and upwards in prohibited hours, being expressly exempted by s. 72 of the Licensing Act, 1872. Reg. v. Jenkins, 61 L. J., M. C. 57; 65 L. T. 857; 40 W. R. 318; 55 J. P. 824.

Hours of Closing.]—A place to be within s. 15 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, must be a place of the same kind as those mentioned before it, and a mere aggregation of houses, though separate from other houses, and known by a distinct name, is not such a place, within the statute. Scott v. Washington, 13 W. R. 939.

A beerhouse situated in a collection of houses which had acquired the name of Bradley Green, which does not contain a population exceeding 2,500, though part of a parish which has a population exceeding that number, may be kept open until eleven o'clock at night. Washington v. Scott, 6 B. & S. 617.

A beerhouse was situated in a hamlet maintaining its own poor, the population of which did not exceed 2,500, but the hamlet was part of a parish the population of which exceeded that number:—Held, that if the house was in a place which had not the required population, it was also in a parish which had the required population, within 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 15, and therefore might be kept open until eleven o'clock at night. Smith v. Redding, 6 B. & S. 617; 35 L. J., M. C. 202; L. R. 1 Q. B. 489; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 618; 14 L. T. 358.

A house in a hamlet which is more than one mile distant from the spot used as a polling-place for the parliamentary borough, though within one mile from the boundary of the borough, is not privileged to be kept open until eleven o'clock at night. Ib.

A beerhouse was situated in a parish partly within a borough and partly in a county; the population of the parish exceeded 2,500, but the population of that part of the parish which was out of the borough, and in which the house was situated, was less than 2,500. The amount of poor-rate assessed on property within the borough was more in the pound than that assessed on property out of the borough:—Held, that the house might be kept open until eleven o'clock at night. Windsor v. Jeffery, 6 B. & S. 617.

Teignmouth is divided into two parishes, viz. East Teignmouth and West Teignmouth. The former contains less than 2,500 inhabitants: but the two together contain more than that number:—Held, that Teignmouth was a place in which a beershop might lawfully be kept open until eleven p.m., under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 15 (repealed), and therefore that a beerhouse-keeper whose house was situate in East Teignmouth, was not liable to be convicted under that section for keeping it open after 10 p.m. Rice v. Slee, L. R. 7 C. P. 378.

—— Order for "Particular Locality"—Validity.]—Under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 35, eleven o'clock at night is the hour appointed for closing public-houses in Scotland, although in special cases, and for well-considered reasons, a deviation is allowed with reference to any "particular locality" requiring it. An order by the magistrates of Rothesay for closing at ten, instead of eleven, though limited by its words to a "particular locality," embraced every public-house in the burgh:—Held, that the order was ultra vires. Macbeth v. Ashley, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 352; 30 L. T. 310.

Grocer's and Draper's Shop joined—Draper's Open after Hours.]—A person being licensed to sell by retail intoxicating liquors to be consumed off his premises, was charged with keeping open his premises for the sale of such liquors after ten o'clock at night. He had two shops, a grocer's and a draper's shop, which formed part of his house, and both shops could be entered from the house at the back, as well as by the customers' entrance. The grocery business was carried on in a shop which had an entrance for customers in one street, and the drapery business in a shop which had an entrance for customers in another street. During the day there were means of going, and customers occasionally passed from one shop to the other, but after ten o'clock shutters or partitions were put up, and all means of communication, except through the house, prevented. The draper's shop was kept open till after ten o'clock at night; but before ten o'clock the openings between the two shops were shut, and the grocer's shop left in darkness. The justices held the charge proved, and convicted him:—Held, that the conviction was wrong, as there was no evidence that the house was open for the sale of liquor after ten o'clock. Brigden v. Heighes, 45 L. J., M. C. 58; 1 Q. B. D. 330; 34 L. T. 242; 24 W. R. 272.

The occupier of a draper's and grocer's shop, who is licensed to sell in the same shop wines and spirits not to be consumed on the premises, cannot be convicted under the Licensing Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 49), ss. 3, 9, for keeping open premises for the sale of intoxicating liquors after prohibited hours, upon mere proof that the shop is kept open after the prohibited hours, without any sale or exposure for sale of intoxicating liquor. Tassell v. Ovenden, 46 L. J., M. C. 228; 2 Q. B. D. 383; 36 L. T. 696; 25 W. R. 692.

T. was charged, under 37 & 38 Vict. c. 49, ss. 3, 9, with keeping open premises (elsewhere than in the metropolitan district) for the sale of intoxicating liquors by retail after ten o'clock in the evening. He occupied a shop where he sold drapery, grocery, and wines and spirits not to be consumed on the premises. One evening, after ten o'clock, his shop was found open. There was no proof of any sale or exposure for sale of intoxicating liquors after ten o'clock, nor that liquors were then kept in any other place in the shop, except in a large wooden case closed with shutters and a lock, which was standing in the shop with a printed notice on it, informing customers that wines and spirits could not be supplied after ten o'clock in the evening:—Held, that he was not liable, for it must be taken that the premises, as regarded the sale of intoxicating liquors, were bonâ fide closed at ten o'clock. Ib.

Theatre.]—The exemption in favour of theatre proprietors in s. 72 of the Licensing Act, 1872, does not relieve the proprietor of a theatre from complying with the provisions of the licensing acts as to closing hours; and where a theatre bar is kept open for the sale of intoxicating liquors during the time at which licensed premises are directed to be closed, the proprietor is liable to be convicted under s. 9 of the Licensing Act, 1874. Gallagher v. Rudd, 67 L. J., Q. B. 65; [1898] 1 Q. B. 114; 77 L. T. 367; 46 W. R. 108; 61 J. P. 789.

Keeping open Billiard Table after Closing of Premises—Beerhouse.]—A beerhouse keeper who has obtained a licence to keep a billiard table, and allows billiards to be played after the closing hour for the beerhouse, is not liable to the penalty in 8 & 9 Vict. c. 103, s. 13, which applies only to victuallers licensed under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61. Bent v. Lister, 52 J. P. 389.

Public Billiard Table used by Lodgers after Hours.]—By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 13, the holder of a victualler's licence, who keeps a public billiard table, and allows persons to play thereon when the premises are not allowed to be open for the sale of wines, &c., is liable to a certain penalty. By 37 & 38 Vict. c. 49, s. 10, a person licensed to sell any intoxicating liquor, to be consumed on the premises, may sell such liquor at any time to persons lodging in his house. A man held a victualler's licence for a certain house at H. The closing hour at H. on week-days is eleven p.m., and after that time two gentlemen, lodgers in the house, were found playing billiards. The justices thought that 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 13, absolutely prohibited all persons without exception from playing at a public billiard table during closing hours, and that such prohibition was not affected by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 49, s. 10. Accordingly, he was convicted:—Held, that the conviction was right. Ovenden v. Raymond, 34 L. T. 698.

Evidence as to Sale.]—A. went to a beer-house; the door was shut; the landlady said she could not draw, it was past the hour, but she said she would give A. a drop of beer, which she did. She refused money, but said, "You may send me some greens," which was done:—Held, that there was no evidence to justify a conviction for selling beer after the hours prescribed by the act for closing. Petherick v. Sargent, 6 L. T. 48.

Persons Privileged—Friends.]—A licensed victualler, entertaining his friends in his house, is not liable to the penalty because he has given them refreshment during the prohibited hours. Overton v. Hunter, 1 L. T. 366.

Bonâ fide Traveller.]—The holder of a licence invited a friend who lived seven miles away to sing at a concert at his house. Before returning home the friend purchased spirits from the licence-holder, it being after closing hours:—Held, that the friend was a bonâ fide traveller. Dames v. Bond, 55 J. P. 503.

Lodger.]—By the Licensing Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 49), s. 9, "Any person who during the time at which premises for the sale of intoxicating liquors are directed to be closed . . . sells . . . any intoxicating liquor . . . or allows any intoxicating liquors although purchased before the hours of closing to be consumed in such premises," is liable to a penalty. By s. 10 "nothing in this act . . . contained shall preclude a person licensed to sell any intoxicating liquor to be consumed on the premises, from selling such liquor at any time to bonâ fide travellers or to persons lodging in his house." The appellant, a licensed innkeeper, sold and supplied to a bonâ fide lodger in his house intoxicating liquors which were consumed, during the time at which the premises are directed to be closed, in a private room on the premises by the lodger and bonâ fide guests of the lodger after a dinner given by him to them:—Held, that the appellant was not liable to be convicted under s. 9 of the act. Pine v. Barnes, 57 L. J., M. C. 28; 20 Q. B. D. 221; 58 L. T. 520; 36 W. R. 473; 52 J. P. 199.

Nature of Liquors Sold.]—Upon an information before justices, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 49, for the sale of British wine within the prohibited hours, it was proved by a practical chemist that the liquor sold contained a large proportion of alcohol, and the justices found that it was wine within the meaning of the statute:—Held, that their conclusion was warranted by the evidence. Harris v. Jenns, 30 L. J., M. C. 183; 9 C. B. (N.S.) 152; 3 L. T. 408; 9 W. R. 36.

Application of Act to current as well as future Licences.]—A person was convicted by justices under the Licensing Act, 1872, s. 24, for unlawfully allowing beer to be consumed on his premises at the hour of two in the morning of the 18th September, 1872. The Licensing Act, 1872, came into operation on the 10th August, 1872, but he held a licence authorising him to sell by retail excisable liquors, without limitation of hours except on Sundays, which was expressed to continue in force until the 10th October, 1872:—Held, that the Licensing Act applied to current licences from the passing of the act, as well as to future licences. Jones v. Cooper, 28 L. T. 496; 21 W. R. 732.

9. Being on Premises during Prohibited Hours.

Guests invited to Remain as Friends.]—P. gave a dinner to some friends at a licensed house kept by L. On the breaking up of P.'s party, L. invited nine of P.'s guests, including the appellant, to remain after the hour for closing, to partake of two bottles of claret at his, L.'s, expense. Upon an information charging these nine persons with being found on the premises during prohibited hours, the justices, though satisfied of the bona fides of the transaction, convicted them under s. 25 of the Licensing Act, 1872, on the ground that the landlord, on the arrival of the hour for closing, could not convert them into "private friends," for the purpose of their consuming the wine so supplied to them by him:—Held, that the conviction was right. Corbett v. Haigh, 5 C. P. D. 50; 42 L. T. 185; 28 W. R. 430; 44 J. P. 39.

Private Friend Playing Cards for Money.]—A private friend of a licensed person bonâ fide entertained by him after the hours of closing at his own expense within the Licensing Act, 1874, s. 30, was playing cards for money on the licensed premises, and was convicted under the Licensing Act, 1872, s. 25, of being on the said premises during the period they were required to be closed:—Held, that the appellant was not on the premises in contravention of the provisions of the licensing acts with respect to the closing of licensed premises, and that the conviction must be quashed. Cooper v. Osborne, 35 L. T. 347.

Evidence of Offence.]—P. was charged under s. 25 of the Licensing Act, 1872, with being unlawfully found on premises in closing hours. P. was seen to go into the premises, and in three minutes to come out again with a bottle of gin. The justices refused to convict P., because he was not "found on the premises":—Held, the justices were wrong, as the facts proved were equivalent to P. being found, or ascertained to be, actually on the premises. Thomas v. Powell, 57 J. P. 329.

10. Selling on Sundays.

General Rule.]—The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 49, is not repealed by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 79, or by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 118, and it is, therefore, an offence to open a public-house on Sunday for the sale of beer therein to persons not being travellers, before half-past twelve o'clock in the afternoon. Reg. v. Senior, 1 L. & C. 401; 33 L. J., M. C. 125; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 547; 10 L. T. 428; 12 W. R. 749; 9 Cox, C. C. 469.

The 18 & 19 Vict. c. 118, applies only to the afternoon service. Harris v. Jenns, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 152; 30 L. J., M. C. 183; 3 L. T. 408; 9 W. R. 36.

Divine service on Sundays was celebrated in a parish church, commencing at six p.m., and terminating about eight p.m. The only other service in the church on Sundays was in the morning:—Held, that the words "usual hours of afternoon divine service," referred to the usual hours for the celebration of divine service in the afternoon as commonly understood, and therefore that a publican was not liable to a penalty for an offence against the tenor of his licence in keeping his house open between the hours of six and eight p.m., service performed during those hours being evening service, and not afternoon service. Reg. v. Buckinghamshire JJ., or Reg. v. Knapp, 2 El. & Bl. 447; 1 C. L. R. 443; 22 L. J., M. C. 139; 17 Jur. 530; 1 W. R. 385.

The proviso in 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, is repealed by the subsequent statutes on the subject; and the act in force is 18 & 19 Vict. c. 118, which permits innkeepers to sell excisable liquors at all hours on the afternoon of Sunday, Christmas Day, or Good Friday, except from between the hours of three and five, and after eleven p.m. Whitely v. Heaton, 3 H. & N. 143; 27 L. J., M. C. 217; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 120; 6 W. R. 419.

Sunday—Meaning of.]—By s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 49), "All premises in which intoxicating liquors are sold by retail, wherever situate, shall be closed on Christmas Day and Good Friday, as if Christmas Day and Good Friday were respectively Sunday. By s. 1 of the Sunday Closing (Wales) Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 61), all such premises are to be closed "during the whole of Sunday":—Held, that the word "Sunday" in the Welsh Act has only its ordinary meaning, and that a conviction under that act for unlawfully keeping open premises for the sale of intoxicating liquors on Christmas Day was bad. Forsdike v. Colquhoun, 11 Q. B. D. 71; 49 L. T. 136; 47 J. P. 393.

During Prohibited Hours—Evidence.]—Upon an information against a beerhouse-keeper for opening his house for the sale of beer before half-past twelve on a Sunday, it was proved by a witness that he went to the house on a Sunday at thirty-five minutes after eleven o'clock in the forenoon, and found the door closed, and having knocked he was admitted; that he saw the defendant in the house, and went into the front parlour and found two persons there, who were lodgers; that he went into the back parlour, in which there was a great deal of tobacco smoke, and the tables in the room were wet; that he went thence immediately into the yard of the house, in which there are two privies, forming part of the premises; that the door of one of the privies was open and the door of the other was shut; that it was endeavoured to be closed against him, but he forced it open, and found two persons in the privy, both of whom were men of the town, living close by; that one of these men had a pot in his hand which had beer in it with fresh froth on it, and that this man tried to make away with the pot and prevent its being seen, by putting it down the seat of the privy:—Held, sufficient evidence to support a conviction. Finch v. Blundell, 5 L. T. 672.

At twenty minutes before one o'clock a.m. on Sunday morning, the outer entrance-door of an alehouse was wide open, the bar, taproom and parlour were likewise open, and in them were several men and women, some of whom were residents in the parish; a man and three women had a pint cup three-fourths full of beer before them, and the landlady was collecting the drinking-cans. There was no evidence as to the actual selling of beer after twelve o'clock on Saturday night:—Held, that there was some evidence to justify a conviction for keeping the house open for the sale of beer before half-past twelve p.m. on Sundays. Smith v. Vaux, 6 L. T. 46.

The evidence in support of an information against a beerhouse-keeper for opening his shop on Sunday for the sale of beer before half-past twelve p.m. was, that a little after midnight on Saturday, the door of the house was closed, and all appeared quiet; that a little after two on the Sunday morning, persons looking through the window saw a man drinking with the publican in the house, and that afterwards he let the man out:—Held, that this constituted no evidence of the offence charged, inasmuch as it did not appear but that the man was let into the house on the Saturday, or that the house was open at all on the Sunday before he was let out. Tennant v. Cumberland, 1 El. & El. 401; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 763; 7 W. R. 161.

On an information for opening a public-house for the sale of spirits before half-past twelve p.m. on Sunday, it appeared that the front door was open at twenty-two minutes past twelve on Sunday morning, and a policeman found in the commercial room four persons, one of whom was a traveller; there was a small quantity of spirits and water in a glass, from which one of the persons had been drinking. The landlady was sitting in the parlour. No spirits had been sold after twenty minutes before twelve o'clock on Saturday night:—Held, that there was no proof that the house was open for the sale of beer, &c., before half-past twelve on Sunday afternoon within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 49, and that the facts did not warrantia conviction. Cates v. South, 1 L. T. 365.

Refreshment House.]—A licensed refreshment-house keeper, although he does not hold a wine licence, may not sell articles for consumption off the premises on Sundays. Duffell v. Curtis, 35 L. T. 853.

Refreshment Houses in Wales—Sunday Closing.]—The hours at which refreshment houses in Wales must be closed are regulated by the Licensing Act, 1874, s. 11. The Sunday Closing (Wales) Act, 1881, s. 1, does not apply to such houses. Berni v. Thorney, 64 L. J., M. C. 271; 72 L. T. 630; 43 W. R. 411.

Sunday Closing (Ireland) Act—Boundary of excepted City.]—A public-house situate within the parliamentary boundary of the city of Cork, but outside the municipal boundary of the city, does not come within the exception contained in s. 1 of the Sale of Liquors on Sunday (Ireland) Act, 1878, excepting Cork and certain other cities from the operation of the act, and it is therefore an offence against the act to sell liquors on Sunday in such public-house. Knox v. Kidney, 4 L. R., Ir. 597.

Bonâ fide Traveller—Who is.]—To constitute a traveller, within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 118, s. 2, it is not necessary that the party should be journeying on business. Atkinson v. Sellers, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 442; 28 L. J., M. C. 12; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 21.

A man who goes to a place a short distance from his home, for the mere purpose of taking refreshment, is not a traveller; but one who goes to an inn for refreshment in the course of a journey, whether of business or of pleasure, and whether on foot or otherwise, is a traveller. Taylor v. Humphreys, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 429; 30 L. J., M. C. 242; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1288; 4 L. T. 514; 9 W. R. 705.

A person is a traveller if he is out in the pursuit of health or pleasure, but not if he goes abroad for the purpose of going to a public-house; and if the publican has reason to believe, when he supplies refreshment, that he is supplying a traveller, he ought not to be convicted. Taylor v. Humphreys, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 539; 34 L. J., M. C. 1; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1153; 11 L. T. 376; 13 W. R. 136.

A person who has taken a ticket for a journey by railway at the usual time before the starting of the train, is a traveller within the meaning of the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 42. Fisher v. Howard, 34 L. J., M. C. 42; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 304; 11 L. T. 373; 13 W. R. 145; 10 Cox, C. C. 144.

A. went to the Victoria Station, Pimlico, on a Sunday, and obtained a ticket to proceed by a train which was to leave the station at ten minutes before one o'clock p.m. At twenty minutes before one o'clock the refreshment-room at the station was open, and thereupon A., went in, and was served with some fermented liquor:—Held, that he was a traveller, and that no penalty was incurred. Ib.

Persons arriving by train at the railway station distant a mile from the town in which they reside, and persons resident in the town who go to the station for the purpose of meeting a train, are travellers within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 49, s. 1. Peache v. Colman, 1 H. & R. 393; 35 L. J., M. C. 118; L. R. 1 C. P. 324; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 273; 14 W. R. 439.

If a licensed victualler in a rural district opens his house on a Sunday before 12.30 p.m. for the purpose of supplying travellers with refreshments, and receives persons who live in the neighbourhood, he is not liable to be convicted of opening his house for the sale of wine, spirits, and other fermented liquors, unless it is shewn that the persons living in the neighbourhood were supplied with refreshments to his knowledge. Ib.

C. was charged before justices with having opened his house for the sale of wine and beer on Sundays, before half-past twelve. He kept a refreshment-room communicating with a railway station; he had a notice thereon as to the penalties incurred in case of persons not travellers having refreshment during prohibited hours; he had ordered his servants to ask persons if they were going by train; eight persons were in the room within the prohibited time; he had questioned six of them, but his servant neglected to question two who came in during his absence; of the eight persons, four were strangers who went off by train which started shortly after their entering the room; the others resided about a quarter or half a mile off, and three of them took tickets and went by the train, whilst the fourth had accompanied his son who went by it. The justices convicted:—Held, that the conviction was wrong. Copley v. Burton, 39 L. J., M. C. 141; L. R. 5 C. P. 489; 22 L. T. 888.

A. walked on a Sunday to a spa two and a half miles distant from his residence for the purpose of drinking the mineral waters there for the sake of his health, and was supplied with ale at an hotel at the spa before half-past twelve o'clock in the afternoon :—Held, that A. was a traveller within the exception in s. 1 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 49. Peplow v. Richardson, L. R. 4 C. P. 168 ; 17 W. R. 410.

The appellants arrived at the town of M. on a Sunday morning during closing hours, having driven from a town twenty miles distant. They went to a public-house and dined there. Some hours afterwards they entered another public-house in the same town during closing hours and were supplied with refreshments there. The appellants having been convicted under s. 25 of the Licensing Act, 1872, of being found on the latter premises during closing hours :—Held, that they were "bonâ fide travellers" within the meaning of s. 25 when they entered the second public-house, notwithstanding that they had already been served as such at the first house, and that the conviction must therefore be quashed. Oldham v. Sheasby, 60 L. J., M. C. 81 ; 55 J. P. 214.

A man left his home on a Sunday morning and walked three-quarters of a mile to a railway station, and thence took the train to another station about two and a half miles off, where he was employed as a porter. He afterwards left the station and walked to certain licensed premises, where he was served with beer. The licensed premises were less than a mile from the station where he was employed, but more than three miles from his residence :—Held, that he was a bonâ fide traveller within s. 10 of the Licensing Act, 1874. Cowap v. Atherton, [1893] 1 Q. B. 49 ; 5 R. 86 ; 68 L. T. 88 ; 41 W. R. 158 ; 57 J. P. 8.

A bonâ fide traveller is one who travels three miles for business or pleasure, and does not, therefore, include a person who travels that distance with the object of obtaining drink. Penn v. Alexander, 62 L. J., M. C. 65 ; [1893] 1 Q. B. 522 ; 5 R. 251 ; 68 L. T. 355 ; 41 W. R. 392 ; 17 Cox, C. C. 615 ; 57 J. P. 118. S. P., Parker v. Reg., [1896] 2 Ir. R. 404.

—— Onus of Proof.]—The burden of proving that a person is not a traveller is on the informer, Taylor v. Humphreys, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 539 ; 34 L. J., M. C. 1 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1153 ; 11 L. T. 376 ; 13 W. R. 136.

The law that upon an information against a beerhouse-keeper for opening his house on Sunday for the sale of beer within the hours prohibited by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 49, s. 1, except as refreshment for travellers, the burden of proving that persons drinking in the house are not travellers, is upon the informer,—is unaffected by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27. Morgan v. Hedger, 40 L. J., M. C. 13 ; L. R. 5 C. P. 485.

Upon a complaint against a keeper of an ale-house under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 42, for keeping his house open for the sale of wine, spirits, &c., "before one o'clock on Sunday afternoon, the same not being for the refreshment of travellers" : —Held, that, notwithstanding s. 14 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, the complainant was bound to prove affirmatively that the persons supplied were not travellers. Davis v. Scrase, 38 L. J., M. C. 79 ; L. R. 4 C. P. 172 ; 19 L. T. 789 ; 17 W. R. 411.

An information was laid under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 49, s. 1, against a licensed beerhouse-keeper, that he, on a Sunday, did open his house for the sale of beer before half-past twelve p.m., the same not being as refreshments for travellers. On appeal against a conviction on this information :—Held, that it was not necessary, especially since 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 14, to give evidence negativing the exemption as to travellers, introduced in s. 1 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 49, and negatived on the face of the information, but that it lay upon the defendant to bring himself within the exemption. Tennant v. Cumberland, 1 El. & El. 401 ; 7 W. R. 601.

If a person licensed to sell intoxicating liquors on his premises supplies persons within the hours prohibited by the Licensing Act, s. 24 (repealed), the onus lies upon him of shewing that the persons so supplied are bonâ fide travellers. Roberts v. Humphreys, 42 L. J., M. C. 147 ; L. R. 8 Q. B. 483 ; 29 L. T. 387 ; 21 W. R. 885. See now s. 10 of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 49.

—— Sale of Liquor to be Consumed off the Premises.]—A licensed person is not entitled, under s. 10 of the Licensing Act, 1874, to sell intoxicating liquor during prohibited hours to a bonâ fide traveller to be consumed off the licensed premises. Mountifield v. Ward, 66 L. J., Q. B. 246 ; [1897] 1 Q. B. 326 ; 76 L. T. 202 ; 45 W. R. 288 ; 18 Cox, C. C. 515 ; 61 J. P. 216.

Evidence to Support Conviction.]—A policeman found some excursionists and some persons living about a mile off in an hotel during the forbidden hours on Sunday. The manager of the hotel stated that he knew they were all excursionists, to his knowledge no one was served with refreshments who had not a ticket, and he asked all if they had tickets. Upon the policeman naming one of the persons before whom some drink was standing, that person said he was not an excursionist, but, seeing the door was open, he thought it no harm having a glass of ale :—Held, that a conviction of the innkeeper under the Licensing Act, 1872, was justified by this evidence. Watt v. Glenister, 32 L. T. 856.

—— Scienter and Belief.]—A public-house keeper being summoned at petty sessions for keeping his premises open on Sunday for the sale of intoxicating liquor, the magistrates, after stating in open court that they found on the evidence that persons supplied with drink at the premises on the occasion in question were not bonâ fide travellers, convicted the defendant. The conviction did not upon its face negative the existence of a belief by the defendant that the purchasers were bonâ fide travellers, nor the taking by him of reasonable precautions to ascertain whether they were so ; and it appeared by affidavit that the magistrates, though required by the defendant to find these questions, refused to give any further reasons for their decision ; but that they had, in fact, unanimously decided both points against the defendant before making their decision in the case. Upon motion for a certiorari, held, that the conviction should stand. Reg. v. Dublin JJ., 8 L. R., Ir. 274.

Calculation of Distances—Public Thoroughfare, what is.]—In calculating the distance from one place to another by the nearest public thoroughfare, for the purpose of determining whether the definition of a bonâ fide traveller in 37 & 38 Vict. c. 40, the Licensing Act, 1874, s. 10, is satisfied, it is proper to measure it across a navigable estuary where there is a public ferry which can be used by any person on payment of a toll. Coulbert v. Troke, 45 L. J., M. C. 7; 1 Q. B. D. 1; 33 L. T. 340; 24 W. R. 41.

By 37 & 38 Vict. c. 49, s. 10, a person shall not be deemed a bonâ fide traveller unless the place where he lodged the preceding night is at least three miles from the place where he demands to be supplied with liquor, such distance to be calculated by the nearest public thoroughfare. C.'s licensed house was on the opposite shore of the Southampton Water from the town, and was distant from the town by water over a mile, and by the nearest road eight miles. There is an ancient ferry from the town appurtenant to the house, and a toll is also paid to him by all persons landing from boats not belonging to him. The persons supplied with refreshment had lodged the night before in the town, and had crossed the water in their own boats:—Held, that the Southampton water was a public thoroughfare within s. 10; and a conviction that C. had supplied refreshments at prohibited hours to persons not being bonâ fide travellers was right. Ib.

A navigable arm of the sea, though not crossed by a ferry, is a public thoroughfare within the meaning of s. 28 of the Licensing (Ireland) Act, 1874 (which corresponds to s. 10 of the English Licensing Act, 1874). Parker v. Reg., [1896] 2 Ir. R. 404.

11. Selling at Unlicensed Place.

Sale at Customer's Premises.]—P. held a license for the sale of beer by retail at 11, Stanley Street, Burnley, such beer to be consumed off the premises. A person in his employ was in the habit of calling on a customer for orders, and delivered the beer ordered by the customer the week following that in which the order was given. The beer was delivered in a jar, and paid for by the customer at her house. There was no mark on the jar to distinguish it from those ordered by other customers:—Held, that this was a sale off the licensed premises, and that P. had committed an offence within s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872. Stretch v. White (25 J. P. 485) dissented from. Pletts v. Campbell, 64 L. J., M. C. 225; [1895] 2 Q. B. 229; 15 R. 493; 73 L. T. 344; 43 W. R. 634; 59 J. P. 502.

The appellant held a licence, under the Beer-house Act, 1830, and the acts amending the same, for the sale of beer by retail at B., to be consumed off the premises. N., a customer of the appellant, residing at A., signed a postcard at A., addressed to the appellant at B., and the postcard was posted at A. The postcard contained an order for six pints of ale, and also contained the words, "I assent to the appropriation by you to this order at your brewery of goods of the above description, and in a deliverable state." One of the appellant's travellers filled up his cart with goods in execution of orders from A., amongst which was a coop or box containing six bottles of ale for N. and six bottles of beer for another customer. One only of the six bottles for N. had a written label on it containing the words, "Mr. N., H. Street, six pints of ale," but the other five bottles were placed near the one which was labelled. Of the six bottles for the other customer one only was labelled for him. The six bottles for N. were delivered to and paid for by him at A. Upon an information against the appellant, under s. 3 of the Licensing Act, 1872, for selling beer at A., where he was not authorised to sell the same, the justices convicted the appellant:—Held, that the sale took place at B., and that the conviction must therefore be quashed. Pletts v. Campbell (supra), distinguished, Pletts v. Beattie, 65 L. J., M. C. 86; [1896] 1 Q. B. 519; 74 L. T. 148; 18 Cox, C. C. 264; 60 J. P. 185.

Husband of Licensed Person taking Spirits to Unlicensed House to be Raffled for.]—The appellant, Mrs. S., a married woman, who had a licence to sell intoxicating liquor, was convicted under the 3rd section of the Licensing Act, 1872, of selling intoxicating liquor at a place where she was not authorised by her licence to sell the same. The husband of the appellant was about to be called as a witness for the respondent, but it was objected that he was not a competent, or if competent, not a compellable witness, and the objection was allowed. Evidence, however, was given by a constable of a statement made to him by the husband, in the wife's presence, to the effect that, "on the 24th December, 1883, he took spirits from the licensed house of the appellant to the house of one B.; the drink was then raffled for, and he was present during the raffle; the money was put in a basin on the table, and it was afterwards brought to the inn and put on a table there; one or other of them, the landlady or the husband himself, took it from the table; during the time of the raffle he took some spirits up to B.'s house; he took it all." Other witnesses proved that the liquor brought from the appellant's house by her husband was raffled for at B.'s house, the husband himself being present at the time. The justices convicted the appellant of selling the liquor at B.'s house:—Held, that what took place at B.'s house was a transaction in the nature of a sale within the meaning of s. 62 of the act, and, that, as the appellant was a competent witness, and did not contradict the statement made by her husband, there was sufficient evidence to support the conviction. Seager v. White, 51 L. T. 261; 48 J. P. 436.

See Sale without Licence, B. 2, supra, col. 401.

12. Other Offences.

Fraudulent Agreements.]—The carrying on by A. of the business of retailing beer in a public-house in the name and by the agency of B., the person licensed by the magistrates, is not a fraud on the licensing system. Brooker v. Wood, 3 N. & M. 96; 5 B. & Ad. 1052; 3 L. J., K. B. 96.

An agreement entered into for the purpose of enabling a person to sell beer and spirits without a licence is illegal, a licence being required for the protection of public morals. Ritchie v. Smith, 6 C. B. 462; 18 L. J., C. P. 9; 13 Jur. 63.

Against Police Regulations—Form of Conviction.]—By 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 2, every person applying for a licence to sell beer or cider by retail to be drunk on the premises must annually deposit with the excise a certificate of good character, signed by six householders. By s. 8, a penalty is imposed upon summary conviction on any person who shall in such certificate certify any matter as true, knowing the same to be false. Other sections impose a duty on excise licences for selling beer, and relate to the revenue of the excise. By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 17, summary convictions may be drawn up in a short form. But, by s. 35, nothing in the act shall extend to any proceedings under or by virtue of any of the statutes relating to the revenue of excise. A conviction under s. 8 of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, for an offence against s. 2 was drawn up in the form given by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43 :—Held, that the conviction, which was for an offence against a police regulation in s. 2, was sufficient, although there were in the statute other sections relating to the revenue of excise. Reg. v. Bakewell, 7 El. & Bl. 848 ; 26 L. J., M. C. 150 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1003 ; 5 W. R. 655.

Refusing to Admit a Constable.]—A. was licensed to sell beer, to be consumed in his dwelling-house, and in the premises thereunto belonging. Next to his house was a yard, and at one side of the yard, adjoining to, but not under the same roof, was an outhouse used as a cellar. He refused to admit a constable into his outhouse when required to do so :—Held, that an offence had been committed under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 7. Reg. v. Tott, 30 L. J., M. C. 177 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 630 ; 4 L. T. 306 ; 9 W. R. 663.

Held, also, that the penalty for a second offence is suspension of the licence, and that a pecuniary fine cannot be added. Ib.

—— Excise Licences only.]—The respondent, being a person duly licensed as a dealer in spirits in England under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 114, s. 195, and holding an additional excise licence authorising him to sell by retail, in any quantity not less than one reputed quart bottle, at a shop, spirits not to be drunk or consumed on the premises, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 21, s. 2, refused to admit the respondent, a constable, who demanded to enter the appellant's premises in pursuance of s. 16 of the Licensing Act, 1874. Upon complaint by the appellant, justices refused to convict the respondent :—Held, upon a case stated, that s. 16 of the act of 1874 applies only to premises in respect of which a licence, as defined by the Licensing Act, 1872, s. 74, has been granted and s in force, and not to the respondent's premises, which were required to be licensed by the excise only, and that the justices were right. Harrison v. McL'Meel, 50 L. T. 210 ; 48 J. P. 469.

Not admitting Police—Wife's authority.]—C., a licensed publican, was summoned for unlawfully refusing to admit a constable contrary to s. 16 of the Licensing Act, 1874. The constable had been in the house twenty minutes previously, but, hearing a noise, desired to enter again. C.'s wife was standing at the door, and being irritated, told the constable he should not go in till he had heard her opinion of him. The constable then went in and found C. serving customers, and made no complaint of the refusal. C.'s wife had no general authority to manage the house, and was never told by C. not to admit a constable :—Held, that C.'s conviction could not be sustained, there being no evidence that he or any manager of his had refused admission. Caswell v. Hundred House JJ., 54 J. P. 87.

—— Intention of Constable.]—S., a police constable, within the hours of closing on Sunday, knocked at the door of a public-house, and demanded entry, the sole reason given being that he wanted to visit the house. He was told there was no one inside and the door being locked he was refused entry. In point of fact the constable's object was to inspect all the licensed houses to prevent or detect offences, but he had no special ground of suspicion :—Held, that the conviction could not be set aside if the justices were satisfied as to the bonâ fide intention of the constable to prevent violation of the act. Reg. v. Dobbins, 48 J. P. 182.

A police constable is not entitled, under s. 16 of the Licensing Act, 1874, to demand admittance to a private room on licensed premises merely upon the ground that he desires to prevent or detect any violation of the provisions of the Licensing Acts, 1872 and 1874. In order to support a conviction of a licensed person for refusing to admit a constable to such a room, there must be some evidence affording a reasonable ground for supposing that a breach of the law is taking place or is about to take place there. Duncan v. Dowding, 66 L. J., Q. B. 362 ; [1897] 1 Q. B. 575 ; 76 L. T. 294 ; 45 W. R. 383 ; 18 Cox, C. C. 527 ; 61 J. P. 280.

Sale of Liquors in Unmarked Measure.]—By the Licensing Act, 1872, s. 8, all intoxicating liquor which is sold by retail, and not in cask or bottle, and is not sold in a quantity less than half a pint, is to be sold in measures marked according to the imperial standards. A publican, being asked for a pint of beer by a customer, went into an inner room, where he drew the beer into a marked measure and poured it into a jug, which he then brought into the room where the customer was sitting and handed to him. The customer could not see the beer drawn, and never saw it while in the measure. The publican having been convicted of an offence under s. 8 :—Held, that the sale was not complete until the beer was handed to the customer, that the beer was not sold in a marked measure as required by the statute, and that the conviction was right. Addy v. Blake, 19 Q. B. D. 478 ; 56 L. T. 711 ; 35 W. R. 719 ; 16 Cox, C. C. 259 ; 51 J. P. 599.

A customer asked to be served with a "blue" of beer on licensed premises, and the publican handed him a vessel or blue containing beer, saying, "That is two-pennyworth." An inspector of weights and measures tested the blue, and finding it contained one-third of a quart, there being no imperial measure answering to one-third of a quart instituted proceedings against the publican under s. 8, and a conviction ensued : —Held, that the conviction must be affirmed. Payne v. Thomas, 60 L. J., M. C. 3 ; 63 L. T. 456 ; 39 W. R. 240 ; 17 Cox, C. C. 212 ; 54 J. P. 824.

Publican—Obligation to Supply Reasonable Refreshment to all comers.]—Per Holmes, J. : A publican is under no legal obligation to supply reasonable refreshment to all comers, but his refusal to do so may be a matter for the licensing justices to consider. Reg. v. Armagh JJ., [1897] 2 Ir. R. 57.

F. CONVICTION AND PUNISHMENT BY JUSTICES.

1. CONVICTION.

Jurisdiction—Venue.]—Justices of a county, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 118, have jurisdiction to hear an offence of Sunday trading during the prohibited hours against a beer retailer, and it is not necessary to allege that they are justices acting in and for the petty sessional division. Reg. v. Shaw, infra.

The jurisdiction to convict of the offence of using a false certificate for the purpose of obtaining a licence to retail beer, is in the justices acting in and for the places where the offence is committed. Reg. v. Waghorn, 1 El. & Bl. 647; 22 L. J., M. C. 60; 17 Jur. 785; 1 W. R. 179.

—— Second Offence.]—In August, 1869, a beer-house keeper was convicted of keeping her house open for the sale of beer on Sunday, before half-past twelve o'clock in the day-time. On the 6th October, 1869, she was convicted for refusing to admit a constable to her premises:—Held, that the justices had power, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 17, to treat this as a second offence, and under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 87, s. 7, to order that she should be disqualified from selling beer, &c., by retail, for the space of two years. Short, Ex parte, 39 L. J., M. C. 63; L. R. 5 Q. B. 174; 22 L. T. 94.

—— Search Warrant for Licensed Premises.]—Complaint having been made under s. 11 of the Betting House Act, 1853, a search warrant was issued thereunder, and certain licensed premises searched by the police:—Held, that the justices had jurisdiction to issue the warrant in respect of licensed premises: and that the powers of the police under such warrant were not restricted by the words of the section, "all such persons found therein," to all such persons as were actually engaged in contravening the Betting House Act, or in aiding and abetting the contravention thereof. Anderson v. Hume, 46 J. P. 825.

Proceedings — Validity of Indictment.]—An indictment alleged that K. was licensed to sell beer by retail on the premises; that he was duly summoned to appear before justices acting in and for a county to answer an information and complaint for selling beer in his house during the prohibited hours on a Sunday; that he appeared at the petty sessions; and that the defendant appeared as a witness for him, and committed the alleged perjury. At the trial it appeared that a policeman reported the case to his superintendent, who went to the clerk of the justices and narrated what the policeman had said, whereupon the clerk filled up a blank summons against K. The superintendent took the summons to a justice, who read it and signed it without further inquiry, and the summons was served on K. K. appeared in pursuance of it, and called the defendant as his witness:—Held, that it was not necessary on the trial of the indictment to prove that an information was laid as the basis of the summons. Reg. v. Shaw, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 415; 12 L. T. 470; 13 W. R. 692; 10 Cox, C. C. 66.

Validity of Convictions—Necessary Forms.]—A conviction for keeping open a beer-house, at times prohibited by the order of justices, under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 64, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, is bad, if it omits to aver that the justices made such an order, and to state the particular time at which the beer-house was so kept open. Newman v. Hardwick, 3 N. & P. 368; 8 A. & E. 124; 1 W. W. & H. 284; 7 L. J., M. C. 101; 2 Jur. 493.

A conviction under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 64, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, for keeping a house open for the sale of beer, and selling beer, and suffering it to be drunk on the premises, at a time of day prohibited by an order of justices, and fining the party charged in a single penalty for "the offence," is bad, as it charges three distinct offences. Newman v. Bendyshe, 2 P. & D. 340; 10 A. & E. 11; 8 L. J., M. C. 58.

In a conviction under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 64, s. 13, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, awarding penalties against a publican for permitting disorderly conduct in his house, it is not necessary to state that the house was in the division for which the justices acted. Wray v. Toke, 12 Q. B. 492; 3 New Sess. Cas. 290; 17 L. J., M. C. 183; 12 Jur. 936.

It need not be averred in such conviction that the penalty was proceeded for within three calendar months next after committing the offence. Ib.

It is sufficient in such conviction (being subsequent to 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85), and in a warrant founded on it, to allege that the publican, being a seller of beer by retail, and licensed to sell the same by retail, to be drunk and consumed in and upon his premises, under the provisions of the statutes in that case made and provided, permitted, &c., against the tenor of the licence granted to him under the provisions of the said statutes, and contrary to the form of the said statutes, without further pointing out the statutes; and the mention of "statutes" (not statute) is correct. Ib.

The charge in such conviction of permitting "drunkenness and other disorderly conduct" against the tenor of such licence, not naming the parties who were permitted to misbehave, nor stating the terms of the licence, is not too vague, nor is the charge double. Ib.

In such conviction the words "this being adjudged to be his second offence against the provisions of the aforesaid statutes" are a sufficient adjudication on that point, under s. 13 of 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 64, without further shewing the nature of the first offence. Ib.

The justices having awarded a penalty of 10*l.*, one moiety, after deducting costs of conviction, to the use of A., and the other moiety, after deducting the costs as aforesaid, to the use of B.:—Held, that the penalty was well imposed, and the adjudication not made bad by the award of costs. Ib.

A conviction under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 8, for signing a false certificate to enable a person to obtain a licence for the sale of beer, drawn up according to the form in Sched. I. (1) to 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, is valid. Reg. v. Bakewell, 7 El. & Bl. 848; 26 L. J., M. C. 150; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1003; 5 W. R. 605.

2. PENALTIES.

By whom Recoverable.]—By 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 64, s. 15, penalties are recoverable upon the information of any person before two justices, acting in petty sessions, in and for the division and place in which the house is situate where the offence was committed. Reg. v. Rawlins, 8 Car. & P. 439.

To whom Payable.] — When justices of a borough, which has a separate commission of the peace, but not a separate court of quarter sessions, in the exercise of their summary jurisdiction, impose penalties for offences against the general law, they act for the county, and the penalties must, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 31, be paid over by their clerk to the treasurer of the county or place to the quarter sessions of which the appeal from their decision lies: and it makes no difference that the borough has a separate commission of the peace. Winn v. Mossman, 38 L. J., Ex. 200; L. R. 4 Ex. 292; 20 L. T. 672; 17 W. R. 924.

The 24 & 25 Vict. c. 75, s. 4, which declares that in 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, the words "county or place" include any borough having a separate commission of the peace, though not a separate court of quarter sessions, only applies to the power of granting and withdrawing licences contained in that act, and does not affect the application of penalties fixed by s. 26. Ib.

A penalty imposed under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 26, by justices for a borough which has a commission of the peace, but no court of quarter sessions, is payable to the treasurer of the county in which such borough is situate, and not to the treasurer of the borough on account of the borough fund. Reg. v. Dale, 1 Dears. C. C. 37; 22 L. J., M. C. 44; 17 Jur. 47; 6 Cox, C. C. 93.

Imprisonment on Non-payment—Order Ultra vires — Distress.]—The Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), s. 21, sub-s. 3, does not apply to the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 3, sub-s. 1, s. 51, sub-s. 2, so as to give justices jurisdiction to order imprisonment for non-payment of a penalty exceeding 5*l.*, under s. 3, without first ordering a distress. By the Licensing Act, 1872, s. 2, an unlicensed person selling intoxicating liquors is liable to a penalty or to imprisonment:—Held, that a conviction imposing a penalty exceeding 5*l.*, and, in default of payment, imprisonment, was bad. Clew, In re, 51 L. J., M. C. 140; 8 Q. B. D. 511; 46 L. T. 482; 30 W. R. 704; 46 J. P. 534.

By the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 3, a person who sells beer without a licence is liable for a first offence to a penalty of 50*l.* or imprisonment with or without hard labour for a month. By s. 51, where a court of summary jurisdiction has ordered a distress to be made in default of payment of a penalty, the court may order, in default of the said sum being paid as directed, that the person liable to pay the same shall be imprisoned for a period not exceeding six months in cases where the penalty amounts to 50*l.* B. was convicted before justices for selling beer without a licence, and fined 50*l.* He confessed himself unable to pay, and was forthwith committed by the justices to prison for six months without any distress having been made:—Held, that the justices had exceeded their jurisdiction, inasmuch as the issue of a warrant of distress was necessary in all cases to make s. 51 applicable. Brown, Ex parte, 47 L. J., M. C., 108; 3 Q. B. D. 545; 38 L. T. 682; 26 W. R. 757.

Distress Warrant, Form of.]—It is no objection to the warrant of distress that it ordered the money levied to be paid to the justices, in order that they might dispose of the same as directed by the conviction. Wray v. Toke, 12 Q. B. 492; 3 New Sess. Cas. 290; 17 L. J., M. C. 183; 12 Jur. 936.

3. Forfeiture.

Of Licence.]—The justices are not warranted in adjudicating a forfeiture of the licence without legal proof of a former conviction; a mere reference to the records of the petty sessions where former convictions were entered, will not suffice. Cross v. Watts, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 239; 32 L. J., M. C. 73; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 776; 7 L. T. 463; 11 W. R. 210.

—— Indorsement on Licence.]—A., being the owner of a licensed public-house, was on the 3rd of June, 1879, convicted of an offence against the licensing acts, which conviction was directed to be endorsed on his licence, and again, on the 18th of October, 1881, he was convicted of a similar offence, and the conviction was ordered to be recorded on his licence. A., in the usual manner, received a renewal of his licence on the 10th of October, 1882, and the renewal being always in the form of a new licence, and the old licence being given up, there were no convictions actually recorded on the licence he then received. On the 17th of October, 1882, A. was again convicted of an offence against the Licensing Act, but the magistrates did not direct the conviction to be indorsed on the licence after this last conviction. A. continued his business as a publican, and the police issued a summons against him for selling intoxicating liquors without a licence, and the magistrates convicted him on the ground that the conviction of the 17th of October, 1882, had caused a forfeiture of the licence. On an application by A. for a certiorari:—Held, that, in order to work a forfeiture of a licence, it was not necessary that the justices should direct the third conviction to be recorded on the licence, nor that the three convictions should be made within the same licensing year. Reg. v. Cork JJ., 12 L. R., Ir. 167.

Of Liquors kept for Illegal Purposes.]—Where liquors kept for unlawful sale have been seized under 33 & 34 Vict. c. 29, s. 15 (repealed), the justices cannot order them to be sold without giving the person, upon whose premises they are seized, an opportunity of being heard, and of shewing that the seizure was wrong, and that the sale ought not to take place. Gill v. Bright, 41 L. J., M. C. 22; 25 L. T. 591; 20 W. R. 248.

4. Appeals.

Conviction of Tenant—Forfeiture of Licence—Application by Owner for Licence—Refusal—Right of Appeal.]—The appeal clauses of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61 (the Intoxicating Liquors Licensing Act, 1828), are incorporated in 37 & 38 Vict. c. 49 (the Licensing Act, 1874), s. 15, and therefore when the licence of a public-house keeper is forfeited by conviction under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 94, s. 9, and the owner of the premises duly applies under 37 & 38 Vict. c. 49, s. 15, to special sessions for a licence and it is refused, he has a right of appeal to quarter sessions. Reg. or Newton v. West Riding JJ., 52 L. J., M. C. 99; 11 Q. B. D. 417; 48 J. P. 149.

—— Appeal by Owner—"Person aggrieved"—Record of Conviction on Licence.]—Where a licensed person is convicted of an offence under the Licensing Acts, 1872–74, and the justices direct the conviction to be recorded on his licence, the owner of the licensed premises, who was not and could not have been a party to the proceedings before the justices, is not a "person aggrieved" within s. 52 of the act of 1872, and has no right of appeal against the order. Reg. v. Andover JJ., 55 L. J., M. C. 143; 16 Q. B. D. 711; 55 L. T. 23; 34 W. R. 456; 50 J. P. 549.

Notice of—To whom.]—On an appeal against a conviction of two justices under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, notice must be given to both the justices who appear to have made the conviction. Reg. v. Cheshire JJ., 3 P. & D. 23, n.; 11 A. & E. 139; 9 L. J., M. C. 89.

—— Sufficiency of.]—C. was convicted by justices of the Cinque Ports, sitting at Ramsgate, for being found drunk, under the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 12. Five days afterwards he served upon the clerk to the justices, sitting at Ramsgate, a notice of appeal, purporting to be in accordance with s. 52, sub-s. 2, but addressed generally to the justices of the Cinque Ports, and the respondent. Neither of the justices who heard the complaint received any notice of appeal. The recorder at quarter sessions held the notice bad, and did not proceed on the merits. He granted a case, however, as to the sufficiency of the notice of appeal:—Held, that this was not notice to the court of summary jurisdiction of the appellant's intention to appeal within the words of sub-s. 2 of s. 52, and that the recorder was not bound to hear the case on the merits, if he considered he had no jurisdiction. Curtis v. Buss, 47 L. J., M. C. 35; 3 Q. B. D. 13; 37 L. T. 533; 26 W. R. 210.

Recognizances.]—By the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 52, any person aggrieved by any order or conviction made by a court of summary jurisdiction may appeal therefrom, subject to the conditions and regulations following:—(2) The appellant shall within seven days after the cause of appeal has arisen, give notice to the other party and to the court of summary jurisdiction of his intention to appeal and of the ground thereof. (3) The appellant immediately after such notice shall enter into a recognizance before a justice with two sureties, conditioned personally to bring such appeal, &c.—At the hearing of an appeal under the above section it appeared that notice of appeal was given on Monday, March 10th, and that the recognizance was entered into on Friday, March 14th. No explanation of the delay being offered, the quarter sessions dismissed the appeal:—Held, upon application for a mandamus for the sessions to hear the appeal, the affidavits accounting for the delay ought not to be considered, and that the sessions upon the evidence before them were warranted in finding that the recognizance had not been entered into "immediately" after the notice. Reg. v. Berkshire JJ., 48 L. J., M. C. 137; 4 Q. B. D. 469; 27 W. R. 798.

New Objections.]—A. was convicted of knowingly permitting persons of bad character to assemble in his public-house. It was objected on his behalf that the persons assembled were there only for the purposes of refreshment. The justices being of opinion that there was no evidence to that effect, convicted him. A case was stated for the opinion of the court whether, upon the facts, the conviction was right or wrong. On appeal, it was contended that there was no evidence that A. knowingly admitted persons to assemble:—Held, that this objection, not having been raised before the justices, could not be raised upon appeal. Purkis v. Huxtable, 1 El. & El. 780; 28 L. J., M. C. 221; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 790.

Costs.]—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 27, if, upon appeal from any conviction or order, the quarter sessions shall order either party to pay costs, such order shall direct such costs to be paid to the clerk of the peace, to be by him paid over to the party entitled to the same, and shall state within what time such costs shall be paid; and, if the same shall not be paid, any justice may enforce payment by warrant of distress; and, in default of distress, may commit the party for three months. Sect. 36 repealed all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of that act:—Held, that s. 27 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, applied to all summary convictions and orders of justices (except those specified in s. 35), and orders of quarter sessions made on appeal from them, and that s. 29 of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, which was inconsistent with it, was repealed by it and by s. 36. Reg. v. Hellier, 17 Q. B. 229; 21 L. J., M. C. 3; 15 Jur. 901.

A conviction under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, was affirmed on appeal at the October quarter sessions, 1850, and the defendant was ordered to pay costs to the justices, amounting to 20*l.* In November he paid 10*l.* on account. On the 8th February, 1851, the justices removed the order into the Queen's Bench under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 18, for the purpose of enforcing payment of the residue. On the 21st February the defendant applied to a judge at chambers to stay proceedings on the order, which was refused; and on the 1st March a fi. fa. was issued upon the order. In Easter term the defendant obtained a rule for setting aside the order and the fi. fa.:—Held, first, that there had not been acquiescence to the order, nor laches in objecting to it by the defendant, inasmuch as by s. 34 of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, he could not remove the order by certiorari. Ib.

Held, secondly, that the order being removed for the purpose of being enforced, it was competent to the defendant to object to it for illegality, though he could not have removed it by certiorari; and the court ordered the money levied under the fi. fa. to be returned. Ib.

G. COVENANTS AND AGREEMENTS RESPECTING LICENSED HOUSES.

1. Sale or Lease.

Sale—Time, Essence of Contract.]—Upon a sale of a public-house as a going concern time is of the essence of the contract. Cowles v. Gale, 41 L. J., Ch. 14; L. R. 7 Ch. 12; 25 L. T. 524; 20 W. R. 70. And see Day v. Luhke, infra.

When, therefore, upon the day for the completion of the contract the vendors were not in a position to transfer the licence under 9 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 11, the purchaser was held entitled to repudiate the contract. Ib.

In an agreement by a tenant at will of a public-house for the sale of possession, trade and goodwill of the house at a fixed sum, and of the stock and furniture at a valuation; one of the terms being that possession should be taken, and the money paid on a given day, time is of the essence of the contract; and a purchaser who was not in a condition to fulfil his part of the contract on that day cannot compel a specific performance, though he was ready on the following day to have proceeded to complete the purchase. Coslake v. Till, 1 Russ. 376.

Time held to be of the essence of the contract between vendor and purchaser, partly by reason of the nature of the trade — viz. that of a publican—carried on upon the property offered for sale, and partly upon the construction of the conditions of sale. Seaton v. Mapp, 2 Coll. 556.

—— Title by Executors.]—The executors of the owner of a public-house renewed the licence in the name of the deceased owner:—Held, that the licence was absolutely void, and that the executors could not make a good title to the public-house. Cowles v. Gale, supra.

By an agreement entered into with the executors for the purchase of a leasehold public-house, and the goodwill and licences connected with it, the household furniture, stock in trade, and other effects upon the premises, were to be taken by the purchaser at a valuation, and possession was to be delivered up to him on the 29th September, 1821. The valuation was made, but on the 29th of September the purchaser, alleging that there was a defect in the title to the leasehold, refused to perform his contract; the executors filed a bill for specific performance, but in the meantime remained in possession of the house, and carried on the business:—Held, that though the executors were entitled to a decree for specific performance, and though the purchaser had done wrong in refusing to perform the contract, he could not be made answerable for the trade which had been carried on in the premises since September, 1821; that he could not be compelled to take that portion of the stock in trade on the premises at the time of the decree, which was not there at the date of the agreement, but had been substituted for such parts of the old stock as had been consumed in the usual course of the business; that the purchaser ought to be charged with rent and taxes, and other outgoings paid by the executors since September, 1821; and with interest on the same so paid by them; that the purchaser was not entitled to any occupation rent, or other allowance for the use of the house and furniture by the executors during the period that elapsed after the 29th of September, 1821. Dakin v. Cope, 2 Russ. 170.

—— Transfer of Licence.]—Upon the sale of a public-house as a going concern time is of the essence of the contract; and, in the absence of an express stipulation to the contrary, the licence of the house must be transferred under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 11, and not under s. 14. Day v. Luhke, 37 L. J., Ch. 330; L. R. 5 Eq. 336; 16 W. R. 719.

Mortgagees of a public-house are not assigns of the licensee within 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 11. Ib.

—— Inability to complete.]—The vendor of a public-house contracted with the purchaser to make a good and a proper assignment of the victualler's and other licences. It turned out that the only licence under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, was to his son, who was not the owner of the house, had only acted as servant, and had gone away and could not be found:—Held, that the vendor was unable to fulfil the contract, and was liable to refund the deposit money and recoup the purchaser in damages. Claydon v. Green, 37 L. J., C. P. 226; L. R. 3 C. P. 511; 18 L. T. 607; 16 W. R. 1126.

A. agreed to take a lease of a public-house provided a retail licence should be obtained. The magistrates afterwards granted a written licence to sell excisable liquors, and to permit them to be consumed on the premises, but they insisted on a verbal promise that no excisable liquors should be sold for consumption upon the premises:—Held, that he was not bound to take the lease. Modlen v. Snowball, 4 De G. F. & J. 143; 31 L. J., Ch. 44; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1260; 5 L. T. 299; 10 W. R. 24.

Assignment of Licence—Bankruptcy—Rights of Assignee.]—Under a writ of fi. fa. against G., certain chattels and his interest in licensed premises were seized, advertised for sale, and sold on the 31st January, 1885, by the sheriff. No reference to the licence was made either in the advertisement, conditions of sale, or deed of assignment, which was dated the 10th February, 1885, except that in the latter the premises were described as "licensed," as occupied by G. as a licensed publican, and the deed did not purport to assign the licence. The sheriff was not possessed of the licence, but it was subsequently endorsed and delivered by G. to the purchaser. On the 4th April, 1885, G. was adjudicated a bankrupt. The purchaser, however, obtained an ad interim transfer of the licence on the 14th April, and an absolute transfer at the October sessions. In August the hearing of a charge and discharge, raising a question as to the property in the licence, was adjourned by consent to November, on the terms that the position of the parties should be considered at the hearing as if unaltered:—Held, that the licence did not pass under the sheriff's assignment; that the subsequent endorsement, delivery and transfer of it by G. to the purchaser were void as against the assignees in bankruptcy of G., and that the licence formed part of the estate and effects of G. in the bankruptcy matter; but having regard to the proceedings at the licensing sessions, the court declined, for the time being, to make any order for the transfer of the licence to the assignee in bankruptcy, or to award damages against the purchaser for withholding the licence. Gilmer, In re, 17 L. R., Ir. 1.

—— Permit for Removal of Spirits—Validity of.]—Where G., the licensed keeper of a public-house, sold the lease of it to N., who entered into the occupation of it, the licence still remaining in the name of G.; and a quantity of spirits which required a permit for its removal, under 2 Will. 4, c. 16, was supplied by a distiller on the order of N., and delivered on the premises in question:—Held, that a permit made out in the name of G. was a valid permit under the statute. Nicholson v. Hood, 9 M. & W. 365; 12 L. J., Ex. 114; 6 Jur. 64.

Proceeds of Sale—Licence attached to Freehold Premises—Real or Personal Estate.]—The proceeds of sale of a deceased publican's retail spirit licence constitute personal estate, although such licence is attached to premises of freehold tenure. Brennan v. Dorney, 21 L. R., Ir. 353—C. A.

Property in Licence—Freehold—Heir—Death of Owner Intestate.]—Where the owner and licence-holder of a public-house dies intestate, there is no property in the licence or goodwill, apart from the ownership of the premises to which the licence is attached. Kelly v. Montague, 29 L. R., Ir. 429—C. A.

—— Bankruptcy of Lessee.]—A lease of a public-house contained a covenant by the lessee on the expiration or sooner determination of the term to assign the licence held by him to the lessor, and also a proviso for re-entry by the lessor in the event of the bankruptcy of the lessee. On the bankruptcy of the lessee during the term :—Held, that the licence was not "property" of the bankrupt which would pass to the trustee ; and that under the covenant the lessor was entitled to have the licence delivered up to him, though it was not by its nature assignable. Britnor, In re, Royle, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Bk. 85 ; 25 W. R. 560.

Sale of Goodwill—Value, how ascertained.]—A lease for years of an alehouse granted to the plaintiff provided that, "at the expiration or other sooner determination of the term hereby created, all such sum and sums of money as shall or can be procured for the goodwill of the business of a licensed victualler, in respect of the premises, from an incoming tenant, shall be received by and belong to" the plaintiff. The term having expired, the owner of the reversion and executrix of the lessor let the house upon lease to a fresh tenant, by whom she was paid 1,300*l.* as premium ; she received nothing for goodwill from the new lessee, and she was willing that the plaintiff should get from him compensation for the goodwill. The plaintiff sued her to recover 1,300*l.* :—Held, that an action was maintainable under the proviso, but that the sum of 1,300*l.* was not to be taken as the amount payable by virtue thereof to the plaintiff ; that the value of the goodwill of the alehouse was to be fixed by ascertaining what sum would be paid by an incoming to an outgoing tenant in respect thereof. Llewellyn v. Rutherford, 44 L. J., C. P. 281 ; L. R. 10 C. P. 456 ; 32 L. T. 610.

Lease — Implied Agreement — Forfeiture of Licences.]—Upon the letting by parol of a public-house there is no implied agreement or covenant that the tenant shall do no act whereby the licence shall become forfeited. Maw v. Hindmarsh, 28 L. T. 644.

A. took by parol a licensed public-house of B., but having been three times convicted of offences connected with the management of such house, the magistrates refused to renew the licence. Upon an action by B. against A. upon his implied covenant not to suffer the premises to be used in a manner calculated to produce a forfeiture of the licence :—Held, that no such covenant could be implied, and that the action could not be maintained. Ib.

Fixtures put up by previous Tenant—Signboard of Inn.]—At the Royal Oak Inn, Bettws-y-Coed, there was, in 1847, a signboard affixed to the wall of the house by staples. The inn was then held by E. R. as tenant from year to year. In the same year, David Cox, who was a friend of E. R., went up a ladder and painted on the old signboard a picture of an oak tree with horsemen riding underneath. The picture so painted remained as the sign of the house. In 1849 Cox retouched and varnished the picture. In 1866, owing to alterations in the house, the picture was taken down and placed, first in a sitting-room and afterwards (being framed and glazed) in the hall of the inn, where it was affixed to the wall. In 1861 E. R. died, and was succeeded in the tenancy of the house by his son R. R., who took a lease of the house from Lord W. D. for twenty-one years, containing a covenant to surrender the house and fixtures at the end of the term. In 1863 R. R. died, having devised all his property to his wife, who subsequently married D. X. In August, 1871, D. X. surrendered the lease to Lady W. D., who on the same day granted him a lease for fifty-eight years containing a like covenant to surrender. D. X. died in 1876, and his widow thereupon conveyed all her interest in the inn (expressly reserving the signboard) to M. A. T., who by arrangement, retained the signboard at the inn for two years. At the end of the two years Mrs. D. X. sent for the signboard, but Lady W. D.'s agent forbade its removal, and it remained in the hall of the inn till the filing of a petition for liquidation by M. A. T. :—Held, that M. A. T. had no right of property in the signboard ; that it was not a chattel of which reputed ownership could be predicated, and that, as against M. A. T. and her trustee in liquidation, Lady W. D. had a clear right of preventing the removal of the fixture. Willoughby D'Eresby (Baroness) or Sheen, Ex parte, Thomas, In re, 44 L. T. 781 ; 29 W. R. 527—C. A.

2. Mortgage.

Mortgage of Licence.]—Query whether licences are subject to assignment by way of mortgage. Manifold v. Morris, 8 L. J., C. P. 218.

Mortgage of Premises—Priority—Notice.]—The lessee of a public-house in London executed at the public-house, and at the time of entering into possession, a mortgage of his lease in favour of the brewer by whom the house was supplied with beer, to secure a sum already advanced and future advances, not to exceed in the whole a given sum. At the same time and place he charged the lease "subject to the security already given" to the brewer, with the repayment to the distiller who supplied the house with spirits of an advance made by him. The mortgage and charge were both executed in the presence of the solicitors of the brewer and distiller, and the latter there and then gave to the former a formal notice of the charge in favour of his client. Afterwards the publican became indebted to the brewer for the price of beer supplied to the house. The lease having been sold by the brewer under a power of sale in his mortgage :—Held, that in the absence of any express agreement, the distiller was entitled to be repaid his advance out of the purchase-money in priority to the debt which had been incurred to the brewer subsequently to the time when notice was given to him of the distiller's charge ; and that this priority was not affected by a custom of trade alleged to exist between publicans, brewers and distillers in London. Menzies v. Lightfoot, 40 L. J., Ch. 561 ; L. R. 11 Eq. 459 ; 24 L. T. 695 ; 19 W. R. 578.

Where the creditor of a publican in London took from the latter a legal mortgage of copyhold premises as a security for an antecedent debt, and at the time of taking this security, knew that the publican was indebted to his brewers, and likewise was aware of the ordinary practice in London of publicans depositing their leases with their brewers by way of mortgage :—Held, that the creditor had such notice of the transactions between his debtor and the brewers, as would have put a prudent man on further inquiry ; and that, having omitted to make such further inquiry, the equitable security of the brewers had priority over his legal security. Whitbread v. Jordan, 1 Y. & Coll. 303; 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 38.

—— Custom of Trade.]—A company of brewers took a mortgage of a public-house and other premises, as security for a debt then due to them from the publican, and for future advances to be made and beer to be supplied by them to him. Subsequently, a firm of distillers took a second mortgage of the same premises as a security for a debt then due to them from the publican, and for future advances and goods to be supplied by them, and they gave to the brewers' company notice of their mortgage:—Held, after the notice to the brewers' company of the distillers' mortgage, that the priorities between them must be regulated by the respective dates of the advances being made and goods supplied by them respectively. Daun v. City of London Brewery Co., 38 L. J., Ch. 454; L. R. 8 Eq. 155; 20 L. T. 601.

There is not, as between brewers and distillers, any custom of trade affecting their priorities as mortgagees in a manner different from the rule of law decided in Hopkinson v. Rolt, 9 H. L. Cas. 514; 34 L. J., Ch. 468; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1209; 5 L. T. 90; 9 W. R. 900.

A first mortgagee for present and future advances is not, as against a second mortgagee, entitled to priority in respect of advances by him after notice of the second mortgage. Ib.

Two Properties—Power of Consolidation.]—A brewery company were first mortgagees for 1,000*l.*, and the plaintiff was third mortgagee of a public-house, A. The company afterwards took a mortgage of a public-house, B.; A. and B. both belonging to the same mortgagor. The lease of A. was nearly out, and by arrangement between all parties the company advanced 1,000*l.* for a new lease which was granted to the mortgagor, and was then mortgaged by him, first to the brewery company to secure 2,000*l.* and advances, and subject thereto to the plaintiff. By a memorandum given at the same time the plaintiff declared that the company was to have priority for their 2,000*l.* and advances, not to exceed in the whole 2,300*l.* The brewery company afterwards transferred both mortgages to the defendant. The plaintiff claimed to redeem A., to which the defendant objected unless the plaintiff also redeemed B.:—Held, that though the new mortgage of A. to the plaintiff was in date subsequent to the mortgage of B., the intention of the parties was merely to give priority to the company for their 2,300*l.*, and not to give the company a right to consolidate the mortgage on A. and the mortgage on B.; and as the whole was equitable, the company could not be held to have obtained any such right; nor could their assignee be in any better position. Bird v. Wenn, 55 L. J., Ch. 722; 33 Ch. D. 215; 54 L. T. 933; 34 W. R. 652.

Receiver.]—The defendant mortgaged, by demise, a leasehold public-house, with the goodwill of the business carried on there, to the plaintiff. The deed contained a covenant for further assurance. Default was made, and the plaintiff in a foreclosure action obtained a receiver:—Held, that the defendant was bound under the terms of the mortgage to assign his licence to the receiver. Rutter v. Daniel, 30 W. R. 801—C. A. Affirming 46 L. T. 684; 30 W. R. 724.

Equitable Mortgage.]—An equitable mortgage of a licensed public-house, created by deposit of the title deeds, confers upon the owner of the mortgage the right to the licence, as against the assignee in bankruptcy of the licensed owner of the public-house. Rutter v. Daniel (30 W. R. 724) followed. O'Brien, In re, 11 L. R., Ir. 213.

An equitable mortgage was made to a firm of brewers, to secure money lent and porter to be supplied by them. Several changes occurred in the composition of the firm, the business and debts being on each occasion assigned, the deeds deposited by way of equitable mortgage being transferred to the new partners, and the trading being carried on under the name of the original firm. Porter was continuously supplied to the mortgagor on the security, and payments were made by him on account:—Held, following Oates, Ex parte (2 Mont. D. & D. 234), that the benefit of the equitable mortgage passed to the persons for the time being constituting the firm, and extended to goods supplied by them as well as to the goods which were supplied by the original members of the firm. Ib.

The decision of the Vice-Chancellor of England, recognising a lien on a brewer's lease created by deposit simultaneously with the creation of the lease, further carried out by making the injunction perpetual. Meux v. Smith, 2 Mont. D. & D. 789; 11 Sim. 410; 12 L. J., Ch. 209; 7 Jur. 821.

G., a publican, agreed to sell his public-house (which M. & Co. supplied with beer) to A.; A. being unable to pay the whole of the purchase-money, M. & Co., at his request, agreed to pay to G. 1,000*l.* as part of it. At a meeting of the parties for completing the purchase, M. & Co. paid the 1,000*l.* to G. G. then executed the conveyance of the house, and immediately afterwards delivered it to M. & Co., and A. signed a memorandum expressing that he had deposited the deed with M. & Co., for securing by way of equitable mortgage, the payment to them of the 1,000*l.*; shortly afterwards M. & Co. discovered that A. was an uncertificated bankrupt:—Held, nevertheless, that they had as against A.'s assignees, a lien on the deed for the 1,000*l.* Ib.

Goodwill in Mortgaged Premises.]—The goodwill of a mortgaged public-house is not a personal goodwill, but belongs to the mortgagor's trustee in liquidation as against the mortgagee. Punnett, Ex parte, Kitchin, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 212; 16 Ch. D. 226; 44 L. T. 226; 29 W. R. 129—C. A.

Delivery up of Spirit Licence—Order for.]—In an action by a mortgagee, claiming possession of licensed premises, and a delivery up of a licence attached thereto, the court has power to order such licence to be delivered up to the plaintiff. Crowley v. Fenry, 22 L. R., Ir. 96.

Mortgagees in Possession, Lease by—Clause binding Tenant to take Beer, &c., from them—Account—Interest.]—A leasehold public-house was mortgaged to brewers, who entered into possession, and after carrying on the business for some time, leased the public-house to tenants, with agreements binding the tenants to take their beer, &c., from them, under which they derived a large profit from the sale of beer, &c. They afterwards sold the public-house under the power of sale in the mortgage:—Held, in an action by the mortgagor for an account, that the mortgagees were not entitled to interest on the cost of beer supplied while they were carrying on the business; that they were not bound to account for the profits derived from the sale of beer, &c., to the tenants of the public-house; but that they were chargeable with the increased rent they might have obtained if the tenants had been under no restriction as to purchasing their beer. White v. City of London Brewery Co., 58 L. J., Ch. 98; 39 Ch. D. 559; 60 L. T. 19; 36 W. R. 881—North, J. Affirmed, 58 L. J., Ch. 855; 42 Ch. D. 237; 38 W. R. 82—C. A.

3. Covenants.

Vintners—Who are.]—The term "vintner" signifies one who sells wine generally, and is not restricted to one who sells wine to be consumed on the premises. Wells v. Attenborough, 24 L. T. 312; 19 W. R. 465.

Porter, Ale, or Spirit Merchant—Not to Travel for.]—The traveller for a porter, ale, and spirit merchant, bound himself by a bond not to "travel for any porter, ale, or spirit merchant, as agent, collector, or otherwise," within a certain distance of the town where the merchant carried on his business. The traveller travelled within the distance as agent and collector for a firm of brewers in the same town, who brewed and sold only beer, ale, and porter, and sold no liquor but of their own manufacture:—Held, that the brewers were not porter, ale, or spirit merchants within the meaning of the bond. Josselyn v. Parson, 41 L. J., Ex. 60; L. R. 7 Ex. 127; 25 L. T. 912; 20 W. R. 316.

Not to use Premises as a Public-house, Tavern, or Beershop—Sale of Beer to be consumed off the Premises.]—A deed contained a covenant by the grantee of a piece of land that no building to be erected on the land should be used as a public-house, tavern or beershop. A lessee of the grantee obtained an off-licence, authorising him to sell at his shop, on the land, beer not to be drunk on the premises, and sold beer there accordingly:—Held, that this was a breach of the covenant. St. Albans (Bishop) v. Battersby (3 Q. B. D. 359) approved. London and Suburban Land and Building Co. v. Field, 50 L. J., Ch. 549; 16 Ch. D. 645; 44 L. T. 444—C. A.

A covenant not to use a house as "a beerhouse, inn or public-house for the sale of spirituous liquors," is not infringed by the sale of beer by retail to be drunk off the premises. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Garnett, 39 L. J., Ch. 25; L. R. 9 Eq. 26; 21 L. T. 352; 18 W. R. 246.

A covenant not to use a house "as an inn, public-house or tap-room, or for the sale of spirituous liquors, ale or beer," is broken by the sale therein of spirits or beer in bottles, though the house is not used as a public-house, and the liquors are not sold by retail, or to be drunk on the premises. Fielden v. Slater, 38 L. J., Ch. 379; L. R. 7 Eq. 523; 20 L. T. 485; 17 W. R. 485.

—— Sale as Grocer.]—A person who had entered into a covenant not to use a house as a public-house, tavern, or beerhouse, opened a grocer's shop there, at which he carried on the sale of beer to be drunk off the premises as an ancillary business to his grocer's business:—Held, that this was no infringement of the covenant. Holt v. Collyer, 50 L. J., Ch. 311; 16 Ch. D. 718; 44 L. T. 214; 29 W. R. 502; 45 J. P. 456.

A lease contained a covenant by the lessees not to permit any house that might have been erected on the land demised to be used as a beer-shop or public-house, or any theatre or public show, or exhibition. The assignee of the lease carried on the business of a grocer and baker at a shop erected on the land demised. He obtained an excise retail beer licence for the sale of beer to be consumed off the premises, and sold beer in pursuance thereof in his shop:—Held, a breach of the covenant. St. Albans (Bishop) v. Battersby, 47 L. J., Q. B. 571; 3 Q. B. D. 359; 38 L. T. 685; 26 W. R. 678.

—— Taking out ordinary Excise Licence.]—A covenant not to use a house as a public-house for the sale of beer, wine, malt liquors, or spirits is not broken by the covenantor taking out an ordinary excise licence for the sale of beer (not spirits) not to be drunk on the premises. Pease v. Coates, 36 L. J., Ch. 57; L. R. 2 Eq. 688; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 684; 14 L. T. 886; 14 W. R. 1021.

Not to Carry on the trade of an Innkeeper, Victualler, or Retailer of Wine, Spirits, or Beer.]—The lessee of a theatre bought an adjoining piece of ground, which was subject to a covenant of which he had notice, that the trade of an innkeeper, victualler, or retailer of wine, spirits, or beer should not be carried on there. He erected on the piece of ground a building the object of which was to furnish convenient egress from the theatre, but on each floor he set up a counter for selling wine, spirits, and beer, which could not be approached directly from the outside, but at which any person who paid for admittance to the theatre when open for theatrical performances could purchase refreshments:—Held, that the lessee was carrying on the trade of a retailer of wine, spirits, and beer, and must be restrained from doing so. Buckle v. Fredericks, 44 Ch. D. 244; 62 L. T. 884; 38 W. R. 742—C. A.

—— Sale as Grocer.]—A covenant by deed executed in 1854, not to carry on upon premises the "trade or calling of a hotel or tavern keeper, publican or beershop keeper, or seller by retail of wine, beer, spirits or spirituous liquors," is not violated by a grocer selling wines and spirits across the counter by retail, in bottles only, and not to be consumed on the premises, under a licence granted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 21, s. 2, on the ground that at the date when the covenant was entered into, this would not have been a selling by retail. Jones v. Bone, 39 L. J., Ch. 405; L. R. 9 Eq. 674; 23 L. T. 304; 18 W. R. 489.

—— Breach by Sub-Tenant without Notice.]—A sub-tenant is liable to a restrictive covenant entered into by the purchaser of the freehold for himself and his assigns, though neither the sub-tenant nor his lessor has actual notice of it, and in spite of the provision of s. 2 of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, preventing the examination of the title to the freehold. In the conveyance in 1875 to F. of part of a building estate purchased by him, F. covenanted for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, with the owner or owners for the time being of the remainder of the property, not to carry on the trade of retailer of wine, spirits, or beer, on the land purchased. F. leased to D., who sub-leased to J., neither D. nor J. having actual notice of the restriction. J. opened a shop for the sale of wine and beer to be consumed off the premises.

Upon a motion for an injunction by T., the purchaser of another part of the building estate :—Held, that J. was liable for breach of the covenant. Thornewell v. Johnson, 50 L. J., Ch. 641 ; 44 L. T. 768 ; 29 W. R. 677.

Covenant to take Beer from Lessors—Proviso for Reduction of Rent on Performance of Covenant—Penalty.]—The lease of a public-house contained a covenant that the lessee and his assigns would, during the term, purchase all beer required for the business from the lessors, a proviso for re-entry on nonpayment of rent, or nonperformance of the covenants, and a provision for reduction of the rent so long as the lessee should purchase beer from the lessors :—Held, that the covenant to purchase beer was an absolute one, and that the lessee had not the alternative of dealing with a rival brewer and paying the unreduced rent. Hanbury v. Cundy, 38 L. T. 155.

—— Breach of—Purchase from Agent.]—A covenant by the tenant of a public-house to purchase of his landlord all beer to be sold or consumed in or upon the premises is not broken by the tenant buying through an agent, without the knowledge of the landlord, beer made by the landlord. Edwick v. Hawkes, or Edridge v. Hawker, 50 L. J., Ch. 577 ; 18 Ch. D. 199 ; 45 L. T. 168 ; 29 W. R. 914.

—— Validity of.]—On the occasion of a conveyance by the plaintiff (who was a brewer) of land to trustees in fee of a building society, of which the defendant (also a brewer) was a member, the trustees (the purchasers) covenanted with the plaintiff, that "he, his heirs and assigns, should have the exclusive right of supplying all ale, beer and porter which might be consumed in every house or other building which might be erected on the piece of land, and which should be opened or used as an inn, public-house or beer-shop." The defendant, with notice of the covenant, opened a public-house on the land, and supplied it with ale, &c., of his own brewing. The plaintiff then filed a bill against the defendant alone for an injunction to restrain the breach of the covenant :—Held, that the covenant was not invalid on the ground either of uncertainty, want of mutuality, or as being in restraint of trade. Catt v. Tourle, 38 L. J., Ch. 401 ; 20 L. T. 551 ; 17 W. R. 662. Affirmed, 38 L. J., Ch. 665 ; L. R. 4 Ch. 654 ; 17 W. R. 939.

—— Mortgagees in Possession—Account.]—See White v. City of London Brewery Co., supra, col. 477.

Effect on Assignee.]—The lease of a public-house granted by a brewer to a publican contained a covenant by the latter for himself, his executors, administrators, and assigns, to purchase from the brewer all the beer consumed at that public-house, and also at another public-house of which the publican held a lease under a different landlord :—Held, that the covenant was binding in equity upon an assignee of the second public-house who had notice of the covenant. Luker v. Dennis, 47 L. J., Ch. 174 ; 7 Ch. D. 227 ; 37 L. T. 827 ; 26 W. R. 167.

Covenant Not to Imperil Licence.]—By a lease of a public-house made after the Licensing Act, 1874 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), came into operation, the lessee covenanted not to "do, omit or permit, or suffer to be done or omitted, any act, matter or thing whatsoever that can or may affect, lessen or make void either or any of the licences for the time being granted to the public-house." The lease contained a clause for forfeiture on breach of covenant. The lessee having committed on the same day three offences against the Licensing Acts of 1872 and 1874, was convicted of two of them by justices, who directed, under the act of 1874, s. 13, that the conviction should not be recorded on any of the lessee's licences. The lessor having brought an action against the lessee to recover possession of the public-house on the ground of forfeiture, and for damages for breach of covenant :—Held, that the licences were not affected within the meaning of the covenant, and that there was no breach of covenant. Wooler v. Knott, 45 L. J., Ex. 313 ; 1 Ex. D. 124 ; 34 L. T. 362 ; 24 W. R. 615. Affirmed on appeal, 45 L. J., Ex. 884 ; 1 Ex. D. 265 ; 35 L. T. 121 ; 24 W. R. 1004—C. A.

A married woman living apart from her husband had accumulated enough of her separate earnings to purchase the goodwill and stock of a beerhouse, which was taken for her by S., to whom the licence was transferred, and who agreed with the landlord not to do anything to imperil the licence, on pain of forfeiting the tenancy and the fixtures. S. executed a declaration of trust in favour of plaintiff, and handed it to her with the licence indorsed in blank, and she carried on the business. S. having gone away to sea, the defendant, the landlord, served a notice at the house, requiring him to remove his goods by the following day, and on the following day entered and took possession, turning plaintiff and her furniture out of the house :—Held, on action brought to recover damages for the expulsion, that, in the absence of evidence that the house had been improperly conducted, the absence of S., the licensed person, did not cause the licence to be imperilled so as to create a forfeiture, and justify the entry by defendant. Moore v. Robinson, 48 L. J., Q. B. 156 ; 40 L. T. 99 ; 28 W. R. 312.

In the lease of a public-house the lessee covenanted that he would "conduct and manage the business of an inn, tavern or beerhouse keeper in such proper and orderly manner as to afford no ground or pretext whatever whereby the licence or licences should or might be suspended, discontinued, forfeited, or be in any danger of being suspended, discontinued or forfeited." The lease contained a clause of re-entry for breach of covenant. A person who occupied by leave of the lessee was convicted of selling drink within prohibited hours, but the conviction was not indorsed on the licence. The assignee of the reversion on the lease having brought an action to enforce the right of re-entry on the ground of a breach of covenant :—Held, that in the circumstances there had been no breach of the covenant. Fleetwood v. Hull, 58 L. J., Q. B. 341 ; 23 Q. B. D. 35 ; 60 L. T. 790 ; 37 W. R. 714 ; 54 J. P. 229.

The lessee of a public-house covenanted not "to do or suffer to be done on the premises any act whereby the licences necessary for using the said premises as an inn, tavern or public-house may be forfeited, or the renewal thereof withheld." He was twice convicted of offences as such tenant and the convictions were indorsed on his licence. He assigned his lease, and a subsequent occupant of the premises obtained a renewal of the licence:—Held, that he had committed a breach of the covenant. Harmann v. Powell, 60 L. J., Q. B. 628.

Covenant to Keep up Licence—New Lease—Right to Covenant.]—The lease of a public-house contained usual covenants to keep up licences, &c. The lessor and lessee entered into an agreement for a new lease to contain covenants similar to those in the former lease. Under this agreement the lessee retained possession of the public-house for several years, and in the interim forfeited the licence, which was not renewed. Specific performance of the agreement was decreed against the lessee, but no inquiry was directed as to damages occasioned by breach of the covenant to keep up the licences. The lessor having insisted that he was entitled to insert in the new lease a covenant by the lessee to keep up the licences similar to that in the former lease:—Held, that he was not entitled to such a covenant, but only to a covenant that the lessee would use his best endeavours to obtain a licence, and would, if he obtained it, then keep up the same in the terms of the old covenant. Shepheard v. Walker, 34 L. T. 30.

Covenant not to Build Public-house.]—On a sale of an estate as building land in 309 plots, each purchaser executed a covenant with trustees to observe certain conditions as to the user of the land. The conditions stated that certain plots were reserved for two taverns; that "no houses, other than detached or semi-detached," were to be erected, except on the portion on which shops were permitted to be built; and that shops would be allowed to be built on sixty specified plots. A purchaser of one of the plots set apart for shops was restrained from building a public-house on it. Hall v. Box, 18 W. R. 820.

Right of Person entitled in Equity to Sue for Breach—Notice.]—The vendors of an estate sold part of it in 1863 to C., as a site for a public-house, and entered into a covenant with him that they would not sell any other portion of it without requiring the purchaser to enter into a covenant with them "not to erect thereon, or use, or permit to be used, any building erected thereon as a tavern, public-house or beer-shop." C. erected a public-house on his part, which he demised to N. In 1869 other portions of the estate were sold to a company, who afterwards sold to P., his conveyance containing a covenant with his vendors in the above terms. P. erected a house on one plot and leased it to F., who obtained a retail licence for the sale of beer off the premises:—Held, that from the date of the sale to C., the rest of the property was subject to the restrictive covenant; that F. must be taken to have had constructive notice of it; that a beershop was a shop where beer was sold, independently of any other circumstance; that F. had broken the covenant; and that N. was entitled to sue in respect of such breach. Nicoll v. Fenning, 51 L. J., Ch. 166; 19 Ch. D. 258; 45 L. T. 738; 30 W. R. 95.

—— Notice to Assignee.]—The purchaser of a plot of ground agreed that no building erected on it should be used as a public-house during twelve years and a half. The agreement did not appear on the conveyance. The purchaser's assignee built a public-house on the plot, and let it to a yearly tenant. The assignee had notice, but the tenant had not. On a bill against the assignee and his tenant, an injunction was granted to restrain the assignee from allowing the premises to be used as a public-house; the injunction to be suspended during the existing tenancy. Carter v. Williams, 39 L. J., Ch. 560; L. R. 9 Eq. 678; 23 L. T. 183; 18 W. R. 593.

Usual Covenants—Meaning of.]—By a contract for the sale of a public-house, the vendor agreed to assign, and the purchaser agreed to take the lease, "subject to the yearly rent of 90*l.* and the performance of the covenants thereby reserved and contained, such covenants being common and usual in leases of public-houses." Upon investigating the title, the purchaser found that the lease under which the premises were held contained this clause: "Provided always, and these presents are upon this express condition, that all and every underlease, deed of assignment, &c., which shall be made and executed during the term, shall be left with the solicitor of the ground landlord within two months of its date, for the purpose of registration, and a fee of one guinea paid for such registration," and a power of re-entry in case of "breach or non-performance of any of the covenants or other stipulations hereinbefore contained or referred to." The purchaser refused to complete, on the ground that this was not a common and usual covenant; and the jury so found:—Held, that whether the proviso in the head lease was a covenant in the strict sense or not, it was at all events a covenant within the contemplation of the agreement, and therefore the purchaser was not bound to complete. Brookes v. Drysdale, 3 C. P. D. 52; 37 L. T. 467; 26 W. R. 331.

An agreement for the lease of a public-house contained no reference as to the covenants to be inserted in the lease. The lessor insisted upon covenants by the lessee—(1) To reside on the premises and personally conduct the business; (2) Not to assign without consent; and that the proviso for re-entry should extend to the breach of any covenant:—Held, that they could not be insisted upon as usual covenants. Lander and Bagley's Contract, In re, [1892] 3 Ch. 41.

See also sub tit. LANDLORD AND TENANT.

Implied Covenant on part of the Tenant.]—Upon the letting by parol of a public-house there is no implied agreement or covenant that the tenant shall do no act whereby the licence shall become forfeited. Maw v. Hindmarsh, 28 L. T. 644.

Implied Covenant on part of Seller.]—Semble, that where such a covenant is entered into by a tenant there is, in the absence of express stipulation, an implied obligation on the part of the landlord to supply the tenant with such kinds of beer as he requires, and if this obligation is not fulfilled, the tenant is at liberty to buy the beer which he requires elsewhere. Edwick v. Hawkes, supra, col. 479.

The lease of one public-house contained a covenant by the brewer that he would supply the publican with all the beer required for consumption at that public-house and another, such beer to be of a specified quality and price:—Held, that the obligation of the lessee's covenant was conditional upon the performance by the lessor of his covenant. Luker v. Dennis, 47 L. J., Ch. 174; 7 Ch. D. 227; 37 L. T. 827; 26 W. R. 167.

The assignee of the lease of the second public-house borrowed money of the brewer upon the security of a mortgage of that lease, and in the mortgage deed he covenanted with the brewer to buy of him all the beer consumed at that public-house:—Held, that this covenant was subject to an implied obligation on the part of the brewer to supply good marketable beer. Ib.

4. REMEDY FOR BREACH OF.

Measure of Damages.]—An agreement for the sale of the trade fixtures, &c., of a public-house by W. to L. at a fair valuation, contained the following stipulations: That, in addition to the amount of the valuation, L. agreed to pay W. 50*l.* goodwill; that L. was to be allowed to take, in the event of him leaving, the 50*l.*; that L. should pay to W. 100*l.* for painting, &c.; that the rent was to be 75*l.* yearly; that six months' notice to quit should be given by either party; and that, "by way of making this agreement binding, each of the contracting parties has deposited in the hands of H. 40*l.*; and either party failing to complete this agreement shall forfeit to the other his deposit-money as and for liquidated damages." In an action by L. against W. for refusing to sell pursuant to the agreement, "whereby the plaintiff had lost the advantage which would have accrued to him from the performance of the agreement by the defendant, and had lost the use of the money paid by him as such deposit as aforesaid":—Held, that the plaintiff's remedy for the breach was confined to the recovery of the 40*l.* deposited with H. Lea v. Whitaker, L. R. 8 C. P. 70; 27 L. T. 676; 21 W. R. 230.

A plea, that the plaintiff sued H. for the two sums of 40*l.* deposited with him as and for liquidated damages in respect of the breaches, and recovered judgment in respect thereof, was no answer to the action. Ib.

Rights of Covenantee.]—When a covenant had been entered into not to sell wines and spirits on certain premises:—Held, that the covenantee, by not interfering with the sale of British wines to a limited extent, did not lose his right to an injunction to restrain a more extensive breach. Richards v. Revett, 47 L. J., Ch. 472; 7 Ch. D. 224; 37 L. T. 632; 26 W. R. 166.

Where there are mutual covenants by owners of land, their heirs and assigns, with the owners of adjoining land, their heirs and assigns, to comply with certain stipulations, the subsequent lessee of one of the owners is entitled to the benefit of the covenants as an assign, and can sue to restrain a breach. Taite v. Gosling, 48 L. J., Ch. 397; 11 Ch. D. 273; 40 L. T. 251; 27 W. R. 394.

IRELAND.

Operation of English Laws and Statutes.]—The legislature, by the 6th article of the Act of Union between Great Britain and Ireland (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67), with reference to the treaty on which it was founded, intended to place both countries on an equal footing with respect to articles of the manufacture and trade of either, when exported from one into the other; and such intention is sufficiently expressed in the words of that statute to enable a court of law to give effect to it; and the statute must be construed as having established a perfect reciprocity of advantages and consolidation of interests in respect of the commercial intercourse of the two countries, and to have placed them both on a level as to the mutual traffic and dealing, by the effect of the imposition of countervailing duties, and by the virtual re-enactment of the previous statutes regulating the trade in British produce. Att.-Gen. v. M'Kenzie, 11 Price, 284.

ISLE OF MAN.

1. Jurisdiction of English Laws and Courts, 484.
2. Legislature, Laws and Customs, 485.
3. Courts and Officers, 488.

1. JURISDICTION OF ENGLISH LAWS AND COURTS.

Bankruptcy.]—The Isle of Man is not within the United Kingdom, and therefore a person residing there at the time of an adjudication against him has three months within which he may contest the validity of a petition for adjudication under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 24, or 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 233. Davison v. Farmer, 6 Ex. 242; 20 L. J., Ex. 177.

Habeas Corpus.]—The Isle of Man is not a foreign dominion of the crown, and therefore a writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum issues to it notwithstanding the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 20, s. 1. Brown, Ex parte, 5 B. & S. 280 ; 33 L. J., Q. B. 193 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 945 ; 10 L. T. 458 ; 12 W. R. 821. S. P., Crawford, Ex parte, 13 Q. B. 613 ; 18 L. J., Q. B. 225 ; 13 Jur. 955.

Wills.]—The Statutes of Wills, et de donis conditionalibus, do not extend to the Isle of Man. That island made unalienable by a private act of parliament against heirs general on failure of issue male. Sodor and Man (Bishop) v. Derby (Earl), 2 Ves. 337.

Title to Land.]—A question concerning the right and title to the Isle of Man might have been determined in the English courts. Derby v. Athol, 1 Ves. 204.

2. Legislature, Laws and Customs.

House of Keys.]—The House of Keys, as a legislative body, has no inherent power to commit for contempt ; and the Manx Act of 1817 does not give such power to it when acting in its legislative capacity. Brown, Ex parte, 5 B. & S. 280 ; 33 L. J., Q. B. 193 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 945 ; 10 L. T. 458 ; 12 W. R. 821.

Bankers and Notes.]—A licensed banker in the Isle of Man executed a security in the nature of a mortgage deed, bond and security of customary freehold lands belonging to him, to certain government officers conditioned to secure payment by him and his partners (members of the banking firm) of notes to a special amount to be issued in the island under the licence of the government. Two of the partners died subsequently at different periods, and fresh licences were renewed in the names of the survivors for further issues, but under the original deed of security. The effect of such security on the notes so issued and in circulation, and the respective deaths of the partners upon failure of the bank, considered and ascertained. Boardman v. Quayle, 11 Moore, P. C. 223 ; 5 W. R. 799.

A promissory note of the Douglas and Isle of Man Bank, in the following form : "We promise to pay the bearer on demand, one pound British in bank notes or bills on London," is a negotiable note within the Manx Banking Act of 1817. Ib.

Husband and Wife—Dower.]—By the common law of the Isle of Man, confirmed by an ordinance published in 1687, a widow is entitled to dower only dum sola et casta vixerit ; the birth, therefore, and affiliation of an illegitimate child creates a forfeiture of the dower. Cain v. Cain, 2 Moore, P. C. 222.

—— Equity to a Settlement.]—The doctrine of a wife's equity to a settlement is unknown to Manx law. Marsland, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 581 ; 54 L. T. 635 ; 34 W. R. 540.

Insolvency.]—When a debtor possessed of lands liable to be sold for debt is in prison he cannot, by the law of the Isle of Man, be discharged, until he has made a mortgage of his lands in favour of his creditors. Corbett v. Radcliffe, 14 Moore, P. C. 121.

According to the general law prevailing, as well in the Isle of Man as in England, a deed is void against creditors when the debtor is in a state of insolvency, or when the effect of the deed is to leave the debtor without the means of paying his present debts. Ib.

Lands.]—Exposition of the tenure of quarter lands and intacks in the Isle of Man of the nature of copyhold. Birnie v. Caystole, 9 Moore, P. C. 303.

There can be no foreclosure of a mortgage of copyholds of the tenure of quarter lands since the act to amend the law relating to mortgages passed in the Isle of Man in 1835. Ib.

After the passing of the Manx Act of Settlement, 4th of February, 1703, the Act of Tynwald of the 24th of June, 1645, which rendered the consent of the Lord Mayor of the Isle of Man necessary to alienation by a tenant, was, although not expressly repealed, no longer in force in the island ; and, under the provisions of the Act of Settlement, a tenant of the manor became entitled, upon payment of the proper fine, to alienate lands without the consent of the lord. Boardman v. Quayle, 11 Moore, P. C. 223 ; 5 W. R. 799.

A grant by a tenant of customary land and premises is not invalid by reason of the grant being made in favour of two or more persons. Ib.

The customary law of the Isle of Man respecting legitimation by subsequent marriage of the parents was proclaimed at a Tynwald as follows : If a man get a maid or young woman with child before marriage, and within a year or two after doth marry her, if she was never slandered or defamed with any other before, that child begotten before marriage shall have his father's corbe and his farm according to the custom of this Isle. This custom was propounded for the resolution of all doubts therein to the two deemsters and twenty-four keys of the island, and was by them confirmed and answered as follows : If a man get a maid or young woman with child, and then within a year or two afterwards doth marry her, we judge them to be illegitimate by our laws :—Held, first, that such custom was not a rule of descent to lands of inheritance descending from father to son, but embraced the case of a female entitled as a purchaser under the trusts of a will. Quane v. Quane, 8 Moore, P. C. 63.

Held, secondly, that the custom applied to a case where more than one child had been born before marriage. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that a child was legitimate, although more than two years had elapsed between the time the woman was gotten with child and the marriage of the parents. Ib.

Limitations, Statute of—Effect on Debts.]—The Manx Statute of Limitations, which enacts that actions of debt upon any trading contract or demand without specialty shall be commenced within three years next after the cause of action, only bars the remedy, and does not extinguish the debt. Harris v. Quine, 10 B. & S. 644 ; 38 L. J., Q. B. 331 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 653 ; 20 L. T. 947 ; 17 W. R. 967.

——Land—Mortgage.]—The equity of redemption of lands in the Isle of Man is barred by the Act of Settlement passed in the island in 1703-4, after the lapse of twenty-one years from the date of the mortgage. Christian v. Goldie, 2 Moore, P. C. 226.

—— Mines—Grant and Working of.]—By an act of Tynwald, of the Isle of Man, a reservation was made to the lord of the isle, of all such mines and minerals as then were, or at any time theretofore had been, vested in the lords of the isle. The Queen, as lady of the isle, being thus possessed of the mines as of her own original title in the soil, has the right to the use of all waters found thereon and percolating by natural processes into the mines when opened. Ballacorkish Silver Mining Co. v. Dumbell, 43 L. J., P. C. 19; L. R. 5 P. C. 49; 29 L. T. 658; 22 W. R. 277.

The holder of a mining lease from the crown is not liable to make compensation for the withdrawal by percolation into his mine of water which would otherwise have flowed into, or having flowed into, would have been retained in the wells and springs of the superjacent land. Ib.

The Court of Chancery of the Isle of Man granted an injunction restraining A. from proceeding with his mining operations on the lands of B. until he should give security, in the specified form, to meet such damages as B. might, on the hearing of the cause, be decreed entitled to recover for injuries done, or that might be done, to B.'s lands. A. gave security accordingly, but the court ordered the injunction to be continued till the hearing of the cause:—Held, that the order for injunction was not justified by the practice of the court. Ib.

—— Non-user.]—Non-user for twenty-one years does not deprive the tenants or farmers of the Isle of Man of the right to dig for and raise limestone and other stones in the quarry of a tenant, provided the stones, &c., are for the use of the party obtaining them, or to be employed by him for the improvement of his own or neighbour's estate. By the supplemental Act of Settlement (6th June, 1704), a discretionary power is vested in the governor to allow the exercise of this right. Christian v. Gibson, 3 Moore, P. C. 351.

—— Custom to dig Clay and Sand.]—The Act of Settlement of the Isle of Man, 1703, confirmed to the tenants their customary estates of inheritance, "saving always all mines and minerals, of what kind and nature soever, quarries and delfs of flag slate or stone":—Held, that a custom by the tenants to dig for clay and sand did not contravene the saving clause, and that such tenants were entitled to dig for clay and sand. Att.-Gen. (Isle of Man) v. Mylchreest, 48 L. J., P. C. 36; 4 App. Cas. 294; 40 L. T. 764.

Partnership.]—There is no difference between the Manx law and the law of England in respect to the principles applicable to the law of partnership. Labouchere v. Tupper, 11 Moore, P. C. 198; 5 W. R. 797.

Prescription.]—By the law of the Isle of Man, user for twenty-one years creates a prescriptive right. Cowin v. Moore, 14 Moore, P. C. 354.

Rating—Rent-charges.]—An act for the commutation of tithes in the Isle of Man (1839) provided that there shall be paid annually, in lieu of tithes, a certain aggregate sum, to be apportioned by way of rent-charge amongst those entitled thereto. An act to provide an asylum for lunatics and insane persons, after directing a valuation "at their net annual value, of all lands and all real estate," provided that "as soon as the valuation is complete" the Tynwald Court shall lay a rate on the proprietors of all lands and real estate according to valuation:—Held, that a rent-charge under the act of 1839 was not liable to be included in such valuation, or ratable under the act of 1860. Ingram v. Drinkwater, 44 L. J., P. C. 83; 32 L. T. 746.

Rights of Water.]—A grant of the use of a stream of water from an artificial flow over the grantor's land for working a "mill or otherwise an instrument wherewith to plate iron, and likewise a smithy," the grantor engaging to keep up a full dam of water for that purpose, in the absence of any objection by the grantor, or those claiming under him, to the use of the water during fifty years, for other purposes than those limited by the grant, confers by the law of the Isle of Man, on the grantee, a prescriptive right in the water granted. Tobin v. Stowell, 9 Moore, P. C. 71.

3. Courts and Officers.

The Court of Exchequer in the Isle of Man has power to summon a jury to decide a question of fact. Att.-Gen. (Isle of Man) v. Cowley, 12 Moore, P. C. 27; 7 W. R. 713.

This power extends to an information for intrusion and trespass by the attorney-general of the island, on behalf of the crown. Ib.

The attorney-general, as the chief law officer of the crown in the island, bringing an appeal to the Queen in council, is not required to enter into a recognizance to answer costs of appeal. Ib.

The Ecclesiastical Court has jurisdiction to try the validity of an alleged donatio mortis causâ. Cosnahan v. Grice, 15 Moore, P. C. 215.

A. INCIDENTS.

Period of Payment—Rent-charge during Life of Husband.]—Primâ facie a "jointure" is a provision for the wife after the death of her husband. Under a jointuring power in common form, except that the words "by way of jointure" are omitted, which power is referred to in the following sentence of the will as "the said power of jointuring," the donee of the power cannot create a rent-charge payable to his wife during his own life. Jamieson v. Trevelyan (23 L. J., Ex. 281; 10 Ex. 269) distinguished. De Hoghton, In re, De Hoghton v. De Hoghton, 65 L. J., Ch. 667; [1896] 2 Ch. 385; 74 L. T. 613; 44 W. R. 635.

Marriage Contracts.]—In marriage contracts, a jointure for the wife is almost universally the first care. M'Guire v. Scully, Beat. 379; 2 Hog. 113.

Forfeiture for Adultery.]—The husband does not forfeit his estate by the curtesy, nor the wife her jointure by adultery. Walker, In re, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 326.

Jointure is not forfeited at law by elopement or adultery; the same rule in equity, where jointure secured by articles. Buchanan v. Buchanan, 1 Ball & B. 206; 12 R. R. 16. S. P., Sidney v. Sidney, 3 P. Wms. 275.

Forfeiture by Wife suffering a Recovery.]—A., on his marriage, made a settlement whereby he was tenant for life to lands to 400*l.* per annum, remainder to his wife in special tail, remainder to his own right heirs. A. and his wife joined in barring the settlement, and made a new one to S. and his heirs in trust as to lands of 150*l.* per annum, for the wife, and the heirs of her body, and for want of such issue, in trust for A. and his heirs. A. died without issue: his wife suffered a recovery, and devising the lands for payment of debts, died without issue. Upon a bill by the heir of A. against the wife's creditors, it was held that the wife's recovery was a forfeiture within 11 Hen. 7. Symson v. Turner, 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 220, pl. 1; 14 Vin. Abr. 555, pl. 25.

Emblements.]—Dower is an excrescence or continuance of the husband's estate, which jointure is not; therefore, a dowress shall have emblements but not a jointress. Fisher v. Forbes, 9 Vin. Abr. 373, pl. 82.

Rent-charge settled and afterwards Land devised.]—A., on marriage, settled a rent-charge on his wife for her jointure, and afterwards devised to her part of the land charged. This rent-charge shall not be apportioned. Knight v. Calthorpe, 1 Vern. 347; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 33, pl. 6.

If a testator by will before marriage gives 2,000*l.* per annum to any woman he may marry, and afterwards, by codicil, gives his wife the same jointure, she cannot take both. Osborne v. Leeds (Duke), 5 Ves. 582; 5 R. R. 74.

Equity of Redemption.]—A. settled an equity of redemption for a jointure, and became bankrupt; the jointress is bound by the account settled by the assignees with the mortgagee, unless she can shew particular errors. Knight v. Bampfeild, 1 Vern. 179.

Bill for Account and Receiver.]—A. J. being entitled to a certain jointure, by articles of November, 1799, assigned the same to her son G. C. J., in consideration of his covenanting to pay the head-rents of the lands of Shane, &c., and also of his giving A. J. a right of distress on the lands of Blarney, in case of any default on his part in the payment of the said head-rents:—Held, that notwithstanding the remedy at law thus provided by the articles, a bill for an account on foot of the payments made by A. J. in respect of the head rents, and for a receiver, was maintainable. Goodwin v. Jeffreys, 1 Dr. & Wal. 375.

Setting Aside Jointure.]—A settlement or jointure on a marriage, though made very unequally, and in favour of the wife, will not be set aside in equity; as that cannot put the wife in statu quo. North v. Ansell, 2 P. Wms. 619.

Irish Bankers' Act.]—Semble, that the case of a jointure settled upon the wife of a son on his marriage, is not within s. 3 of the Irish Bankers Act. Spearing v. Delacour, 1 Dr. & Wal. 591.

B. AGREEMENTS FOR JOINTURE.

Rule in Equity.]—In equity, agreement to make jointure is equal to a jointure. Seys v. Price, 9 Mod. 219.

One covenanting to leave his wife 1,000*l.* within three months after his death, cannot be enforced in equity to amend the security. Collins

v. Plummer, 1 P. Wms. 107; Bosvil v. Brander, Ib., 460.

A., being indebted in 700*l.*, agrees on his marriage to settle lands of 100*l.* per annum on himself for life, then to his wife for her jointure, remainder to their issue in tail:—Decreed, the lands to be sold, and after payment of the 700*l.* the surplus to be laid out, and settled on the wife or the issue; but the decree was reversed on a bill of review. Carpenter v. Bennet, 1 Vern. 203.

A tenant for life, with power to make a jointure, remainder over, covenanted to make a jointure on his wife in consideration of marriage by virtue of his power or otherwise, of 500*l.* per annum, and died before it was done; equity will make it good. Coventry v. Coventry, 2 P. Wms. 222; Gilb. 160; Comyn, 312; 9 Mod. 12; 10 Mod. 463; 1 Str. 596.

Agreement for Jointure in consideration of portion never paid.]—Agreement to settle a jointure in consideration of a portion by the father, though the portion was never paid, yet the wife shall have her jointure. Perkins v. Thornton, Amb. 502.

Evidence.]—Bill to have jointure made up 400*l.* per annum, according to the parol agreement on the marriage. The defendant pleads a jointure made and accepted eighteen years since:—Held, the jointure-deed is evidence that all the precedent treaties and agreements were resolved into that. Bellasis v. Benson, 1 Vern. 369.

Articles during Coverture—Entry of Wife.]—When a provision is made for a wife, in lieu of her jointure, by articles during coverture; if the wife after her husband's death enters but upon part of the lands, she shall perform the whole articles. Moseley's Case, cited in Cecil v. Salisbury, 2 Vern. 224.

Purchaser of Lands charged, making Jointress his Executrix.]—A. covenants that, in consideration of 1,200*l.*, he and all claiming under him will convey to B., or pay back the money. A conveyance is made, and then B. is evicted by a jointress, who claimed under a settlement made by her husband, the former owner to the estate: B. makes the jointress his executrix, and dies; A. shall pay back the money, and the executrix of B. shall have it and her jointure too. Jason v. Jervis, 1 Vern. 284.

Jointress Administratrix.]—Where there was an agreement on marriage to settle a jointure in consideration of 50*l.* portion; and the husband dies before portion paid or jointure settled, and the wife takes an administration to her husband:—Held, she shall not have the portion as administratrix, and the jointure also. Sed quære. Meredeth v. Jones, 1 Vern. 463; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 220, pl. 4.

Covenant as to Value of Jointure Lands omitted in Settlement.]—A settlement for a jointure is made in pursuance of articles, wherein was a covenant that the jointure lands were of such a value, but this covenant is omitted in the settlement. The covenant is subsisting. Speake v. Speake, 1 Vern. 217; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 220, pl. 7.

First Settlement set aside as against Second Wife.]—If A. in the lifetime of his first wife settles lands to the use of himself for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, and the wife dies without issue, and A., on his second marriage, agrees, in consideration of a portion paid, to settle part of lands as a jointure on his second wife, the court will set aside the first settlement as fraudulent against the second wife, who is a purchaser. Douglas v. Ward, 1 Ca. Ch. 100; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 220, pl. 10.

Grant of Rent-charge to Infant.]—Grant of rent-charge out of particular lands to an infant for her jointure, though grantor be evicted, being in equity a general agreement to grant rent-charge of that amount out of some lands, will bind infant if her guardian or parents assent to it. Corbett v. Corbett, 1 Sim. & S. 621; 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 108. Affirmed 5 Russ. 254; 7 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 9.

Articles on Marriage of Female Infant.]—By articles on marriage of an infant, in consideration of her portion, a suitable jointure was to be made on her when of age, in bar of dower, and she was to convey her lands to be limited to the husband in fee. The jointure was settled, and the wife, when of age, was a party to the deed, but she never conveyed her own estate, nor was she ever required so to do by her husband, though her dower exceeded her jointure. The husband died, and the wife entered upon the settled lands:—Held, she was not bound by the articles, nor by her acceptance of the jointure; she therefore kept her own estate and jointure also. Lucy v. Moore, Moseley, 59; 4 Bro. P. C. 343.

Covenant by Tenant for Life—To make additional Jointure.]—Tenant for life, with power to make a jointure of 100*l.* per annum for every 100*l.* which he has with his wife, covenants, on marriage, to make a jointure accordingly, and also to make an additional jointure on receiving, or becoming entitled to, any further money in right of the wife; after the death of the husband the wife becomes entitled to an additional fortune; she shall not compel the remainderman to make an additional jointure on her on this account; but on the other hand, the husband's creditors shall not take from the wife this additional fortune. Holt v. Holt, 2 P. Wms. 648.

—— To Jointure when in Possession—Incapacity to exercise Power.]—Devise of real estate to tenants for life in succession, with remainders over, with power to the tenants for life, when and as they should severally and successively be in possession, to appoint, by way of rent-charge, a jointure of a certain amount to any woman or women with whom they might intermarry. One of the tenants for life covenanted, on the occasion of his marriage, that, if he should come into the possession of the estates, he would execute the power of jointuring in favour of his wife. After this, and before coming into possession of the estates under the devise, he became of unsound mind, and continued so until his death, before which, however, he had become entitled to the possession of the estates:—Held, that his widow was entitled to have the rent-charge enforced by way of jointure against the estates, under the covenant made by her deceased husband on his marriage with her. Affleck v. Affleck, 26 L. J., Ch. 358; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 326; 5 W. R. 425.

—— Death without making Jointure.]—A., tenant for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, remainder to B. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, remainder to C., with a power to B. after A.'s death without issue, to make a jointure; B. married in the life of A., and before marriage covenanted to make a jointure, and to execute his power when in possession. A. died without issue, and B. survived, but died without making a jointure. B.'s widow brought a bill against C. to have a jointure made, because B., surviving A., might have executed his power, and might have covenanted so to do; decreed. Alford v. Alford, Gilb. 167. And see Hervey v. Hervey, 1 Atk. 561.

Covenant by Tenant in Tail.]—Tenant in tail covenants to settle a jointure and dies. Issue in tail not bound by the covenant. Clifford (Lord) v. Burlington (Earl), 2 Vern. 371.

Father being tenant for life, and son tenant in tail in remainder of an estate, a settlement was made, wherein was a power for the son, when in possession, to make a jointure. Father and son enter into a general covenant (without reciting or referring to the power), that the son within twelve months shall make a jointure on a then intended wife; the father dies within twelve months, and the son takes possession, and dies without making any settlement; the estate is bound in the hands of the remainderman. Jackson v. Jackson, 4 Bro. C. C. 462.

Tenant in tail, with power to make a jointure in consideration of marriage, articled to make one, but died without doing it, and without issue; then his wife died, and her administratrix brought a bill for an account of the profits and lands articled to be settled. Bill dismissed, the power remaining unexecuted. Elliot v. Hele, 1 Vern. 406.

Marriage Settlement—Grant of Rent-charge—Incorrect Recital that Settlor was seised in Fee.]—A. became a party to a settlement, executed on the marriage of his nephew, and granted to the intended wife an annuity, to commence after his death, charged on lands of which he declared himself entitled at law or in equity to an estate in fee simple. He gave her a power of distraining on these lands for the annuity (subject, however, to any charge on them which he had created or might create for his own wife), and he also created a term of years in the same lands, which he assigned to trustees to hold for the purpose of satisfying the annuity by entry and distress subject as aforesaid. On A.'s death proceedings were instituted by other parties in chancery, and a decree was pronounced declaring that he was only entitled to a life estate in the lands which he had charged. The annuity fell into arrear:—Held, that the settlement gave the annuitant a right to proceed against the personal estate of the grantor for satisfaction of the annuity. Monypenny v. Monypenny, 9 H. L. Cas. 114; 31 L. J., Ch. 269.

C. PROPERTY OUT OF WHICH JOINTURE PAYABLE.

Rent-charge on Estates—Devise of part of Estate to Wife for Life.]—A., on his marriage, grants a rent-charge to his wife out of his estates for her jointure, which he secures by a term limited to trustees. By his will he gives his mansion-house and park to his wife for life, and the rest of his estates to B., and directs that the repairs, painting, &c., of his mansion-house shall be paid for by sale of timber on the premises devised to B., and then he confirms the settlement:—Held, that the jointure is wholly raisable out of those premises. Powell v. Grigby, 3 Cl. & F. 103; 9 Bligh (N.S.) 646. And see Knight v. Calthorpe, 1 Vern. 347; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 33, pl. 6.

Real and Personal Estate—Real Estate Charged.]—A., on marriage with M., settled a jointure on her, with the approbation of B., his father, who witnessed the deed. A. died, leaving a large personal estate, and made M. executrix. Afterwards B. discovered that A. was only tenant for life, with remainder to himself in fee, and he recovered at law. Per cur., it is plain that the father thought the son had the fee, and that he knew of the settlement: considering, therefore, the near relationship of father and son, the widow shall not be compelled to resort to the son's covenant, and compel the jointure to be made good out of his personal estate. Teasdale v. Teasdale, Select Ca. Ch. 59.

By a settlement in contemplation of marriage, reciting that the intended husband being entitled to certain real estate it was agreed, on the treaty for the marriage, that he should secure to the intended wife, in case she should survive him, a certain annuity by way of jointure, "in manner thereinafter expressed," the husband demised certain real estate to trustees for a long term of years upon the trusts thereinafter declared, and then covenanted that his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns should pay the jointure to his wife surviving him upon certain specified days; and the covenant was followed by a declaration that the demised lands were to be held upon trust for the settlor until some default in making any of the payments of the jointure; and in case of non-payment of any part for forty days next after any day of payment, then upon trust to secure the same:—Held, that as between the real and personal representatives of the settlor, the land was the primary fund for payment of the jointure, because the jointure was not in satisfaction of any debt due from the settlor at the time of executing the settlement, nor had his personal estate been augmented by any consideration given for it; and therefore the presumption was that a primary charge upon the land was intended; and that presumption was not rebutted by anything in the recitals or in the form of the deed of settlement. Loosemore v. Knapman, Kay, 123; 2 Eq. R. 710; 23 L. J., Ch. 174; 2 W. R. 664.

By articles of separation, dated in June, 1834, the defendant agreed that he would, on or before the 1st of February, 1835, effectually, by a charge on freehold estates, or by investment of an adequate sum of money, or by the best means which might then be in his power, secure to the plaintiff, his wife, an annuity of 1,000*l*. In December, 1834, a deed of arrangement was executed between the defendant and his son, by which certain family estates were conveyed to trustees to raise money for the payment of various incumbrances, afterwards to such uses as the defendant and his son should appoint, and in default of appointment to the defendant for life, and then to his son absolutely, with a power for the defendant to jointure his then present or any future wife to the extent of 1,000*l*. per annum:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have her jointure raised out of the estates, as against the defendant and his son. Mornington (Countess) v. Mornington (Earl), 17 Sim. 59; 18 L. J., Ch. 442.

Estates liable to Contribute Ratably.]—The owner of estates in the counties of Oxford and Berks covenanted on his marriage to convey such part of them to trustees as should be of the annual value of 900*l.*, to the use of himself for life, with remainder to the use and intent that his intended wife should yearly receive for her jointure 800*l.*, to be charged upon the same hereditaments. The settlor, not having made any settlement in pursuance of the covenant by his will confirming the settlement, devised his estates in the counties of Oxford and Berkshire to his wife for life. He afterwards by deed revoked his will as to the estates in Oxfordshire, which consequently on his death descended to his heir-at-law. The jointress insisted that she was entitled to the Berkshire estate for her life, free from any contribution towards her jointure, and that the Oxfordshire estates were exclusively liable to satisfy the covenant:—Held, that as no intention to benefit the jointress to the extent for which she contended appeared on the face of the will, the two estates were liable to contribute ratably to the satisfaction of the covenant. Eyre v. Green, 2 Coll. C. C. 527; 10 Jur. 384.

Charge of Jointure on Estate in Possession, and also on Estate in Remainder.]—G. S., being seised in fee in possession of X., and of a remainder in fee expectant on the death of J. in Z., upon his marriage charged X. and Z. with a jointure; and it was provided that during the life of Q. the jointure should be borne by X., and that if J. should die in the lifetime of the wife (which happened), the jointure should issue out of Z., and no part of it out of X. X. was settled on the issue of the marriage, and Z. was limited to G. S. and his heirs. And it was provided that upon G. S. charging other lands of his with the jointure, the lands of X. and Z. should be discharged therefrom. And G. S. covenanted to charge 3,000*l.* for children's portions, and that it should be the first charge on all property of which he should die seised or possessed, and have a priority of all other charges thereon:—Held, 1. That as between the lands of X. and Z., the lands of Z. were bound to indemnify the lands of X. against the jointure. 2. That the 3,000*l.* being a charge upon such property only of G. S. as he died seised or possessed of, it became on his decease a charge upon X., and was puisne to the jointure. Sullivan v. Sullivan, 2 Jo. & Lat. 769; Ir. R. 8 Eq. 685.

Jointure charged on two estates by marriage settlement how to be borne as between the estates. S. C., 1 Jo. & Lat. 678; Ir. R. 7 Eq. 453. And see Wigsell v. Smith, 1 Sim. & S. 321; 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 121.

Settlement of Real and Personal Property—Arrears of Jointure payable out of Corpus.]—By a marriage settlement real and personal property of the husband, and 3,000*l.*, the wife's fortune, were vested in trustees, to receive the rents and interest, and to pay head-rents, and then to pay the residue of the rents and interest to the husband for life; and after his decease that the wife and her assigns during her life should receive a jointure with a power of distress and entry during her life to the intent that she might be satisfied and paid the jointure and all arrears, and "subject as aforesaid to the jointure," for the issue of the marriage; and, in default of such issue, as to the husband's property, for him, and as to the 3,000*l.*, the wife's property, for such person as she should appoint, and in default of appointment to her executors. There was no issue of the marriage:—Held, that arrears of jointure due at the wife's death were payable out of the corpus of all the property put in settlement as against the persons entitled under the ultimate limitation. Carter v. Salt, Ir. R. 1 Eq. 97.

The wife, by a deed executed during the husband's lifetime, appointed the 3,000*l.*, after her death, to trustees for scheduled creditors of the husband. By a deed executed after the husband's death, reciting the power and the former appointment, that she had been advised that it was voluntary and inoperative, and that she was still minded to appoint or dispose of the 3,000*l.* so that it should be applied ratably among the scheduled creditors, she revoked the former appointment, and irrevocably appointed 3,000*l.* to the trustees of the former deed, in trust after her death to pay and divide the same ratably among the scheduled creditors, who were parties to the deed:—Held, that the latter did not operate as a release of the 3,000*l.* from the jointure; and that that fund was subject, with the other property in the settlement, to the arrears of the jointure due at the wife's death. Ib.

Charge on Plantation and Slaves—Compensation-Money liable for Arrears.]—A jointure was charged upon a plantation and slaves in the Island of St. V., and secured by powers of distress and entry, and by a term vested in trustees, upon the usual trusts to raise the arrears by sale, mortgage, &c. Subject to the jointure, the estate was charged with a large sum for portions. Subsequently to the creation of both charges the slaves were by law manumitted, and a considerable sum paid by way of compensation in respect of them. The jointure having fallen into arrear:—Held, that this compensation-money was applicable for the payment of such arrears, on a suit being instituted for that purpose; but that the persons interested in the portions, and the owner of the estate subject to the jointure and portions, were necessary parties to such suit. Greatheed v. Elliot, 15 Jur. 986.

Covenant to secure Jointure out of Estates to be afterwards acquired—Estate contracted to be purchased and again sold.]—A wife had a jointure secured on her husband's estate, X. In 1844 the husband contracted to purchase an estate, Y.; and to enable him to sell the estate, X., the wife in 1845 released her jointure, and he then covenanted to secure it out of "estates he should thereafter acquire." Before the estate Y. had been conveyed, the husband contracted to sell it:—Held, that in equity the estate Y. was charged with the jointure. Warde v. Warde, 16 Beav. 103.

Stock produced by sale of Real Estate under London Dock Act.]—Stock produced by a sale of real estate under the London Dock Act, 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 47, subject to jointure, considered as real estate, the original character not having been displaced by a complete conversion. Shard v. Shard, 14 Ves. 348.

Charge on Life Estate.]—A., upon the occasion of his marriage, in exercise of the usual powers of jointuring, and of charging portions, executed a deed, whereby he limited a jointure to his intended wife, to commence after his own decease, and also a term of years, to commence after the decease of the survivor, to secure portions for younger children. By another deed he affected to charge other estates, of which he was merely tenant for life in remainder, without any power of jointuring or of charging portions, with an additional jointure and portions, and covenanted that he would, as soon as he should be entitled to the possession, convey the estates specified therein, and all other hereditaments to which he then was or thereafter might be entitled for any estate of freehold or inheritance to the same uses, for the purpose of securing the additional jointure and portions, as were contained in the prior settlement for securing the jointure and portions thereby already charged. A. subsequently incumbered his life estate in remainder. Upon its falling into possession :—Held, that the second deed did not create a charge on the life estate, or confer any right to have the rents impounded during the life of A. to satisfy the additional jointure or portions, and that the incumbrancers were entitled to priority over the jointress and younger children. Ford v. Tynte, 2 De G. J. & S. 557 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 452 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 402 ; 12 L. T. 512 ; 13 W. R. 643. And see Monypenny v. Monypenny, supra, col. 493.

Devise in Strict Settlement.]—Devise, subject as to part to a devise to trustees and their heirs, for debts, in aid of the personal estate, and as to part to mortgages in fee to sons and a daughter, and their respective issue male in strict settlement, &c., with power to the sons respectively, when in possession, to convey and appoint all or any part to trustees on trust, by the rents and profits, to raise a rent-charge as and for a jointure for any wife or wives, for each such wife's natural life only, and also to charge portions by deed and to lease for twenty-one years. Execution of the power by conveyance to trustees and their heirs on trust, by the rents and profits, to raise and pay a jointure during the wife's natural life only, and charging portions with covenant for title, and for quiet enjoyment by the trustees during the natural life only of the wife. As to the estate of the trustees at law, quære ; the Court of King's Bench certifying that they took an estate in fee ; and the Court of Common Pleas, that they took no estate whatsoever. Wykham v. Wykham, 18 Ves. 395.

The mode of executing such a power is limiting a rent-charge to the wife by way of jointure, secured, if not by the ordinary power of entry and distress, by a trust term for ninety-nine years, with a proviso for cesser on payment of the jointure during her life, and all arrears at her death. Ib.

Devise in strict settlement, with power to the tenants for life to jointure, on condition that two-thirds of the portion should, upon such marriage, be settled, one-third upon the eldest son of the marriage, and one other third upon the younger children. Upon the intention that the settlement should be conformable to the limitations of the real estate, a trust for the father for life was established, and the interest of the eldest son was not to be devested, except by his death under twenty-one, without issue male. Burrell v. Crutchley, 15 Ves. 544.

Testator directed a settlement to be made of his estates, and a power to be inserted in it enabling the tenant for life to jointure any wife or wives, at one or several times, to the extent of one-fifth part of the then ordinary annual rental of the estates :—Held, that the settlement ought to authorise the tenant for life to charge the estates with a clear yearly rent-charge not exceeding one-fifth of the yearly rent of the estates payable at the time of creating the charge. Trevor v. Trevor, 13 Sim. 108 ; 11 L. J., Ch. 417 ; 6 Jur. 863.

Devisees of Settled Estates—Apportionment—Fluctuating Income—Capital Value.]—A testator, pursuant to a power of appointment, limited certain settled estates as to part to his eldest son in tail, and as to the residue to his younger children as tenants in common in tail, the whole being charged under the settlement with payment of a jointure to his widow. The income of the part appointed to the eldest son was of fluctuating value, being derived mainly from mineral produce ; the income of the residue was derived solely from surface rents :—Held, that the jointure, being a charge on the annual income of the whole, must be apportioned as between the appointees in proportion to the actual income received in each year, and not in proportion to the capitalised value of their respective shares. Ley v. Ley, 37 L. J., Ch. 328 ; L. R. 6 Eq. 174 ; 18 L. T. 126 ; 16 W. R. 509.

Devise of Real Estate and Bequest of Personal Estate for Purchase of Land subject to Powers—Liability of Devised Estate to Charges.]—Real estate was settled with powers to the tenant for life to charge jointure and portions. On his marriage he in part exercised these powers and charged the settled estate, but not to the full extent authorised. At a subsequent period a testator devised real estate and bequeathed his residuary personal estate to be laid out in the purchase of land, to such of the uses and subject to such of the powers declared of the settled estate as should be subsisting at his death, but not so as to increase or multiply any charges or powers of charging. The tenant for life and the tenant in tail of the settled estate executed, after the testator's death, a disentailing assurance of all the properties subject to the settlement :—Held, that the devised estate and the residuary personal estate were not subject to the charges existing at the date of the testator's death ; that a release of his still-existing powers of charging ought to be executed by the tenant for life ; and that the trustees of the testator's will were thereupon bound to pay the residuary personalty to the tenant for life and tenant in tail on their joint receipt. Berners, In re, Berners v. Calvert, 3 R. 153 ; 67 L. T. 849 ; 41 W. R. 188.

Priorities—Portions—Jointure.]—Where a sum of money was charged upon land, in exercise of a power exercisable by the donee for his own benefit, and parts of the sum were irrevocably appointed by the same deed to certain persons, the residue being left subject to future appointment :—Held, that the parties entitled to the aliquot parts so appointed had priority over subsequent appointees of the residue. Creagh's Estate, In re, 25 L. R., Ir. 128.

—— Postponement of Jointure in favour of Mortgagee of Portion.]—Lands were subject to a jointure, and, as a next charge, to a sum for portions. The second appointee in date of the portion-money mortgaged his share, and the jointress postponed her jointure in favour of the mortgagee:—Held, that the postponement was to be treated as an equitable assignment, and that the jointress had not thereby postponed her jointure to the first appointee's share. Rights and priorities of the parties considered. Armstrong, In re, [1895] 1 Ir. R. 87.

D. PAYMENT OF JOINTURE.

1. Deficiency in Value of Property Charged.

When Value Estimated.]—Where lands of a specific annual value are settled in jointure, pursuant to a power, the value is to be estimated at the death of the husband. Londonderry (Countess) v. Wayne, 2 Eden, 170; Amb. 424.

Clear Yearly Value.]—Power to husband to make jointure not exceeding clear yearly value of 100*l.* for every 1,000*l.* portion; part of the portion is limited, the interest to the husband for life, then to increase younger children's fortune; if none, to survivor of husband or wife: this considered as received by him, as settled fairly for the family and for his benefit, and within interest of the power. "Clear" means, as at the time of making the jointure, and not during its continuance, which would make these powers fluctuating. "Clear" means, free from charges usually allowed between buyer and seller, and by the course of the country borne by tenant, but subject to land-tax, and those borne by landlord. Tyrconnel (Earl) v. Ancaster (Duke), 2 Ves. Sen. 500; Amb. 237.

Lands Expressed to be of certain Value.]—Where, in marriage articles, the lands agreed to be limited in jointure are expressed to be of the yearly value of 500*l.* and afterwards proved deficient, this amounts to an agreement that they were of that value, and is a sufficient foundation for making up the deficiency. Glegg v. Glegg, 4 Bro. P. C. 614.

Where lands are settled in jointure, and covenanted to be of 500*l.* per annum value, but the husband, afterwards discovering a defect in the title, settles other lands as an additional jointure, and declares them to be in recompense of all deficiencies, either in title or value of the lands before settled; the jointress shall have lands of the full value of 500*l.* per annum, over and above the other lands, and all other provisions made for her by her husband's will. Grove v. Hooke, 4 Bro. P. C. 593.

How Deficiency made up.]—Lands settled on A. for life, for her jointure, are covenanted to be of a certain clear yearly value; after the death of the husband the jointure lands turn out deficient. The jointress is entitled to have the deficiency made good out of other lands, and to come in as a specialty creditor upon the husband's estate for the arrears of the deficiency, with interest. Parker v. Harvey, 4 Bro. P. C. 604; 14 Vin. Abr. 458, pl. 16.

A. covenanted that lands settled were 400*l.* per annum; the jointure being deficient, decreed, the heir shall make it good in specie. Speake v. Speake, 1 Vern. 217; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 220, pl. 7.

Tenant for life, with power to make a jointure of 1,000*l.* per annum on his marriage, covenanted to make such a jointure on his wife; afterwards he gave a particular of lands, mentioned to be of 1,000*l.* per annum value, which were settled accordingly; but they proved to be worth only 600*l.* per annum:—Decreed, to be made up 1,000*l.* per annum, by the issue in tail. Clifford (Lady) v. Burlington (Lord), 2 Vern. 379; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 345, pl. 17.

P. L., being seised for his life of Blackacre, with a power of jointuring to the extent of one-third of the clear yearly rents and profits thereof, and being also seised of Whiteacre in fee, by marriage articles reciting that he was seised of Blackacre, but not specifying for what estate, charged Blackacre with a jointure of 400*l.* a year for his intended wife, with the usual power of distress; and the articles further provided, that if such distress on Blackacre should be ineffectual, the jointress should, in the event, enter upon and distrain Whiteacre for the arrear of the jointure. The 500*l.* a year exceeded one-third of the clear yearly value of Blackacre, and the jointure being in arrear, and a distress upon Blackacre proving ineffectual:—Held, that Whiteacre was liable to the difference between one-third of the yearly value of Blackacre, and the 500*l.* per annum. Locke v. Darley, 2 Dr. & War. 256; 1 Con. & L. 406.

A. devised his estate (subject to debts and legacies) to his daughter, in strict settlement, remainder over; the estate not being sufficient to keep down the interest during the life of a jointress by a prior settlement (who lived two years), though more than sufficient afterwards, an arrear of interest accrued:—Held, that the whole profits during the daughter's estate shall be applied to keep down the interest, and the surplus arising on the death of the jointress, having accrued to the trust estate, shall be applied to answer the former deficiency, so as not to charge the remainder; but the daughter being a child unprovided for, shall have maintenance. Revel v. Watkinson, 1 Ves. Sen. 93.

A., upon his marriage with B., settles lands of 400*l.* per annum for her jointure, and covenants that, if the particular lands so settled should not yield 400*l.* per annum clear, B. should have so much of the rents of the residue of the settled estate as should make up the said 400*l.* per annum. A. being attainted of high treason, his estate becomes forfeited, and was granted by the crown to S. The particular jointure lands did not amount to 400*l.* per annum:—Held, that the jointress is entitled, as against S., to have the deficiency made good. Eustace v. Keightly, 4 Bro. P. C. 588.

A fund was vested in trustees during the joint lives of husband and wife, to pay out of the income to the wife 200*l.* a year, and if she survived her husband, then during the rest of her life 500*l.* a year, and subject thereto for the husband. And the husband covenanted that if the income should become less than 500*l.* a year, he would add to the fund, so as to make up the income to that amount. The income during the husband's life was reduced below 500*l.* The husband devised his real estate to his wife for life, and directed his personal estate to be converted and invested in land to be settled to the same uses:—Held, that the widow was entitled to have the annuity fund made up to 500*l.* a year, and then to have the husband's reversionary interest in it sold, and the proceeds invested according to the will. Harrington (Countess) v. Atherton, 2 De

G. J. & S. 352 ; 4 N. R. 206 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1088 ; 11 L. T. 291 ; 13 W. R. 62.

By a settlement, reciting an agreement to provide a jointure for the intended wife, but not stating the amount, the intended husband covenanted with the trustees to convey to them certain lands, then held in trust for him, upon trust, after his death, to permit the intended wife, during her life, to take out of the land an annuity of 220*l.*, with power of distress and right of entry ; and the settlor covenanted to do all such other acts as should be necessary for the further and better assuring the annuity according to the true intent and meaning of the deed ; the lands having proved, after the husband's death, insufficient to pay the annuity in full :—Held, that there was nothing in the settlement amounting to a covenant for or warranty of the adequacy of the lands for payment of the annuity in full, and that the personal assets of the settlor were not liable to make good the deficiency. Weldon v. Bradshaw, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 168.

Delay in Enforcing Covenant to make up Deficiency.]—J. made a settlement on his eldest son for life, remainder to his first, &c., sons in tail, remainder over, with power for his son to jointure any wife he should afterwards marry to the extent of 100*l.* per annum. The father died, and the son married a woman to whom, after marriage, he appointed certain lands in trust for her, for a jointure, and he covenanted that, if they were not of the value of 100*l.* per annum, he would make good the deficiency at any time during his life ; he lived several years, but no complaint was ever made of the value of the land, nor was he requested to make good any deficiency. Upon his death without issue, the widow brought her bill to have her jointure made up 100*l.* per annum, and it was so decreed ; a covenant to provide for a wife not being voluntary, and as to her not requiring it before, no laches can be imputed to a feme covert. Fothergill v. Fothergill, 2 Free. C. C. 256 ; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 222, pl. 9.

Part of Lands settled subsequently Aliened.]—A., on his marriage, agreed to settle lands for the benefit of his wife and their issue, and afterwards aliened part of the lands :—Decreed, that the jointress shall have the deficiency of her jointure made good out of the inheritance of the lands remaining unsold. Carpenter v. Carpenter, 1 Vern. 440 ; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 222, pl. 9.

Increase or Decrease in value of Lands settled.]—If, by accident, after the execution of a power, there is an excess in the lands settled on the jointress, she shall have the benefit ; and by parity of reason, if there is a deficiency by inundation or casualty, she must acquiesce under it. Blandford v. Marlborough, 2 Atk. 544.

2. In what Currency Jointure Paid.

Sterling lawful Money of Ireland.]—Prior to the passing of the act for assimilating the currencies of England and Ireland, an English lady married an Irish gentleman. By their settlement, which was executed at Bath, where the marriage was solemnised, it was recited that the gentleman had agreed to charge certain of his estates in Ireland with the payment of a rent-charge of 1,000*l.* a year to the lady for life, in case she should survive him, but the sum secured to her by the deed was expressed to be 1,000*l.* a year sterling lawful money of Ireland :—Held, nevertheless, that she was entitled to 1,000*l.* a year sterling. Cope v. Cope, 15 Sim. 118 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 274.

Lawful Money of Great Britain.]—Power in a marriage settlement to grant to a wife any annual sum of money, or yearly rent-charge, to be tax free, and without any deduction, and to be issuing out of and chargeable upon lands in Ireland, so that such rent-charge do not exceed in the whole the yearly sum of 3,000*l.* of lawful money of Great Britain :—Held, that a rent-charge appointed under this power is payable in Ireland in the currency of England ; but that the appointee is not entitled to have the sum transmitted to England free of the charge of conveyance and exchange properly so-called. The lex loci contractus, and the law applicable to cases of money charged as a rent payable out of land, where no provision as to the place of payment is made by the instrument, are inapplicable to a case where the instrument itself furnishes the means of interpretation. In ambiguous contracts the domicile of the parties, the place of execution, the purpose, and the various provisions of the instrument, are material to be considered in the construction. Lansdowne v. Lansdowne, 2 Bligh, 60 ; 21 R. R. 43.

3. Arrears and Interest.

Non-application of Statute of Limitations.]—A., being entitled to a jointure of 480*l.*, charged on lands producing only 240*l.* a year, went into possession of the lands in 1800. In 1835 the rental was increased, so as to leave a large surplus after paying the jointure, and she continued in possession :—Held, that the Statute of Limitations did not apply, and she was entitled to the entire arrears accumulating from 1800. Battersby v. Rochford, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 439. And see Carter v. Salt, and Greatheed v. Elliot, supra, cols. 495, 496.

Right of Personal Representative to enforce Payment.]—On the death of the husband, the remainderman refused to pay the jointure, and the wife refused to pay an annuity which she had agreed with her husband to pay to a creditor. No attempt was made during her life to enforce payment of either :—Held, that her executrix might sustain a bill for payment of the arrears of the jointure, although the wife had not performed her part of the contract by paying the annuity. Baldwin v. Roche, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 110.

Rents received by Receiver.]—A receiver over a life estate continued in receipt of the rents after the death of the tenant for life, whose widow subsequently obtained a decree against the remainderman, appointing the same receiver over the lands, for an arrear of jointure :—Held, that the rents received by the receiver between the death of the tenant for life and the decree belonged to the remainderman as bygone rents. Guinness v. Cottingham, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 109.

—— Jurisdiction of Court of Chancery in Ireland to appoint Receiver.]—Maultby v. Maultby, 2 Ir. Ch. R. 32. Goodwin v. Jeffreys, 1 Dr. & Wal. 375.

Interest.]—A jointure was made of an estate, let for five years, at 17*l.* per annum, but worth 108*l.* per annum. The husband covenanted, by quarterly payments, to make up the jointure 108*l.* per annum during the five years. This is a personal covenant for payment of a sum in gross, and interest shall be allowed on the quarterly payments, but no taxes. Lysons v. Vernon, Select Ca. Ch. 25.

Interest not allowed on arrears of jointure except on a very special case indeed. Anon., 2 Sen. Ves. 661.

Interest not given upon arrears of maintenance any more than upon arrears of a jointure. Mellish v. Mellish, 14 Ves. 516; 9 R. R. 335.

4. Postponement of Payment.

Death of Tenant for Life.] — Fee-simple, freehold and leasehold lands were limited to A. for life, remainder to B. in tail, by a settlement executed on B.'s marriage, and reciting that B. could not obtain A.'s consent to bar his estate tail. B., in order to defeat his estate tail in remainder, and to convey a base fee to the trustees, conveyed these lands, subject to the life estate of A., to the use of himself for life, and after his decease, upon trust that his intended wife, in case she should survive him, should, after his decease, during the remainder of her life, receive a jointure out of the lands; the first payment thereof to be made on such of the gale days as should first happen after the decease of B., with a clause of entry and distress on nonpayment for twenty-one days after any of the days of payment, remainder after the death of B. to trustees for 300 years, to secure portions for younger children, remainder to the first and other sons of the marriage in tail male, remainder over. The wife's fortune was conveyed to the trustees in trust to pay the interest, after the decease of B. in the lifetime of A., to the wife, until she should become entitled to receive the jointure; and in case B. should survive A., or he should obtain A.'s consent to bar the estate tail, in trust for B. absolutely. B. died in the lifetime of A.:—Held, that the jointure did not become payable until after A.'s death. Leonard v. Leonard, 9 Ir. Ch. R. 388.

E. INCUMBRANCES.

Redemption — Contribution.] — An estate in jointure was subject to a mortgage; the jointress and reversioner must redeem in proportion, the jointress one-third and the reversioner two-thirds. So, if an estate subject to a mortgage is devised to A. for life, remainder to B. in fee, they may redeem in the same proportion. Flud v. Flud, 2 Free. C. C. 210.

If jointress, who is to hold land free from incumbrances, pays off precedent mortgage, her executors shall hold over till satisfied, for such tenant for life ought to be reimbursed; but if jointress after marriage joins husband in fine, and mortgages land, and husband dies, her land is charged, and she shall contribute to disburden land, and her executors shall not hold till satisfaction made, for she herself concurred in incumbrance. Cornish v. Mew, 1 Ca. Ch. 271. And see Brond v. Brond, 2 Ca. Ch. 100.

If a feme covert joins with her husband in a fine and mortgage of her jointure lands, there results a trust for her when the mortgage is paid to have the lands again; so if a jointure is made of lands which are mortgaged, the wife may redeem, and her executors shall hold over till paid with interest. Bertue v. Stile, 1 Ch. Ca. 271. S. P., Haymer v. Haymer, 2 Vent. 343.

Where the issue and jointress claim by the same settlement, if there be a prior incumbrance, the jointress shall contribute, and not lay the whole burden on the heir. Carpenter v. Carpenter, 1 Vern. 440.

Lien.]—A wife has a lien upon the estate of her husband and his father where they are parties to the marriage contract, and the wife's portion is paid to the son. So if the fortune is paid to the father, or to clear incumbrances. Probert v. Morgan, 1 Atk. 440.

Land charged with Portion.]—A. charges land in D. with a portion for a daughter by a first wife, and then marries and settles part of these lands for the jointure of a second wife, who has no notice of the charge. A. believing the portion would take the place of the jointure, by will, gives other lands in E. in lieu thereof. The wife by combination with the heir, refuses to accept the devise:—Decreed, the daughter should hold the lands in D. till her portion was paid. Reeve v. Reeve, 1 Vern. 219; 2 Vent. 363; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 220, pl. 3.

Parties confirming Jointress's Settlement.]—Parties entitled to an estate, confirming a jointress's settlement, are purchasers of her interest in incumbrances paid off by her fortune, which had been assigned for the better securing her rights under the settlement. Portsmouth (Earl) v. Suffolk (Lady), 1 Ves. Sen. 31.

F. DISCOVERY OF DEEDS.

Position of Jointress.] — A jointress is not bound to answer whether her husband had no other title than as assignee of a mortgage. She denying she had any notice of the mortgage, and that her husband told her he was in by descent. Stephens v. Gaule, 2 Vern. 701; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 220, pl. 15.

A jointress is not obliged to bring her deed into court, unless the party requiring it will confirm it. Petre v. Petre, 3 Atk. 511.

A jointress had her own part of the marriage settlement in her custody, and became possessed of her husband's as his executrix; on motion, she was ordered to produce it to the clerk in court, but not to deliver it up, that being the very end of the bill. Aston v. Aston, 3 Atk. 302.

A jointress or purchaser ought to produce their deed, to see if the lands they claim are comprised therein. Ib.

Though an offer be made to confirm a widow's jointure, she is not obliged to discover the title deeds by her answer, or until the offer is effectuated; she must, however, state the date of her jointure deed, whether it was executed at that time, and the premises therein comprised. Leech v. Trollop, 2 Ves. Sen. 662.

Primâ facie title deeds are property in the custody of tenant for life, and may be taken from a jointress upon her jointure being confirmed. Ford v. Peering, 1 Ves. 76.

Right of Heir.]—The heir is not entitled to see any deeds in the hands of the jointress, without confirming her jointure, though the jointure was made after marriage. Towers v. Davys, 1 Vern. 479; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 220, pl. 14.

1. WHAT IS.

a. Decree in Equity.

A final decree upon a sum ascertained, is equal to a judgment; but a mere decree for an account of plaintiff's demand, and of the personal estate come to the hands of defendant, with mere direction for payment out of the result of that account, does not prevent the executor paying a judgment. Perry v. Phelips, 10 Ves. 33; 7 R. R. 331.

A decree in a suit instituted against an executor by a simple contract creditor of the testator, for payment of his own debt merely, directing the executor to pay out of the assets of the testator, does not give any priority over outstanding specialty creditor, of whose debts the executor has notice. Such a decree is analogous to a judgment at law of assets quando acciderint. Sandford v. Seymour, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 212.

By a decree to account, made by the court in 1786, in a suit in which the inheritance was represented by the first tenant in tail, a sum was declared to be a charge on certain lands. The tenant in tail afterwards died without issue, and the next tenant in tail in remainder was made a party by a bill of revivor, and there was a report of the sum due, and a final decree for a sale in 1793. In a suit to raise the charge by a sale of the lands:—Held, that the decree to account gave a good title to a charge on the lands, though there was error in the subsequent proceedings, the suit being continued by bill of revivor only. Bolton v. Fairlough, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 229.

b. Under Judgment Acts.

1 & 2 Vict. c. 110—Decree for Payment of Money—Payment into Court.]—An order of the Court of Chancery, requiring the defendants in a suit to pay a certain sum into the bank, with the privity of the accountant-general, to the credit of the cause, is not an order which has the effect of a judgment. Gibbs v. Pike, 8 M. & W. 223; 9 D. P. C. 131; 10 L. J., Ex. 309. S. C., 9 M. & W. 351; 1 D. (N.S.) 409; 12 L. J., Ex. 257; 6 Jur. 465.

A decree directing payment to the credit of a cause, does not constitute a plaintiff a judgment creditor of the defendant under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. Ward v. Shakeshaft, 2 L. T. 203; 8 W. R. 335.

—— Account and Payment.]—A party who has obtained a decree for an account of what is due to him, and payment of what shall be found due, cannot, pending the account, obtain a charging order under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, on the property of the defendant, such a decree not being a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of that section. Chadwick v. Holt, 8 De G. M. & G. 584; 26 L. J., Ch. 76; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 918; 4 W. R. 791.

By a decree the lands of the defendant were declared chargeable with 40*l.* a year, and the master was directed to take an account of the arrears, and the defendant was ordered to pay what was found due:—Held, that the defendant was not, under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 17 and 18, liable to pay interest on the amount found due from the date of the decree to the date of the master's certificate. Att.-Gen. v. Carrington (Lord), 6 Beav. 454; 12 L. J., Ch. 453.

—— Master's Certificate.]—A certificate of the chief clerk finding money due is not "an order for payment" within the 18th section of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. Mansfield (Earl) v. Ogle, 4 De G. & J. 38; 28 L. J., Ch. 422; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 419; 7 W. R. 423.

—— Order against defaulting Executors or Trustees.]—As to the form of orders for payment against defaulting trustees when it is desired to register them as judgments. Wand v. Docker, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1287; 2 L. T. 82.

A decree in the court of equity, registered in the Court of Common Pleas, under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, declared that the executor of a testator was liable to make good to the testator's estate a certain sum of money, and that the executor should be charged with the amount in his account of the personal estate:—Held, that this decree did not constitute a judgment debt. Garner v. Briggs, 27 L. J., Ch. 483; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 230; 6 W. R. 378.

In a suit to administer the estate of the deceased executor, a decree registered under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, directed that an account should be taken of what was due to the estate, and that the plaintiff should go in and prove as a creditor for the amount certified to be so due:—Held, that the plaintiff could not claim as a judgment creditor, and was not entitled to any priority over specialty and simple contract creditors. Ib.

—— Judgment given to secure Annuity.]—A judgment given for securing an annuity carries interest. Knight v. Bowyer, 4 De G. & J. 619.

—— Costs.]—A rule for taxation of costs, and an allocatur thereon, do not amount to a rule or order within the meaning of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, so as to be capable of being registered as a judgment. The rule absolute for payment of the costs does not come within the enactment. Shaw v. Neale, 6 H. L. Cas. 581; 27 L. J., Ch. 444; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 695; 6 W. R. 635—H. L. (E.)

Under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, an order for payment of costs operates only as against purchasers, mortgagees, and creditors, from the registration of the certificate of taxation. Hargrave v. Hargrave, 23 Beav. 484.

A decree ordering payment of costs of suit is not binding on a subsequent purchaser, with notice of the suit, where the purchase has been completed prior to taxation or registration of the decree. Norteliffe v. Warburton, 31 L. J., Ch. 777; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 854; 6 L. T. 708; 10 W. R. 635.

The 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 17, applies as well to judgments for costs as for the subject-matter of the action. Pitcher v. Roberts, 2 D. (N.S.) 394; 12 L. J., Q. B. 178; 7 Jur. 466.

Interest may be recovered on a judgment for the costs of a nonsuit. Newton v. Conyngham (Lord), 17 L. J., C. P. 288—Ex. Ch. Affirming 5 C. B. 749; 17 L. J., C. P. 200; 12 Jur. 556.

Under the statute interest is recoverable on costs which one party is ordered to pay to another, but not on costs directed to be raised out of an estate. Att.-Gen. v. Nethercote, 11 Sim. 529; 10 L. J., Ch. 162.

—— Order in Lunacy.]—An order in lunacy directing the taxation of the costs, charges, and expenses incurred by the solicitors employed in prosecuting the commission in lunacy, and subsequently as the solicitors of the committees, and directing an inquiry whether it would be fit and proper to raise these costs, &c., by sale or mortgage of the lunatic's real estate, did not constitute them a judgment debt, nor make them a charge in equity upon such real estate; but such costs, &c., were considered as a simple contract debt due by the lunatic for necessaries. The lapse of six years during the lunatic's life will not bar a debt of this description, for the Court of Chancery will take judicial notice in a suit to obtain payment out of his assets after his death, that any action against the lunatic for the recovery of the claim would have been restrained by the Lord Chancellor on petition in lunacy. Stedman v. Hart, 1 Kay, 607; 2 Eq. R. 816; 23 L. J., Ch. 908; 18 Jur. 744; 2 W. R. 462.

—— Order of Court of Probate.]—A registered order of the Court of Probate does not create a charge on lands. Bull v. Hutchens, 32 Beav. 615.

An order of the Court of Probate directing the payment of a sum of money, does not, by being registered with the senior master of the Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, constitute a valid charge on land within the meaning of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18. Pratt v. Bull, 1 De G. J. & S. 141; 32 L. J., Ch. 144; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 239; 7 L. T. 702; 11 W. R. 294.

3 & 4 Vict. c. 105—Costs.]—An order dismissing a bill with costs, for want of prosecution, is an order within the meaning of the 27th section of the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105. Madden v. Davis, Fl. & K. 475.

The rule to change an attorney on payment of costs, is not an order under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, s. 29. Emmett v. Marnane, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 522.

23 & 24 Vict. c. 38—County Court—Judgment.]—The 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 3, applies equally to judgments of county courts as to other judgments. Turner, In re, Walter v. Turner, 33 L. J., Ch. 232; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 147; 9 L. T. 756; 12 W. R. 337.

2. CHARGE ON LANDS AND HEREDITAMENTS.

a. In What Cases.

What Judgments.]—Where a party dies after verdict and before judgment, his lands are bound in the hands of his heir, by a judgment entered up within two terms after verdict. Saunders v. M'Gowran, 12 M. & W. 221; 1 D. & L. 405; 13 L. J., Ex. 12.

Since 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112.]—The mere registration of a judgment upon which no writ of execution has issued constitutes no lien upon the debtor's lands. 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112, has in effect repealed 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13. Bailey's Trusts, In re, 38 L. J., Ch. 237; 20 L. T. 168; 17 W. R. 393.

Since 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112, a judgment creditor is not entitled to redeem, unless he issues execution and gets the return to the writ before the expiration of the six months allowed for redemption. Mildred v. Austin, L. R. 8 Eq. 220; 20 L. T. 939; 17 W. R. 638.

The return of the sheriff to an elegit constitutes actual delivery of the land in execution within the 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112. Champneys v. Burland, 23 L. T. 584; 19 W. R. 148.

The registration of the writ prior to the date of the return of the sheriff is not in disaccordance with the terms of s. 3. Ib.

A mortgagee, although without notice of any writ of elegit having been issued, is not entitled to tack a subsequent charge to his first mortgage on redemption by the tenant by elegit. Ib.

Lands have been "actually delivered in execution," within the meaning of the 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112, ss. 1 and 4, when sequestrators are in receipt of the rents and profits. Rush, In re, L. R. 10 Eq. 442; 39 L. J., Ch. 759.

And see Johnson v. Burgess, 42 L. J., Ch. 400; L. R. 15 Eq. 398; 28 L. T. 188; 21 W. R. 453.

A judgment creditor has no lien until he has got a return from the sheriff, though he may, after putting the writ in the hands of the sheriff, and before the return, have a right to file a bill to remove a legal impediment; and priorities of judgment creditors against lands are determined by the date at which the writs issued upon their judgments are placed in the hands of the sheriff. Guest v. Cowbridge Ry., 37 L. J., Ch. 909; L. R. 6 Eq. 619; 18 L. T. 871; 17 W. R. 7.

Equitable interests in lands are within the 1st section of the 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112. Therefore, if a judgment creditor who has sued out an elegit is unable to obtain delivery by the sheriff of his debtor's lands by reason of the legal estate being outstanding, he must apply to the Court of Chancery to remove the impediment, and the order of the court will be a delivery in execution within the statute. Hatton v. Haywood, 43 L. J., Ch. 372; L. R. 9 Ch. 229; 30 L. T. 279; 22 W. R. 356.

What Interest.]—By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13, the legislature meant that a judgment was to operate on all lands and interest in lands over which the debtor might have a disposing power, for his own benefit, without committing a breach of duty, that is over which he had a right, at law or in equity, to consider himself the beneficial owner. Kinderley v. Jervis, 22

Beav. 1; 25 L. J., Ch. 538; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 602; 4 W. R. 579.

Semble, the Mesne Process Acts (1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82) only give effect to the judgment where the debtor is the owner of the land, and not where, prior to the judgment, the land had passed from the hands of the debtor. Simmons v. Pettit, 8 Jur. 209.

By the act 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, it was the intention of the legislature to make property of a judgment debtor, which is in such a position that the creditor cannot lay hold of it, liable to the judgment. Watts v. Jefferyes, 3 Mac. & G. 422; 15 Jur. 435.

Where there is in the possession of any officer of the court property which proves to be liable to a creditor, or to be held for the sole benefit of any person, it is improper to seize it without an order of the court. Ib.

The right of a judgment creditor in possession under elegit is not analogous to that of a purchaser for value without notice, so as to give him a preference over a prior equitable claimant, the judgment only affecting that which was properly the estate of his debtor. Whitworth v. Gaugain, 1 Ph. 728; 15 L. J., Ch. 433; 10 Jur. 531.

The assignee of an insolvent is not a purchaser within the meaning of the acts for redocketing or registering judgments. Baylee v. Browne, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 180.

A judgment signed on a warrant of attorney, and duly registered:—Held, a charge on an annuity out of real estate, notwithstanding execution was not to issue until default made in payment of the sum secured at a future day, and with a defeasance altogether in the event of the defendant dying before the day of payment; but that such charge did not affect growing payments accruing due before the judgment debt became payable. Younghusband v. Gisborne, 1 De G. & Sm. 209; 10 Jur. 834.

A. was entitled to an annuity, which was secured by a covenant, and by an assignment of leaseholds, to her in trust to sell:—Held, that her interest under the deed might be made available under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13, for payment of a judgment debt due from her. Harris v. Davidson, 15 Sim. 128; 15 L. J., Ch. 255; 10 Jur. 257.

A., by articles of agreement, covenanted to pay B. 5,000*l.*, and it was thereby agreed and declared that the 5,000*l.* and interest should be and was thereby charged on land:—Held, that by virtue of the act 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13, a judgment creditor of B. had a charge upon such land, and was a proper party to a suit for foreclosure. Russell v. M'Culloch, 1 Kay & J. 313; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 157; 3 W. R. 280.

A debtor, having real estate, gave a judgment and warrant of attorney under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. Afterwards he became insolvent; the estate was sold:—Held, that the judgment creditor had an equitable interest in the money in priority over the assignees. Robinson v. Hedger, 17 Sim. 183; 19 L. J., Ch. 463; 14 Jur. 784.

Where, under a power to invest on real or government securities, a trust fund is invested on mortgages, a judgment creditor of one of the cestuis que trustent is entitled to a charge on his interest, to the extent of all moneys which may be payable to him out of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property or otherwise, by virtue of such mortgage. But the share of the judgment debtor in the interest paid to the trustees by the mortgagor, and not taken out of the rents and profits, is not subject to a charge under s. 13 of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, the covenant to pay being a security which falls under s. 12. Avison v. Holmes, 1 John. & H. 530; 30 L. J., Ch. 564; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 722; 4 L. T. 617; 9 W. R. 550.

Under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13, a judgment debt against a legatee is a charge upon property mortgaged to the testator, to the extent of the legatee's interest therein. Ib.

The interest of a person entitled to a share of the proceeds of real and leasehold estate, devised to trustees on an absolute trust (after the determination of a life-estate) for sale and conversion, has not such an interest in the lands (although not sold at the date of the judgment) as will be affected by a judgment registered in the Common Pleas, so as to give the judgment creditor priority over subsequent incumbrancers who have obtained charging orders on the fund arising from the sale. Thomas v. Cross, 2 Dr. & Sm. 423; 6 N. R. 18; 34 L. J., Ch. 580; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 384; 12 L. T. 293; 13 W. R. 647.

In November, 1809, W. conveyed reversion in fee to A., by way of mortgage. In January, 1810, E., on part of Duke of N., entered into written agreement with W. for purchase of reversion. In August, 1810, A., the mortgagee, who was paid off by E., joined with W. in conveying estate to E., and part of mortgage money then unpaid was secured to W. on mortgage term, created by that deed. In October, 1809, W. was indebted to F., upon bond of that date, and a warrant of attorney of same date was given by W., upon which judgment was entered up and docketed in February, 1810, and an inquisition was had same month. In April, 1810, notice was given by F. of his judgment, the money secured to W. by the mortgage term being then unpaid:—Held, that F. had no lien upon the term in hands of W., and consequently no lien on terms in hands of assignee. Forth v. Norfolk (Duke), 4 Madd. 503.

Vendors contracted to sell land, and the purchasers paid part of the purchase-money, and were let into possession, but were unable, from insolvency, to complete the contract. The vendors filed a bill for specific performance, and, in default, for resale. There were at that time registered judgments against the purchasers, but they were not made parties to the suit. The vendors obtained a decree for sale, and the land was sold by auction. A. bought one lot, and required that the judgment creditors should release their interests, as they were not parties to the suit:—Held, that the original purchasers, by entering into possession, had accepted the title, and had become owners in equity of the property, and that the judgment debts of their creditors attached, under the 13th section of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. Grey Coat Hospital (Governors) v. Westminster Improvement Commissioners, 1 De G. & J. 531; 26 L. J., Ch. 843; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 188; 6 W. R. 120.

The statute 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, applies to lands in which the judgment debtor has an equitable interest. Wallis v. Morris, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 741; 10 L. T. 709; 12 W. R. 997.

A judgment will not affect an equity of redemption as against a purchaser, unless a writ of execution is issued before completion of the purchase. Ib.

The 13th section of the act 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, does not confer on a judgment creditor any right against a person claiming under a voluntary settlement previously made by the judgment debtor. Beavan v. Oxford (Earl), 6 De G. M. & G. 507; 25 L. J., Ch. 299; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 121; 4 W. R. 275.

If a mortgagor sells the mortgaged estate, and pays off the mortgagee after the passing of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, s. 11, the estate in the hands of the purchaser ceases to be affected by a judgment which had been registered against the mortgagee, whether the mortgage be prior to or subsequent to the passing of the 18 Vict. c. 15. Greaves v. Wilson, 25 Beav. 434; 28 L. J., Ch. 103; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 802; 6 W. R. 482.

A judgment against a person having an equitable estate of lands of freehold, does not bind the lands in the hands of a person subsequently getting the legal estate, though the conusor of the judgment was a granting party in the conveyance of the legal estate. Hamilton v. Smith, 2 Moll. 482.

Although the purchaser before the conveyance has neither a legal nor an equitable right against the seller till he pays the purchase-money, yet for all purposes of disposition the equitable estate he obtains under the contract is subject to his control, and judgments obtained against him are a lien on it. Baldwin v. Belcher, 1 Jo. & Lat. 18; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 424.

The dominion of a tenant in tail in possession, over the estates of those in remainder and reversion, enabling him of his own will, and by his own act, without the assent of any other person, to extinguish those estates and acquire the fee simple for his own benefit, is not "a disposing power," within the meaning of the 19th section of the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105. The 22nd section of that act, making a judgment binding, not only as against the debtor, but "also against the issue of his body, and all other persons whom he might, without the assent of any other person, cut off and debar from any remainder, reversion, or other interest," creates an equitable charge only, which cannot be enforced otherwise than by a suit in equity. Fletcher v. Steele, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 376.

Judgments recovered against a lessee for lives renewable for ever, after the death of the lives named in the lease, will, on renewal, bind the land in the possession of a purchaser who has obtained a renewal with notice. Johns v. French, 1 Hog. 450. S. P., Langhorne v. Harland, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 872; 4 W. R. 696.

A covenant for perpetual renewal binds the land itself, and is to be regarded as an equitable contract for a perpetual interest in the land. Ib.

—— Proceeds of Sale.]—A father conveyed real estates to trustees, upon trust to sell, and repurchase annuities granted by his son, and pay the son's debts at their discretion, and subject thereto, upon trust for the father for life, with remainder to his son in fee. An annuitant mentioned in a schedule to the deed, and stated to have entered up and docketed a judgment upon a warrant of attorney which accompanied his security, has no lien by virtue of his judgment, upon the produce of the trust estates, when sold. Foster v. Blackstone, 1 Myl. & K. 297; 2 L. J., Ch. 84.

After verdict, and before judgment had been entered up, the defendant sold his leaseholds by auction:—Held, that under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, the plaintiff could not levy execution on the purchase-money. Brown v. Perrott, 4 Beav. 585.

A creditor having sued out execution on a judgment at law, and finding the interest of his debtor in a term of years to be an equitable interest, has a lien upon it in equity, without the aid of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13, and where, after such execution, the leasehold estate of the debtor had been sold:—Held, that the execution creditor had a lien on the proceeds of the sale. Gore v. Bowser, 3 Sm. & G. 1; 24 L. J., Ch. 316; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 392. Affirmed on appeal, 3 Eq. R. 561; 24 L. J., Ch. 440; 3 W. R. 430—L.JJ.

—— Power of Appointment.]—Where an estate is settled to the usual uses to bar dower, and then a judgment is entered up against the owner of the estate, and before execution is taken out, the owner of the estate appoints it to a purchaser, the judgment creditor's lien is defeated. Tunstall v. Trappes, Lawson's Case, 3 Sim. 300.

Notice to a purchaser of judgments against the vendor, whose estate is limited to uses to bar dower, does not prevent the purchaser from taking the estate free from the judgments, under an exercise of the power reserved to the vendor. Eaton v. Sanxter, 6 Sim. 517; 3 L. J., Ch. 197.

A mortgagee of lands in Middlesex, and who took under the exercise of a power of appointment by the mortgagor, held not to be bound by a judgment previously recovered against the mortgagor, and duly docketed and registered, although he had notice of the judgment, and part of the mortgage money was deposited with his solicitor as an indemnity against it. Skeeles v. Shearly, 3 Myl. & C. 112; 7 L. J., Ch. 3; 1 Jur. 888.

By Contract.]—By marriage settlement of the 13th of July, 1810, between Philip B. of the first part, Margaret B., his sister, of the second part, T. A. of the third part, and trustees of the fourth part, after reciting various unsettled demands which Margaret B. had upon her brother Philip, and that he had agreed to secure for her marriage portion the sum of 5,000*l.*, and that Margaret B. had, in consideration thereof, agreed to release Philip B. from her claims upon him, and that in pursuance thereof, Philip B. had given his bond and warrant in the sum of 10,000*l.* to the trustees of the settlement, the sum of 5,000*l.* was settled on certain trusts, and Margaret B. released Philip B. from the claims she had on him. This settlement contained an agreement "that any judgment to be entered on the bond should not affect or be a charge on the lands of K., part of the estate of Philip B., which said lands Philip B. intends to convey to trustees in strict settlement for family purposes. And it was thereupon agreed that the trustees should not enter judgment on the bond before the next Michaelmas Term." By settlement on the marriage of Philip B., dated the 26th of July, 1819, he conveyed the lands of K. to trustees in strict settlement, reserving the ultimate reversion to himself in fee. In Easter Term, 1814, judgment was entered upon the bond for 10,000*l.*; and in September, 1831, Philip B. died intestate and without issue, and indebted to a very large amount by judgments on bonds with warrants. His wife had died in his lifetime:—Held, that the judgment of Easter Term, 1814, was charged upon the reversion in fee of the lands of K. Houston v. Barry, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 294.

Ecclesiastical Property.]—A registered judgment against a clergyman does not create a charge upon his benefice, entitling the judgment to the appointment of a receiver under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13. Hawkins v. Gathercole, 6 De G. M. & G. 1; 3 Eq. R. 348; 24 L. J., Ch. 332; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 481; 3 W. R. 194. Bates v. Brothers, 2 Sm. & G. 507; 2 Eq. R. 803; 23 L. J., Ch. 782; 18 Jur. 715; 2 W. R. 636.

A judgment is not per se a charge upon a benefice, but it becomes such from the time that a sequestration is issued. Wise v. Beresford, 2 Con. & L. 282; 3 Dr. & War. 276; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 207.

Corporate Property.]—A. had a bond executed to him in 1828 by a corporation for the due payment of interest on certain sums advanced by him, and for which he also held other securities. In 1835 the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, passed, which abolished the right of corporations to mortgage, or to alien for more than thirty-one years at a rack-rent, except with the consent of three lords of the treasury. Two subsequent amendment acts were passed to save the rights of previous creditors. In 1852 the bond was put in force, and judgment entered up thereon:—Held, that A. was entitled to the benefit of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13, giving him the same rights as if the debtors had agreed in writing to charge their lands; and a receiver was accordingly appointed over all their real property, including some which was acquired in 1851. Arnold v. Gravesend Corporation, 25 L. J., Ch. 530; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 703; 4 W. R. 478, 763. See S. C., 2 K. & J. 574; 25 L. J., Ch. 776.

Priorities — Against Prior Purchasers.]—A papist, by articles on his marriage, in 1764, agrees "to convey to trustees in strict settlement, in case he should, at any time thereafter, during his life, be qualified by law so to do." In 1778 he becomes qualified by law to carry these articles into execution. The lands held not to be specifically bound by these articles until 1778, and therefore judgments subsequent to 1764, but before 1778, were prior liens. Kennedy v. Daly, 1 Sch. & Lef. 355.

A. B. being seised in fee of four estates, mortgaged two of them, and subsequently settled the mortgaged estates and one of the others on himself for life, with remainder to his son in tail, and covenanted against incumbrances; but the settlement did not recite that there were any incumbrances. He afterwards mortgaged the fourth estate, and took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act. After this a creditor on certain bills of exchange became a registered judgment creditor, and then filed a bill against the tenant in tail, and the assignee under the insolvency, and the other incumbrancers, praying a sale in satisfaction of the judgment debt, and what might be paid by the plaintiff in discharge of prior incumbrances, subject to the estate and interest of the tenant in tail under the settlement:—Held, reversing a decree of foreclosure against the tenant in tail, that the settled estates must be regarded as exonerated from incumbrances, as between A. B., the settlor, and the tenant in tail, and that the plaintiff was subject to the same equities as the settlor; and that, as the judgment debt was itself subsequent to the settlement, the tenant in tail could not be affected by the judgment. Hughes v. Williams, 3 Mac. & G. 683; 16 Jur. 415. And see Chappell v. Rees, 1 De G. M. & G. 393; 16 Jur. 415.

Where a judgment affects several denominations of lands, a prior purchaser of one of those denominations is entitled to throw the judgment from his own upon the lands of any puisne purchaser, and so on in succession with each purchaser until the judgment falls upon the lands in the hands of the last purchaser. Aicken v. Macklin, 1 Dr. & Wal. 621.

—— Against Prior Incumbrancer.]—Judgment conferred after bill of foreclosure is ineffectual against plaintiff. Metcalfe v. Pulvertoft, 2 Ves. & B. 207.

A judgment is not such a charge upon land (except it be within the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110) as to give it precedence over an unregistered mortgage. Cathrow v. Eade, 1 Sm. & G. 423.

The conusor of a judgment being seised only of an equity of redemption upon a mortgage in fee:—Held, upon demurrer, that the mortgagee was not a necessary party to a bill filed by the judgment creditor for the purpose of raising the amount of his judgment. Handley v. Langford (Lord), 2 Jones, 421.

Prior incumbrancers are not necessary parties to a bill by an elegit creditor. Rundell v. Donegal (Marquis), 1 Hog. 122.

Mortgagor compelled under the covenant for further assurance, to supply a defect in a mortgage against judgment creditors. Burgh v. Francis, 3 Swan. 536; 19 R. R. 275.

Rector entitled to an annual stipend in lieu of tithes, assigns it by way of mortgage; afterwards a creditor of the rector obtains judgment, and in the regular course sequestration of the stipend:—Held, the mortgagee should be preferred; without prejudice to sums received by judgment creditor, before he had notice of the mortgage. Errington v. Howard, Ambl. 485.

A judgment creditor has not any specific lien on the land, and in general cannot have any relief against a mortgagee who is a specific incumbrancer. Averall v. Wade, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 262.

A suit for foreclosure and sale having been instituted in 1833, a judgment was recovered against the owner of the equity of redemption, previously to a decree in the cause, which was ultimately made in 1842. The judgment creditor, who was no party to the suit in 1844, obtained, on petition, a receiver, on foot of his judgment, over part of the mortgaged estates:—Held, that the plaintiff had a right to have the receiver extended to the cause; as the judgment, being recovered pendente lite, gave the conusee no right against the mortgagee, the plaintiff. Trye v. Aldborough (Earl), 1 Ir. Ch. R. 666.

When the estate is in mortgage prior to a judgment, or when the judgment is obtained, or if the legal estate is in any manner out of the debtor, so that the creditor could not recover under an elegit, equity, in order to protect a purchaser, will not permit the creditor to redeem. Barrett v. Blake, 2 Ball & B. 357.

The devisee of a leasehold estate for lives having suffered an arrear of rent to become due, the landlord brought an ejectment. A third person, at the request of the devisee, advanced money for the purpose of paying the rent, and it was applied accordingly, and the devisee mortgaged the lands to secure the repayment of it. The mortgagee is not entitled to priority over the judgment creditors of the devisor. Angell v. Bryan, 2 Jo. & Lat. 763.

—— Since Judgments Act.]—A registered judgment under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105 (Ir.) and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 29 (Ir.), only affects such property as the debtor at the time of the judgment lawfully possessed as of his own right, and over which he had the power of disposition, and therefore does not displace the interest of a previous equitable mortgagee. Eyre v. M'Dowell, 9 H. L. Cas. 619.

Notwithstanding the statute 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, which gives to a judgment the effect of an equitable charge upon the land of the debtor, an equitable mortgagee retains his right in equity to enforce his security against the title of a creditor under a subsequent judgment, although the latter may have acquired the legal seisin and possession of the land under an elegit, without notice of the mortgage. Whitworth v. Gaugain, 1 Ph. 728; 15 L. J., Ch. 433; 10 Jur. 531. Affirming 3 Hare, 416; 13 L. J., Ch. 288; 8 Jur. 374. And see Cr. & Ph. 325; 10 L. J., Ch. 317; 5 Jur. 523.

—— Under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112.]—A judgment creditor has no lien upon the land of his debtor until he has got a return from the sheriff, though he may, after putting the writ in the hands of the sheriff and before the return, have a right to file a bill to remove a legal impediment; and priorities of judgment creditors against lands are determined by the date at which the writs issued upon their judgments are placed in the hands of the sheriff. Guest v. Cowbridge Ry., 37 L. J., Ch. 909; L. R. 6 Eq. 619; 18 L. T. 871; 17 W. R. 7.

Therefore a judgment creditor subsequent in point of date, but who was the first to place his writ in the hands of the sheriff, and get the lands of the debtor extended under such writ, was held entitled in priority to a prior judgment creditor whose writ was subsequently placed in the sheriff's hands before the lands were extended. Ib.

—— Subsequent Purchaser.]—By a decree A. was ordered to pay the defendant's costs of a suit. After the decree, but before taxation or registry, A. sold his real estate, which was the whole of his property, to C., who had notice of the suit. The purchase-money was received by B., who was A.'s solicitor, and who retained a considerable part of it to pay his costs in the suit. On a bill by the defendant in the former suit against A., B. and C., to set aside the sale and to charge the costs on the estate:—Held, that the sale was not fraudulent within the 13 Eliz. c. 5, and that the decree not having been entered pursuant to the provisions of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 19, till after the sale, the court had no jurisdiction to make the costs of the former suit a lien on the estate. Nortcliffe v. Warburton, 4 De G. F. & J. 449; 31 L. J., Ch. 777; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 854; 6 L. T. 768; 10 W. R. 635.

Where a judgment affects several denominations of lands a prior purchaser of one of these denominations is entitled to throw the judgment from his own upon the lands of any puisne purchaser, and so on in succession with each purchaser, until the judgment falls upon the lands in the hands of the last purchaser. Aicken v. Macklin, 1 Dr. & Wal. 621.

Where a judgment is entered up, against the owner of lands, of which the legal estate is outstanding in a trustee or mortgagee, a purchaser who has notice of the judgment will be bound by it, although the creditor may not have taken out execution on his judgment. Tunstall v. Trappes, Lawson's Case, 3 Sim. 286.

—— Subsequent Incumbrancer.]—A husband having by purchase with his own money obtained a conveyance to himself of freehold lands to which his wife had an incomplete equitable title, deposited the title deeds to secure a loan to himself, and died, having, by his will, given all his real and personal estate to his wife, who, after his death, purchased a judgment debt against her husband's estate, prior in date to the deposit by way of mortgage on a bill by the mortgagee:—Held, that his title was paramount to that of the wife, both in her own right and as judgment creditor. Chesshyre v. Biss, 2 Giff. 287; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 599; 2 L. T. 404.

An assignee of a judgment held, under the circumstances, to be postponed to subsequent mortgagees. Cannock v. Jauncey, 27 L. J., Ch. 57; 5 W. R. 764.

In May, 1835, a lease (to commence in December, 1833, and to continue for twenty-one years and thirty-three days) of lead-mines in Yorkshire was granted by the crown to four lessees, of whom M. was one. In June, 1848, M. conveyed and assigned to H. the property of which he was possessed for any term of years, upon the trusts mentioned; and in July, 1848, M. granted and assigned to H. all his personal estate, and the surplus, if any, which might arise on the sale of his freehold and leasehold estates, upon trusts, after paying costs, for the benefit of creditors, as therein mentioned. The plaintiffs, who were creditors of M., executed the deed in 1849, but no other creditor executed the deed until 1855. H. did not dispose of M.'s share in the mines. In May, 1854, the crown granted a lease of the lead-mines to seven lessees, two of whom were M. and H., for a term of twenty-one years, to commence on the 5th January, 1855. M. died intestate in August, 1854. B., in August, 1848, recovered a judgment on two bonds against M., which was duly entered up; and in July, 1848, C. and others also recovered judgment against M., which was duly entered up in August following. Subsequently these judgments were assigned to S., and were duly registered in the county of York, and in the Common Pleas, which was afterwards renewed:—Held, first, that the plaintiffs had, by virtue of the assignment of June, 1848, and of the declaration of trust of July, 1848, they having executed the latter deed in 1849, acquired a beneficial interest in the renewed lease; and, secondly, that the judgments registered before the plaintiffs executed the latter deed were entitled to be considered as equitable charges upon the old lease and upon the new lease, in priority to the claims of the creditors, who did not become cestuis que trustent until after the registration of the judgments. Langhorne v. Harland, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 872; 4 W. R. 696.

b. Registration.

4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 20.]—A docket of the issue was not a docket of the judgment within 4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 20, so as to give precedence to the judgment creditor over other subsequent charges of the land. Doe d. Barron v. Purchas, 2 H. & W. 50; 5 L. J., K. B. 148. S. P., Braithwaite

v. Watts, 2 C. & J. 318; 2 Tyr. 390; 1 L. J., Ex. 97.

It was the duty of the plaintiff's attorney to see that the judgment was properly docketed. Ib.

An outstanding docketed judgment, not registered pursuant to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 19, and 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, ss. 2, 3, is not a valid objection to the title of a vendor on the sale of realty. Bedford v. Forbes, 1 Car. & K. 33.

A judgment obtained against an executor (before 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11) is entitled to preference in the administration of the testator's estate over simple contract debts, though not docketed pursuant to 4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 20. Gaunt v. Taylor, 3 Man. & G. 886; 3 Scott (N.R.) 700; 11 L. J., C. P. 68.

Where a docket of a judgment did not set forth the number roll, but this appeared on the entry of the issue in the same book:—Held, that the judgment did not, within 4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 20, affect a purchaser, and that he was not precluded from disputing its validity by the circumstance of a conveyance under which he claimed title, and which was a trust deed for the benefit of creditors, and was executed after the judgment was entered up, being expressed to be made subject to the incumbrances affecting the estate conveyed. Brandling v. Plummer, 8 De G. M. & G. 747; 26 L. J., Ch. 326; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 401; 5 W. R. 391.

An old judgment not docketed, but duly registered under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, is good under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 5, against purchasers and mortgagees without notice, to the extent which a judgment duly docketed under the old law would have had against them. Dodswell v. Reece, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 764; 13 L. T. 156.

Purchaser bound by notice of a judgment, though not docketed. Davis v. Strathmore (Earl), 16 Ves. 419.

1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, &c.]—Under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, a judgment has no retrospective operation as against purchasers, mortgagees and creditors, upon a minute being left with the Master of the Common Pleas. Hargrave v. Hargrave, 23 Beav. 484.

When a judgment has been registered, and a search has been made for such a judgment, the person searching must be considered to have notice of the judgment. Procter v. Cooper, 3 Eq. R. 364; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 149; 3 W. R. 224.

An estate was mortgaged to A., and afterwards to the defendant. The plaintiff subsequently obtained a registered judgment against the mortgagor. The defendant then purchased the equity of redemption without searching for judgments. On a bill to charge the equity of redemption with the judgment:—Held, that the defence of "purchase for valuable consideration without notice" was available; secondly, that on the evidence no notice was proved; and thirdly, that it was not incumbent on a purchaser to search for judgments. Lane v. Jackson, 20 Beav. 535.

An old judgment not docketed, but duly registered under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, is good under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 5, against purchasers and mortgagees without notice, to the extent which a judgment duly docketed under the old law would have had against them. Dodswell v. Reece, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 764; 13 L. T. 156.

Therefore, if a creditor on such a judgment, duly registered, files a bill for redemption and foreclosure, or for a sale against a first mortgagee and a puisne mortgagee, he is entitled as against the puisne mortgagee, though without notice, to be paid the full amount of the judgment debt. Ib.

Judgment was obtained in an action in which the defendant was sued in a wrong christian name, but the judgment was registered against the debtor in his true christian name, adding the title of the cause with the wrong christian name:—Held, that this registration complied with 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 19, and that the judgment was good against the debtor, and valid against his other creditors. Beavan v. Oxford (Earl), 3 Sm. & G. 11; 3 Eq. R. 445; 24 L. J., Ch. 311; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 154; 3 W. R. 154.

A judgment was recovered by B. against Alfred Lord H., described in the writ of summons, and in the judgment, as Edward Lord H. Alfred Lord H. appeared, and the judgment was registered, and complied with the requisites of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 13, 19:—Held, the registration being correct, that sufficient notice was given to creditors and purchasers, and that the judgment was valid. Ib.

In Register Counties.]—Notwithstanding the West Riding Register Act directs that no judgments shall affect lands, but only from the time when the judgment shall be registered, a purchaser, with notice of an unregistered judgment, will be bound by it. Gosling's Case, 3 Sim. 301.

A judgment creditor, whose judgment was registered pursuant both to the Registry Act for the West Riding of Yorkshire, 5 & 6 Anne, c. 18, and the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, filed a bill to redeem a prior mortgagee of lands in the West Riding, and to foreclose the mortgagor. The mortgagor had confessed other judgments, and the conusees had registered them pursuant to the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, but not under the West Riding Act:—Held, that those conusees were not necessary parties to the suit. Johnson v. Holdsworth, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 106; 20 L. J., Ch. 63; 15 Jur. 31.

A judgment registered under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 19, will not be a charge on lands in Middlesex, when it has not been registered in the county, under 7 Anne, c. 20, s. 18. Alward, Ex parte, 1 Fonbl. 217.

A judgment is not such a charge upon land (except it be within the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110), as to give it precedence over an unregistered mortgage. Cuthrow v. Eade, 1 Sm. & G. 423.

A judgment registered under the Yorkshire Registry Act, 5 Anne, c. 18, and not under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, will retain its priority over a judgment subsequently obtained, and registered both in the county and under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. Neve v. Flood, 33 Beav. 666; 4 N. R. 207; 34 L. J., Ch. 89; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 607; 10 L. T. 520; 12 W. R. 897.

The priority as against lands in Middlesex of a judgment registered in the Middlesex registry over a judgment, which though earlier in date, is later in order of registration on the Middlesex registry, is not lost by reason of the judgment creditor having notice of such earlier judgment at the time when his judgment is entered up. Benham v. Keane, 3 De G. F. & J. 318; 31 L. J., Ch. 129; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 604; 5 L. T. 439; 10 W. R. 67. And see Robinson v. Woodward, 4 De G. & Sm. 562.

A judgment is a charge binding lands in Middlesex only from the time of its registration in the local registry. Ib.

A., being possessed of a term for years in land in Middlesex, mortgaged the term to the plaintiff on the 19th of June, 1852, which mortgage was registered in Middlesex on the 28th of June. The defendant obtained a judgment in the Queen's Bench against A. on the 5th of June, which was on the same day registered in the Common Pleas, but was never registered in Middlesex, and which was unknown to the plaintiff at the time of the mortgage. On the 8th September, 1852, the defendant issued out an elegit, and the lands were thereunder delivered to him :—Held, that by virtue of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13, the judgment was a charge on the lands, but that by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 5, it had no further effect against a bonâ fide purchaser for value and without notice than a judgment duly docketed would have had before the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, and that therefore it did not bind the term of years until execution under it, and consequently that the plaintiff was entitled, as a purchaser for value and without notice, to the lands, as against the defendant, the judgment creditor. Westbrook v. Blythe, 3 El. & Bl. 737 ; 2 C. L. R. 1660 ; 23 L. J., Q. B. 386 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 85 ; 2 W. R. 490.

Held, also, that the lands being in Middlesex, the judgment did not bind them until a memorial was registered in Middlesex, under 7 Anne, c. 20, s. 19. Ib.

S. recovered judgment against L., which he registered in the Common Pleas under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 19. Afterwards H. registered his judgment in the Common Pleas, and the land being in Middlesex, he registered it also in Middlesex, under 7 Anne, c. 20, s. 18. Afterwards S. was registered in Middlesex :—Held, that H.'s judgment had priority over S.'s judgment. Hughes v. Lumley, 4 El. & Bl. 274 ; 3 C. L. R. 242 ; 24 L. J., Q. B. 57 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 422 ; 3 W. R. 109.

A decree in equity for the payment by the defendant to the plaintiff of a sum of money on or before a certain day:—Held, in reference to the provisions of act 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, not to confer any priority as against a deed executed by the defendant, conveying his freehold estate in a register county to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, or as against a vesting order, made in the defendant's insolvency, the deed having been executed, and the vesting order having been made previously to the registration of the decree. Lee v. Green, 6 De G. M. & G. 155 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 269 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 170 ; 4 W. R. 270.

A decree for payment of money gives no right as against the land before registration. Ib.

Held, also, that the non-registration of the deed, and of the vesting order until after the registration of the decree was immaterial, it being proved that the plaintiff had notice of the deed and of the vesting order when he registered the decree. Ib.

Notice.]—A., on the 9th and 24th July, 1847, on the occasion of advancing his client's money to B. upon the security of judgments entered up against B., according to the usual practice in his office, sent the clerk to whom that duty was allotted to search for prior judgments against B. It did not appear whether the clerk found any such judgments against B., but he did not venture to swear that he did not, nor that he did not, according to the practice of A.'s office, communicate the result of his search to A. In fact, there was a prior judgment against B., and A. afterwards, in October, 1847, took a mortgage of B.'s property affected by such judgment :—Held, that the evidence was sufficient to affect A. with notice of the prior judgment against B. at the date of his mortgage, so as also to affect a subsequent purchaser of the mortgaged property from A. Procter v. Cooper, 3 Eq. R. 364 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 149 ; 3 W. R. 224—L.JJ. Affirming 2 Drew. 1 ; 18 Jur. 444.

Irish Cases—Priority.]—A deed not registered under 6 Anne, c. 2 (Ir.), retains its priority over a judgment subsequently confessed, if there be no subsequent deed conflicting with the first deed. Browne v. Blake, 1 Moll. 620. S. P., Burke v. O'Malley, Beat. 96. Crymble v. Adair, Beat. 122.

Where there is an unregistered deed, and a subsequent registered deed, with judgments intervening between them, the Registry Act gives priority to the latter deed over the former ; and it carries on the judgments prior to it, so as to take precedence of the unregistered instrument also. Sparrow v. Cooper, 1 Jones, 72.

Semble, if a person claiming under a registered deed does not insist on his priority over the unregistered deed, the latter will take precedence of the judgments. Ib.

A mortgagee is prevented by the operation of the Registry Act, 6 Anne, c. 2, from tacking, so as to gain a priority against mesne registered incumbrances. And for the purpose of adjusting the priorities between deeds under this act, judgments also obtain priorities, although not generally within the contemplation of the act. Latouche v. Dunsany (Lord), 1 Sch. & Lef. 137.

The 5th section of the Registry Act applies not to judgments generally. Judgment creditors have no priority by the Registry Act, except where priority between deeds is to be adjusted. Ib., 160, 161. But see as to this latter position. D'Arcy v. Chambers, Ib. (App.), 467.

Where there is a conflict between an unregistered and a registered deed, judgments intermediate do not obtain absolute priority to the unregistered deed, until it is absolutely postponed to the registered deed. Murtagh v. Tisdall, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 85 ; Fl. & K. 20.

The Docketing Acts, 7 Will. 3, c. 13, and 3 Geo. 2, c. 7, apply only between purchasers and judgment creditors, and give no priority to judgments inter se. Abbott v. Stratten, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 233 ; 3 Jo. & Lat. 603.

Since the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, judgments of the same term entered after the passing of the act have priority inter se as charges on limits, according to the true dates of their entries. But quære as to judgments entered before the passing of the act. Borough v. Williamson, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 1.

Semble, the registration of a judgment under the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 90, gives no priority as between judgment creditors, except for the protection of heirs, &c., in the administration of assets. O'Brien v. Scott, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 63. And see S. C., on appeal, Ib., 459.

A. obtained a judgment in T. T. 1845. B. obtained a judgment in T. T. 1846. A. sued out an elegit ; the requisition on which was returned and filed on 20th July, 1846, and went into possession of the lands. B.'s judgment was registered in September, 1864, A.'s in January, 1847. The latter has priority. Ib.

In the administration of assets judgments rank inter se, according to the time of their entry upon the roll under the statute 3 Geo. 2, c. 7 (Ir.). Burke v. Killikelly, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 1.

All judgments of the same term and ensuing vacation, recovered prior to the statute 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, have equal priority inter se. Smith v. Chichester, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 519.

The rule that judgments of the same terms are in equal priority inter se, applies to the judgments in the exchequer and other courts alike. The principles of the foregoing doctrines considered and the cases upon them reviewed. Ib.

An estate having been sold under a decree of the court of exchequer for 12,000*l.*, the purchaser lodged in court 5,000*l.* of his own moneys; and applied to the plaintiffs in the present suit to lend him the remaining 7,000*l.*, on the terms of securing that sum as the first incumbrance on the lands; subsequently to an agreement with the plaintiffs for this loan, but previously to its having been carried out, the purchaser confessed a judgment for valuable consideration. The plaintiffs, though having notice of the judgment, advanced 8,000*l.*, of which 7,000*l.* was paid into court, as the residue of the purchase-money, and 1,000*l.* to the purchaser. By consent, which was made an order of the court, the conveyance of the lands was made to a trustee for the purchaser and the plaintiffs. The trustee, subsequently, in consideration of the 8,000*l.* mortgaged the lands to the plaintiffs:—Held, that the judgment was prior to the mortgage, as a charge on the lands. Wallcott v. Lynch, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 199.

—— Notice.]—The inrolment of the assignment of a judgment does not operate as notice, any more than the registry of a deed. Ferrall v. Boyle, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 403.

—— In what Name.]—A recognizance was acknowledged and registered, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 90, s. 11 (Ir.), in the name of John Donovan Barron. The conusee had been baptised by the name of John Barron, but had been known in his family as John Donovan Barron, under which name he executed other instruments. He had acquired and sold real estate by the name of John Lawrence Barron, to a purchaser who had no notice of the recognizance:—Held, that it was not a charge on the real estate, as against the purchaser. Staunton v. Staunton, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 464.

In order to bind the purchaser the recognizance should have been registered as acknowledged by John Donovan Barron, and under the head of "persons whose estates are sought to be affected," the name of John Lawrence Barron should have been entered. Ib.

c. Re-registration.

Priority.]—Under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, if A. has a judgment registered under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, such registration will protect him against all who become mortgagees, creditors, or purchasers during the currency of the five years, and such protection will continue as to them under a re-registration, even though he should have omitted to re-register within five years; but as to persons becoming mortgagees, creditors, or purchasers between the period when his first registration ceased and when his re-registration began, he will not be protected, but they will have priority over him. Shaw v. Neale, 6 H. L. Cas. 581; 27 L. J., Ch. 444; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 695; 6 W. R. 635—H. L. (E.)

A., B. and C. were judgment creditors of D., A. and B. having priority to C. A. and B. subsequently omitted to register their judgments within five years from their previous registration; C. duly registered within the five years:—Held, that A. and B. did not thereby lose their priority to C. Beavan v. Oxford (Earl), 6 De G. M. & G. 492; 25 L. J., Ch. 299; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 121; 4 W. R. 112.

The effect of the provisions of the 4th section of the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, is to deprive the judgment creditor who omits to register within five years of protection against subsequent purchasers, mortgagees, and creditors, but not to alter his position as to previous purchasers, mortgagees, and creditors. Ib.

The circumstance that a re-registration is not within five years from the previous registration does not make it ineffectual as against subsequent purchasers, mortgagees, and creditors. Ib.

A., B. and C. were judgment creditors of D. A. registered his judgment on the 12th of March, 1840, but never registered. B. registered his judgment in April, 1842, and re-registered in March, 1848. C. registered his judgment on the 18th of March, 1845, and re-registered on the 16th of March, 1850. Questions having arisen as to the priorities of the several judgment creditors, the fund in court being insufficient for payment in full:—Held, that on the construction of the statutes 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 19, 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 4, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, s. 2, and upon the principle laid down in Beavan v. Oxford (Earl) (6 De G. M. & G. 492), C. was first entitled to take out of the fund the sum found due on A.'s judgment, and then that B. was entitled to be paid the full amount of his judgment, before C. took anything more in respect of his judgment. Kensington (Lord), In re, Bacon v. Ford, 54 L. J., Ch. 1085; 29 Ch. D. 527; 53 L. T. 19; 33 W. R. 689.

The provision of the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 4, that all judgments shall, after the expiration of five years from the entry thereof, be null and void against lands, tenements, and other hereditaments as to creditors, unless re-registered within five years before the right of such creditors accrued, refers only to creditors who have some right or interest in such lands, tenements, or hereditaments, as, for example, by virtue of a creditor's decree, directing a sale of such property. Simpson v. Morley, 2 Kay & J. 71; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1158.

In 1848 B. obtained and registered judgments against M. M. died in 1854; and in the same year, after M.'s death, the registration, which had expired, was renewed. A creditor's claim was afterwards filed, and a decree obtained, which was set up against the present bill, brought by S., the assignee of B.'s judgments, for foreclosure:—Held, that the registration before decree gave S. priority. Ib.

Creditors of a deceased debtor have not on his death a right against his leasehold property in the hands of his executors or administrator within the meaning of the act. Ib.

Quære, if they have even after a creditor's decree, any such right in the specific chattels of the deceased debtor, unless the decree directs them to be sold for the benefit of the creditors. Ib.

Terrin, In re (2 Dru. & War. 147), distinguished Ib.

The provisions as to re-registration in the 2 & 3

Vict. c. 11, s. 4, are operative for the benefit of all persons deriving title, mediately or immediately, from a judgment debtor, and not merely for that of immediate purchasers, mortgagees, and creditors of the debtor himself. Benham v. Keane, 1 Johns. & H. 685; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1096. Affirmed, on appeal, 3 De G. F. & J. 318; 31 L. J., Ch. 129; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 604; 5 L. T. 439; 10 W. R. 67.

A purchaser from a mortgagee of the judgment debtor, taking with notice of a judgment which has not been registered or re-registered in the Common Pleas registry within five years, and having the legal estate, is not affected by such judgment. Ib.

—— Heirs, Executors, or Administrators.]—23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 4, is not retrospective; so that where a debtor died before the passing of the act, a judgment, which had not been re-registered within five years before his death, retained its priority in the administration of his assets. Evans v. Williams, 2 Drew. & Sm. 324; 34 L. J., Ch. 661; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 256; 12 L. T. 762; 13 W. R. 423.

Where the executor of a deceased conusee of a judgment sought to register the judgment as a mortgage, an entry was on his application, made in the margin of the summary of the judgment that the proceedings were continued in his name as executor. Form of order in such cases. Lawless v. Doake, 12 L. R., Ir. 68.

Lands in Middlesex.]—The priority as against lands in Middlesex of a judgment registered in the Middlesex registry over a judgment, which, though earlier in date, is later in order of registration on the Middlesex registry, is not lost by reason of the judgment creditor having notice of such earlier judgment at the time when his judgment is entered up. Benham v. Keane, 3 De G. F. & J. 318; 31 L. J., Ch. 129; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 604; 5 L. T. 439; 10 W. R. 67.

Irish Cases.]—A judgment entered up within twenty years before the passing of the 9 Geo. 4, c. 35, and not revived or redocketed within twenty years before the execution of a deed of conveyance to a purchaser, or within five years after the passing of the act, is, after the expiration of twenty years from its entry, void against a purchaser, whose deed of conveyance was executed after the passing of the act, and within twenty years from the entry of the judgment. Knox v. Kelly, 1 Dr. & Wal. 542; Sau. & Sc. 512, n.; 1 Ir. Eq. R. 87, n. S. P., Blake v. Darcy, Sau. & Sc. 493; 1 Dr. & Wal. 559, n.; 1 Ir. Eq. R. 84. Hickson v. Collis, 1 Jo. & Lat. 94; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 524.

A "judgment recovered and entered" within the meaning of the 9 Geo. 4, c. 35, is one which may be revived or redocketed, i.e. an original judgment. Stewart v. Cottingham, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 248.

A., having obtained a judgment in 1789 against B., in 1792 died, and by his will devised one nomination to C. and another to D. C., in 1796, married, and thereupon settled the estate devised to him. The executors of A., in 1828, revived the judgment of 1789 against C., the heir, and certain terre-tenants, and thereupon issued an elegit, and obtained a finding thereunder prior to the passing of the 9 Geo. 4, c. 35, but were prevented from getting into possession by the proceedings of a prior creditor. The judgment was not revived or redocketed within five years from the passing of that act, according to the provisions of the 3rd section. On a bill filed within twenty years from the revival of 1828 against E., claiming under the settlement of 1796, and D. and other parties:—Held, that notwithstanding the revival of 1828, elegit and other proceedings thereunder, no possession having been obtained, the plaintiff was barred as against E. by the 3rd section of the 9 Geo. 4, c. 35:—Held, also, that the judgment creditor (having a legal right and proceeding against the legal estate of his debtor) by his omission to redocket, thereby exonerating one denomination of land originally liable and casting the entire debt upon the other, without affording a right of contribution to that other, did not thereby lose his right to go against that other for the whole amount, and that no equity existed to restrain such creditor to the amount to which that denomination was originally liable. Ryan v. Cambie, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 376.

The pendency of a suit when statute 9 Geo. 4, c. 35, passed, does not dispense with the necessity for redocketing or reviving a judgment under s. 3 of that act. Joyce v. Joyce, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 128.

A judgment creditor bequeathed certain legacies, and appointed the debtor executor:—Held, that as the judgment though extinguished at law was subsisting in equity, it was capable of being redocketed, and was within the provisions of the 9 Geo. 4, c. 35. Huthwaite, In re, 2 Ir. Ch. R. 54.

Notice of an unredocketed judgment will not make it binding against a purchaser. Ib.

An unredocketed judgment is not only null and void as against a subsequent purchaser for valuable consideration, but also, in order more effectually to work out the object of the said act, necessarily null and void as against an intervening redocketed judgment. Ib.

An assignee of an insolvent is not a purchaser within the meaning of the acts for redocketing or registering judgments. Baylee v. Browne, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 180.

A purchaser, who buys expressly subject to a judgment, will be bound by it, although it has not been redocketed within the time required by 9 Geo. 4, c. 35. Garnett v. Armstrong, 2 Con. & L. 449; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 533; 4 Dr. & War. 182.

Notice to a purchaser, for value, of a judgment not revived or redocketed pursuant to the 9 Geo. 4, c. 35, will not take it out of the operation of that statute. Beere v. Head, 3 Jo. & Lat. 340; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 76. Reversing on this point 8 Ir. Eq. R. 647.

In 1776 a commission of bankruptcy issued against A., and the assignee entered into possession of A.'s estate. Afterwards, in 1793, A. became indebted by judgment to C., and afterwards devised all his real and freehold estates to B. and his heirs, upon certain trusts, and charged with his debts and legacies. The defendant, who was heir-at-law of the assignee, had continued in the possession of the lands, and after the institution of a suit against him by the devisees of A., to recover possession of those estates, purchased them from the persons beneficially entitled under A.'s will, subject to the incumbrances affecting them, and obtained a conveyance of them in 1825. The judgment of 1793 had not been revived or redocketed within five years after the passing of the Redocketing Act:—Held, that the trust for the payment of debts prevented the judgment being barred under the Redocketing Act. Cockburn v. Warner, 1 Longf. & T. 443.

In 1793 C. C. executed his bond with warrant of attorney, and in 1799 made his will, whereby he devised his real estates to trustees in trust to sell and pay his debts, and subject thereto to his co-heiresses and their heirs. He died in February, 1804, and in March, 1804, the obligee in the bond caused judgment to be entered on it as of the preceding term. In 1826 the co-heiresses of C. C., for a valuable consideration, conveyed his real estates, subject to his debts, to W. and his heirs. The judgment of 1804 was not revived or redocketed pursuant to the 9 Geo. 4, c. 35 :—Held, nevertheless, that it was a valid charge affecting the real estates of C. C. in the hands of W. E. E. Cockburn v. Wright, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 1.

3. Action on Judgment, Order or Decree.

When Maintainable.]—An action on a judgment of a superior court is not to be favoured, as there is another remedy for enforcing it. Biddleson v. Whitel, 1 W. Bl. 507.

Practice.]—In an action on a judgment, the plaintiff may indorse the particulars of his claim on the writ of summons, and, on non-appearance, sign judgment. Hodsoll v. Baxter, El. Bl. & El. 884 ; 28 L. J., Q. B. 61 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 506 ; 6 W. R. 686—Ex. Ch.

Matter which affords ground for a writ of error cannot be pleaded in bar to an action on a judgment. Dick v. Tolhausen, 4 H. & N. 695.

Proof.]—Proof of a writ of summons is not necessary in an action on a judgment in a superior court. Coleman v. Rawlinson, 1 F. & F. 330.

Costs.]—43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 4, does not extend to an action brought to recover the costs of a judgment of nonsuit. Bennett v. Neale, 14 East, 343.

Nor does it entitle a defendant to stay the proceedings on payment of the debt without costs, where there is probable ground for the plaintiff's also claiming interest on part of the debt. Wood v. Silleto, 1 Chit. 473.

A defendant against whom judgment had been obtained sued out a writ of error, and to an action on the judgment pleaded nul tiel record ; the court allowed the plaintiff his costs of the action upon the judgment. Garnwell v. Barker, 5 Taunt. 264.

A plaintiff having recovered judgment for 15*l.* against a clerk in a public office, who had no assets to satisfy the judgment, but who was in receipt of a salary out of which he had proposed to set aside 60*l.* a year for the payment of his debts, brought an action upon the judgment for the debt and costs (amounting together to upwards of 20*l.*), to which he pleaded nul tiel record :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the second action, as it sufficiently appeared that without bringing a second action he could not have obtained the fruits of the judgment recovered in the first. Slater v. Mackie, 7 D. & L. 255 ; 8 C. B. 553 ; 19 L. J., C. P. 88 ; 13 Jur. 1081.

It is no answer to a motion for costs that the original cause of action (in which the defendant had suffered judgment by default) was one for which the plaintiff might have levied a plaint in the county court. Ib.

A plaintiff having brought an action on a judgment recovered in an inferior court, instead of removing it to a superior court, and issuing execution, the defendant pleaded nul tiel record. The plaintiff produced the record, and applied for his costs ; but the court refused the application, notwithstanding the defendant had pleaded a false plea. Hanmer v. White, 12 M. & W. 519 ; 1 D. & L. 653 ; 13 L. J., Ex. 110.

Where a plaintiff sues upon a judgment, and counts upon other and distinct causes of action are added, he is not deprived of his costs. Jackson v. Everett, 1 B. & S. 857 ; 31 L. J., Q. B. 59 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 281 ; 5 L. T. 711 ; 10 W. R. 294.

In an action on a judgment the court will not grant a plaintiff his costs, where, by suing on two judgments, he has recovered sufficient to entitle himself to a ca. sa. against the defendant, which since 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 57, he could not otherwise have had, and thus, notwithstanding, no fi. fa. could be executed against him for want of assets. Bell v. Waldron, 9 Jur. 510.

Bringing an action on a judgment under 20*l.* with the object of obtaining a judgment above 20*l.*, and issuing thereon execution against the person, is an evasion of the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 57, and the court, in the exercise of its discretion, will not allow to the plaintiff his costs. Adams v. Ready, 6 H. & N. 261 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 267 ; 3 L. T. 892 ; 9 W. R. 438.

Where an action is brought upon a judgment for a sum not exceeding 20*l.* for the purpose of enabling the plaintiff, by adding the costs to the sum recovered by the judgment, to recover a sum exceeding 20*l.*, and so to issue a ca. sa. and defeat the object of the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 57, the discretion of the court under 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 4, as to granting costs to the plaintiff, is not taken away by the latter statute, but they will be guided in the exercise of that discretion by its provisions. Dickinson v. Angell, 3 B. & S. 840 ; 32 L. J., Q. B. 183 ; 8 L. T. 313 ; 11 W. R. 667.

Application for Costs.]—An application for an order to entitle a plaintiff to costs in an action on a judgment, must be made either to the court or to a judge at chambers, and not to a judge at nisi prius. Jones v. Lake, 8 Car. & P. 395.

An order at chambers ought not to be granted ex parte, and should be made on summons. Lomax v. Berry, 2 H. & N. 127 ; 26 L. J., Ex. 281 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 446 ; 5 W. R. 563.

If the application raises any question of difficulty, the judge may refer it to the court. Claridge v. Wilson, 26 L. J., Ex. 246.

Upon moving for a rule for costs, in an action upon a judgment, an affidavit shewing the reason for adopting that course is indispensable. Revel v. Wetherell, 3 C. B. 321.

In an action on a judgment, the defendant pleaded nul tiel record, and a day being given, the plaintiff, having obtained judgment, moved for costs. The court granted only a rule nisi in the first instance. Fraser v. Moses, 4 Scott (N.R.) 749 ; 1 D. (N.S.) 705.

Where a plaintiff, producing the record, moved for judgment and his costs :—Held, that the costs must be made the subject of a separate motion. Abbott v. Newton, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1101 ; 3 L. T. 672.

On Orders for Payment of Costs.]—An action will not lie upon an interlocutory and a collateral order for costs; the mode of enforcing payment is by attachment in the court by whom the order is made. Sheehy v. Professional Life Assurance Co., 2 C. B. (N.S.) 211; 26 L. J., C. P. 301; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 748; 5 W. R. 878.

But an action may be maintained on an order by the judicial committee of the privy council for the payment of costs, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 41, and 6 & 7 Vict. c. 38. Hutchinson v. Gillespie, 11 Ex. 798; 25 L. J., Ex. 103; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 403; 4 W. R. 302.

An action lies on the judgment of the House of Lords ordering the appellant in an unsuccessful appeal to that House to pay the costs of such appeal to the respondent. Marbella Iron Ore Co. v. Allen, 47 L. J., C. P. 601; 38 L. T. 815.

Costs payable under a judge's order can be recovered by action or counterclaim. Philpott v. Lehain, 35 L. T. 855.

An action lies to recover the costs in an indictment for libel given by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 8. Richardson v. Willis, 42 L. J., Ex. 68; L. R. 8 Ex. 69; 28 L. T. 871; 12 Cox, C. C. 351.

An action is not maintainable against an attorney for not delivering his bill of costs in obedience to a judge's order. Dent v. Basham, 9 Ex. 469; 2 C. L. R. 989; 23 L. J., Ex. 161; 18 Jur. 295; 2 W. R. 201.

Nor will an action lie upon an undertaking contained in a judge's order, though the order was made by consent, and the undertaking was founded on a good consideration. Hookpayton v. Bussell, 10 Ex. 24; 2 C. L. R. 1081; 23 L. J., Ex. 267.

But an action will lie on a judge's order to refer made by consent, the consent being evidence of an agreement to perform the award. Lievesley v. Gilmore, 35 L. J., C. P. 351; L. R. 1 C. P. 570; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 874; 15 L. T. 386.

On Decrees of Courts of Equity.]—An action is not maintainable on a decree in equity for the payment of interest on purchase-money and the costs of a bill for specific performance. Carpenter v. Thornton, 3 B. & Ald. 52; 22 R. R. 299.

Nor on a mere interlocutory order. Fry v. Malcolm, 4 Taunt. 705. S. P., Biddle v. Dowse, 9 D. & R. 404; 6 B. & C. 255; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 128; 28 R. R. 574.

4. Assignment of Judgment.

A., who was jointly liable with nine others, having been taken under a ca. sa., paid the entire debt:—Held, that he was entitled, by virtue of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 5, to an assignment of the judgment, and that in an action against the judgment creditor to enforce such assignment, a plea that the judgment had been satisfied by payment by A., after he had been taken in execution under it, was no answer. Batchellor v. Lawrence, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 543; 30 L. J., C. B. 39; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 130; 3 L. T. 508; 9 W. R. 373.

To an action for nonpayment of 45*l.*, a balance due upon an agreement, the defendant pleaded a set-off on a judgment for 40*l.* 2*s.* obtained by him in an action against the plaintiff. The plaintiff replied that, before the recovery of the judgment, he, for a good consideration, assigned the debt to S.; that the defendant, before the recovery of the judgment, had notice of the assignment; and that the plaintiff was suing as trustee for S.:—Held, that the replication was bad, as disclosing no legal answer. Watkins v. Clark, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 277; 6 L. T. 277.

A judgment creditor having assigned his judgment to the trustees of a creditor's deed, in trust for the benefit of the creditors who had executed the deed (of whom he was himself one), was entitled to sue, on behalf of himself and all such other creditors, for the establishment of their rights in respect of the trust estate and the execution of the trusts. Squire v. Ford, 9 Hare, 47; 20 L. J., Ch. 308; 15 Jur. 619.

As between conusor and assignee of a judgment, the price paid for the assignment is immaterial. Hickson v. Aylward, 3 Moll. 1.

Acknowledgment by conusor of judgment in reply to inquiry by intended assignee, that the sum secured by the judgment is justly due to the conusee, shuts out the equitable defence which the conusor may have had against the conusee; subject, however, to inquiry as to the bona fides of the transaction. Ib.

The court has authority, under the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 105, to permit the assignee of a judgment creditor to continue in his own name the proceedings of his assignor under the Judgment Creditors Act. Daly v. Blake, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 36.

A judgment debtor conveyed lands to the plaintiff, covenanting against incumbrances. The judgment creditor afterwards sued out elegits on which ejectments were brought against the purchaser, who, by an arrangement, paid part of the debt, and offered to pay the rest if the creditor would assign the judgment to him, which he refused to do, but offered to satisfy it:—Held, the plaintiff, paying the judgment, was entitled to an assignment of it. Rotheram v. Flynn, Beat. 555.

5. Satisfaction of Judgment.

Entry of Satisfaction—In what Cases Ordered.]—The court or a judge will compel a plaintiff, who has received satisfaction of his judgment, to execute the proper satisfaction process, in order to have the entries of it on the registers duly vacated. And when the judgment is vacated, the entries of it are in effect vacated. Fish v. Tindal, 10 W. R. 801.

The court will not order satisfaction to be entered on the roll in a case where four only of five plaintiffs have given their consent, although the fifth plaintiff is resident abroad and cannot be found. Davis v. Jones, 5 D. P. C. 503; 4 Scott 202; 1 Jur. 42.

The duty of the solicitor of one of several co-plaintiffs ends when judgment is signed, and he has no general authority to consent, on behalf of his client, to the entry of satisfaction. Ib.

—— Delay.]—Where the lessor of the plaintiff, after obtaining a verdict and judgment, delayed to tax his costs (although apparently for the purpose of recovering the extra costs in an action for mesne profits), a judge has no authority to order that the defendant shall be at liberty to enter satisfaction on the record, unless the lessor of the plaintiff taxes his costs within a limited time. Doe d. Drax v. Filliter, 11 M. & W. 80; 12 L. J., Ex. 188.

—— Death of Conusee without Legal Personal Representative.]—Where a plaintiff obtained judgment against the defendant in 1802, which was satisfied in 1805, and the plaintiff died intestate in 1821, the court would not allow satisfaction to be entered on the roll on an affidavit of the defendant's attorney, that the plaintiff had received from the defendant a certain sum in full satisfaction of his demand, it appearing that administration had not been taken out of the plaintiff's effects. Speach v. Slade, 8 Moore, 461.

Where both conusor and conusee of a judgment entered on a bond in 1854 were deceased several years, and there was no personal representative of the conusee, and the devisee of lands, against which the judgment had been registered as a statutable mortgage, deposed, of her own personal knowledge, to payment of the debt by the conusor in the year 1858, and that no claim had since been made on foot of the judgment, and held in her possession the bond which she swore she had delivered to the conusor on payment, a conditional order was made for the entry of satisfaction, unless cause should be shewn by the eldest son and only surviving male member of the family of the conusee. Scott v. Wood, 10 L. R., Ir. 355.

—— Ca. Sa.]—The taking a debtor in execution was an election binding upon the creditor to pursue that remedy and none other against his debtor, but was not an absolute extinguishment of the debt. Thompson v. Parish, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 685; 28 L. J., C. P. 153; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 986; 7 W. R. 210.

Where a judgment debtor, taken in execution, was, after a month's imprisonment, released from prison by the judgment creditor, who, three years afterwards, registered the judgment pursuant to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, and 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, the court made absolute a rule to enter up satisfaction of the judgment, or to strike out the registration, the debtor paying the expenses of whichever alternative he adopted. Lambert v. Parnell, 15 L. J., Q. B. 55; 10 Jur. 31.

A plaintiff having recovered judgment against two, issued two concurrent writs of ca. sa. thereon, and the defendants were taken in execution, but were discharged by the plaintiff's attorney upon their making an arrangement for the payment of the debts. The plaintiff afterwards issued a fi. fa. for the balance of the original debt, and the goods of one of the defendants were seized, but, upon payment of a sum under protest, the goods were released. A rule nisi was afterwards obtained by him to procure a return of this money, on the ground that the original debt was barred by his discharge out of custody, as having been made either by the authority of, or as having been ratified by the plaintiff. The court referred the matter to the master to report thereon to the court, and he found that the discharge of the defendants had been ratified by the plaintiff, and therefore the court made the rule absolute to set aside the execution. The plaintiff then brought an action upon the original judgment. The court, under the preceding circumstances, refused to order satisfaction to be entered up on the judgment-roll in the action. Ward v. Broomhead, 7 Ex. 726; 21 L. J., Ex. 216.

Where a judgment creditor has discharged his debtor out of custody after he had been taken in execution on such judgment, although the discharge was given only upon a condition which the debtor failed to perform, yet if it was obtained without fraud, the debt is satisfied, and the court is bound to order satisfaction to be entered on the judgment-roll. Catlin v. Kernott, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 796; 27 L. J., C. P. 186; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 281; 6 W. R. 291.

—— Decree of Divorce Court.]—The court will not strike out from the register an entry made of a decree of the Court of Divorce. Holden, Ex parte, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 641; 1 N. R. 361; 32 L. J., C. P. 111; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 948; 7 L. T. 791; 11 W. R. 437.

—— Principal and Surety.]—A., and B., as his surety, having given a joint and several promissory note to C., the latter brought separate actions against A. and B. upon the note, and recovered judgment in both actions: C. afterwards issued execution upon the judgment obtained against B., whereby B. was compelled to pay the whole debt and costs. Upon a bill filed by the administratrix of B., for the purpose of obtaining an assignment of the judgment which had been recovered against A., the principal debtor:—Held, that such judgment not being available at law in the hands of the creditor, was not available in equity in the hands of the surety, and consequently that the court would not compel an assignment, as sought by the bill. Dowbiggen v. Bourne, 2 Y. & C. 462; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 82; 1 Jur. 102.

A creditor sued his principal debtor, and recovered a judgment against him and the bail in the action. The surety thereupon "paid and satisfied" to the creditor the amount of the judgment, &c., and took an assignment thereof:—Held, on demurrer, that he could not assume that the judgment was still subsisting. Armitage v. Baldwin, 5 Beav. 278.

—— Heir.]—A judgment creditor who has proved his demand under the decree to account, and who has been paid the sum decreed to be due to him, is bound to execute a warrant of attorney to satisfy the judgment tendered to him on behalf of the inheritor of the estate decreed to be sold. Eyre v. Lynch, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 194.

—— Contract—Judgment to stand Security for larger Debt.]—A purchaser of lands with notice of a judgment against the vendor, entered before 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, and of an agreement between him and the judgment creditor that such judgment should stand as a security for payment of a sum larger than that for which the judgment was entered, is not entitled to have satisfaction entered up on the judgment-roll, upon payment to the judgment creditor of the amount for which judgment was entered and costs of suit and interest from the time of the commencement of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. Crafts v. Wilkinson, 4 Q. B. 74; 3 G. & D. 280; 12 L. J., Q. B. 153; 7 Jur. 105.

Tenant by Elegit—Acquisition of Fee Simple.]—In a suit for enforcing securities, it is the duty of the creditor to prove that his security is existing, and he is answerable for his acts, neglects, and omissions; and a creditor, by elegit, having taken from a trustee for sale a conveyance in fee of a part of the lands of which he was in possession under extents issued upon two elegits, his tenancy under them held to be extinguished in the remainder of the estate, and the judgments on which they were issued were held to be satisfied. Hele v. Bexley (Lord), 22 L. J., Ch. 1007.

If a term in gross exists on an estate, and has not been attendant upon the inheritance, no surrender will be presumed, and such a term is liable to an extent; but the judgments having been satisfied by purchase of part of the estates extended, the tenancy by elegit was gone, and the parties entitled may enter. Ib.

Though the elegits are satisfied, an outstanding unsatisfied claim will still be considered in taking the accounts under a trust for the benefit of incumbrancers. Ib.

—— Eviction.]—Judgment creditor having sued out an elegit, and having obtained possession, and continued in receipt of the issues of a moiety of the lands until the death of his debtor, and being then evicted:—Held, that his judgment was not extinguished, and that he was entitled to come into equity after the death of the conusor for satisfaction of so much as remained unpaid. Whether if he was not evicted, but elected to abandon his elegit he would be so entitled, quære. Lord Chancellor expressing an opinion that equity would not hold a creditor disentitled to participate in the ordinary and regular distribution of assets, because during the lifetime of his debtor he had gone as far as he could go to obtain payment. Leahy v. Dancer, 1 Moll. 313.

Set-off.]—The court in the exercise of its equitable jurisdiction, allowed the costs of an interlocutory order which was made after judgment in an action, and by which the plaintiff was ordered to pay the defendant the costs, to be set off against the judgment. Thompson v. Parish, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 685; 28 L. J., C. P. 153; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 986; 7 W. R. 210.

The set-off of a judgment in one action against a claim arising out of another and separate action cannot be allowed. Ib. S. P., Taylor v. Waters, 5 M. & S. 103; 2 Chit. 303.

A judgment for damages and costs being signed by a plaintiff suing in formâ pauperis, a judge, on summons, ordered satisfaction to be entered, on the defendant's acknowledging satisfaction for costs to a like amount taxed for him against the same plaintiff in a former action. The court refused to set aside the order, the now plaintiff not having appeared in formâ pauperis in the former action, and there being no proof that, in the subsequent action, the plaintiff's attorney had any lien on the costs for moneys advanced. O'Hare v. Reeves, 13 Q. B. 659; 18 L. J., Q. B. 231; 13 Jur. 535.

A tenant having obtained judgment, and issued execution against his landlord, afterwards became indebted to him for arrears of rent and dilapidations:—Held, that the landlord was not entitled, by injunction, to restrain proceedings upon the judgment on the ground of set-off. Maw v. Ulyatt, 31 L. J., Ch. 33; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1300; 5 L. T. 251; 10 W. R. 4.

Practice.]—A rule to compel the entry and docketing of a judgment should be addressed to the party in the cause, and not to his attorney. Engler v. Twisden, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 714; 6 Scott, 580; 8 L. J., C. P. 128.

The court has no jurisdiction over the senior master, as to the entry of particulars of a judgment, for the purpose of charging lands, under the provisions of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 19. The master must act upon his own discretion. Ness, Ex parte, 5 C. B. 155; 5 D. & L. 339; 17 L. J., C. P. 15.

The Court of Exchequer would not order the senior Master of the Common Pleas to make an entry in the book of registry of judgments, recording a ca. sa. executed upon a defendant in a judgment registered in his book. Hallett v. Dyne, 2 H. & C. 696; 3 N. R. 297; 33 L. J., Ex. 86; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 157; 9 L. T. 574; 12 W. R. 159. Lewis v. Dyson, 1 B. C. C. 33; 21 L. J., Q. B. 194; 16 Jur. 222, overruled.

The Court of Chancery had no jurisdiction to order the Master of the Common Pleas to vacate a memorandum, entered under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, of an order of the Court of Chancery. Wells v. Gibbs, 3 Beav. 399; 10 L. J., Ch. 97; 4 Jur. 1176.

Effect on Costs.]—A judgment creditor, whose debt had been satisfied, but who had not entered satisfaction on the rolls, was made a defendant to a foreclosure suit in equity. He disclaimed:—Held, that he was not entitled to his costs, in consequence of his negligence in not entering up satisfaction of his judgment. Thompson v. Hudson, 34 Beav. 107.

Irish Cases.]—The court has jurisdiction to direct satisfaction to be entered on the registry of an order under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, and made such an order on affidavit of payment, and on consent signed by party in whose favour order was made. O'Neill v. Bass, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 307.

G. devised certain lands to A., subject to the payment of his debts; and reciting that he had obtained a decree for payment of a large sum of money, directed that money, when recovered, to be the primary fund for payment of his debts: and appointed A. and J. his executors. Before the primary fund was available, the executors, being pressed for the payment of a debt of the testator, joined in mortgaging the lands devised to A., and executed a bond, on which a joint judgment was afterwards entered up against them. The money so raised was applied partly in payment of the testator's debt, and partly in obtaining a renewal of the lease of the mortgaged lands. A., out of his own moneys, afterwards paid off the mortgage, and took an assignment of it, and of the judgment, as to a trustee:—Held, that he could not rely on the judgment as a subsisting incumbrance affecting the estate of J., notwithstanding that there was an unsettled account of the assets of G. between him and J., on which he alleged that J. was indebted to the estate in a sum larger than the amount of the judgment. Beresford v. Chambers, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 482.

6. Relief Against.

On the Ground of Fraud.]—See Fraud.

Facts discovered since the Trial.]—A bill in equity to set aside a verdict is not sustainable, where the facts on which the bill is founded, though discovered since the trial, might have been established at the trial upon cross-examination. Taylor v. Sheppard, 1 Y. & C. 271.

On Equitable Grounds.]—A court of equity has no jurisdiction to relieve a plaintiff against a judgment at law, where the case in equity proceeds upon a ground equally available at law and in equity; but the plaintiff must establish some special equitable ground for relief, Harrison v. Nettleship, 2 Myl. & K. 423 ; 3 L. J., Ch. 86.

Although the court will, by decree, restrain the setting up of an outstanding term to prevent the fair trial of a legal right ; yet, after the trial of an ejectment has taken place, and a term has been set up whereby the trial of the merits of the case was prevented, and the party using it obtained a verdict and judgment, a suit cannot be sustained to set that judgment aside ; nor will the fact, that the communications made before the trial by the party, who so gained the advantage at law, led the other party to believe that the substantial question of the title would be tried in the ejectment, enable him to sustain a suit for such a purpose ; but if there be any impediment to the trial of the legal right in another action of ejectment, a suit may be sustained for relief by removing that impediment to the trial of the right in such future action. Clare Hall v. Harding, 6 Hare, 273 ; 17 L. J., Ch. 301 ; 12 Jur. 511.

Upon a bill filed by a creditor, to enforce a judgment of twenty-eight years' standing, the plaintiff, in order to rebut the presumption that the judgment had been satisfied, gave evidence of the insolvency of his debtor during the greater part of that period :—Held, that such evidence would not avail the plaintiff against the unexplained fact of his not having sooner attempted to enforce the judgment, and that, to obtain relief in equity, he was bound, under the circumstances, to shew to demonstration that the judgment had not been satisfied. Grenfell v. Girdlestone, 2 Y. & C. 662 ; 7 L. J., Ex. Eq. 42 ; 1 Jur. 940.

Mistake.]—A party who has mistaken or misshapen his defence at law, cannot require relief in equity. Evans v. Solly, 9 Price, 525.

Lands were devised to a trustee and his heirs, to the use of A. for life, without impeachment of waste, with divers remainders over ; and a power was given to the trustee, with the consent of the tenant for life in possession, to sell the property, or any part of it, and to lay out the money in the purchase of other lands to be settled to the same uses, and in the meantime, to invest it in the public funds, and for the purposes of such sale, to revoke the original uses, and appoint new uses. A contract was entered into for the sale of the estate for 13,400*l.* exclusive of the timber, which was to be taken at a valuation ; and it being conceived that the tenant for life, without impeachment of waste, was entitled to receive for his own benefit the amount of the valuation of the timber, a deed was executed, by which he, in consideration of 2,448*l.*, conveyed the timber to the purchaser, and the trustee in consideration of 13,400*l.* conveyed the land exclusive of the timber. Many years afterwards, the tenant for life, being advised that he was not entitled to the amount of the valuation of the timber, transferred to the trustee as much three per cent. stock as 2,448*l.* would have produced at the time of the sale. After the death of A., the next remainderman, though he had concurred in proceedings, in which the fund produced by the sale was treated as applicable to the purposes of the testator's will, brought a writ of formedon, and obtained judgment on the ground that the power of sale was not well executed :—Held, that a court of equity could not relieve against that judgment. Cockerell v. Cholmeley, 1 Russ. & M. 419.

7. Interest on Judgments.

For what Time.]—On the 9th of September, 1869, judgment was signed for 28.850*l.* (awarded by an arbitrator in a cause) and costs ; on the 26th of October an order was made to stay proceedings until Michaelmas term, to give the defendants an opportunity to set aside the award, they bringing the money into court to abide the event ; and on the 8th of November a motion was made, but no rule granted, of which the plaintiff had notice. Delay occurred in the taxation of the plaintiff's costs, a review having been ordered at his instance, and the amount was not ultimately settled until the 29th of January, 1870 ; and on the 2nd of February the money was paid out of court to the plaintiff under a judge's order upon the defendants' summons, and the costs, with interest upon the judgment down to the 8th of November, 1869, were tendered to his attorneys. They, however, claimed interest down to the 2nd of February, 1870 :—Held, that the plaintiff was only entitled to interest down to the 8th of November, 1869, inasmuch as he might at any time after that day have taken the money out of court ; and the court ordered satisfaction to be entered on the roll. Sinclair v. G. E. Ry., 39 L. J., C. P. 224 ; L. R. 5 C. P. 391 ; 22 L. T. 410.; 18 W. R. 758.

On a judgment in case recovered in 1862 :—Held, in a proceeding against the personal assets of the judgment debtor, that more than six years' arrears of interest were recoverable. Breslin v. Hodgens, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 260.

The time of entering up the judgment, from which period interest is given on the judgment debt by the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 17, is the day on which judgment is signed in the master's book, and not the day on which the roll is carried in and the judgment entered of record. Fisher v. Dudding, 3 Man. & G. 238 ; 3 Scott (N.R.) 516 ; 9 D. P. C. 872 ; 10 L. J., C. P. 323. S. P., Newton v. Grand Junction Ry., 16 M. & W. 139 ; 16 L. J., Ex. 276.

In what Cases.]—The 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 17, applies as well to judgments for costs as for the subject-matter of the action. Pitcher v. Roberts, 2 D. (N.S.) 394 ; 12 L. J., Q. B. 178 ; 7 Jur. 466.

Interest may be recovered on a judgment for costs of a nonsuit. Newton v. Conyngham (Lord), 17 L. J., C. P. 288—Ex. Ch. Affirming 5 C. B. 749 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 200 ; 12 Jur. 556.

A ca. sa. need not contain the clause relating to interest given in the form prescribed by the rule of court, unless the plaintiff chooses to claim interest. Stopford v. Fitzgerald, 4 D. & L. 725 ; 16 L. J., Q. B. 310.

Under the statute interest is recoverable on costs which one party is ordered to pay to another, but not on costs directed to be raised out of an estate. Att.-Gen. v. Nethercote, 11 Sim. 529 ; 10 L. J., Ch. 162.

A judgment given for securing an annuity carries interest. Knight v. Bowyer, 4 De G. & J. 619.

In an action on a judgment affirmed in error, the jury, by way of damages, may give interest upon the sum recovered by the judgment from the time of signing it, where, by the practice of the court in which error is brought, such interest is not allowed in costs upon the affirmance. Entwistle v. Shepherd, 2 Term Rep. 78.

By a decree the lands of the defendant were declared chargeable with 40*l.* a year, and the master was directed to take an account of the arrears, and the defendant was ordered to pay what should be found due:—Held, that the defendant was not, under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 17, 18, liable to pay interest on the amount found due from the date of the decree to the date of the master's report. Att.-Gen. v. Carrington (Lord), 6 Beav. 454; 12 L. J., Ch. 453.

Where the court orders payment out of a particular fund, it is tantamount to a decision, not only that such fund is liable to make such payment, but also the interest directed to be computed thereon. Davis v. Browne, 14 Beav. 127.

P. carried in a claim as an incumbrancer upon real estate in respect of an annuity, and in November, 1855, the chief clerk certified 1,002*l.* to be due to him for arrears. The cause did not come on for further consideration till July, 1858. P. then claimed interest on the 1,002*l.*, from the date of the certificate as against subsequent incumbrancers:—Held, that as the payment of the arrears had been delayed merely through hindrances in the prosecution of the suit, and not in consequence of misconduct or improper attempts to evade payment, interest ought not to be allowed, and that the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28, did not alter the case. Mansfield (Earl) v. Ogle, 4 De G. & J. 38; 28 L. J., Ch. 422; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 419; 7 W. R. 423.

The effect of s. 17 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, is that interest at the rate of four per cent. is a debt necessarily attached to every judgment debt, and recoverable at law as a debt; and the judgment creditor is not confined to the remedy by execution mentioned in the section. Therefore, where, in the case of a deceased insolvent debtor who became insolvent before 1869, a sum of money subsequently came to the hands of the assignee, out of which the principal of all the debts entered in the debtor's schedule was paid, it was held that the judgment debts were not satisfied within the meaning of s. 92 (since repealed) of that act until interest was paid, and the assignee was ordered to pay interest before handing over any surplus to the representatives of the insolvent. Lewis, Ex parte, Clagett, In re, 36 W. R. 653—C. A.

—— Under Irish Judgments Act.]—Orders in lunacy giving the receiver liberty to pay money, are not within the meaning of the 27th section of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, so as to bear interest. Hoops v. Kingston (Lord), 11 Ir. Eq. R. 469.

The proceeding by sci. fa. on a receiver's recognisance is an award of execution, and not a judgment recovered, and does not bear interest under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 135, s. 26. Feely v. Kilkenny, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 443.

Interest is not payable under the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, ss. 26, 27, upon a sum of money decreed to be paid out of the produce of the sale of real estate, and not personally by the defendant. Lynch v. Skerrett, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 494.

—— County Court.]—A county court judgment debt does not carry interest under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 17. Reg. v. Essex County Court Judge, 56 L. J., Q. B. 315; 18 Q. B. D. 704; 57 L. T. 643; 35 W. R. 511; 51 J. P. 549—C. A.

Judgment by Consent—Sum recovered to be paid in equal Instalments—Execution stayed unless Default in Instalments.]—Under a consent order for judgment for a fixed sum with taxed costs by way of settlement of an action for breach of promise of marriage and an action for moneys lent, the total amount was agreed to be paid by "eight equal payments half-yearly," and execution was not to issue except in default of such payments. A claim was made, after payment of the instalments, for interest upon the full amount, under the provisions of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 17 and 18, for interest upon a judgment debt:—Held, that the order could not be construed so as to include interest, since the instalments were to be of equal amounts, and when these had been duly paid no execution could issue for any further amount as interest. Caudery v. Finnerty, 61 L. J., Q. B. 496; 66 L. T. 684.

Refunding.]—In January, 1836, a defendant was charged in execution for 61*l.* 14*s.* On the 1st of October, 1838, the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, came into operation. The plaintiff having afterwards died, and his widow having taken out administration, A., who had acted as an attorney for the plaintiff, commenced proceedings in the Insolvent Debtors Court to obtain a vesting order upon the defendant's estate. The defendant sent B. (an attorney) to A. to endeavour to effect a compromise. A. claimed 85*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*, including a claim for interest at 4*l.* per cent. upon the judgment from the time it was entered up. It was ultimately agreed between A. and B. that the defendant should be discharged, upon payment of 80*l.*, which agreement was carried into effect. The court refused to compel A. to refund 18*l.* 6*s.*, the excess beyond the sum for which the defendant was taken in execution, it having been paid under a compromise. Haigh v. Jones, 5 Man. & G. 634; 6 Scott (N.R.) 696; 1 D. & L. 81.

On Reversal of Judgment.]—By an order in council regulating appeals from Hong Kong, the Supreme Court shall in all cases of appeal conform to, execute, and carry into immediate effect, such judgment and orders as her Majesty, in her privy council, shall make thereupon, in such manner as any original judgment or decree of the Supreme Court can or may be executed. In 1867, the respondents recovered from the appellants, in an action of trover in the Supreme Court at Hong Kong, a large sum of money, as principal, interest, and costs, and execution was had and the money was paid. Upon appeal in February, 1869, this judgment was reversed. In June, 1869, the Supreme Court directed the respondents to repay to the appellants the money, but declined to direct interest to be paid during the time the money remained in the respondents' possession:—Held, that it was in the power of the court at Hong Kong to make every order which was fairly and properly consequential upon the reversal of the original judgment, and that the appellants were entitled to the current rate of interest, whilst the money remained in possession of the respondents, on both the principal and interest, but not on the costs. Rodger v. Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris, 7 Moore. P. C. (N.S.) 314; 40 L. J., P. C. 1; L. R. 3 P. C. 465; 24 L. T. 111; 19 W. R. 449.

Interest at 4*l.* per cent. was allowed on money which had been paid on an order of the Court of Chancery which was reversed on appeal. Merchant Banking Co. of London v. Maud, 43 L. J., Ch. 861; L. R. 18 Eq. 659; 22 W. R. 874.

Reversal of Outlawry.]—A defendant is not liable to pay the interest that may have accrued between judgment and reversal of outlawry. Ibbotson v. Fenton, 1 N. & P. 779; W. W. & D. 292; 6 A. & E. 772; 6 L. J., K. B. 143; 1 Jur. 397.

Under Awards.]—On an award directing payment of money at a certain time, interest from that time till payment may be recovered by action, but not by motion for an attachment. Chureher v. Stringer, 2 B. & Ad. 777; 1 D. P. C. 332; 9 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 318. S. P., Johnson v. Durant, 4 Car. & P. 327; 2 B. & Ad. 925; 1 L. J., K. B. 47.

An arbitrator made his award on the 1st of September, 1841, directing payment on the 25th January, 1842, of a sum of money with interest:—Held, that the plaintiff could recover under the award no interest accruing subsequently to the 25th January, though such interest might be given by a jury. Doe d. Moody v. Squire, 2 D. (N.S.) 327; 7 Jur. 236.

A plaintiff having, after notice of action for extortion by a railway company in carrying his goods, served the company with a demand of interest, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28:—Held, that the arbitrator, under a submission of "all matters in difference," might award him interest, notwithstanding the notice of action did not contain a demand of interest. Edwards v. G. W. Ry., 11 C. B. 588; 21 L. J., C. P. 72.

Where the time for making an award was enlarged by the parties altering and re-executing the bonds of submission, the arbitrator was justified in awarding interest on the principal found due beyond the date of the original submission, but within the time of re-executing the bonds. Watkins v. Phillpotts, M'Cle. & Y. 393; 29 R. R. 809.

A. being indebted to B. upon bonds, disputes arose between them as to what was due, and by an order in a suit, referring it to arbitration, and an award made under that order, the debt of A. was fixed at 8,000*l.*, which was ordered to be paid in two sums on days certain; and if payment was not made, the securities were to be sold, and payment made out of the proceeds. The 8,000*l.* and the surplus were to be paid to A.; no mention was made of interest. The securities were not, by reason of various transactions, realised for a very long time:—Held, that the produce of the securities was not, as against subsequent incumbrances of A., chargeable with more than the principal sum of 8,000*l.* Collett v. Newnham, 1 Drew. 447; 1 W. R. 241.

Computation of Rate.]—See post, col. 538.

Scotch Judgment.]—Action on a judgment of the Admiralty Court of Scotland, which gave interest on a balance of accounts from 1811 to the time of payment. The contract was by letter, written in London. The services were performed in Scotland, that being the plaintiff's place of residence:—Held, that a contract made in England, to be executed in Scotland, ought to be regulated by the rules of the English law; and that this contract having been made in England, interest could not be recovered, merely because it was given by the decree in Scotland. Arnott v. Redfern, 3 Bing. 353; 11 Moore, 209; 2 Car. & P. 88; 4 L. J. (o.s.) Car. P. 89.

Irish.]—In an action on an Irish judgment, the question, whether any, and what interest is recoverable, is a question for the jury, under all the circumstances of the case; and in deciding this question, they will have to consider whether the plaintiff has taken proper steps to find his debtor, and follow up his judgment by an execution, or whether he has been guilty of laches. Bann v. Dalzell, 3 Car. & P. 376; M. & M. 228.

Foreign.]—A plaintiff is not entitled to interest on a foreign judgment. Atkinson v. Braybrooke (Lord), 4 Camp. 380; 1 Stark. 219.

Unless interest is payable by virtue of the judgment in the foreign country or colony. Bank of Australasia v. Nias, 16 Q. B. 717; 20 L. J., Q. B. 284.

In an action on a foreign judgment, for an entire sum recovered on counts for the balance of a merchant's account for goods sold, moneys advanced and paid, moneys due on bills of exchange, and for interest, the court would not formerly give interest on affirmance of the judgment of the court below. Doran v. O'Reilly, 3 Price, 250; 7 Taunt. 244; 5 Dow, 133.

Merger of Debt in Judgment.]—By a mortgage deed the mortgagor covenanted to pay the debt on a day named, and (by a separate covenant) to pay interest at 7*l.* per cent., so long as the 3,000*l.* or any part thereof should remain due. The mortgagee obtained a judgment for the principal and interest due at the date of the judgment with interest at 4*l.* per cent. on the sum made up by such principal and interest:—Held, that the security of the mortgage was not merged in the judgment, but that the mortgagee was entitled to sue for the difference between interest at 7*l.* per cent. on the mortgage debt and the interest at 4*l.* per cent. paid under the judgment. Popple v. Sylvester, 52 L. J., Ch. 54; 22 Ch. D. 98; 47 L. T. 329; 31 W. R. 116.

A railway company, in 1864, issued debentures by which they bound themselves to pay a principal sum one year from the date of issue, with interest at 6 per cent., and charged the railway and undertaking with the payment of the principal sum and interest. Soon after the expiration of the year, a debenture-holder brought an action against the company, and recovered judgment for the principal debt, interest, and costs. The company was ordered to be wound up in 1868, and the debenture-holder was admitted to prove for the judgment debt and interest at 4 per cent. The debenture-holder claimed to prove for an additional 2 per cent. on the original amount of the debenture from the date of the judgment:—Held, that the original debt was merged in the judgment, and that the claimant was only entitled to interest on the judgment at 4 per cent. European Central Railway, In re, Oriental Financial Corporation, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 57; 4 Ch. D. 33; 35 L. T. 583; 25 W. R. 92—C. A.

A defendant jointly and severally with A., undertook, if a bill of exchange drawn by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff was not paid at maturity, to pay as interest thereon 20*l.* for each month afterwards. The bill not being paid at maturity, the plaintiff sued the defendant for the bill and interest, as per agreement, but declared in such action on the bill only, and recovered judgment by default for the amount of such bill only. He afterwards brought an action against the defendant on the agreement for interest:—Held, that he was entitled to maintain such action for the interest which accrued prior to the judgment in the former action, but not for the interest subsequently to such judgment, as the right to interest under the agreement ceased when judgment was obtained. Florence v. Jenings, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 454; 26 L. J., C. P. 274; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 772.

A mortgage deed contained a covenant by the mortgagor for payment of the principal sum on the expiration of six months next after a specified day, together with interest thereon at 5 per cent. per annum for the six months. And there was a further covenant by the mortgagor that if the principal sum, or any part thereof, should remain unpaid after the expiration of the six months, the mortgagor would, so long as the same sum or any part thereof should remain unpaid, pay to the mortgagee interest for the principal sum, or for so much thereof as should for the time being remain unpaid, at 5 per cent. per annum. After the expiration of the six months the mortgagee recovered judgment against the mortgagor on the covenant for the principal sum and interest in arrear:—Held, that the covenant being merged in the judgment, the mortgagee was, as from the date of the judgment, entitled to interest on the judgment debt at the rate of 4 per cent. only, and was not entitled to interest under the covenant at the rate of 5 per cent. on the principal sum. Fewings, Ex parte, Sneyd, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 545; 25 Ch. D. 338; 50 L. T. 109; 32 W. R. 352—C. A.

——Mistake as to Amount.]—The defendant borrowed money of the plaintiff, and he gave his promissory note for the amount, with interest at 60*l.* per cent., together with an equitable charge on copyholds as a collateral security for the note. The plaintiff sued on the note, and by mistake he claimed and recovered interest at 5*l.* instead of 60*l.* per cent., which was paid:—Held, that the plaintiff could not afterwards sue upon the mortgage to recover the deficiency, and a bill in equity for that purpose was dismissed, with costs. Darlow v. Cooper, 34 Beav. 281.

8. MERGER IN JUDGMENT—See MERGER.

9. OTHER MATTERS.

A private act of parliament provided that, with certain exceptions, no incumbrance should be paid, unless the claim in respect thereof was proved to the satisfaction of the court. A claim being made, upon a judgment entered up for 3,850*l.*, for services performed by a non-professional person in obtaining the act and other matters, the court refused to allow the claim, the claimant failing to prove the services in respect of which the claim was made. Isaac, Ex parte, Carew's Estate, In re, 30 Beav. 274; 31 L. J., Ch. 214; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 297; 10 W. R. 98.

A person who, without consideration, confesses a judgment for the purpose of thereby withdrawing his property from the demands of his creditor, ex. gr. the creditors of a joint-stock company in which he was a shareholder, has no equity for an injunction to restrain the conusee proceeding to levy the amount of the judgment, although it never was used for the purpose for which it was confessed. M'Curdy v. Martin, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 515.

Where a judgment is not tainted with fraud, the assignee cannot rely on a mere defence at law, which the bankrupt had neglected to make. The consideration of the judgment is always subject to investigation. Jennings, In re, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 236.

The statute 11 & 12 Vict. c. 48, s. 72, enacting that the release of any portion of lands in Ireland from any judgment affecting the same shall not nullify or affect the force of such judgment as regards the residue of such lands, or any other property not specially released, does not apply to releases executed before the passing of that statute. Handcock v. Handcock, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 444.

A. APPOINTMENT AND REMOVAL.

Right of Appointment cannot be Delegated.]—Semble, that since the 27 Hen. 8, c. 24, s. 2, the king cannot delegate the power of creating justices of the peace. Jones v. Williams, 5 D. & R. 654; 3 B. & C. 762; 1 Car. & P. 459, 669; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 112.

By a charter of Edward 4, the crown granted to the abbot and convent of S. the right of appointing their own justices, with power of oyer and terminer for all felonies, trespasses, and misdemeanours occurring within the liberty of S., in the county of H., with a non-intromittent clause, and that they might have a gaol under their own government, without interference by other justices or others, for felons and malefactors within the liberty, until such were delivered by due course of law. Admitted, that the power to appoint justices was put an end to by 27 Hen. 8, c. 24, and that the justices created by the liberty under that statute by the crown had no exclusive jurisdiction over felonies, trespasses, and misdemeanours. Arnold v. Dimsdale, 2 El. & Bl. 580; 22 L. J., M. C. 161; 17 Jur. 1157; 1 W. R. 430.

The 31 Hen. 8, c. 13, gave the crown the franchises appertaining to the then dissolved abbeys, or those that should thereafter be dissolved, as large as the abbots ought to have held the same at the time of their coming to the king's hands. Afterwards the abbey of S. was dissolved. Afterwards, by 32 Hen. 8, c. 20, it was enacted that the same liberties, franchises, and jurisdictions which the late owners had exercised within three months before the abbeys came to the king's hands, should be revived in the king's hands. Admitted that these statutes did not revive in the justices appointed by the crown for the liberty the exclusive jurisdiction given by the charter of Edward 4. Ib.

Ancient Custom—Charter.]—By an ancient custom, all the burgesses of Colchester, except innkeepers and others, could vote in the election of headmen, who chose the justices. A charter was granted to the borough 58 Geo. 3, restoring all rights, but directing that all the burgesses, except the servants of innkeepers and others, should vote for the headmen. The defendant was named a justice by headmen elected by persons coming within the first exception, and not within the second; and the court held that the two classes of disqualifications were not inconsistent with each other, and therefore that the defendant improperly exercised the office of justice of the peace. Rex v. Abell, 3 D. & R. 390; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 250.

Chancery Jurisdiction over.]—Chancery has only jurisdiction over justices of peace in their appointment, and cannot punish them for misbehaviour which is the province of the King's Bench only. Rook, Ex parte, 2 Atk. 2.

Petition for Removal of.]—An elector and an inhabitant of a borough bonâ fide signed and sent to the Secretary of State for the Home Department a memorial complaining of the conduct of a magistrate of the county, during an election for the borough, imputing to him gross acts of violence, and praying that the Secretary of State would cause an inquiry into his conduct to be made, and that if the allegation in the memorial were substantial, he would recommend to the Queen that the magistrate should be removed from the commission of the peace:—Held, that this was a privileged communication. the elector having both an interest and a duty in the subject-matter of the memorial; and that the memorial being substantially a petition to the Queen for the removal of the magistrate from the commission of the peace, the Secretary of State had a corresponding duty to cause the inquiry prayed for to be made, although the Lord Chancellor is the functionary by whose advice and agency the crown usually acts in removing magistrates. Harrison v. Bush, 5 El. & Bl. 344; 25 L. J., Q. B. 25; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 846; 3 W. R. 474.

B. QUALIFICATION.

Under 18 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 1.]—If a party acts as a justice of the peace for a county under a landed qualification of more than 100*l.* a year, it is not an objection to that qualification that the land was originally purchased (even with the knowledge of the party qualifying) with a trust fund, under circumstances which would render the party liable, if proceeded against in equity, to be declared a trustee for the original cestui que trust. Jones v. Edwards, 2 Jur. 519.

Where the qualification of a justice is an ecclesiastical benefice, a sequestration issued at the suit of a creditor, under which possession has been duly taken and the profits received, is an "incumbrance affecting the estate," within the above statute. Pack v. Tarpley, 9 A. & E. 468; 1 P. & D. 478; 2 W. W. & H. 88; 8 L. J., M. C. 93.

Upon issuing such sequestration against a vicar, the bishop licensed him as a stipendiary curate; directed the sequestrator to pay him 120*l.* a year, as such; and assigned to him the vicarage house and grounds as a residence, which were together worth above 100*l.* a year:—Held, first, that the salary and the grounds, being enjoyed by assignment of the bishop, and not simply as vicar, were no qualification within the above statute. Ib.

Held, secondly, that the vicar being bound to reside, notwithstanding the sequestration, occupied the house by right, as vicar, and not by the bishop's assignment, which, quoad hoc, was merely void; but that such house, unless proved to be alone worth 100*l.* a year, was no qualification. Ib.

Under a devise of real estate in trust for the daughter of the testator for life, for her separate use, and if her husband, W., should survive her, upon trust for him for his life, with remainder over, he has not such an estate in remainder as is a qualification within the 18 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 1. Woodward v. Watts, 2 El. & Bl. 452; 22 L. J., M. C. 149; 17 Jur. 790; 1 W. R. 386. See now 38 & 39 Vict. c. 54.

Neglecting to take Oaths.]—Acts done by a justice of the peace in a judicial character, who has not duly qualified, are not absolutely void; therefore, persons seizing goods under a warrant of distress for levying poor-rates, signed by a justice of one of the Cinque Ports, who had not taken the oaths at the general sessions, nor delivered in the certificate required by 51 Geo. 3, c. 36, s. 3, are not trespassers. Margate Pier Company v. Hannan, 3 B. & Ald. 266; 22 R. R. 378.

C. JURISDICTION AND DUTY.

1. WHERE DISQUALIFIED FROM ACTING.

Pecuniary Interest—Probability of Bias.]—Any direct pecuniary interest, however small, in the subject-matter of inquiry, disqualifies a justice from acting judicially in the matter, but the mere possibility of bias in favour of one of the parties does not ipso facto avoid the justice's decision. But if a magistrate has such a substantial interest, other than pecuniary, in the result of the hearing, as to make it likely that he will have a bias, he is disqualified. Reg. v. Rand, 35 L. J., M. C. 157; L. R. 1 Q. B. 230. S. P., Reg. v. Farrant, 57 L. J., M. C. 17; 20 Q. B. D. 58; 57 L. T. 880; 36 W. R. 184; 52 J. P. 116.

Member of Town Council enforcing Borough Rate.]—Where by statute a member of the town council of a borough may act as a justice of the peace in matters arising under the act, in order to disqualify him from so acting it is not sufficient to shew that, as a member of the town council, he has a pecuniary interest in the result of the information or complaint, or that the corporation of which he is a member are the prosecutors; but it must be established that he has such a substantial interest in the result of the hearing as to make it likely that he has a real bias in the matter. Reg. v. Gibbon (6 Q. B. D. 168) disapproved. Reg. v. Handsley, 51 L. J., M. C. 137; 8 Q. B. D. 383; 30 W. R. 368; 46 J. P. 119.

An officer of a corporation appointed to collect the borough rate obtained a summons against a ratepayer in arrear. In so doing he acted in the discharge of his duty, but on his own responsibility and without consulting the town council. At the hearing the justices dismissed the summons, on the ground that one of the sitting magistrates, being a town councillor, was thereby disqualified from adjudicating upon the summons. On motion for a mandamus to the justices to hear and adjudicate on the summons:—Held, that there was no ground for supposing either substantial interest or likelihood of bias, and consequently no disqualification. Ib.

Pecuniary Interest as Ratepayer.]—A justice of the peace attended a vestry meeting, called by the district surveyor, at which he proposed a resolution that S. should be called upon to remove an alleged nuisance left by the side of a highway. Proceedings were thereafter taken by the district surveyor, and the justice heard and adjudicated upon a summons against S. for non-removal of the said nuisance. The order made by the justice directed that the matter deposited, being soil and compost, should be sold and the proceeds applied to the repair of the highways:—Held, that the order must be quashed, for that the justice was disqualified from sitting to hear the summons, not only on account of the part he had taken at the vestry meeting, but also because he was pecuniarily interested as a ratepayer in the result of the order. Reg. v. Gaisford, 61 L. J., M. C. 50; [1892] 1 Q. B. 381; 66 L. T. 24; 56 J. P. 247.

A justice is not disqualified from acting at special sessions in the determination of a rating appeal by reason of the fact that he is a ratepayer in the parish in which the rate appealed against was made. Reg. v. Bolingbroke (infra) followed. Workington Overseers, Ex parte, [1894] 1 Q. B. 416; 9 R. 135; 70 L. T. 143; 42 W. R. 177; 58 J. P. 381—C. A.

Sect. 1 of 16 Geo. 2, c. 18, has not been repealed by s. 6 of the Union Assessment Commitment Amendment Act, 1864. Justices in special sessions can, therefore, hear appeals against rates made by a parish though they are themselves ratepayers in the same parish. Reg. v. Bolingbroke, 62 L. J., M. C. 180; [1893] 2 Q. B. 347; 5 R. 536; 69 L. T. 717; 42 W. R. 128; 58 J. P. 118.

Member of Authority by whom Proceedings Instituted.]—By a local act for the improvement of a borough, the corporation was made the authority for the execution of the act, with power to direct prosecutions for this purpose. An information for an offence under the act having been preferred by an officer on behalf of the corporation, a summons was issued upon it by a justice, who was also an alderman and member of the corporation, but came on for hearing before justices, none of whom were connected with the corporation:—Held, notwithstanding, that such justices could not proceed with the hearing of the summons, for it had been issued by one who was virtually prosecutor. Reg. v. Gibbon, 6 Q. B. D. 168; 29 W. R. 442.

—— Nuisance.]—Complaint having been made to the local government board of a nuisance upon premises belonging to B., in the borough of W., the board communicated with the town council of W., who were the urban sanitary authority under the Public Health Act, 1875, and required them to abate the nuisance. The council having made inquiries, passed a resolution that steps should be taken for the removal of the nuisance, and took out a summons against B. At the hearing an order for the abatement of the nuisance was made. Two justices who were present were members of the town council when the resolution was passed:—Held, that the councillors who were justices had such an interest as might give them a bias in the matter, that consequently they ought not to have sat as justices upon the hearing of the summons, and that a rule for a certiorari to quash the order must be made absolute. Reg. v. Milledge, 48 L. J., M. C. 139; 4 Q. B. D. 332; 40 L. T. 748; 27 W. R. 659.

—— Exposure of Meat unfit for Food.]—By s. 258 of the Public Health Act, 1875, "No justice of the peace shall be deemed incapable of acting in cases arising under this act by reason of his being a member of any local authority." In the borough of Wakefield the sanitary committee of the town council, who were the local authority under the Public Health Act, 1875, passed a resolution directing the town clerk to prosecute S. for exposing for sale meat unfit for human food, contrary to the provisions of the act, and at the hearing of an information laid in pursuance of this resolution S. was convicted before four justices of the borough, who imposed a penalty upon him. One of the justices was a member of the sanitary committee, and had been present at the meeting at which the resolution was passed:—Held, that s. 258 did not remove the disqualification which attached to the justice by reason of his having acted as a member of the sanitary committee in directing the prosecution, and that a rule for a certiorari to bring up and quash the conviction must be made absolute. Reg. v. Lee, 9 Q. B. D. 394; 30 W. R. 750; 47 J. P. 118.

Member of County Finance Committee — Cesspayer—Obstruction of Highway.]—A person was convicted on two separate occasions for obstructing a highway. One of the justices who adjudicated was a member of the finance committee of the county of Dublin, and also a cesspayer. The complainant was the district surveyor, an officer of the grand jury having a statutory duty of reporting generally on the state of all roads, and the name and description of all persons prosecuted by him for any injury to any road, or like offence, and the result of such prosecution, and generally on all matters and things which might be given to him in charge by the finance committee. There was evidence that the first prosecution was undertaken by him in obedience to a direction from the finance committee to take steps to have the obstruction removed, but that the subsequent prosecution was undertaken by him on his own responsibility, and that the justice of the peace in question, when adjudicating in the cases, was not aware that any directions had been given to the complainant:—Held, that the justice was not disqualified either by his being a member of the finance committee, as that committee could not be considered as being directly or indirectly the prosecutors, or his being a cesspayer, even assuming that the costs of such a prosecution were to be paid out of the county funds. Reg. v. Dublin County JJ., [1894] 2 Ir. R. 527.

Cp. Allinson v. General Medical Council, 63 L. J., Q. B. 534; [1894] 1 Q. B. 750; 9 R. 217; 70 L. T. 471; 42 W. R. 289; 58 J. P. 542 —C. A.; post, MEDICINE.

Chairman of Local Board—Legal Proceedings pending—Pollution of River.]—Legal proceedings had been taken by one local board against another in consequence of the discharge of sewage into a river by H., who had contracted with one of the boards to take the sewage of its district for manuring his farm. H. having been summoned before justices for pollution of the river the proceedings between the boards were suspended, by the mutual consent of their chairmen, until the result of the summons against H. could be seen. H. was ordered to pay a sum of money by a bench upon which both such chairmen sat:—Held, that the order upon him was bad. Reg. v. Meyer, 1 Q. B. D. 173; 34 L. T. 247; 24 W. R. 392.

Member of Watch Committee.]—A borough magistrate of a town which has a municipal corporation, of the watch committee of which he is a member, is not thereby disqualified from adjudicating upon an information instituted with the sanction of such watch committee, even though the fine imposed in the case goes into the borough fund. Reg. v. Pettitmangin, 4 B. & S. 921; 33 L. J., M. C. 99, n.; 9 L. T. 683.

Member of Board of Conservators — Salmon Fishery.]—A member of a board of conservators, who was also a justice of the peace, was present at a meeting of the board when a resolution was passed directing a prosecution against the defendant S. for violating certain provisions of the Salmon Fishery Acts, and voted in favour of the resolution. He afterwards sat as one of three justices to hear the case, when S. was convicted:—Held, that he was disqualified from sitting to hear the charge by reason of his having voted in favour of the resolution directing the prosecution, and that the disqualification was not affected by the provisions of s. 61 of the Salmon Fishery Act, 1865. Reg. v. Henley, 61 L. J., M. C. 135; [1892] 1 Q. B. 504; 66 L. T. 675; 40 W. R. 383; 17 Cox, C. C. 518; 56 J. P. 391.

Member of Salmon Fishery Landowners Association.]—On the 23rd of February, 1861, H. was convicted on an information laid against him by a superintendent watcher appointed by a salmon fishery landowners' association, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 109, s. 20. The convicting justices were members of the association, and one of them was a member of the committee, and had been present at the meeting of the association which authorised proceedings to be taken against H.:—Held, that the conviction was bad on the ground of interest in the justices. Reg. v. Allan or Hodgson, 4 B. & S. 915; 33 L. J., M. C. 98; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 796; 9 L. T. 761; 12 W. R. 422.

Interest in Fishery.]—Where a complainant had a right of fishery, under a lease from the mayor, aldermen and burgesses of a borough, under the corporate seal, in which was contained a proviso that the mayor, aldermen and councillors for the time being might fish at their free will and pleasure, but the lease had not been executed, nor any counterpart, by the lessee:—Held, that the justices, one of whom was mayor, and the other aldermen of the borough, were not disqualified from hearing and deciding the complaint by reason of any interest in the matter. Fuller v. Brown, 3 New Sess. Cas. 603.

Shareholder—Railway.]—Justices who were shareholders in a railway company, convicted a man of travelling on the railway with an improper ticket:—Held, that the fact of their being shareholders, however slight their interest might have been, disqualified them from so acting. Reg. v. Hammond, 9 L. T. 423.

—— Shipping Company.]—Semble, the fact that justices are shareholders in shipping companies, the ships of which were insured by associations that were members of a federation in which the prosecutor was agent, is not sufficient to disqualify the justices on the ground of interest or bias. Reg. v. Mackenzie, 61 L. J., M. C. 181: [1892] 2 Q. B. 519; 5 R. 10: 67 L. T. 201; 41 W. R. 144; 17 Cox, C. C. 542; 56 J. P. 712.

Licensing—Application for Renewal—Circular sent to Magistrates to attend.]—The justices of the Tower division of the county of London refused to renew a licence to a certain public-house. Against their decision K., an aggrieved party, appealed to quarter sessions. Prior to the hearing of the appeal the chairman of the Tower bench issued a circular to all the magistrates of the county of London, requesting them to attend on the day fixed for hearing the appeal, and informing them that on that day six appeals relating to one licensed house in the Tower division would be heard. The appeal was heard and dismissed. K. then obtained a rule, directed to the justices of the county of London, to shew cause why their decision dismissing the appeal should not be set aside on the ground of bias:—Held, that as the circular did not ask those justices who attended to vote in any particular way, and as no interested justices took part in the proceedings except as mere spectators, the proceedings were not vitiated, and, therefore, a mandamus ought not to issue commanding the justices to hear and determine the application. Reg. v. London JJ., Kerfoot, Ex parte, 45 W. R. 58; 60 J. P. 726.

—— Member of Committee negotiating for Purchase.]—The corporation of S. acquired for improvement purposes a licensed house, and appointed a committee for the purpose of negotiating the disposal of the premises. T., an alderman, was a member of this committee. The negotiations ended in the licensed premises being sold and the licence becoming merged in that of other premises should the licence of those other premises be granted. The sale was to be null and void if the licence was not granted. T. afterwards sat as a justice when an order of the licensing committee sanctioning the provisional removal of the licence was confirmed:—Held, that T. was not disqualified by interest or bias. Reg. v. Stockport JJ., 60 J. P. 552.

—— Owner of Licensed House.]—W. having applied to the licensing justices for a licence for a new hotel, and the three justices who were sitting having refused it, afterwards applied to the court for a mandamus to have the case heard again on the ground that B., one of the justices, was interested as owner in one of the licensed houses near the proposed hotel. The affidavits shewed that B.'s wife had succeeded to the licensed house, and was tenant for life, but it was a small house without hotel accommodation, and not likely to be injured by the new licence being granted:—Held, (a) that a mandamus could not be granted because the decision not having been set aside or quashed on certiorari, the case could not be heard again; (b) If a certiorari were applied for, the affidavits ought to state that the party applying and his solicitor did not know at the time that one of the justices was interested. Reg. v. Kent JJ., 44 J. P. 298.

After making Order under Dogs Act, 1871.]—Three justices who were members of the town council of a borough, and as such had taken an active part in the making of an order under the Dogs Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 56), sat to hear a complaint of non-observance of the order:—Held, that they had no such interest in the subject-matter as to oust their jurisdiction. Reg. v. Huntingdon JJ., 4 Q. B. D. 522.

Commoner.]—A commoner of Epping Forest, who objected to the proceedings of the corporation of London as owners of the forest, removed and destroyed their notice-boards and gave them warning that he should remove their fences and other obstructions. The corporation promptly commenced an action against him and obtained an injunction to restrain him from carrying out his threats. They also summoned him under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 52, for destroying their boards. At the hearing of the summons before two justices, the applicant objected to one of them on the ground that he was disqualified by interest in adjudicating on the summons. This justice had made an affidavit on behalf of the corporation in the action, in which he stated that he was a commoner, and that the corporation had by their proceedings rendered the forest better fitted for the use of the commoners and the public. The applicant also objected that no leave of the Epping Forest Commissioners had been obtained under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 95, s. 3, for this prosecution. The justices overruled these objections and convicted the applicant:—Held, that the justice was not disqualified from adjudicating on this summons; that no leave of the commissioners was required for a criminal prosecution; and that the conviction was right. Reg. v. Alcock, Chilton, Ex parte, 37 L. T. 829.

Churchwarden — Order of Removal.] — A churchwarden cannot act as a magistrate in making an order for the removal of a person from his own parish. His disqualification arises not from interest, but because he acts both as complainant and judge. Rex v. Great Yarmouth (Inhabitants), 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 73.

Sheriff.] — A justice of the peace who is appointed sheriff cannot, during his year of office, act as a justice of the peace for the county of which he is sheriff. This disqualification extends to financial matters or county business, as well as to criminal questions. Colville, Ex parte, 45 L. J., M. C. 108; 1 Q. B. D. 133; 24 W. R. 456.

Coroner.]—A justice of the peace does not become disqualified from acting as such by reason of his being elected coroner for the county or division for which he so acts as justice. Davis v. Pembrokeshire JJ., 7 Q. B. D. 513.

Clerk of Peace.]—A person holding the commission of the peace was appointed clerk of the peace, and acted in both capacities for the same county:—Held, that the appointment to the clerkship of the peace did not vacate the commission of the peace. Forbes v. Lloyd, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 552.

Member of Privileged Class—Person charged with Contravention of Privileges.]—A justice, who is a member of a small class of privileged persons, is disqualified from adjudicating in proceedings taken against a person for an infringement of the privileges of such class. Therefore, a justice who is a licensed pilot cannot adjudicate on a complaint against an unlicensed pilot for a contravention of s. 361 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854. Reg. v. Huggins, Clancy, Ex parte, 64 L. J., M. C. 149; [1895] 1 Q. B. 563; 15 R. 203; 72 L. T. 193; 43 W. R. 329; 59 J. P. 104.

Subscriber to the Prosecuting Society.]—The applicant had been convicted and fined for cruelty to a horse, upon the prosecution of an officer of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Some of the justices who heard the summons and took part in the conviction were subscribers to a branch of the said society, which received subscriptions in the country and forwarded them to the society's office in London. All prosecutions by the society were directed by the secretary or committee in London, and no subscribers had any authority over or responsibility for such prosecutions, and the society never accepted any part of the penalties inflicted under the Cruelty to Animals Prevention Act, 1849. ss. 2, 18, 21:—Held, upon a rule for a certiorari, that there was nothing in these facts to create a real bias in the minds of the justices which could amount to a disqualifying interest. Reg. v. Deal Corporation, 45 L. T. 439; 30 W. R. 154; 46 J. P. 71. Cp. Reg. v. St. Albans (Bishop), 9 Q. B. D. 454; 46 L. T. 692.

Member of Incorporated Law Society—Proceedings against Unqualified Person acting as Solicitor.]—In proceedings taken at the instance of the Council of the Incorporated Law Society against an unqualified person for acting as a solicitor a justice is not disqualified from adjudicating by reason of the fact that he is a member of the Incorporated Law Society. Reg. v. Burton, Young, Ex parte, 66 L. J., Q. B. 831; [1897] 2 Q. B. 468; 77 L. T. 364; 46 W. R. 127; 61 J. P. 727.

Litigant in similar Cases.]—At a special sessions for appeals against a poor-rate, the chairman of the magistrates, who was himself appellant in one of the cases for hearing, took part in the decision of all the cases except his own. When his own case was called on, he left the bench and went to the body of the court and conducted the case himself. On a rule for a certiorari to bring up all the orders for the purpose of quashing them:—Held, that the chairman, being a litigant in a matter similar to the other matters before the court, was disqualified from acting as a justice, and that the orders were bad. Reg. v. Great Yarmouth JJ., 51 L. J., M. C. 39; 8 Q. B. D. 525; 30 W. R. 460.

Presence of Disqualified Justice—Taking Part in Discussion.]—At the hearing and determination of an appeal against a refusal to grant an excisable licence, one of the justices who refused the licence was present on the bench, and during the hearing conversed with some of the magistrates. His affidavit stated that he did not recollect being present at the hearing or determination of the appeal, nor conversing with any of the magistrates hearing the appeal; and that he did not converse with them on any matter relating to the appeal, nor act in the hearing or determination of the appeal:—Held, nevertheless, that being present, he formed part of the court, and therefore the order of sessions was invalid. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1138; 4 W. R. 86.

If any one of the magistrates hearing a case at sessions is interested in the result, the court is improperly constituted, and an order made in the case will be quashed on certiorari. Reg. v. Hertfordshire JJ., 6 Q. B. 753; 1 New Sess. Cas. 490; 14 L. J., M. C. 73; 9 Jur. 424.

It is no answer to the objection, that there was a majority in favour of the decision, without reckoning the vote of the interested party, nor that the interested party withdrew before the decision, if he appears to have joined in discussing the matter with the other magistrates. Ib.

At the hearing of a summons for an offence under the Fishery Acts, one of the magistrates was interested in the decision and sat on the bench. He stated openly in court that he should take no part in the hearing of the case, but he made an observation in the course of the case that he could prove a material fact in controversy. He also remained and was present at the consultation of the magistrates. He stated that he took no other part in the matter, and did not vote on the decision:—Held, that he took such a part in the hearing as invalidated the conviction. Reg. v. O'Grady, 7 Cox, C. C. 247.

Where, at the quarter sessions, some of the justices voted in support of an order in which they were interested:—Held, that the court was improperly constituted, and a case of malversation made out; and the order, having been removed notwithstanding a statute taking away certiorari, was quashed. Reg. v. Cheltenham Paving Commissioners, 1 G. & D. 167; 1 Q. B. 467; 10 L. J., M. C. 99.

At the hearing of an appeal against an order of removal, one of the justices present was a ratepayer in the appellant parish. During the hearing his presence was objected to by the appellants, whereupon the chairman stated that he would take no part in the hearing or decision of the appeal. Subsequently he pointed out documents and made observations to the chairman, but the affidavits of the justices stated that he took no part in the decision of the appeal:—Held, that his presence vitiated the order of sessions. Reg. v. Suffolk JJ., 18 Q. B. 416; 21 L. J., M. C. 169; 16 Jur. 612. See Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 1 B. C. C. 70; 21 L. J., M. C. 195; 16 Jur. 641.

On the hearing of an appeal from a conviction and sentence of imprisonment at petty sessions, one of the magistrates who had adjudicated in the court below took his seat on the bench and remained there until the appeal was decided, and was consulted as to the number of magistrates who took part in the decision appealed from, and their unanimity, but he did not otherwise take part in the hearing of the appeal :— Held, sufficient to invalidate the proceedings, and to entitle the prisoner to be discharged on habeas corpus. Clarke, Ex parte, 26 L. R., Ir. 1.

The mere presence on the bench of an interested magistrate during part of the hearing of an appeal is not sufficient ground for setting aside an order of sessions made on such hearing, if it is expressly shewn that he took no part in the hearing, came into court for a different purpose, and did not in any way influence the decision. Reg. v. London JJ., 18 Q. B. 421, n.

If a disqualified justice sits upon the bench, the order or conviction by his fellow-justices will be quashed, although the disqualified justice may not have signed such order or conviction. Reg. v. Meyer, 1 Q. B. D. 173 ; 34 L. T. 247 ; 24 W. R. 392.

A justice, having an interest in the matter under adjudication, sat close to the bench. During the hearing a communication in writing passed between him and one of the adjudicating justices ; he was also alleged to have interrupted a witness, and that before the hearing he had discussed the subject-matter of the dispute with one of the justices. It having been shewn that the contents of the note passing between the particular justice and the bench had not and could not have had any influence on the decision (which was a conviction of the defendant), and the other allegations having been disproved, the court refused to interfere with the conviction, but having regard to the need for explanation of the primâ facie aspect of the case, the rule for a certiorari was discharged without costs. Reg. v. Budden, 60 J. P. 166.

Justice taking active Part in Defending Appeal.]—Where a justice of the peace is shewn to have taken an active part in defending an appeal against a decision of which he approves, but to which he was no party, he is disqualified on the ground of probability of bias from taking part in deciding the appeal. Reg. v. Cumberland JJ., 58 L. T. 491 ; 52 J. P. 502.

Justice giving Advice — Attempt to bring about Settlement.]—A magistrate, who was a surgeon, attended a patient professionally for injury caused by an assault. He endeavoured to induce his patient not to prosecute for the assault, and conveyed to him a message, sent by the person who had committed the assault, offering an apology and suggesting a settlement. A summons was issued for the assault, the magistrate was subpœnaed to give evidence for the prosecution, and a writ of prohibition was obtained to prohibit him from sitting at the hearing. The magistrate moved to set aside the prohibition :—Held, that the acts of the magistrate did not shew that he had such a substantial interest in the result as to make it likely that he would have a bias, and that the fact of his being subpœnaed did not disqualify him from sitting, and therefore the prohibition must be set aside. Reg. v. Farrant, 57 L. J., M. C. 17 ; 20 Q. B. D. 58 ; 57 L. T. 880 ; 36 W. R. 184 ; 52 J. P. 116. Cp. Fobbing Commissioners v. Reg., 56 L. J., M. C. 1 ; 11 App. Cas. 449 ; 55 L. T. 493 ; 34 W. R. 721 ; 51 J. P. 227—H. L. (E.)

Justice Summoned as Witness.]—Upon the trial of a parish appeal C., one of the justices, not a ratepayer, was summoned as a witness, and sat upon the bench, and in the course of the proceedings suggested audibly certain facts to the chairman : — Held, that the order in sessions was good, as it did not appear that C. had acted judicially or done more than a witness might properly do. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 2 W. R. 459.

The mere fact of a subpœna having been served on a magistrate to give evidence in a particular case, does not disqualify him from sitting as a magistrate in the hearing and adjudication of that case. Reg. v. Tooke, 32 W. R. 753 ; 48 J. P. 661. See also Reg. v. Farrant, supra.

Taking Indemnity.]—Semble, that, on deciding a case, magistrates ought not to take an indemnity, as it has the effect of enabling them to decide more safely in favour of a party who is able to give an indemnity, than of one who cannot do so. Selwood v. Mount, 9 Car. & P. 75.

Clerk to Justices acting as Solicitor.]—The clerk to the justices should not act as solicitor for one of the parties on a prosecution before his own bench of justices, but such an interest in the clerk does not affect the jurisdiction of the bench. Reg. v. Brakenridge, 48 J. P. 293.

Waiver of Objection.]—Where on the hearing of an appeal one of the justices taking part in the decision is an interested party, this court will grant a certiorari to bring up the order of the justices and quash it, the application for the certiorari being made by the attorney for the unsuccessful party, although he was at the trial and it is shewn by affidavits that he must have known of the interest of such justice, and did not object to his remaining on the bench. Reg. v. Cambridgeshire JJ., 3 W. R. 418.

H. was convicted under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30 (the Malicious Trespass Act), by justices who were personally interested. H. was represented by an attorney, and neither H. nor his attorney made any objection to the justices at the time of the conviction. There being no affidavit that H. and his attorney were ignorant of the justices' interest at the time of the conviction, the court refused to quash the conviction. Reg. v. Huntingtower (Lord), or Richmond JJ., 8 Cox, C. C. 314 ; 8 W. R. 562 ; 2 L. T. 373. See Reg. v. Kent JJ., ante, col. 548.

Before the sessions were held the appellants gave notice to the clerk of the justices that objection would be made "if any justices who were rated in Yarmouth heard the appeals." At the hearing this objection, and no other, was made, and it was overruled by the justices :— Held, that the appellants were not precluded by the form of their notice from contending, in support of the rule for a certiorari, that the chairman, even if not disqualified by reason of his being rated, was disqualified by reason of his being himself a litigant ; although this latter objection was not specifically mentioned in the notice or made before the justices. Reg. v. Great Yarmouth JJ., 51 L. J., M. C. 39 ; 8 Q. B. D. 525 ; 30 W. R. 460.

Where a justice has an interest on public grounds as to make a real bias reasonably probable, complainants by acquiescing in his sitting and adjudicating on the case, are precluded from relying on this objection. Reg. v. Antrim JJ., [1895] 2 Ir. R. 603.

—— Under Railways Clauses Act.]—The Railways Clauses Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 20), s. 3, defines "justice" as a justice of the peace for the county, &c., in which the matter requiring the cognisance of such justice shall arise, and who shall not be interested in the matter:—Held, in proceedings before such a justice, it is not necessary to negative the fact that he is interested, and the objection may be waived by the party against whom the interest is alleged to exist. Wakefield Local Board v. West Riding and Grimsby Ry., 6 B. & S. 794; 35 L. J., M. C. 69; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 160; 13 L. T. 590; 14 W. R. 100; 10 Cox, C. C. 162.

Specific Statement of alleged Ground of Disqualification.]—Where it is intended to rely on the bias or interest of a particular justice as vitiating the proceedings at petty sessions, the established and proper practice of the court is that such bias or interest should be specifically stated as a ground on the face of the conditional order for a certiorari. Reg. v. Antrim JJ., supra.

2. WHERE CLAIM OF RIGHT SET UP.

In Case of Assault and Battery.]—A person making a bonâ fide claim of right to be present as one of the public in a law court at the hearing of a suit, is not justified in committing an assault upon a police-constable and an official who endeavour to remove him. Such a claim of right does not oust the jurisdiction of the magistrate who has to try the charge of assault, and he may refuse to allow cross-examination and to admit evidence in respect of such a claim. Reg. v. Eardley, 49 J. P. 551.

—— Execution of Process of Court.]—A county court bailiff, while acting in the course of his duty, was assaulted by F., who was summoned for the assault under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 114:—Held, that the justices could not decline jurisdiction on the ground that a question might arise as to execution under the process of a court of justice. Reg. v. Briggs, 47 J. P. 615.

Question as to Property.]—The question as to property which will oust the jurisdiction of justices to determine a charge of assault under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 42, must be a question as to real property. Where two persons who were gamekeepers in the employ of a landlord of a farm to whom the right to game and rabbits was reserved, were charged before the justices by the tenant of such farm, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 42, with assaulting and beating him, and the acts complained of were done in a scuffle to take from the tenant whilst on his farm his bag, in which were rabbits claimed as the landlord's property:—Held, that the fact that the justices were of opinion that the gamekeepers acted under a bonâ fide belief that they had a right to do the acts complained of did not oust the jurisdiction of the justices, no question having arisen as to title to any interest in land within the meaning of s. 46 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100. White v. Fox, 49 L. J., M. C. 60; 44 J. P. 618.

The power given to justices by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 42, of summarily hearing and determining charges of assault and battery, is, by s. 46, ousted in any case where a question as to the title to land arises, and they cannot in such a case convict a person for using more violence than was necessary. Reg. v. Pearson, 39 L. J., M. C. 76; L. R. 5 Q. B. 237; 22 L. T. 126; 11 Cox, C. C. 493.

The court will not grant a certiorari to bring up and quash a conviction by magistrates under 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 27, on an affidavit by the defendant which states that the assault for which he was convicted arose out of a dispute as to the title to land, if it appears that on the hearing of the complaint there was any evidence before the magistrates on which they might decide that the assault was committed independently of or before any dispute arose as to title to land. Reg. v. Edwards, 4 W. R. 257.

Trespass.]—To oust the summary jurisdiction of justices on the ground that a bonâ fide question of title arises, it is sufficient to shew that the act complained of as a trespass was committed in the exercise of a supposed right, which the alleged trespasser bonâ fide believed that he possessed. Mathews v. Carpenter, 16 L. R., Ir. 420.

—— Right to cut Ditch.]—W. was employed by an owner of real property to enter upon the land of F., and cut a ditch therein to carry off the surface water, W.'s employer contending that he had a prescriptive right to such an easement. W. being convicted under the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 52, of wilful damage to real property:—Held, that the justices not having found that W.'s employer acted under a fair and reasonable supposition that he had a right to send men to cut a ditch through F.'s private property, W. could not be in a better position than his employer, and that the conviction was therefore right. White v. Feast, 41 L. J., M. C. 81; L. R. 7 Q. B. 353; 26 L. T. 611; 20 W. R. 382.

Right to cut down Trees—Nuisance.]—The appellant's premises adjoined a public road, on the opposite side of which there grew a chestnut tree which overhung the road to within a few feet of the appellant's premises. The appellant cut off certain portions of the tree, and on a charge of maliciously and wilfully damaging the tree, contended that he had a right to cut it to protect his property from the nuisance caused by stones which boys threw at the blossoms and from the nuisance caused by the branches interfering with the entrance of light and air to his dwelling:—Held, that the magistrates were justified in finding that the appellant wilfully committed damage to the tree, and that he did not act under a fair and reasonable supposition that he had a right to do the acts complained of. Hamilton v. Bone, 16 Cox, C. C. 437; 52 J. P. 726.

Recovery of Possession of Land—Jus tertii.]—Upon an application (under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 74) by a landlord to justices in petty sessions to recover possession of premises held over by his tenant after the expiration of the term, the tenancy having been proved to the satisfaction of the justices and its legal determination, and the tenant's refusal to quit:—Held, that the jurisdiction of the justices to give the landlord possession was not ousted by the tenant's setting up the title of a third person. Rees v. Davies, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 56.

Obstructions in a Street.]—A local act gave jurisdiction to justices over the offence of "throwing or laying down stones, iron, &c., or other materials in a street." A person charged with the offence maintained that the spot on which iron had been laid down was his private property, free from any right of way, and the justices declined to adjudicate:—Held, that their jurisdiction was not ousted, as the statute gave them power to determine what was a street. Reg. v. Young, White, Ex parte, 52 L. J., M. C. 55; 47 J. P. 519. S. P., Reg. v. Smith. Pritchard, Ex parte, 52 L. J., M. C. 56, n.

A shopkeeper in a borough placed goods upon the pavement in front of his shop for sale. Upon being summoned under the Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847, for obstructing the footway, he contended that he bonâ fide claimed the right to place his goods there. The justices considered that their jurisdiction was ousted, but stated a case:—Held, that the justices ought to determine whether the land on which the goods were placed was part of the public highway or not, that no question of title was involved, and that their jurisdiction was not ousted. Leicester Urban Sanitary Authority v. Holland, 57 L. J., M. C. 75; 52 J. P. 788.

Custom to cut Sods in Graveyard.]—The proviso in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97 (the Malicious Trespass Act), s. 52, providing that no person shall be summarily convicted for trespass to real property where he "acted under a fair and reasonable supposition that he had a right to do the acts complained of," will not oust the jurisdiction of the justices unless the right claimed is one possible in law. Reg. v. Westmeath JJ., 15 W. R. 59.

A claim to cut sods in a graveyard for the purpose of covering newly-made graves is not such a right; and although a custom to cut the sods is shewn to exist, it will not confer any such right. Ib.

Trespass in Pursuit of Game.]—It is not sufficient to oust the jurisdiction of the justices in regard to a charge of trespass in pursuit of game under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, that there is an honest claim of right if such claim is absurd and impossible in point of law. The question is whether a reasonable claim of right is involved, and not one of mens rea, inasmuch as the statute is not a mere criminal statute, but is intended for the protection of the peculiar rights of persons entitled to shoot game. Watkins v. Major, 44 L. J., M. C. 164; L. R. 10 C. P. 662; 33 L. T. 352; 24 W. R. 164.

M. laid an information against A. for trespassing in pursuit of game, under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32 (Game Act), s. 30. At the hearing he gave evidence that the lords of the manor had, in 1815, granted the right of shooting, down to the present time, and that he was then renting the shooting from them. On A.'s part it was alleged that he had a lease from the lords of the manor of the lands said to be trespassed upon, dated 1859, in which there was no reservation of a right to the game, and that the alleged trespass was committed in the assertion of his right to the game. The justices having convicted A.:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the claim of right having been bonâ fide made, the jurisdiction of the justices was ousted. Adams v. Masters, 24 L. T. 502.

B. was proved to have shot game on glebe land over which the rector of the parish had always exercised the privilege of sporting. B.'s defence was that he was game watcher employed by three gentlemen who were proved to rent shooting from the lord of the manor, and that the lord claimed the shooting over part of the glebe under an inclosure act. He proved that his employers ordered him to go upon this land, but he produced no evidence, although an adjournment was offered for that purpose, that it was included in the lands over which his employers' shooting extended, or that it was in the disputed part of the glebe:—Held, that the magistrate was right in deciding that then B. had no bonâ fide claim of right. Binnie v. Marshall, 35 L. T. 373.

B.'s covert adjoined the field of P., and B. went on a public footpath in this field, directing his servant to beat B.'s own covert and hedge. B. on being charged with trespassing in pursuit of game, under s. 30 of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, set up a claim of right, as the hedge was his:—Held, that the justices were wrong in allowing a claim of right, as no title to property was involved, and that B. ought to have been convicted. Philpot v. Bugler, 54 J. P. 646.

—— Right of Lord of Manor.]—Where a party, upon an information for trespassing in pursuit of game, made a claim of right to shoot over lands as lord of the manor, and gave in evidence, in support of such right, certain documents of title and an inclosure act, but the justices found that there was no evidence that he, as such lord, had any rights other than those possessed by every other lord, and that he having practised for years as an attorney, did not bonâ fide believe when he committed the trespass that he had any such right as that claimed, and convicted him, the conviction was quashed upon the ground that there was evidence of the bonâ fides of the claim set up. Reg. v. Derbyshire JJ., 11 W. R. 780.

—— Right of Burgess—Ancient Charter.]—Under an ancient charter granting to the mayor, aldermen and burgesses of a borough the right to sport over lands within the liberties thereof, individual burgesses, in the absence of all evidence of exercise, are not entitled to the enjoyment of the right over land within the liberties but in the occupation of a third party. Potter v. Berry, 6 W. R. 71.

—— Reasonableness.]—A question of title bonâ fide raised in the course of proceedings, on an information, before justices, for trespassing in pursuit of game, operates to oust the jurisdiction of the justices, and their proper course is to dismiss the charge. The bonâ fides of the claim is for the justices to determine. Legg v. Pardoe, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 289; 30 L. J., M. C. 108; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 499; 3 L. T. 371; 9 W. R. 234.

A person charged with trespassing in pursuit of game in the daytime on land in the occupation of a tenant to A., set up a claim of right to shoot over the land, on the ground that he and every one who chose had always shot there till some recent acts of interruption, and declared his readiness to try the right with A.:—Held, that the mere assertion of a general right in himself and every one else, though he really believed it, without shewing any such claim of right as would be a defence to an action of trespass, did not oust the jurisdiction of the magistrates to convict. Leatt v. Vine, 30 L. J., M. C. 207 ; 8 L. T. 581.

An information was laid against K. for a trespass in pursuit of game. At the hearing he gave in evidence a lease, dated 1794, for 99 years, of the land upon which the trespass was alleged to have been committed, to a party through whom he claimed ; the lessor being the party through whom the informant claimed the right to the game. The lease contained the following reservation to the lessor : "and also liberty to hawk, hunt, set and fowl in and upon the demised premises during the term hereinafter granted." K. having set up his title through the lessee to take the game upon the land, and so disputed the right of justices to adjudicate, they held that the claim of right was not sufficient to oust their jurisdiction, and convicted him :—Held, that the objection being made, it was a reasonable one, and that the jurisdiction of the justices was ousted. Reg. v. Kayley, 10 L. T. 339.

The tenant of a farm under a lease which reserved the game to the lessor, but did not expressly say that it did so exclusively, shot three hares in the presence of the keeper to assert his right. He set up this claim of right on the hearing of an information against him before the justices, and alleged that it ousted their jurisdiction. They found that the claim was not bonâ fide, because he had a copy of the lease, and convicted him :—Held, that this finding as to the bona fides was not conclusive, because there was no evidence that his claim was made malâ fide ; and that as he asserted his claim of right the magistrates had no jurisdiction to hear the information. Lovesy v. Stallard, 30 L. T. 792.

Where proceedings for trespassing on land in pursuit of game are taken before justices against a person who raises a question of title, he must allege such title to be in himself, and not in a third person ; and it is the province of the justices to determine whether or not such claim has a reasonable foundation. Cornwell v. Sanders, 3 B. & S. 206 ; 32 L. J., M. C. 6 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 540 ; 7 L. T. 356 ; 11 W. R. 87.

A trespasser in search of game set up as a defence, under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 30, the leave and licence of the occupier under a parol lease. The occupier denied that the game was reserved ; evidence was given to shew that it was :—Held, that the defence was not bonâ fide, and, therefore, the jurisdiction of the justices was not ousted. Reg. v Critchlow, 26 W. R. 681.

—— Adjournment to produce Evidence.]—On the hearing of an information for trespassing in pursuit of game, it was stated by the parties that they had authority from the owner of the land ; but not being prepared to prove that fact they asked for an adjournment :—Semble, that this was a claim on a matter which would be a defence to an action ; and therefore under the proviso in s. 30 of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, the justices ought not to have proceeded to convict. Reg. v. Cridland, 7 El. & Bl. 853 ; 27 L. J., M. C. 28 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1213 ; 5 W. R. 679.

Right to Fish.]—A river was made navigable by a company, and the public allowed to navigate it on payment of tolls, under certain acts of parliament ; but the soil and rights of the owners on each side of the river remained untouched. The public had fished for many years in the river without interruption by the owner of the soil ; but he caused a notice to be set up forbidding all fishing. A person afterwards fished in the river, and an information was taken out against him under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 24. At the hearing he set up the right in the public, and contended that the jurisdiction of the justices was ousted by this bonâ fide claim of right :—Held, that the right set up could not exist in law, and therefore title could not come in question, and the jurisdiction of the justices was not ousted. Hargreaves v. Diddams, 44 L. J., M. C. 178 ; L. R. 10 Q. B. 582 ; 32 L. T. 600 ; 23 W. R. 828.

The right of the public to fish in a non-tidal river which is made navigable by locks cannot exist in law. M. was convicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 24, of fishing in water which was private property. The water was part of a navigable river, which was not tidal, and which was navigated by means of locks. At the hearing he set up a public right of fishing, and argued that the jurisdiction of the justices was ousted by such bonâ fide claim of right :—Held, that no such right could exist in law, and therefore the jurisdiction of the justices was not ousted. Mussett v. Burch, 35 L. T. 486.

In answer to an information before two justices under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 24, for unlawfully and wilfully attempting to take fish in water where another person had a private right of fishery, by angling at an hour not between the beginning of the last hour before sunrise and the expiration of the first hour after sunset, the accused justified under a supposed right on the part of the public to fish in that water. Concession,—that such a right of fishing by the public in a non-navigable river could not exist in law : —Held, that the accused justifying himself under the bonâ fide, though mistaken notion, of such a right, did not make such a claim of right as ousted the jurisdiction of the justices. Hudson v. M'Rae, 4 B. & S. 585 ; 33 L. J., M. C. 65 ; 9 L. T. 678 ; 12 W. R. 80.

Upon hearing of an information against a defendant for fishing in the prosecutor's fishery, the latter proved the purchase by him from the crown of a manor, with the fishery appurtenant thereto, and that previously to the purchase the crown had from time to time granted leases of the right of fishing. For the defendant it was shewn that the locus in quo was a navigable river, subject to the ebb and flow of the tide, and witnesses were called, who proved that for forty years they had exercised, without molestation, the right of fishing there :—Held, that the question of title fairly arose, and that the jurisdiction of the justices to determine the case was at an end. Reg. v. Stimpson, 4 B. & S. 307 ; 32 L. J., M. C. 208 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 41 ; 8 L. T. 536 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 356. And see Paley v. Birch, 8 B. & S. 356 ; 16 L. T. 410.

In a prosecution before magistrates under the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 106, s. 65, the jurisdiction of the magistrates is ousted if the defendant bonâ fide claims to be entitled to a several fishery in the locus in quo ; and if the magistrates believe that the claim is bonâ fide made, they should not proceed further with the case, and have no jurisdiction to determine the question of title. Johnston v. Meldon, 30 L. R., Ir. 15.

Right of Way.]—On a charge, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 25, for maliciously damaging a fence, it appeared that the defendant had been fishing in a canal, and had passed over a field of growing wheat in the occupation of the prosecutor, and was going away, when (whether wilfully or not was disputed) he damaged the fence, which he alleged was not upon the land of the prosecutor, and he produced a letter from a person who claimed to be the owner of, and had given him leave to fish in the canal:—Held, that this was evidence of a bonâ fide claim of title, and reasonable colour of right, which ousted the jurisdiction of the magistrates, and that they were wrong in proceeding to convict. Reg. v. Snape, 11 W. R. 434.

The appellant was convicted by justices in petty sessions—(1) under the 38th section of 45 & 46 Vict. c. ccxiv., for having unlawfully trespassed on a railway in such a manner as to expose himself to danger; and (2) under the 23rd section of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1868, for having been unlawfully on the railway after receiving warning not to go or pass thereon. There was, prior to the making of the railway, and prior to the acts of parliament authorising the same, a public right of way for persons on foot over the land now occupied by the railway at the place where the appellant crossed, and the appellant went upon and crossed the railway, in the assertion of the right of way which formerly existed, and believing that he was entitled to do so by virtue thereof:—Held, that the conviction on both summonses was wrong—(1) because the claim of the right of way set up by the appellant ousted the jurisdiction of the justices to determine the case; and (2) because there were no provisions in the act of parliament extinguishing the right of way, which was consequently still in existence. Cole v. Miles, 57 L. J., M. C. 132; 60 L. T. 145; 36 W. R. 784; 53 J. P. 228.

The respondent's wife was the owner of the land on each side of a public footpath and also of the land over which the footpath passed. To prevent his cattle straying along the footpath, the respondent erected in the middle of the footpath two wooden posts, one at the entrance to the footpath, the other some distance further down the path. There was a space of about two feet on either side of these posts through which foot passengers could but cattle could not pass. The appellants, with a number of others, inhabitants of the district, considering that these posts interfered with their use of the footpath, pulled up one of them and threw it over the fence. They were convicted, under s. 52 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, of having committed wilful damage to the post:—Held, that, even assuming it not to be an obstruction, the appellants had acted under a fair and reasonable supposition that they had a right to do what they did, and that they therefore came within the proviso of the section, and ought not to have been convicted, as the jurisdiction of the justices was ousted. Usher v. Luxmore, 62 L. T. 110; 38 W. R. 254; 54 J. P. 405.

E. was charged under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 24, with unlawfully damaging growing oats and dredge corn, to the amount of one shilling. At the hearing, E. claimed a right of highway, but the justices convicted him, though several old witnesses spoke of a highway being claimed and used:—Held, that the defendant's evidence was sufficient to support his claim of right, and that the justices were wrong in convicting. Edwards v. Cock, 58 J. P. 398.

Right to Collect Tolls.]—A private act incorporating a bridge company, and enabling the company to take certain maximum tolls, which the company by resolution might diminish and alter, provided for the settlement of disputed tolls by a justice, by arbitration. By a subsequent section, if any collector should demand or take a greater or less toll from any person than he should be authorised to do by virtue of the act or resolutions under it, or should demand or take a toll from a person exempt from payment, he was to forfeit a sum less than 5*l.* upon an information before justices. A foot-passenger paid the collector of tolls, upon demand, a toll the second time the same day, and laid an information before justices against him for demanding it. There was no exemption in the act upon a passenger's crossing the bridge a second time on the same day; but it was admitted that from the passing of the act, forty years before, until this demand, no passenger ever had paid under such circumstances. No resolution of exemption, however, was in existence. The justices convicted, notwithstanding the collector's assertion of a bonâ fide claim of right:—Held, that as there was a particular provision in the act for the settlement of such a dispute, the information ought to have been dismissed; and that the fact of forty years' practice, although evidence of exemption, was not conclusive. Dixon v. Cockett, 25 L. T. 826.

Disputed Church-rate.]—Upon the hearing of a summons against the defendant for non-payment of a church-rate, he gave notice to the justices that he disputed the validity of the rate, and his liability to pay it, and stated his reasons for doing so. The justices were of opinion, though without any evidence to justify that opinion, that the allegations and notices of the defendant were not made and given in good faith, but were put forward as a pretext for avoiding payment of the rate, and therefore they made an order for payment:—Held, that they were wrong, as by the course adopted by the defendant they were deprived of all jurisdiction to make such order. Reg. v. Nunneley, El. Bl. & El. 852; 27 L. J., M. C. 260; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1146.

At the hearing of a summons to enforce payment of a church-rate, although the justices are the tribunal to decide in the first instance whether a party's objection is bonâ fide or not, they cannot, by deciding contrary to the facts that it is not bonâ fide, give themselves jurisdiction. Reg. v. Huntsworth, 33 L. J., M. C. 131; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 945; 10 L. T. 374; 13 W. R. 7.

Where a party bonâ fide disputes the validity of a church-rate and gives notice to the justices of his intention to dispute it, the jurisdiction of the justices is ousted. Pease v. Chaytor, 1 B. & S. 658; 31 L. J., M. C. 1; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 482; 5 L. T. 280; 10 W. R. 16.

As to House belonging to Parish.]—In a proceeding to recover possession of a house alleged to belong to a parish, under 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 24, the jurisdiction of the justices is not ousted by a claim of title, as the question of title is necessarily involved in the matter which the justices have to determine. Vaughan, Ex parte, 7 B. & S. 902; 36 L. J., M. C. 17; L. R. 2 Q. B. 114; 15 L. T. 277; 15 W. R. 198.

What Objection Sufficient.]—A householder was summoned before justices under 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 6, for nonpayment to the rector of the parish of dominicals, a tax in lieu of tithes in respect of dwellings erected on land formerly subject to tithes. Evidence of custom in the parish to pay these dominicals was adduced before the justices, and the attorney who appeared for the party objected in writing "to the jurisdiction of the magistrates, on the ground that his client had a bonâ fide objection to the validity of the payment, which being due by custom they could not try," the justices stated that they thought the custom was established, and made an order on the householder for payment of the claim with costs :—Held, that, although a claim of right may oust the jurisdiction of justices under this statute, this mere assertion by the attorney did not sufficiently establish a bonâ fide objection on his client's part. Reg. v. Sandford, 30 L. T. 601.

Restrictions to bonâ fide Claims.]—This ouster of jurisdiction is restricted to cases where the justices are reasonably satisfied of the fair and reasonable character of the claim. Reg. v. Essex JJ., Reg. v. Mussett, 26 L. T. 429 ; 20 W. R. 670.

Upon an information for a trespass of any kind, if it appears that the trespass was committed in the bonâ fide assertion of a claim of right, the justices have no jurisdiction to convict. But if upon hearing the evidence they are satisfied that the assertion of a claim of right is not made bonâ fide, and the facts proved warrant them in that belief, their jurisdiction is not ousted. Paley v. Birch, 8 B. & S. 356 ; 16 L. T. 410.

If a party is charged with obstructing the works of a local board of health, he is not necessarily entitled to have the case dismissed by the magistrates because the obstruction took place in assertion of a private right. Reg. v. Pollard, 14 L. T. 599.

To oust justices of their jurisdiction by the assertion of a bonâ fide claim of right, such claim must have some colour to support it. Hudson v. McRea, 4 B. & S. 585 ; 33 L. J., M. C. 65 ; 9 L. T. 678 ; 12 W. R. 80.

—— Previous decided Case in High Court.]—Where in any proceedings before justices a claim of right is set up which on the face of it is not obviously absurd or unreasonable, their jurisdiction to determine the matter in dispute is ousted. In determining the reasonableness of a claim of right, justices are not entitled to consider the effect of a previous decision of a high court of justice as to the locus in quo. Scott v. Baring, 64 L. J., M. C. 200 ; 15 R. 216 ; 72 L. T. 495.

3. Locality.

a. In the Metropolis.

Alderman—Deserted Premises.]—An alderman sitting at the Mansion House or Guildhall has not the power to send a constable to view deserted premises, and to put the landlord into possession thereof, which a police magistrate has by virtue of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 84, s. 13. Edwards v. Hodges, 15 C. B. 477 ; 3 C. L. R. 472 ; 24 L. J., M. C. 81 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 91 ; 3 W. R. 167.

Surcharge by Auditor of Poor-Law District.]—A metropolitan police magistrate sitting alone has jurisdiction to hear and determine an information by the auditor of a metropolitan poor-law district for non-payment of disbursements regularly disallowed and surcharged by such auditor, and certified to the poor-law commissioners under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 32. Reg. v. Tyrwhitt, 4 New Sess. Cas. 266 ; 15 Q. B. 249 ; 19 L. J., M. C. 249.

Apprenticeship.]—Under 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 2 ; 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 63, s. 3 ; and 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 14, when a pauper child is bound apprentice by parish officers from one parish into another, both within the city, a single metropolitan police magistrate, having jurisdiction both within the city and county wherein it is situate, may allow the indenture. Reg. v. St. George, Bloomsbury, 16 Q. B. 1005 ; 20 L. J., M. C. 200 ; 15 Jur. 799.

—— In Hatton Garden.]—An order for binding a pauper apprentice, under 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, purported to be made by "two justices for the county of Middlesex," and to be signed and sealed by them at "the police office, Hatton Garden." In 10 Geo. 4, c. 44, "Hatton Garden" is mentioned as one of the places in Middlesex forming the Holborn division of the police district :—Held, that jurisdiction sufficiently appeared on the face of the order, as the court would take judicial notice from the act of parliament that Hatton Garden was in Middlesex. Reg. v. Holborn Union, 6 El. & Bl. 715 ; 25 L. J., M. C. 110 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 571 ; 4 W. R. 606.

In Bexley.]—A person was charged before justices of the county of Kent, sitting at Dartford, out of the metropolitan police district, with committing an offence under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 54, at Bexley, which is a place within the metropolitan police district, not assigned to any of the police courts of the metropolis :—Held, that they had no jurisdiction to try the offence. Dann v. Manby, 26 L. T. 730 ; 20 W. R. 627.

In Southwark.]—By charter, the mayor and some of the aldermen of London have jurisdiction in Southwark ; but, as the charter contains no non-intromittent clause as to the justices of the county of Surrey, the latter have a concurrent jurisdiction with the former. Rex v. Sainsbury, 4 Term Rep. 451 ; 2 R. R. 433. And see Kite, Ex part, 2 D. & R. 212 ; 1 B. & C. 101.

b. In Counties and Boroughs.

Special Local Commission.]—An offence was committed within a separate locality which had a body of justices exercising jurisdiction within the liberty by virtue of their separate commissions : (1) the ordinary commission of the peace ; (2) a commission to try all treasons, murders, felonies, &c. ; (3) a general commission of gaol delivery : —Held, that these commissions did not oust the jurisdiction of her majesty's justices of gaol delivery for the whole county. Reg. v. Crane, 3 Cox, C. C. 53.

Borough—When Exclusive.]—All magisterial jurisdiction over places or precincts, which by 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64, are included within the metes and bounds of any borough mentioned in the first division of schedules (A.) and (B.) to the 2 & 3 Will. 4. c. 76, is, from the passing of the latter act, vested exclusively in the borough justices. Rex v. Gloucester JJ., 6 N. & M. 115 ; 4 A. & E. 689 ; 1 H. & W. 682.

—— Township partly without—Rate.]—The mayor of a borough, acting under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 92, issued a warrant against an overseer of a township, part of which was within, and part without, the borough, to levy the proportion of a borough rate for that part of the township which was within the borough. In an action against the mayor for a seizure of the goods under this warrant:—Held, that the mayor had no jurisdiction to issue such warrant, and that trespass was the proper remedy. Fernley v. Worthington, 1 Scott (N.R.) 432; 1 M. & G. 491; 10 L. J., M. C. 81; 4 Jur. 918.

—— Backing of Warrant.]—C. was convicted of an assault on two police constables of the county police of Worcestershire in the execution of their duty, who were apprehending him in the city of Worcester under a warrant issued by two justices of and for the county of Worcestershire for his commitment to prison for default in payment of a fine, but not backed by any justice of and for the city of Worcester. Worcester is a borough having a separate commission of the peace with exclusive jurisdiction, and a separate police force. C. was not pursued from the county, but found in the city:—Held, that the conviction was wrong, and that the constables were not acting in the execution of their duty in so executing such warrant. Reg. v. Cumpton, 49 L. J., M. C. 41; 5 Q. B. D. 341; 42 L. T. 543; 28 W. R. 539; 44 J. P. 489.

Charter.]—The jurisdiction of county justices can only be taken away by express words in a charter to borough justices. Blankley v. Winstanley, 3 Term Rep. 279; 1 R. R. 704.

County Rates.]—A charter granted jurisdiction to borough justices within a borough, in exclusion of the county justices, and likewise gave them jurisdiction over a place beyond the limits of the borough, but not in exclusion of the county justices:—Held, that the latter might assess such place to the county rates. Bates v. Winstanley, 4 M. & S. 429.

In a borough to which the king has granted by charter that the borough justices shall have exclusive jurisdiction in misdemeanours without jurisdiction in felonies, and that the county justices shall not intromit themselves within the borough; and in which a borough rate applicable to the purposes of a county rate was levied before the passing of 55 Geo. 3, c. 51, the county justices have no power to order the levying of a county rate, although by virtue of its charter the borough brings burdens upon the county. Rex v. Shepherd, 4 N. & M. 185; 2 A. & E. 298; 4 L. J., M. C. 30.

By a charter granted to a borough, officers were appointed justices of the peace therein, with power to hold sessions, but not to deal with treasons, murders or felonies. Sessions were regularly held, but no indictments tried thereat, the practice being to send offenders to the county gaol for trial at the county assizes or sessions, the borough sometimes, but not always, defraying the expense of the maintenance of such offenders. The charter also contained a non-intromittent clause as regarded the county justices, who never exercised any jurisdiction within the borough:—Held, that the county justices had no power to include the borough in the basis or standard for the purpose of county rates, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 81, s. 21. Reg. v. East Looe, 3 B. & S. 20; 31 L. J., M. C. 245; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1128; 6 L. T. 748; 10 W. R. 866.

Trial of Prisoners.]—The justices of a borough had exclusive jurisdiction within the borough itself, but jurisdiction concurrent with that of the county justices over certain places called the liberties of the borough:—Held, that for an offence committed within the liberties, they might commit to the county gaol, and cause the prisoner to be brought before them for trial at the borough sessions. Rex v. Musson, 6 B. & C. 74; 9 D. & R. 172; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 28.

A royal charter granted to a liberty, situate in a county, a separate quarter sessions, and the right of having a common gaol, and excluded all other justices from delivering such gaol. The gaol was not used as a gaol or a house of correction for the whole county, and it was entirely supported out of rates raised, in the nature of county rates, within and for the purposes of the liberty, no part of which contributed to the general county rate. The keeper of the gaol was appointed by the justices of the liberty, who acted under a separate commission from that of the county, but not with exclusive jurisdiction. The commission under which the justices of the county acted gave them jurisdiction "as well within liberties as without":—Held, that county justices sitting in the county, and without the liberty, had power to commit to the gaol of the liberty for an offence committed within the liberty, inasmuch as they were justices of the liberty as well as of the county at large. Arnold v. Dimsdale, 2 El. & Bl. 580; 22 L. J., M. C. 161; 17 Jur. 1157; 1 W. R. 430. See Arnold v. Gaussen, 8 Ex. 463; 22 L. J., Ex. 180.

The 15 Geo. 2, c. 24, is a declaratory act, and should have a liberal construction; and, therefore, where justices of a borough, contributory to the county rate, have committed prisoners to the county house of correction for offences cognisable within the county, the justices at their borough sessions have a right to order such prisoners to be brought before them for trial there. Rex v. Amos, 2 B. & Ald. 533; 21 R. R. 386.

Form of Order.]—Where an act gives jurisdiction to justices of a county, and an order is made under it by justices of the county of a city, which county and city were co-extensive by statute, the order is valid, though the justices describe themselves merely as justices "in and for the said city," for the court will take notice that the city is also a county. Reg. v. St. Maurice, 16 Q. B. 908.

Newgate.]—The right of county magistrates to commit to Newgate parties charged with misdemeanours, was not taken away by 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 4. Rex v. Cope, 1 N. & P. 515; 6 A. & E. 226; W. W. & D. 164; 6 L. J., M. C. 81; 1 Jur. 54.

Borough without Commission of Peace—Mayor a Justice of the Peace for Borough.]—The mayor of a borough, without a commission of the peace, before whom a person was brought charged with embezzlement, remanded the accused to the next meeting of the justices of the peace for the county in which the borough was situated, and admitted him to bail, taking the recognizance of the defendant in 100*l.* for the appearance of the accused. The accused paid the defendant 100*l.* to indemnify him against liability under the recognizance:—Held, that by s. 57 of the Municipal Corporations Act, the mayor was a justice of the peace for the borough, and the recognizance was valid; that the 100*l.* was paid to the defendant in pursuance of a contract which was contrary to public policy, but that as the contract had not been executed, the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Wilson v. Strugnell, 50 L. J., M. C. 145; 7 Q. B. D. 548; 45 L. T. 219; 45 J. P. 831.

—— Payment of Penalties.]—A parliamentary borough was by charter constituted a municipal borough, with the powers and privileges belonging to those named in schedule (B.) to 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76. It had no grant of a separate court of quarter sessions; and the justices of the county, by virtue of s. 111, exercised the jurisdiction of justices of the peace in and for the borough concurrently with the mayor, who by s. 57 is ex officio a justice of the peace for the borough, and so continues during the year next succeeding his year of office:—Held, that the mayor, while acting as a justice in and for the borough, was acting as a justice for the county, and therefore penalties imposed by him were to be paid to the treasurer of the county and not to the treasurer of the borough. Reigate Corporation v. Hunt, 9 B. & S. 129; 37 L. J., M. C. 70; L. R. 3 Q. B. 244; 18 L. T. 237; 16 W. R. 896.

Penalties imposed by justices acting in and for a municipal borough, having a separate commission of the peace but no separate court of quarter sessions, in respect of offences against the general law of the land, are, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 31, to be paid to the treasurer of the county and not of the borough. Winn v. Mossmann, 38 L. J., Ex. 200; L. R. 4 Q. B. 292; 20 L. T. 672; 17 W. R. 924.

Penalties imposed by such justices, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, and not awarded to the prosecutor under s. 20, are to be paid to the treasurer of the county and not of the borough, notwithstanding the Municipal Corporations Act Amendment Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 75), s. 4. Ib. See also Att.-Gen. v. Moore, 47 L. J., M. C. 103; 3 Ex. D. 276; 38 L. T. 251; 26 W. R. 366; and Metropolitan District Receiver v. Bell, 41 L. J., M. C. 153; L. R. 7 Q. B. 133.

As to Licensing.]—A. was convicted by justices for a petty sessional division of a county, under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 61, s. 6, for using a false certificate relative to the rating of a house, within the petty sessional division, occupied by A., for the purpose of obtaining a licence to retail beer on the premises. The certificate was used and the offence committed within a borough where the county justices had no general jurisdiction:—Held, that the jurisdiction over this offence was not given by 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 64, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, to the county justices, within whose jurisdiction the house was situate, but was in the borough justices, within whose jurisdiction the offence was committed; and therefore the conviction was bad. Reg. v. Waghorn, 1 El. & Bl. 647; 22 L. J., M. C. 60; 17 Jur. 785; 1 W. R. 179.

Before 24 & 25 Vict. c. 75, s. 4, borough justices of a corporation not having a separate court of quarter sessions had no power to grant licences to sell excisable liquors by retail under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, but the county justices had such power exclusively. Candlish v. Simpson, 1 B. & S. 357; 30 L. J., M. C. 178; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 34; 4 L. T. 437; 9 W. R. 745.

It is not necessary that a borough should have a separate quarter sessions in order to be a town corporate within 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 1. Brown v. Nicholson, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 468; 28 L. J., M. C. 49; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 99; 7 W. R. 88.

Disorderly House.]—An indictment under the 25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 5, for keeping a disorderly house, may, where the house is situate in a borough, be preferred and tried at the quarter sessions for the borough. Reg. v. Charles, L. & C. 90; 31 L. J., M. C. 69; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1308; 5 L. T. 328; 10 W. R. 62; 9 Cox, C. C. 18.

Order to repair Highways.]—Two justices of a county made an order on a railway company under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 58, to repair highways within the borough of W., to which damage had been done by them in making their railway; the order described them as justices "in and for the said borough of W." The county justices had jurisdiction within the borough of W., and there was no separate commission of the peace for the borough:—Held, that the description of the justices was sufficient. Wakefield Local Board v. West Riding and Grimsby Ry., 6 B. & S. 794; 35 L. J., M. C. 69; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 160; 13 L. T. 590; 14 W. R. 100; 10 Cox, C. C. 162.

Search Warrant.]—In an action for breaking and entering the plaintiff's premises, the defendant pleaded a justification under a search warrant granted by a justice of the county of Stafford. At the trial the defendant gave in evidence a search warrant granted by a justice of the borough of Wolverhampton, acting as such, but who was also a justice of the county of Stafford:—Held, that the evidence did not support the plea. Webb v. Ross, 4 H. & N. 111; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 126.

Discovery of Papers.]—Under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, ss. 60, 68, county magistrates may determine complaints against corporate officers refusing to deliver up papers, though such officers reside within the precincts of the corporation, and the corporation have magistrates. Gateshead JJ., In re, 6 A. & E. 550, n.

Travelling without Payment of Fare.]—A., intending to go by railway from C. to D., which is an intermediate station between C. and N., took a ticket for N., and upon his arrival at D., left the railway. The fare from C. to D. exceeded in amount the fare from C. to N., and the difference was demanded of A., but he refused to pay it. By a by-law of the company, every passenger was to pay his fare previously to entering a carriage, upon payment of which he would be furnished with a ticket specifying the class of carriage and distance for which the fare was paid; and any passenger who entered a carriage without having paid his fare was subject to a penalty. Under this by-law A. was convicted by the borough justices of C. for having within the borough entered a carriage of the company for the purpose of travelling upon the railway from C. to D., not having previously paid his fare for so travelling:—Held, that the borough justices had jurisdiction over the alleged offence, but that the conviction could not be sustained, as A. had paid his fare within the meaning of the by-law. Reg. v. Frere, 4 El. & Bl. 598; 3 C. L. R. 455; 24 L. J., M. C. 68; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 700.

Smuggling.]—The magistrates of the place on land to which a person charged under 6 Geo. 4, c. 105, s. 74, is carried, have jurisdiction over the subject-matter although the person may have been taken on board a vessel on waters within another jurisdiction. Rex v. Nunn, 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 10.

Foreshore.]—That part of the seashore which lies between high and low water marks is within and part of the adjoining county, so that the justices of the county have jurisdiction to take cognisance of offences committed thereon whether the land is covered with water or not at the time the offences are committed. Embleton v. Brown, 3 El. & El. 234; 30 L. J., M. C. 1; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1298.

Parish Apprentice.]—When a parish apprentice is bound to serve in a county different from that from which he is bound, the allowance of the indenture according to 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, must be "as well by two justices of the peace for the county or district within which the place by the officers of which such child shall be bound shall be situated, as by two justices of the peace for the county or district within which the place shall be situated when such child shall be intended to serve." The allowance by the same justices acting for both counties is insufficient. Rex v. Shipton, 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 21.

Petty Sessional Division—Place in which the Matter arises.]—The 2nd section of the Public Health Act, 1848, defines a justice to be "a justice acting for the place in which the matter requiring the cognisance of the justice arises":—Held, that this, in a county, means a justice acting within the petty sessional division in which the matter arises; and therefore that justices of the county not acting within the petty sessional division of it in which an offence under the 148th section of the act had been committed had no jurisdiction to convict under the 129th section. Reg. v. Brodhurst, 32 L. J., M. C. 168.

Offence committed in one Petty Sessional Division—Committal in different Division.]—Justices of the peace sitting in and acting for one petty sessional division of a county have jurisdiction to commit for trial on a charge arising in another petty sessional division of the same county, and are not bound to remand such charge for hearing in the division in which the offence was committed. Reg. v. Beckley, 57 L. J., M. C. 22; 20 Q. B. D. 187; 57 L. T. 716; 36 W. R. 160; 16 Cox, C. C. 331; 52 J. P. 120—C. C. R.

Indictment found—Warrant to Arrest.]—A woman lived in Gloucestershire, against whom a true bill for perjury had been found at the Kent assizes. The prosecutor applied to justices in Kent, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 3, for a warrant to arrest and hold her to bail, which the justices refused to grant:—Held, that a rule for a mandamus to the justices would not be granted, because it seemed a vexatious proceeding, and the prosecutor should first have applied to the Gloucestershire justices, which was a better remedy. Lloyd, Ex parte, 53 J. P. 612.

c. Scotch Justices.

A Scotch justice of the peace may take an affidavit out of his jurisdiction, provided the locality is within the authority of Great Britain. Therefore an affidavit before a justice of the peace of the county of Mid-Lothian is valid, though taken in London. Kerr v. Ailsa (Marquis), 1 Macq. H. L. 736.

4. Matters within.

Highway—Cutting down Trees.]—Magistrates have no power, under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, to cut down trees which may damage the highway, if planted for ornament and shelter. Frampton v. Tiffin, 2 Jur. 986.

Lunatics—Vagrants.]—Vagrants only, and not persons of rank, are within 17 Geo. 2, c. 5, s. 20, which empowers justices of peace to take care of lunatics. Anon., 2 Atk. 52.

Pending Assizes.]—The power of justices of the peace of a county, or a recorder of a borough, to try prisoners at quarter sessions, is not suspended or affected by the fact of the judges sitting under the usual commission of assize, oyer and terminer, and general gaol delivery. Smith v. Reg. (in error), 3 New Sess. Cas. 564; 13 Q. B. 738; 18 L. J., M. C. 207; 13 Jur. 850; 3 Cox, C. C. 586.

At Quarter Sessions.]—Suicide is not murder within 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 11 and 15, and therefore attempting to commit suicide is a misdemeanour triable at quarter sessions. Reg. v. Burgess, L. & C. 258; 32 L. J., M. C. 55; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 28; 7 L. T. 472; 11 W. R. 96; 9 Cox, C. C. 247.

A court of quarter sessions has, by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 115, jurisdiction over the offence of larceny when committed upon the high seas, if the offender is apprehended within the jurisdiction of the sessions, as, where the offender and prosecutor were both fellow-passengers in a vessel, and the larceny was committed on the high seas, between Madras and Point de Galle, and the offender was apprehended at Southampton and tried at the Southampton borough quarter sessions. Reg. v. Peel, L. & C. 231; 32 L. J., M. C. 65; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1185; 7 L. T. 336; 11 W. R. 40; 9 Cox, C. C. 220.

They have jurisdiction over conspiracies. Rex v. Rispal, 1 W. Bl. 368; 3 Burr. 1320.

But they have no jurisdiction over the offence of forgery at common law. Rex v. Gibbs, 1 East, 173.

To solicit a servant to steal his master's goods is a misdemeanour, though it is not charged in the indictment that the servant stole the goods, nor that any other act was done, except the soliciting and inciting: and such offence is indictable at the sessions, having a tendency to a breach of the peace. Rex v. Higgins, 2 East, 5; 6 R. R. 358.

So they have jurisdiction over cheats in general. Rex v. Brayne, 1 East, 183, n.

An indictment alleged that the defendants, contriving and intending to defraud B. of his money, unlawfully, knowingly and designedly, did amongst themselves combine, conspire, confederate and agree together, by divers false pretences against the form of the statute, in that case made and provided, the said B. of his moneys to defraud, against the form of the statute:—Held, that the quarter sessions had jurisdiction to try this indictment. Latham v. Reg., 5 B. & S. 635; 33 L. J., M. C. 197; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1145; 10 L. T. 571; 12 W. R. 908; 9 Cox, C. C. 516.

The sessions have the power of quashing an indictment for forcible entry, riot and assault, before plea. Reg. v. Wilson, 6 Q. B. 620; 14 L. J., M. C. 3.

A form of request for the payment of money due under an order of a court of equity directed to the assistant-paymaster-general at the Royal Courts of Justice, is not a "document relating to a proceeding in a court of equity" within the meaning of s. 1 (17) of the Quarter Sessions Act, 1842. A person charged with the larceny of such a document may therefore be tried at quarter sessions. King v. Reg., 61 J. P. 663.

Libel — Preliminary Inquiry.] — Upon an information for maliciously publishing a defamatory libel under the 5th section of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, the magistrate has no jurisdiction to receive evidence of the truth of the libel, inasmuch as his function is merely to determine whether there is such a case against the accused as ought to be sent for trial, and a defence based upon the truth of the libel under s. 6 of the act can only be inquired into at the trial upon a special plea framed in accordance with the terms of that section. The province of a magistrate upon a preliminary inquiry into a charge of an indictable offence discussed. Reg. v. Carden, 49 L. J., M. C. 1; 5 Q. B. D. 1; 41 L. T. 504; 28 W. R. 133; 14 Cox, C. C. 359; 44 J. P. 119.

L., the proprietor of a newspaper, published comments on a ball given by S., who professed that it was for the friends of the dramatic profession. L., however, stated, that it was attended by prostitutes, and was an attempt to sully the fame of the stage. L., being charged with libel before a magistrate, proposed to give evidence that loose characters were present, and that the facts were true and proper to be commented on in a newspaper:—Held, that the magistrate rightly rejected that evidence, as it was only proper to be received at the trial before a jury. Reg. v. Flowers, 44 J. P. 377.

Justices have no right to inquire into the truth of a charge of libel preferred before them, or to hear any other justification. If a publication is proved, they are bound to commit. Reg. v. Townsend, 4 F. & F. 1089; 10 Cox, C. C. 356.

—— Exculpatory Evidence.]—The provision in Lord Campbell's Libel Act (6 & 7 Vict. c. 96), s. 7, as to allowing exculpatory evidence in answer to a primâ facie case of liability for publication, being quite general in its terms, was held to apply to a prosecution for the publication of a blasphemous libel. Reg. v. Bradlaugh, 15 Cox, C. C. 217.

Upon an application for a criminal information against the proprietor of a newspaper for publishing a seditious libel, evidence was tendered under the 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 4, of the truth of the libel, and that it was for the public benefit that it should be published. The magistrates refused to receive such evidence. Upon an application to the Queen's Bench Division for a conditional order for a mandamus to compel the magistrate to receive the evidence so tendered:—Held, that no such matters could be given in evidence at the trial, and that therefore the magistrate was right in refusing to admit the evidence at the preliminary inquiry. O'Brien, Ex parte, 12 L. R., Ir. 29; 15 Cox, C. C. 180.

—— Fiat for Criminal Prosecution.]—When the director of public prosecutions in England has refused to grant his fiat under 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 3, for a criminal prosecution against the proprietor, &c., of a newspaper for a libel published therein, the High Court of Justice has no power to interfere, the matter being left by the enactment entirely to his discretion. Hubert, Ex parte, 15 Cox, C. C. 166; 47 J. P. 724.

An application upon the part of the proprietor of a newspaper, defendant in a criminal information for libel, to quash the information on the ground that the fiat of the director of public prosecutions had not been obtained, the point not being taken on the argument of the rule, was dismissed, and held, by Field, Denman, and Mathew, JJ. (Lord Coleridge, C.J., and Hawkins, J., contra), that in such a case the fiat is not required. Reg. v. Yates, 52 L. J., Q. B. 778; 11 Q. B. D. 750; 15 Cox, C. C. 272.

Breach of the Peace within view of Justice.]—A magistrate in case of a breach of the peace within his view, may instantly order the offender into custody. Still v. Walls, 7 East, 536; 6 Esp. 36.

Apprehended Breach of the Peace—Prohibiting Meetings.]—A magistrate is responsible for order in the district over which he has control, and the commissioner of police for the metropolis is the officer mainly responsible for the preservation of peace and order therein. If such magistrate or such commissioner negligently fails to take the precautions necessary to preserve order, he or they can be proceeded against in a criminal court, and be called upon to answer for such negligence. Such officers therefore are justified in issuing a public notice that public meetings will not be permitted to take place in any place of public resort under their control where there are reasonable grounds for believing that a breach of the public peace is likely to result from the holding of any public meeting in such places. Reg. v. Graham, 16 Cox, C. C. 420.

—— Dispersing Meeting believed to be Unlawful.]—In an action for assault and battery against a justice of the peace, the defence set out certain inflammatory placards posted by the promoters of the meeting and their opponents, that informations were sworn, from which it appeared that if the meeting was held the public peace would be broken; and that the defendant believed, and had reasonable grounds for believing, that a breach of the peace would occur if the meeting were allowed to be continued, and that the public peace and tranquillity could not otherwise be preserved than by separating and dispersing the plaintiff and others so assembled; that the defendant, being present, requested them to disperse, which they neglected to do; and that thereupon the defendant laid his hand on the plaintiff in order to separate and disperse the plaintiff and other persons so assembled, using no more violence than was necessary for that purpose; which was the assault and battery complained of. There was not, in the opinion of the court, any allegation in the 13th paragraph shewing that the meeting was in itself an unlawful assembly:—Held, on demurrer, that the defence was a good answer to the action, and that, even assuming that the plaintiff and others assembled with him were engaged in no unlawful act, yet, as there were reasonable grounds appearing on the pleadings for the belief of the defendant that there would be a breach of the peace if the meeting continued; and it was alleged in the defence that there was no other way of averting such breach of the peace, except by stopping the meeting, the defence sufficiently shewed that the defendant was justified in taking the necessary steps to stop and disperse the meeting. O'Kelly v. Harvey, 14 L. R., Ir. 105; 15 Cox, C. C. 435—C. A.

Misdemeanour committed within View of Justice.]—Quære, if a magistrate has a right to arrest a person guilty of a misdemeanour before his eyes when there has not been any breach of the peace actual or apprehended. King v. Poe, 15 L. T. 37.

Disturbance of the Public Peace—Evidence.]—A., B. and S., members of the Salvation Army, led a crowd by a circuitous route through certain of the streets of the town of H., to the meeting-house of the Army, S. during the march blowing the cornet loudly and in a discordant manner, and A. and B. marching with him singing hymns, beating time, and shouting loudly "Alleluia," and other expressions. Several of the inhabitants of the streets through which they passed were disturbed by the loud and discordant noises, but there were not more than fifteen members of the Salvation Army present, much of the noise being caused by a mob of 400 or 500 persons following them and hostile to their proceedings. Information having been preferred against A., B. and S. under a local act, by which a penalty was imposed on any person who should "make, excite, or join in any brawl, or otherwise disturb the public peace," it was found as a fact that they had disturbed the public peace and they were convicted:—Held, on a case stated, that there was no evidence of the offence charged upon which the defendants could be rightly convicted under the act of disturbing the public peace, and that the conviction must be quashed. Beaty v. Glenister, 51 L. T. 304.

Knowledge by persons peaceably assembling for a lawful object that their assembly will be forcibly opposed by other persons under circumstances likely to lead to a breach of the peace on the part of such other persons does not render such assembly unlawful. Beatty v. Gillbanks, 15 Cox, C. C. 138.

Committal in Default of Sureties.]—A justice is authorised to require sureties of the peace for a limited term, according to his discretion, and need not bind the party over to the next sessions only. Willes v. Bridger, 2 B. & Ald. 278.

A justice's warrant, committing a party in default of his finding sureties to keep the peace, is bad, if the commitment is for no definite time, but until he shall find such sureties or be discharged by due course of law. Prickett v. Gratrex, 8 Q. B. 1020; 2 New Sess. Cas. 429; 15 L. J., M. C. 145; 10 Jur. 556.

It is not necessary that such warrant should fix the amount in which sureties are to be given. Ib.

A commitment of a party who refuses to give sureties to keep the peace need not be made to the gaol, but is good if made to the house of correction. Aston, Ex parte, 1 New. Sess. Cas. 73; 12 M. & W. 456; 13 L. J., M. C. 52; 8 Jur. 293.

Where upon articles of the peace being exhibited the sessions order the defendant to find sureties in a certain amount, and do not order that in case of default he shall be imprisoned, magistrates out of sessions have no power to commit upon refusal to find such sureties. Reg. v. Huntingdon JJ., 1 Cox, C. C. 209.

Sureties for Good Behaviour.]—H. R., at the execution of an habere to enforce payment of rent, addressed a number of persons, including the tenant under eviction, as follows:—"Pay no rent to the landlord. We will make you right about the land; we will build you a house at any expense, and make you comfortable during the winter." A summons was issued against H. R., calling on her to shew cause why she should not be bound over to be of good behaviour, and at the hearing of the summons H. R. was ordered to find bail to be of good behaviour for six months, and in default to be imprisoned for one month. She refused to give bail, and was accordingly imprisoned for one month:—Held, on motion to shew cause against a conditional order for a writ of certiorari, that the justice had jurisdiction to make the order. Reg. v. Cork JJ., 15 Cox, C. C. 78.

An information was laid against a person for an assault and battery, and a summons issued against him for that offence. At the hearing, the justices dismissed the information, and gave him a certificate, but they ordered him, in respect of the charge, to enter into his own recognizance in 50*l.* to keep the peace for six months:—Held, that, notwithstanding the justices dismissed the information, they were legally justified in requiring a recognizance to keep the peace. Davis, Ex parte, 24 L. T. 547.

Where a summons for assault also called on the defendant to shew cause why she should not be bound over to keep the peace, and the defendant having appeared, the magistrates convicted her of assault, and ordered her to be imprisoned:—Held, that the conviction was right. Kennington v. Daniel, 22 L. R., Ir. 667.

E. having laid an information before a justice, complaining that M., after having assaulted, had threatened him, and praying that he might be bound over to keep the peace, the case was heard at petty sessions, and an assault was proved. The justices convicted M. of the assault, and also obliged him to find sureties of the peace, notwithstanding the protest of E. against the conviction, and his request that only sureties of the peace should be required from M.:—Held, that the magistrates had no jurisdiction to convict M. of the assault. Reg. v. Totness JJ. or Deny, 2 L. M. & P. 230; 20 L. J., M. C. 189; 15 Jur. 227.

The court refused to interfere with the discretion of magistrates in taking security for keeping the peace. Rex v. Tregarthan, 2 N. & M. 379; 5 B. & Ad. 678.

The power of justices to require sureties to keep the peace is derived from the commission of the peace, and it is confined to cases where a party makes it appear to the justices that he goes in fear and in danger of personal violence from another, by reason of threats employed by him, or by reason of looks, gestures and conduct; but the party must himself draw the inference that he is in fear of personal violence. Reg. v. Dunn, 4 P. & D. 415; 12 A. & E. 599; 1 Arn. & H. 8; 5 Jur. 721.

—— Several Distinct Instances of Misconduct.]—In an application under the statute 34 Edw. 3, c. 1, to bind a party over to be of good behaviour, several distinct instances of misconduct may be alleged and relied upon. Reg. v. Queen's County JJ., 10 L. R., Ir. 294.

—— Original Jurisdiction of Queen's Bench.]—Notices were served on D., H. and L., of applications to the Queen's Bench Division, requiring them to find sufficient sureties to be of good behaviour towards her majesty and all her majesty's subjects, or in default that they should be committed to prison. These applications were made in consequence of certain speeches delivered by D., H. and L., at public meetings held in the counties of Meath and Carlow, in the interests of the Irish National League. The affidavits on which the applications were grounded deposed to the existence for some years preceding of an agrarian agitation in various parts of Ireland, including the counties of Meath and Carlow; that in consequence thereof great excitement prevailed; and that a combination had been set on foot against the payment of rent; and that numerous crimes and outrages had been committed in various parts of the country. It was further stated that, at a public meeting in the county of Meath, attended by upwards of 4,000 persons, D. in addressing the meeting, after condemning the system of using large portions of land for grazing, said:—"Unless wise and just legislation should prevent its necessity, the time will come when the starving people of Donegal and Connemara will be told to march down in their serried phalanxes upon the plains and seize the lands upon which to live like civilized beings in a Christian country." And again, "I propose that in case Mr. Gladstone does not apply the surplus of the Arrears Act estimates to save the people, no rent should be paid from November till next May, that out of this sum a portion should be placed in the National Relief Fund, to save our starving people from starvation." H., at a meeting in the county of Carlow, held for the purpose of founding a branch of the "National League," described the government as simply "a system of land piracy"; "an organisation against the will of the people," "an organisation of so many pirates and so many brigands." "It," i.e. the government, "was entitled to the same moral respect as a cut-purse, who held a revolver at your head and said to you, 'Your money or your life.'" Q. addressed a public meeting in Meath, also held for the establishment of a branch of the "National League," and in his speech he described himself as a rebel; spoke hopefully of the resuscitation of a former organised body known as the Land League, and which, after a period of active operation, had been proclaimed as illegal by the government, and finally exhorted the farmers not to pay any rent. Q. made an affidavit, in which he stated that the report of his speech relied on in support of the application was not a full or accurate report. No affidavit was made by either D. or H.; nor did any of the parties summoned offer any apology or promise to abstain from similar conduct in the future. It was argued on behalf of Q. (who appeared by counsel) that the Queen's Bench Division had no jurisdiction in the matter of the applications, the jurisdiction to order persons to find sureties for good behaviour having been created by the 34 Edw. 3, c. 1, and conferred only on the justices directed to be appointed:—Held, that the judges of the Queen's Bench Division, as conservators of the peace, have original jurisdiction, independently of the statute of Edw. 3, to require sureties for good behaviour from persons whose acts or language are shewn to be likely to endanger the public peace. Seymour, Ex parte, Davitt, In re. 15 Cox, C. C. 242; 12 L. R., Ir. 46.

Held, also, that these were proper cases in which to exercise that jurisdiction. Ib.

—— In Case of Libel.]—A warrant of commitment recited that the plaintiff had been brought before a justice of the peace, charged on the oath of T. P. with having written on the pavement of a lane offensive words reflecting on the character of R. J. W., viz. &c.; and that it had been stated to the justices, on the oath of T. P., that the continued writing for some time past of these offensive words was calculated to produce a breach of the peace; and that T. P. prayed that the plaintiff might be required to find sureties to keep the peace. The justice ordered and adjudged that the plaintiff should enter into his recognizance in 30*l.*, and two sufficient sureties in 15*l.* each, to keep the peace for three calendar months. After stating a refusal by the plaintiff, it commanded that he should be conveyed to prison, and there kept for three calendar months, unless he in the meantime entered into such recognizance, with such sureties. The warrant was afterwards quashed on motion, and an action of trespass was brought:—Held, first, that the warrant put in against the justice was evidence for him of the information recited in it, for the purpose of shewing on what grounds and in relation to what subject-matter he was acting when he granted it. Haylock v. Sparke, 1 El. & Bl. 471; 22 L. J., M. C. 67; 17 Jur. 731.

Held, secondly, that it must be taken that he intended to exercise the jurisdiction of requiring sureties for good behaviour, although "sureties to keep the peace" were mentioned in the warrant. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that a justice of the peace has jurisdiction to require sureties for good behaviour in some cases of libel against private individuals; and therefore the action would not lie, being brought for an act done by him in the execution of his duty with respect to a matter within his jurisdiction, within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 1. Ib.

Charge of Assault—Compromise.]—When a complaint has been made to magistrates of an assault with a view to an adjudication thereon, they thereby gain jurisdiction to determine the case, and the party injured cannot, by afterwards compromising the case, take away that jurisdiction. Reg. v. Wiltshire JJ., 8 L. T. 242; 11 W. R. 594.

After issuing a summons for a common assault, and before the day appointed for hearing by the justices, the parties compromised the matter, and informed the justices thereof. The justices, however, proceeded to hear the summons, and convicted, the prosecutor having given evidence, though involuntarily:—Held, that the conviction could not be quashed on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Ib.

—— Evidence disclosing a Felony.] — An information was preferred by a female against a man, for that he "did unlawfully assault and abuse her, contrary to the statute." At the hearing it was agreed that the case should be taken as that of an aggravated assault, under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30. The evidence, if true, shewed that a rape had been committed; but the justices convicted him:—Held, per Pollock, C.B., and Wilde, B., that they had no jurisdiction.

Per Bramwell and Channell, BB., contra. Thompson, In re, 6 H. & N. 193; 30 L. J., M. C. 19; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 48; 3 L. T. 409; 9 Cox, C. C. 70; 9 W. R. 203. See S. C., in Q. B., sub nom. Thompson, Ex parte, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1247; 3 L. T. 294.

Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 42, a female charged a man before justices with an assault, and on her examination deposed not only that he had assaulted her and hurt her knee, but that he had had connection with her, though "she did not consent, and did what she could to resist him." The other evidence shewed that the part of her statement which related to indecent assault was very improbable, and the justices, disbelieving it, convicted him of an assault:—Held, that they had jurisdiction to do so, although the evidence, if believed, disclosed a felony. Wilkinson v. Dutton, 3 B. & S. 821; 32 L. J., M. C. 152; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1104; 8 L. T. 276.

—— Evidence on Hearing.]—When articles of the peace are exhibited against any person, the person against whom they are exhibited may not give evidence before the justices in contradiction of the facts stated in the articles. If it appears on oath to the satisfaction of the justices that the complainant has been threatened, it is their duty to require recognizances to be entered into to keep the peace. Lort v. Hutton, 45 L. J., M. C. 95; 33 L. T. 730.

Certificates.]—H. preferred an information and complaint before justices in petty sessions against the appellant for indecent behaviour whilst drunk in the streets, contrary to 23 & 24 Vict. c. 27, s. 40. H., after being examined in chief, admitted in cross-examination that he was not a constable or peace officer of the borough, whereupon the information was dismissed, but no certificate of dismissal was given or applied for. An information for the same offence was then preferred against the appellant by a constable of the borough, and came on to be heard at the next petty sessions, when an application was made to the justices for a certificate of dismissal of the former information. The justices refused to grant the certificate. Foster v. Hull, 20 L. T. 452.

—— Effect of.]—A man assaulted a wife, and for such assault was fined by the justices under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, and paid the fine:—Held, that an action by the husband in respect of the consequential damage to himself by reason of the assault on his wife was barred under s. 45. Masper v. Brown, 45 L. J., C. P. 203; 1 C. P. D. 97; 34 L. T. 254; 24 W. R. 369. And see Holden v. King, 46 L. J., Ex. 75; 35 L. T. 479; 25 W. R. 62.

And see CRIMINAL LAW (ASSAULT).

—— Collusion.]—Where a master had by collusion and for the purpose of exonerating himself from penalties under the revenue laws procured a conviction of one of his servants for the same offence which he had himself committed, and a certificate of two justices which operated as a discharge of himself, the court, upon certiorari, quashed the conviction. Reg. v. Gillyard, 12 Q. B. 527; 17 L. J., M. C. 153; 12 Jur. 655.

Wilful Damage to Premises.]—Where a landlord, during the existence of a tenancy, charged his tenant, under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 38, with having three months before wilfully damaged his premises:—Held, that the magistrate had no jurisdiction, and that the charge should have been made within one month. Dowell v. Beningfield, Car. & M. 9.

Playing Bowls.]—Justices have no jurisdiction to punish persons convicted of playing at bowls as disorderly persons. Rex v. Clarke, Cowp. 35.

Offence against Statute other than that under which Summons issued.]—A defendant was summoned under the Municipal Corporations Act (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76), s. 81, for assaulting a constable in the execution of his duty. The magistrates dismissed the summons, but convicted him, under the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 42, for a common assault:—Held, that the conviction was bad, as being under a different statute from that under which the summons was issued. Reg. v. Brickhall, 33 L. J., M. C. 156; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 677; 10 L. T. 385; 12 W. R. 826.

A. laid an information before a justice of the peace that a house was "kept or used as a common gaming-house" within the meaning of the "Act to amend the Law concerning Games and Wagers" (8 & 9 Vict. c. 109), and thereupon the justice granted a warrant under which B. was arrested at the house in question. He was brought before two justices, and charged under the "Act for the Suppression of Betting-houses" (16 & 17 Vict. c. 119), s. 3, as the person, who "having the management of a room" in the house, used it "for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto." No information was laid, nor was any summons issued, under the last-named statute; and B. did not waive this omission. The charge having been heard, he was convicted, and a penalty was imposed:—Held, that the conviction was wrong, and must be quashed. Blake v. Beech, 45 L. J., M. C. 111; 1 Ex. D. 320; 34 L. T. 764.

A. was summoned on a charge of being drunk, and guilty of riotous behaviour, an offence punishable under the Towns Police Clauses Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 89, s. 29). The justices convicted him of drunkenness, under 21 Jac. 1, c. 7:—Held, that the conviction was bad, and that it was not a variance within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 1. Martin v. Pridgeon, 1 El. & El. 778; 28 L. J., M. C. 179; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 894; 7 W. R. 412; 8 Cox, C. C. 170.

Repeal of Empowering Acts.]—If justices of the peace adjourn their proceedings to a day subsequent to the repeal of an act of parliament under which they act, their jurisdiction will cease. Rex v. London JJ., 3 Burr. 1456.

Jurisdiction of High Court, when Ousted.]—The jurisdiction of the superior courts at Westminster is not to be ousted but by express words or necessary implication. Cates v. Knight, 3 Term Rep. 442.

The jurisdiction of the court to try the legality of a distress on the goods of A., for an assessment upon B., is not taken away by 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 33, which enacts, that "if any question or difference shall arise upon taking any distress, the same shall be determined and ended by two or more of the commissioners of taxes"; and consequently, an action is maintainable at common law for a wrongful distress. Shaftesbury (Earl) v. Russell, 3 D. & R. 84; 1 B. & C. 666; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 202; 25 R. R. 534.

So, the 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 4, authorising a landlord to apply to magistrates, and empowering them to proceed to determine the matter in a summary way, when the value is under 50*l.*, and to issue their warrant to levy the amount adjudged by distress, does not oust the superior courts of their jurisdiction. Stanley v. Wharton, 9 Price, 301 ; 10 Price, 138 ; 23 R. R. 683. Basten v. Carew, 5 D. & R. 558 ; 3 B. & C. 649 ; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 111 ; 27 R. R. 453.

Even after the landlord has made an application to the justices. Horsefall v. Davey, 1 Stark. 169 ; Holt, 147 ; 17 R. R. 624.

Question of Jurisdiction, how Determined—Prohibition.]—Where the jurisdiction of justices depended upon a particular interpretation of a statutory offence under the Railways Clauses Acts, and the justices adjourned the hearing of a summons for such an offence for the question as to their jurisdiction to be determined, an application for a writ of prohibition against the justices is a just and convenient mode of procedure. Reg. v. Longe, 66 L. J., Q. B. 278.

5. Offences against.

Attempted Bribery.]—A person was charged with attempting to corrupt a justice of the peace, and the chairman of the bench of a licensing division, before whom he was about to apply for a licence for a public-house, by sending a sum of money to him. The indictment alleged that, at the time he so attempted to corrupt the justice, he knew that he was to be the chairman at the licensing meeting :—Held, that that allegation was surplusage, and might be rejected, the indictment being perfectly good without it. Reg. v. Gurney, 10 Cox, C. C. 550.

A person sending money to a magistrate with the intention of producing any effect upon his decision is guilty of an attempt to corrupt. Ib.

Insult.]—A person indicted for insulting a justice in the execution of his office will not be discharged from the prosecution by the death of the justice. Rex v. Ellers, 1 Wils. 222.

Contempt.]—If a justice commits for a contempt of himself in his office, it can only be by warrant in writing. Mayhew v. Locke, 2 Marsh. 377 ; 7 Taunt. 63.

A commitment for punishment must be for a time certain. Where, therefore, a party was committed by two justices for a contempt towards them in their office, "until discharged by due course of law" :—Held, that such commitment was bad. Rex v. James, 1 D. & R. 559 ; 5 B. & Ald. 894 ; 24 R. R. 611.

Where a party was committed by a justice, "for refusing to give evidence before him, touching a certain riot and disturbance," without shewing that there had been a person charged before the justice, and that the plaintiff was apprised of the existence of such charge, with respect to which he was required to be examined as a witness :—Held, that the warrant of commitment was no justification of the magistrate in an action of trespass. Cropper v. Horton, 8 D. & R. 166.

A feme covert being a material witness, who refuses to appear upon a charge of felony brought before a justice, may be committed. Bennet v. Watson, 3 M. & S. 1 ; 15 R. R. 373.

—— Quarter Sessions.]—A court of quarter sessions, being a court of record, has power to punish for contempt ; and, if that power is exercised on reasonable grounds, the Court of Queen's Bench will refuse to review the decision of the judge who inflicted the punishment. Pater, In re, 5 B. & S. 299 ; 33 L. J., M. C. 142 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 972 ; 10 L. T. 376 ; 12 W. R. 823 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 544.

Arrest outside Court for Contempt committed in Court.]—Where, at petty sessions, a contempt committed in court is brought to the notice of the justices there sitting, and while the offender is still in court, the justices order that he be attached to answer there and then for such alleged contempt, the mere fact that the order so made is carried out after the offender, to evade arrest, has left the court, is not sufficient to render his arrest illegal. Mitchell v. Smith, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 351.

D. PROCEDURE BEFORE.

1. Informations or Complaints.

Form of.]—Informations must be taken as nearly as possible in the language used by the party. Cohen v. Morgan, 6 D. & R. 8 ; 28 R. R. 533. See Carratt v. Morley, 1 G. & D. 275 ; 1 Q. B. 18 ; 10 L. J., Q. B. 259 ; 6 Jur. 259.

An information under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, described the defendant as having contracted to serve "T. B. and his partners." At the hearing it appeared that the contract of service was between the defendant and "T. B., on behalf of himself and his partners, constituting the R. M. and H. Coal Company" :—Held, that this variance, if one, was cured by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 1. Whittle v. Frankland, 2 B. & S. 49 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 81 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 382 ; 5 L. T. 639.

No magistrate can proceed without an information ; but unless the statute requires the information to be in writing or upon oath, it is not necessary that it should be so. Reg. v. Millard, Dears. C. C. 116 ; 22 L. J., M. C. 108 ; 17 Jur. 400 ; 1 W. R. 314 ; 6 Cox, C. C. 150.

An information on oath under 6 Geo. 4, c. 129, is sufficient if there is a statement of the facts constituting the offence, though it is not a statement of the offence as described in the act. Perham, In re, 5 H. & N. 30 ; 29 L. J., M. C. 33 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1221 ; 1 L. T. 106.

A by-law of the Board of Trade for the regulation of a steam tramway provided that "no smoke or steam shall be emitted from the engines so as to constitute any reasonable ground of complaint to the passengers or the public," under a penalty :—Held, that an information and conviction for permitting smoke to escape from an engine "contrary to the by-laws of the Board of Trade" was bad. Cotterill v. Lemprière, 59 L. J., M. C. 133 ; 24 Q. B. D. 634 ; 62 L. T. 695 ; 17 Cox, C. C. 97 ; 54 J. P. 583.

—— Negativing or Disproving Exceptions.]—Where a prosecutor is not obliged to negative the exceptions in a statute, and negatives some of them only, that part of the information will be rejected as surplusage. Rex v. Hall, 1 Term Rep. 320.

But an information founded on a penal statute must negative the exceptions in the enacting clause creating the penalty, and also those contained in a former clause to which the enacting clause refers in express terms. Rex v. Pratten, 6 Term Rep. 559.

An information, appearing to be laid more than ten days after the offence charged and proved to be committed, was sufficient upon the 19 Geo. 3, c. 50, s. 2, without negativing that the owner had, within ten days after the seizure, claimed the vessels seized. Rex v. Chandler, 14 East, 267.

—— Duplicity.]—An information for profanely cursing one profane curse several times repeated is not bad for duplicity, within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 10. Reg. v. Scott, 4 B. & S. 368 ; 33 L. J., M. C. 15 ; 8 L. T. 662.

An information charging an offence in the alternative, is bad ; therefore, where the information charged the defendant with selling beer or ale without a licence :—Held, that it was bad both in matter and substance, and could not be made out by evidence, nor helped by intendment. Rex v. North, 6 D. & R. 143 ; 28 R. R. 538. And see Rex v. Jukes, 8 Term Rep. 536 ; 5 R. R. 445.

On the hearing of a charge before a magistrate it was objected that the information disclosed two offences, contrary to the provisions of s. 10 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848. The magistrate allowed the objection, and dismissed the summons, but stated a case for the opinion of the court :—Held, that, although the prosecutor might have been required to elect on which charge he would proceed, the inclusion of two offences in one information was a "defect in substance" within the meaning of s. 1 of the act, and that no objection to the information could be allowed in respect of it. Rodgers v. Richards, 66 L. T. 261 ; [1892] 1 Q. B. 555 ; 40 W. R. 331 ; 17 Cox, C. C. 474 ; 56 J. P. 281.

Two Informations—Distinct Charges—Proceeding with Second Information before Disposing of First.]—The appellant was charged by two informations with two offences under ss. 3 and 4 of the Indecent Advertisements Act, 1888, at the same time and place, the evidence being substantially the same in both cases. Upon the conclusion of the hearing of the first information the justices reserved their decision until they had heard the charge contained in the second information ; and, having done so, proceeded to convict the appellant on both charges, and sentenced him to a separate term of imprisonment on each charge :—Held, that the convictions must be quashed, inasmuch as the justices should have disposed of the charge contained in the first information before proceeding to deal with that contained in the second information. Hamilton v. Walker, 61 L. J., M. C. 134 ; [1892] 2 Q. B. 25 ; 67 L. T. 200 ; 40 W. R. 476 ; 17 Cox, C. C. 539 ; 56 J. P. 583.

—— Withdrawing one.]—Two informations were laid against a party, one charging him with the rescue of a person out of lawful custody, and the other with an assault on two police constables ; but on the party being brought up before the petty sessions, the first of these informations was withdrawn :—Held, that this was no valid ground of objection to proceed on the second information. Galliard v. Laxton, 2 B. & S. 363 ; 31 L. J., M. C. 123 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 642 ; 5 L. T. 835 ; 9 Cox, C. C. 127.

Assault—Complaint by or on behalf of the Party aggrieved — Condition precedent.] — A complaint by or on behalf of a person aggrieved by a common assault or battery is a necessary condition precedent to give justices jurisdiction to summarily convict the offender under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 42. A police constable who takes a charge of common assault from the person assaulted is not, on the failure of the complainant personally to prefer the charge before the justices, a party who can prefer the complaint on behalf of the person aggrieved. Nicholson v. Booth, 57 L. J., M. C. 43 ; 58 L. T. 187 ; 16 Cox, C. C. 373 ; 52 J. P. 662.

Refusal to Hear.]—Where an information is laid before justices of the peace for an indictable misdemeanour, it is in their discretion to hear, or to refuse to hear it, and leave the complaining party to originate his prosecution before a grand jury. Reg. v. Ingham, 14 Q. B. 396 ; 3 New Sess. Cas. 689 ; 19 L. J., M. C. 69 ; 14 Jur. 223. See Reg. v. Bather, 42 L. T. 532 ; 44 J. P. 490, infra, col. 581.

Before whom.]—The provision in 3 Geo. 4, c. 23, s. 2, that in all cases where two or more justices, deputy-lieutenants or others, are authorised to hear and determine any complaint, one justice, &c., shall be competent to receive the original information, does not repeal provisions of former statutes, expressly requiring more than one justice, &c., to receive an information. Reg. v. Griffin, 9 Q. B. 155 ; 15 L. J., M. C. 120.

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 87, s. 82, all penalties imposed by an act relating to the customs may be sued for, prosecuted and recovered by action of debt, or by information before two justices of the peace. By s. 83, upon the exhibiting any information before any justice for any offence against any act relating to the customs, such justice is required to issue a summons for the appearance of the party before two justices of the peace :—Held, that s. 82 referred only to the hearing of the information ; and that by s. 83, the information might be exhibited before one justice. Reg. v. Harwich JJ., 3 New Sess. Cas. 368 ; 13 Q. B. 237 ; 18 L. J., M. C. 106 ; 13 Jur. 259.

An information under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 39, for stealing a growing ash-tree, the property of M., was preferred by B. to a justice of the peace, who summoned the offender. At the time and place fixed in the summons he appeared and was convicted by another magistrate, the defendant, the summoning magistrate, being present, but not taking any part. The conviction ordered the plaintiff to forfeit and pay over and above the value of the tree stolen 5*s.*, and for the value of the tree stolen 1*s.* ; and also to pay 1*l.* 4*s.* 6*d.* for costs, to be paid on or before the 19th of March next ; and in default of payment of the sums, to be imprisoned in the house of correction, and there kept to hard labour for one month, unless the sums should be sooner paid. An action having been brought against the defendant :—Held, that the conviction was good, notwithstanding it had not proceeded on the information of the party aggrieved, or been made by the magistrate who received the original information, and issued the summons on which the defendant appeared. Tarry v. Newman, 15 M. & W. 645 ; 2 New Sess. Cas. 449 ; 15 L. J., M. C. 160.

A deposition on oath taken by the justice's clerk, the justice not being present, nor at any time seeing, examining or hearing the deponent, is irregular, and no justification of proceedings founded upon it. Caudle v. Seymour, 1 Q. B. 889; 1 G. & D. 454; 10 L. J., M. C. 130.

Defect in Information — Certiorari.]—Mere want of form in an information laid under a statute, and to which no objection is taken, does not deprive the magistrates of jurisdiction to hear and determine the case. Reg. v. Bradley, 63 L. J., M. C. 183; 10 R. 183; 70 L. T. 379; 17 Cox, C. C. 739; 58 J. P. 199.

Where the writ of certiorari is taken away by statute, it will nevertheless lie in the case of excess of jurisdiction; but a merely formal defect in an information whereby an alleged offence is not properly stated is not an excess within the meaning of this rule. Ib.

Want of Information—Waiver.]—A. and B. were apprehended on a charge of felony, for setting fire to the letters contained in a pillar letter-box. Upon their appearing upon the charge before the justices, they were remanded in order that the postmaster-general might be consulted as to the precise nature of the charge to be preferred; and upon their subsequent appearance before the justices, were charged with a misdemeanour, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 52. The attorneys on their behalf called upon the prosecution to prove the case; witnesses were examined and cross-examined, and at the close of the case it was objected that the justices had no jurisdiction, inasmuch as there was no information upon oath, and they were not found committing the offence, and, therefore, were illegally in custody. The justices nevertheless convicted:—Held, that the conviction was right. Turner v. Postmaster-General, 5 B. & S. 756; 34 L. J., M. C. 10; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 137; 11 L. T. 369; 13 W. R. 89; 10 Cox, C. C. 15.

Proof of Information.]—An examined copy of the magistrate's conviction, reciting the information, is sufficient proof of an information. Scarth v. Gardener, 5 Car. & P. 38.

2. Summons.

Application for—Discretion—Mandamus.]—Where justices have a discretion to grant or refuse a summons, and exercise that discretion properly, the court will not grant a mandamus to hear and determine the matter. Reg. v. Huggins, 60 L. J., M. C. 139.

Refusal to Issue.]—When a justice has refused to issue a summons upon complaint, other justices may subsequently refuse to hear an information, and take the recognizances of the prosecutor to prosecute in the same matter. The Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859, does not apply to such proceedings unless a summons or a warrant has been granted upon which it can take effect. Reg. v. Bather, 42 L. T. 532; 44 J. P. 490.

So, where two police officers charged G., a publican, with supplying liquor to three men whom they alleged to be intoxicated, and the charge was dismissed, on an application on behalf of G. to a justice of the peace for summonses for perjury against the policeman, the application was refused. Subsequently an application was made by G. to a bench of magistrates sitting at petty sessions to grant summonses against the policemen, or in the alternative to take the recognizances of G. under the Vexatious Indictments Act:—Held, that the bench were not bound, under the circumstances, to hear the information at all, and that 22 & 23 Vict. c. 17, s. 2, did not apply until after a summons or a warrant had been granted. Ib.

If on an application to justices for a summons for an indictable offence, they have heard and determined the application, and, on the merits, have declined to grant it, the court will not grant a mandamus to compel them to review their decision. Reg. v. Fawcett, Hodson, Ex parte, 19 L. T. 396; 11 Cox, C. C. 305. And see Reg. v. Adamson, 45 L. J., M. C. 46; 1 Q. B. D. 201; 33 L. T. 840; 24 W. R. 250.

Secus, if they have refused to hear the application, or if, after hearing, have refused to grant it from a mistaken view of their duty, amounting to a declining of jurisdiction. Ib.

—— Previous Decision — Information Disclosing no Fresh Offence.]—In 1879, a complainant laid an information, upon which a summons was issued, against a gas and water company for penalties alleged to have been incurred in consequence of non-compliance with certain provisions of a local act. The justices dismissed the summons, on the ground that the complaint had not been made within six months after the commission of the offence, which they considered was not a continuing offence. They offered to state a case, but the matter was allowed to drop. In 1890, the same complainant laid a similar information against the company, when the justices, having regard to their previous decision, considered they had no jurisdiction to go into the matter again, and refused to issue a summons:—Held, that, instead of declining jurisdiction, the justices should have heard and determined whether, upon the circumstances disclosed, a summons ought to have been issued. Reg. v. Byrde, 60 L. J., M. C. 17; 63 L. T. 645; 39 W. R. 171; 17 Cox, C. C. 187; 55 J. P. 310.

—— Information not Disclosing Indictable Offence.]—Where a magistrate has refused a summons on the ground that the information does not disclose an indictable offence, the high court of justice has no jurisdiction to review his decision, either as to law or as to fact, and therefore, in such a case, a rule, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 5, calling upon a magistrate to shew cause why he should not hear and determine the application for a summons, will not be granted. Lewis, Ex parte (No. 2), 57 L. J., M. C. 108; 21 Q. B. D. 191; 59 L. T. 338; 37 W. R. 13; 16 Cox, C. C. 449; 52 J. P. 773.

Summons Issued by Magistrate who had not heard Complaint—Appearance by Defendant—Objection to Jurisdiction.]—On the 10th of October, 1889, a complaint under the Sale of Food and Drugs Acts was preferred to two justices, sitting as a court of summary jurisdiction, against D. for selling, on the 20th of September, milk not of the quality demanded. A summons was granted, but neither of these justices signed it; and on the 14th of October it was signed and issued by another justice who had not heard the complaint. On the return-day, the 23rd of October, D. appeared, and objected that the summons was invalid, and that the court then assembled had no jurisdiction to entertain the charge:—Held, that the summons had not been signed and issued in accordance with Jervis's Act (s. 1), and, as a citation, was worthless. The defendant's appearance did not cure it. Reg. v. Hughes (4 Q. B. D. 614), distinguished. Dixon v. Wells, 59 L. J., M. C. 116; 25 Q. B. D. 249; 62 L. T. 812; 38 W. R. 606; 17 Cox, C. C. 48; 54 J. P. 725.

Amendment — Substituting Name.] — The manager of a company was summoned for breach of a by-law, and, on objection being taken, the justices amended the summons by substituting the company for the manager, and convicted the company:—Held, that the justices had no power to amend by substituting one name for the other. Oxford Tramway Co. v. Sankey, 54 J. P. 564.

Defect in Summons — Appearance without Objection.]—The jurisdiction of justices is not necessarily ousted by a defect in a bastardy summons, and their order is not a nullity if the defendant appears and takes no objection at the hearing. Reg. v. Fletcher, 51 L. T. 334; 32 W. R. 828; 48 J. P. 407.

Want of Summons—Waiver.]—If a party appears before justices, and allows a charge which they have jurisdiction to hear to be proceeded with without objecting, he waives the want of a summons. Reg. v. Shaw, 34 L. J., M. C. 169; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 415; 12 L. T. 470; 13 W. R. 692; 10 Cox, C. C. 66.

A man was brought before a magistrate upon one charge which the evidence wholly failed to support, whereupon another and a different charge was preferred against him, no fresh summons being taken out. He defended himself against the second charge at first, but after being remanded took objection to the magistrate's jurisdiction, that he was not legally in custody after the dismissal of the charge on which he had been summoned:—Held, that his objection was too late; he having submitted to the second charge being entered upon, the want of any summons or warrant to bring him legally before the magistrate was cured by his voluntary submission. Egginton v. Pearl, 33 L. T. 428. And see Blake v. Beech, 45 L. J., M. C. 111; 1 Ex. D. 320; 34 L. T. 764.

Joint Summons—Cruelty to Animals—Master and Servant.]—B. and C. his servant were both summoned for ill-treating and causing to be ill-treated a horse:—Held, that the prosecutor could not be compelled to elect which charge he would proceed with, but the justices ought to have convicted each of the offence he had committed. Bartholomew v. Wiseman, 56 J. P. 455.

Service of Summons, Length of Time for.]—C., a butcher at Cambridge, was summoned for removing cattle out of an infected area without a licence. The summons was left at his house on Saturday, 6th September, but as he had gone to Jersey it was sent by post, and did not come to his hands till the morning of the 20th, which was the day of hearing. He telegraphed to the chairman of the justices, giving some explanation, and his foreman asked for an adjournment, but the justices convicted him:—Held that a certiorari to quash could not be granted, as the justices were satisfied that there was reasonable time to instruct a solicitor, if C. had been so inclined. Reg. v. Cambridgeshire JJ., 44 J. P. 168.

The time and place mentioned in a summons under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 47, is in the discretion of the magistrates. Hopwood, Ex parte, infra.

A summons was left at eight o'clock in the morning at the house of a person, who was a collier, with his wife, requiring him to attend at a petty sessions to be held at eleven o'clock the next morning at a place eight miles off, to answer a charge of assault. He not returning home from the colliery till eleven o'clock at night, did not receive the summons till that hour. Not being able in time to arrange for some one to supply his place at the colliery, or to collect his witnesses to defend himself against the charge, he did not attend the petty sessions, and the justices convicted him of the assault in his absence:—Held, that the justices were the judges of whether the summons was served in a reasonable time before the hearing, and that the fact (not known to them) that he did not receive the summons until eleven o'clock at night did not deprive them of their jurisdiction to hear and adjudicate upon the complaint. Williams, In re, 2 L. M. & P. 580; 21 L. J., M. C. 46; 15 Jur. 1060.

By 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 51, s. 19, a summons calling upon a party to appear to answer to an information, is to be served upon him ten days at least before the time appointed in the summons for the hearing. Where a summons was served on 20th September and the party was convicted on 30th September, the court held that the magistrate had acted without jurisdiction. Mitchell v. Foster, 12 Ad. & E. 472; 4 P. & D. 150; 9 L. J., M. C. 95.

Proof of Service—Evidence.]—By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 15, s. 47, every person who shall be summoned to answer any complaint shall be bound to appear at the time and place mentioned in the summons, and by s. 69 the certiorari is taken away. Several summonses by a magistrate were served upon the owner of a factory mill, to appear and answer complaints on the following morning. He instructed an attorney to appear before the magistrates and apply for an adjournment of the hearing; that being refused, the attorney said that he had no alternative but to submit to a conviction in all the cases in which the offence was proved. The first case was called on, and the offence proved, and the magistrates convicted in that case, and in the others without any evidence being given in them; and there was no proof of the service of the summons:—Held, that neither the want of proof of service of the summons, nor the absence of evidence in all the cases except the first, took away the jurisdiction of the magistrates, so as to entitle the party to a certiorari to remove the convictions. Hopwood, Ex parte, 4 New Sess. Cas. 174; 15 Q. B. 121; 19 L. J., M. C. 197; 14 Jur. 812.

Proceeding ex parte.]—Justices acting under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 2, have no jurisdiction to convict ex parte during the absence of the accused person, unless satisfied that the summons left at his usual place of abode has been brought to his notice. Smith, In re, L. R. 10 Q. B. 604; 32 L. T. 394; 23 W. R. 523.

A fisherman went to sea in pursuit of his calling on the 9th of March. On the same day a summons for an assault was taken out against him, requiring him to answer the charge upon the 12th. On that day, it having been proved that a summons was served upon him on the 10th. by leaving it with his mother at the usual place of abode, the justices convicted him in his absence. Upon the 9th of April he returned from sea, and was arrested under the conviction :—Held, that there was no evidence before the justices that a reasonable time had elapsed between the time of the service of the summons and the day for hearing the summons, and the justices had no jurisdiction to convict. Ib.

By a court of requests act, a summons for a debt might be served by leaving it at the dwelling-house of the debtor, with his servant or other person belonging to him, and if he did not appear, the creditor might proceed ex parte to judgment and execution. A summons was left with his wife at the house where the debtor, who was a seafaring man, and absent on a voyage to the East Indies, had lived before his departure from England, and where his wife still lived :—Held, that the summons had been duly served, and that the creditor might proceed to execution. Culverson v. Melton, 4 P. & D. 445 ; 12 A. & E. 753 ; 10 L. J., Q. B. 31.

Issue previous to Distress Warrant.]—By a statute establishing a gas-light company, it was enacted, "that if any person should refuse or neglect, for ten days after demand, to pay any rent due from him to the company for the supply of gas, such rent should be recovered by the company or their clerk by warrant of any justice of the peace for the town ; and it should be lawful for the company or their clerk, or any person acting under their authority, with such warrant to levy the sum so due by distress and sale of the goods of the party so neglecting or refusing to pay, or the same might be recovered by action" :—Held, that a warrant so issued by a justice, without previously summoning and hearing the party to be distrained upon, was illegal, though a summons and hearing were not in terms required by the act. Painter v. Liverpool Gas Co., 3 A. & E. 433 ; 6 N. & M. 736 ; 2 H. & W. 233 ; 5 L. J., M. C. 108.

Where a magistrate grants a warrant in the nature of an execution, he is bound first to summon and hear the parties, unless the statute under which he acts clearly renders the discharge of that function ministerial only, or in some other manner dispenses with the summons and hearing. Ib.

Where a local act declares that it shall be lawful for justices to issue their warrant to levy a rate imposed by certain commissioners under the act, upon a neglect or a refusal to pay the rate, but does not contain any language directly making it compulsory on them to issue it, they may refuse to issue the warrant till the party has been summoned before them ; and the court will not compel them by mandamus to issue a warrant in the first instance without any summons. Rex v. Stafford JJ., 5 N. & M. 94 ; 3 A. & E. 425 ; 1 H. & W. 328.

3. Appearance by Counsel or Solicitor.

Right.]—Before 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 10, and 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 2, on an investigation of a charge of felony before a justice of the peace, an attorney was only permitted to be present as a matter of courtesy. Rex v. Borron, 3 B. & Ald. 432 ; 22 R. R. 447. S. P., Cox v. Coleridge, 2 D. & R. 86 ; 1 B. & C. 37 ; 25 R. R. 298. See Rex v. Staffordshire JJ., 1 Chit. 218. Collier v. Hicks, 2 B. & Ad. 663 ; 9 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 138.

Adjournment for.]—Although a defendant has a right under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 12, to make his full defence by counsel or attorney, this does not give him a right to have a case adjourned in order to procure such assistance, although he has had no opportunity of procuring it. Reg. v. Biggins, 5 L. T. 605. And see Reg. v. Cambridgeshire JJ., 44 J. P. 168.

Sufficiency of.]—Upon a conviction under the Copyright Designs Act (6 & 7 Vict. c. 65), the party convicted making default was, upon complaint made, summoned to shew cause why he had not paid the amount of the penalties and costs, and why he should not be committed in default of payment, and be further dealt with according to law. Thereupon his counsel and attorney appeared to shew cause, but the magistrate refused to hear the case in the absence of the party himself, and granted a warrant reciting the summons and neglect of the party to appear, and commanding his apprehension to answer to the complaint made, and to be further dealt with according to law, under which the party was apprehended and imprisoned :—Held (the conviction being afterwards quashed), that the magistrate was liable to an action of trespass for the false imprisonment ; first, on the ground that the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 2, did not apply to default on non-appearance to a summons after conviction ; and, secondly, assuming the section to apply to a summons after conviction, that there had been no default in appearance, the appearance by counsel and attorney being sufficient. Bessell v. Wilson, 1 El. & Bl. 489 ; 22 L. J., M. C. 94 ; 17 Jur. 664 ; 1 W. R. 126.

Plea of Guilty by an unauthorised Solicitor.]—A., residing in London, was summoned before justices at Hastings to answer to informations for maliciously injuring a window and maliciously injuring a bell-pull. Being unable from illness to attend, he admitted to his father that he had broken the window, but had not done it intentionally, and that there ought to be compensation. The father thereupon went to Hastings and communicated with an attorney there, who, under all the circumstances, recommended that he should appear and plead guilty. Accordingly on the day of hearing the attorney pleaded guilty, and the justices thereupon convicted A., and sentenced him to a term of imprisonment. In fact he had given neither to his father nor to the attorney any authority whatever to plead guilty, and he was not aware that his father intended to employ an attorney :—Held, that as he had not authorised an attorney to appear and plead guilty, the conviction was bad. Reg. v. Axes, 24 L. T. 64.

4. Hearing.

Sitting in Court on Wrong Day.]—A person was convicted of an offence before two magistrates sitting in the petty sessions court-house upon a day specially fixed by themselves, but which was not one of the days upon which the petty sessions of the district were usually held :—Held, that the magistrates were acting out of petty sessions, and, therefore, had no jurisdiction to convict without first requiring the person convicted to find bail for his appearance on the next regularly-appointed petty sessions day. Reg. v. Martin, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 556.

Where Held.]—A conviction before the magistrates, upon an information under the game laws, is a judicial proceeding, at which all the king's subjects for whom there is room, and against whom there rests no special ground for exclusion, have a right to be present. (And 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 12, recognises this right in summary convictions.) Daubney v. Cooper, 5 M. & Ry. 314; 10 B. & C. 237; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 21.

The 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, empowered two justices of the peace to punish, on summary conviction for assaults committed on females, or children under fourteen years, any person charged before them "sitting at a place where the petty sessions are usually held":—Held, that a warrant of commitment for such offence, in the form given by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, schedule (P 1) was good, although it did not state that the justices, before whom the party was charged, were sitting at a place where petty sessions are usually held. Allison, In re, 10 Ex. 561; 3 C. L. R. 319; 24 L. J., M. C. 73; 18 Jur. 1055; 3 W. R. 62.

The fact of a petty sessions for a division of a county having been usually held at several places within the limits of that division, did not constitute such places separate petty sessional divisions, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 10, s. 10. Reg. v. Whittles, 3 New Sess. Cas. 397; 18 L. J., M. C. 96; 13 Jur. 403.

The quarter sessions ought to take judicial notice of the petty sessional divisions in their county. Ib.

—— Petty Sessional Court-house.]—In a borough which had no separate commission of the peace, the mayor and a county justice used to sit at the town hall, where they held petty and special sessions. Since the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (s. 20), petty sessions had been held at the county hall only, but latterly, since the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1884, the justices again sat in the town hall:—Held, that the town hall was a petty sessional court-house within the meaning of s. 20 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, being a place where justices were accustomed to assemble. Jones v. Jones, 51 J. P. 198.

By Whom.]—Where an act of parliament empowers two justices to execute a judicial act, they must meet and execute it together. Rex v. Forrest, 3 Term Rep. 38; 1 R. R. 628. S. P., Rex v. Great Marlow, 2 East, 244; 6 R. R. 420. Rex v. Hamstall Ridware, 3 Term Rep. 380. Weller v. Toke, 9 East, 364. Penny v. Slade, 7 Scott, 285; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 319; 8 L. J., C. P. 221.

Discretion as to severing Defence.]—At petty sessions an information was laid against two persons charging that they did use a gun and kill two pheasants contrary to 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 3; each claimed to be tried separately in order to call the other as a witness; the justices refused, and heard the charge against both together, and convicted them, and a conviction was drawn up separately against each of them, imposing a penalty of 3*l.*:—Held, that it was in the discretion of the justices whether they would hear the charge separately or not; that, as the penalty was imposed on every person acting in contravention of the statute, each was separately liable to the whole penalty, and that separate convictions were right. Reg. v. Littlechild, Reg. v. Heslop, 40 L. J., M. C. 137; L. R. 6 Q. B. 293; 24 L. T. 233; 19 W. R. 748.

S. managed his father's farm, his father being an invalid, and while working in a field, part of the farm, forbade P., E. and others, who were out with the Taunton Vale foxhounds, in pursuit of a fox, from entering that field. P. insisted upon riding into the field, S. turned his horse back. P. and E. then committed an assault upon S., for which they were summoned by S. before the justices and jointly charged in the information. The justices refused to allow P. and E. to sever their defence, so that they might give evidence for each other, and convicted them both:—Held, that such conviction was right. Paul v. Summerhayes, 48 L. J., M. C. 33; 4 Q. B. D. 9; 39 L. T. 574; 27 W. R. 215; 14 Cox, C. C. 202.

The 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, does not apply to such a case. Ib.

—— Waiver.]—Where there are general charges against several defendants, but the evidence against them all is the same, and they are all tried at the same time, and each is separately convicted, no objection having been raised at the time by the defendants to this course of proceeding, such convictions cannot afterwards be objected to upon the ground that each defendant should have been tried separately. Reg. v. Biggins, 5 L. T. 605.

Discretion to reduce Fine—Cotton Cloth Factories Act, 1889.]—Where by s. 13 of the Cotton Cloth Factories Act, 1889, a fine of "not less than 5*l.* shall be imposed" for the first offence, which offence is to be dealt with by a court of summary jurisdiction, the general discretion to reduce fines given by s. 4 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, must be taken to be limited in this particular instance to that extent. Osborn v. Wood, 66 L. J., Q. B. 178; [1897] 1 Q. B. 197; 76 L. T. 60; 45 W. R. 319; 18 Cox, C. C. 494; 61 J. P. 118.

Dismissal of Charge—Trifling Nature.]—Upon hearing an information against the owner of a dog "for keeping a dog without a licence," the justices cannot dismiss the charge "as of so trifling a nature that it is inexpedient to inflict any punishment," in the exercise of the discretionary power given to them by s. 16 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, though they might exercise such a discretion on condition of the licence being then and there paid for by the owner so charged. Phillips v. Evans, 65 L. J., M. C. 101; [1896] 1 Q. B. 305; 74 L. T. 314; 44 W. R. 429; 18 Cox, C. C. 300; 60 J. P. 120.

Where Property laid in several Persons.]—In an information for malicious injury to property under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 52, where the ownership is laid in several persons, and it appears that only one of these is the legal owner, the justices ought not to dismiss the information, but ought to hear the case, or if they think the variance likely to mislead, to adjourn the hearing. Ralph v. Hurrell, 44 L. J., M. C. 145; 32 L. T. 816.

Adjournment of Hearing.]—By a railway act, penalties for breach of by-laws were recoverable before a justice of the peace, and officers of the railway company were empowered to seize offenders under certain circumstances, and to convey them before a justice without any warrant, such justice being "empowered and required to proceed immediately to the conviction or acquittal of such offender":—Held, that, although the act constituting the offence gave no power to the justice to remand the accused, yet that by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 16, the justices had power to adjourn the hearing and to issue a warrant for committal of the accused to the house of correction. Gelan v. Hall, 2 H. & N. 379; 27 L. J., M. C. 78; 5 W. R. 757.

Justices sitting at petty sessions have not only the power of adjournment given them by the Petty Sessions Act (14 & 15 Vict. c. 93), but also an inherent power of adjourning a case at any time to any further sessions. But where a case is fully heard by several justices, and only adjourned for the purpose of determining and pronouncing the order, the same justices who heard the case must also concur in the order pronounced. Reg. v. Cork JJ., 18 L. R., Ir. 99.

—— Civil Proceedings Pending.]—A magistrate cannot judicially consider, as ground for adjourning a summons for libel, pending civil proceedings between different parties for a different libel, though arising out of the same matters. Reg. v. Evans, 62 L. T. 570; 17 Cox, C. C. 81; 54 J. P. 471.

—— Conviction in absence of Person charged.]—Where a defendant, having appeared in answer to a summons before justices at petty sessions, during the hearing of the case forcibly leaves the court, the justices may adjourn, and at the adjourned sitting of the court, if the defendant do not appear, may in his absence convict him of the offence with the commission of which he was charged. Reg. v. Carrick-on-Suir JJ., 16 Cox, C. C. 571.

—— Absence of Informant.]—Justices having refused to hear certain informations laid by a local board of health on the ground that the clerk of the board, who was the real informant, was not present, a rule to compel them to do so was refused. Leamington Local Board, Ex parte, 5 L. T. 637.

What is a Hearing—Res judicata.]—L. was charged with night poaching under 9 Geo. 4, c. 69, and in course of cross-examination of prosecutor's witnesses, the justices considered he had been illegally arrested, and discharged him. L. was again summoned for the same offence on the same facts, when the justices held that they had no jurisdiction, as the former case was res judicata:—Held, that the justices had rightly decided. Reg. v. Brackenridge, 48 J. P. 293.

Res Judicata.]—The appellant was charged with non-compliance on August 21st, 1889, and ten days thereafter with an order made by justices under s. 2 of the Dogs Act, 1871, requiring him to keep a dangerous dog under proper control. No evidence was given except as to August 21st, and the charge was dismissed. Subsequently the appellant was charged and convicted for not keeping a dog under proper control on August 21st simply:—Held, that the matter was res judicata. Ryley v. Brown, 17 Cox, C. C. 79.

Rehearing.]—Where a woman, on the 19th June, 1847, applied to a petty sessions at W., in the county of P., while resident therein, for an order on the putative father of a child which was born on the 22nd March, 1847, and the application was dismissed for a defect in the evidence; and on the 19th February, 1848, having removed to the county of B., made another application against the same person to a petty sessions there; and the justices made an order upon the putative father, who appealed to the quarter sessions, by whom the order was confirmed without hearing the evidence of the women:—Held, that although a dismissal of the first application, upon the merits, would have been an answer to the second, provided it was made out by evidence, yet that the second petty sessions and the quarter sessions having a general jurisdiction over the subject-matter, and being bound to hear and decide upon the evidence, their decision was final, and could not be reviewed. Reg. v. Buckinghamshire JJ., 3 New Sess. Cas. 500; 18 L. J., M. C. 113; 13 Jur. 1053.

Evidence — Absence of Justice—Waiver.]—When upon a hearing before two justices at petty sessions, one of them is not present until a portion of the evidence has been given, the witness should be resworn, and should again give his evidence; and it is not sufficient that the evidence already given should be read over to such justice. This, however, is only an irregularity which may be waived by the parties. Reg. v. Jeffreys, 22 L. T. 786.

An affiliation summons was being heard before A. and B. (justices); after the woman had given her evidence, C., another justice, came in and took his seat upon the bench, and the previous evidence was read over to him in the hearing of the putative father and his attorney. The case then proceeded, and the putative father's attorney addressed the bench and called a witness; but before the bench decided upon the application A. left, and B. and C. made an order:—Held, that the putative father had by his conduct waived the objection. Ib.

—— Rejection of.]—A penalty is imposed by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 60, sub-s. 7, upon every person "who shall set up or continue any . . . projection from any . . . part of any . . . shop . . . so as to cause any . . . obstruction in any thoroughfare." R. was summoned before a metropolitan police magistrate for an offence against the foregoing enactment. It was proved that he had affixed to the front of his shop a movable showboard, 11½ inches of which projected at a height of 2 feet 3 inches over the footway of the street, which was 36 feet 8 inches wide. He proposed to call witnesses to prove that they were not incommoded by the projection; but the magistrate refused to hear them, and convicted him:—Held, that the magistrate had power to reject the evidence proposed to be adduced as irrelevant, and that the conviction must be affirmed. Read v. Perrett, 1 Ex. D. 349.

A magistrate cannot be required to hear evidence which ought not to affect his determination. Rex v. Minshull, 1 N. & M. 277.

—— Refusal to Convict on.]—Where a magistrate has exercised his discretion by refusing to convict on the evidence adduced before him, in support of an information, the court will not compel him to rehear the case, or return the proceedings which have taken place before him. British and Foreign Patent Invention Co., Ex parte, 7 D. P. C. 614; 2 W. W. & H. 57.

—— Previous Hearing before another Magistrate.]—The judicial discretion which a magistrate has to exercise on cases brought before him must be based on the evidence taken before him, and it is not competent for him to act upon evidence taken before another magistrate. Guerin, In re, 58 L. J., M. C. 42; 60 L. T. 538; 37 W. R. 269; 16 Cox, C. C. 596; 53 J. P. 468.

—— Articles of the Peace.]—When articles of the peace are exhibited, the question for the justices is, whether or not they believe the exhibitor on his oath, and neither the evidence of the exhibitee himself nor witnesses tendered on his behalf may be heard to contradict the exhibitor. Lort v. Hutton, 45 L. J., M. C. 95; 33 L. T. 730.

A party gave information on oath before a magistrate that from certain language used towards him he was in bodily fear from another; and the magistrate upon hearing the complaint required the latter to enter into recognizances to keep the peace. On motion to discharge the recognizances on the ground that the language was used in a metaphorical sense only, the court refused to interfere because it was for the magistrate to judge in what sense the language was used. Rex v. Tregarthen, 5 B. & Ad. 678; 2 N. & M. 379.

Claim to be tried by Jury—Night-Poaching—"Imprisonment for a Term exceeding Three Months."]—By the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, s. 17, a person when charged before a court of summary jurisdiction with an offence in respect of the commission of which an offender is liable on summary conviction to be imprisoned for a term exceeding three months, may claim to be tried by a jury:—Held, that the offence of night-poaching, whereby the person charged is liable under 9 Geo. 4, c. 69, to imprisonment for a period not exceeding three months, and at the expiration of that period to a further imprisonment of six months in case he fail to find sureties for his not so offending again, is not within the act so as to entitle the person charged to be tried by a jury. Williams v. Wynne, 57 L. J., M. C. 30; 58 L. T. 283; 52 J. P. 343.

—— Offence punishable by Fine—Imprisonment in Default.]—Where an offence is punishable by fine, but the person convicted is liable to a term of six months' imprisonment in case of non-payment, the offence is not one that entitles the offender to claim to be tried by a jury within s. 17 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879. Carle v. Elkington, 67 L. T. 374; 40 W. R. 510; 17 Cox, C. C. 557; 56 J. P. 359.

—— Trial as for first Offence—Statement as to previous Conviction.]—Where a person is charged before a court of summary jurisdiction with an offence in respect of which a term of imprisonment exceeding three months cannot be inflicted, a statement made after the close of the case and after the justices have decided to convict, by a police constable that the defendant has been previously convicted of a like offence, does not put him in peril of being convicted as for a second offence in respect of the commission of which a term of imprisonment for a period of more than three months might have been inflicted, and thereby give him the right to claim to be tried by a jury, as provided by s. 17 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879. Reg. v. Fowler, Walters, Ex parte, 64 L. J., M. C. 9; 15 R. 265.

Trial as for first Offence—Proof of previous Conviction, effect of.]—A magistrate has no power to treat a second offence of keeping a dog without a licence as a first offence, upon the ground that the prior conviction was not set out either in the information or summons before him, when it is proved to him at the hearing that the defendant has been previously convicted. Murray v. Thompson, 58 L. J., M. C. 41; 22 Q. B. D. 142; 60 L. T. 151; 37 W. R. 221; 16 Cox, C. C. 554; 53 J. P. 70.

Depositions—How to be Taken.]—Where magistrates first took the examination of witnesses not on oath, in support of a conviction, and afterwards swore them to the truth of their evidence, the court expressed its disapprobation of the practice. Rex v. Kiddy, 4 D. & R. 734.

A justice should not allow depositions to be framed in the words of a clause in a statute under which a party is committed. Mills v. Collett, 3 M. & P. 242; 7 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 97; 6 Bing. 85; 31 R. R. 355. And see CRIMINAL LAW (EVIDENCE).

Cautioning Accused Persons.]—The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18, requiring magistrates to caution the accused with respect to statements he may make in answer to the charge, is not applicable to witnesses asked questions tending to criminate them. Reg. v. Coote, 9 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 463; 42 L. J., P. C. 45; L. R. 4 P. C. 599; 29 L. T. 111; 21 W. R. 553; 12 Cox, C. C. 557.

Criminal Proceedings—Competent Witness.]—An information before justices under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 23, for using an engine for the purpose of taking game, without the authority of a certificate, is a criminal proceeding in which the party is charged with the commission of an offence punishable on summary conviction, within 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 3, and therefore the party charged is not competent or compellable to give evidence for or against himself. Cattell v. Ireson, El. Bl. & El. 91; 27 L. J., M. C. 167; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 560; 6 W. R. 469.

Compelling Attendance.]—A magistrate has no right to issue a warrant for the apprehension of a person to attend to find bail for his appearance as a witness at the assizes, although it is sworn that the witness is material and has refused to obey a summons, which had previously been issued, to give evidence before the magistrate. Evans v. Rees, 4 P. & D. 32; 12 A. & E. 55; 4 Jur. 1032.

Commitment.]—A justice of the peace may commit a feme covert, who is a material witness upon a charge of felony brought before him, and who refuses to appear at the sessions to give evidence, or to find sureties for her appearance. Bennet v. Watson, 3 M. & S. 1; 15 R. R. 373. And see Cropper v. Horton, 8 D. & R. 166.

Conduct of Case by Complainant in Person—Cross-examination of Witness.]—An inspector of a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals may, under the 14th section of Jervis's Act, conduct the case and examine and cross-examine witnesses at the hearing before the magistrates of an information preferred at the instance of the society. Duncan v. Toms, 56 L. J., M. C. 81; 56 L. T. 719; 35 W. R. 667; 16 Cox, C. C. 267; 51 J. P. 631.

Cross-examination by Defendant's Solicitor—Discretion to Prohibit.]—Certain justices at a preliminary inquiry into an alleged case of highway robbery declined to permit the solicitor representing the prisoners to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, believing that they possessed a discretionary power in the matter. Sect. 7 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1884, provides that the expression "court of summary jurisdiction" in s. 50 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, shall include justices, a justice or magistrate, whether acting under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, or any of them, or under any other act, or by virtue of his or their commission or by the common law:—Held, that the justices had no discretion to prohibit the solicitor to the prisoners from cross-examining the witnesses for the prosecution, and that the right to cross-examine is absolute both under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts and by the common law. Reg. v. Griffiths, 54 L. T. 280; 16 Cox, C. C. 46.

Witnesses privileged from Arrest on attending Magistrate's Court.]—A person attending before a police magistrate, as a witness, on a charge of felony after a remand, is privileged from arrest on civil process, eundo, morando et redeundo, though he was not under recognizances or a summons to appear. Montague v. Harrison, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 292; 27 L. J., C. P. 24; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 29; 6 W. R. 43.

Privilege of Solicitor.]—Disobedience by a solicitor to an order of court made against him as an officer of the court is a contempt of a criminal nature, and an attachment granted to enforce compliance with the order of court is process of a punitive and disciplinary character; and therefore no privilege from arrest exists or can be claimed against the execution of the attachment. Privilege from arrest for contempt of court, where it otherwise exists, can be claimed in respect of attendance as an advocate at a police court as well as at any other court, although the proceedings at the police court consist merely of a preliminary inquiry on a charge of felony. F. was a solicitor, and an order was made at chambers that he should deliver up certain documents and should pay the sum of 10*l.* and certain costs. This order was made against F. as an officer of the court. F. delivered up the documents, but he did not pay the sum of 10*l.* or the costs. An order for the attachment of F. for contempt of court was thereupon made at chambers. F. then paid the sum of 10*l.*, but he did not pay the costs. He was arrested under the attachment, whilst he was on his return to his offices from a metropolitan police court, where he had been as advocate attending to defend certain persons at a preliminary inquiry on a charge of treason-felony:—Held, that he was not entitled to be discharged from custody on the ground of privilege from arrest, the attachment having been granted for a contempt of a criminal nature. Freston, In re, 52 L. J., Q. B. 545; 11 Q. B. D. 545; 49 L. T. 290; 31 W. R. 804—C. A.

Binding over Prosecutor and Witnesses to Prosecute.]—By 11 & 12 Will. 3, c. 12, and 42 Geo. 3, c. 85, offences committed out of Great Britain by governors of colonies and officers of the government under colour of, or in exercise of, their offices, may be prosecuted or inquired of, heard and determined in the Queen's Bench in England, either upon information or indictment, and the offence may be laid to have been committed in Middlesex:—Held, that the power conferred upon justices by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, ss. 2, 17, 20, of binding over the prosecutor and witnesses to prosecute or give evidence against any person charged with an indictable offence committed on land beyond the sea, at the next court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, extends to cases where the offence is one of those specified in 42 Geo. 3, c. 85, and that the description "court of oyer and terminer" in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 32, s. 20, applies to the Court of Queen's Bench. Reg. v. Eyre, 9 B. & S. 329; 37 L. J., M. C. 159; L. R. 3 Q. B. 487; 18 L. T. 511; 16 W. R. 754; 11 Cox, C. C. 162.

Charge dismissed—Binding Prosecutor over under Vexatious Indictments Act.]—Where a prosecutor bonâ fide prefers before a justice, and within his jurisdiction, a charge or complaint in respect of an offence within the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859, and the justice dismisses it, for want of evidence, such dismissal is equivalent to a refusal to commit, and the prosecutor is entitled to require the justice to take his recognizance to prosecute the charge or complaint by way of indictment. Reg. v. London Corporation, 54 L. T. 646; 16 Cox, C. C. 77; 50 J. P. 711.

Taking Recognizances.]—A magistrate, if he refuses to commit or bail the person charged, is bound under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 17. s. 2, to take the recognizance of the prosecutor, if the information discloses any of the offences mentioned in the statute; but he has a discretion to refuse if no indictable offence is disclosed. Wason, Ex parte, 38 L. J., Q. B. 302; L. R. 4 Q. B. 573; 17 W. R. 881.

Where, therefore, the offence charged is that of conspiracy, by three persons, two of whom are members of the House of Lords, to deceive the house, and so to prevent the due course of justice and injure and prejudice a third person, by making statements in the house which they knew to be false, the magistrate is right in refusing to take any proceedings; as members of either house of parliament are not civilly or criminally liable for any statements made in the house, nor for a conspiracy to make such statements. Ib.

5. Detention of Parties.

Not without Charge.]—Magistrates have no authority to detain a person known to them till some other person makes a charge against him. Before they detain a known person, they should have a charge actually made. Rex v. Birnie, 5 Car. & P. 206; 1 M. & Rob. 160.

Reasonable Time.]—An action will lie against a magistrate for committing a party charged with felony for re-examination for an unreasonable time, but without any improper motive. Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & C. 28; 5 M. & Ry. 53; 4 Car. & P. 154; 8 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 67.

A party was taken before a magistrate, and by him committed for further examination, on a charge of felony, in unlawfully cutting trees;—Held, that this was no excess of jurisdiction, though it did not appear that the amount of the injury exceeded 20*s*., as is required to constitute the offence of felony by 7 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 19. Cave v. Mountain, 1 Scott (N.R.) 132; 1 Man. & G. 257; 9 L. J., M. C. 90.

The reasonableness of the period of commitment for examination is a question for the jury. Ib.

A. was apprehended by an excise officer and two constables for working an illicit still. He was taken to the police-office, and left in custody there while the excise officer endeavoured to find a magistrate to take the charge. Several magistrates declined to hear it, and he was detained in custody two days, when a magistrate was at length found to hear the case. He was convicted of the offence under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, and fined 30*l*. There was no information or conviction, but a warrant of commitment was made out, A. having failed to pay the fine. On motion by him to be discharged, the court of session held the conviction to be bad, on the ground that the justice had no jurisdiction, as it was only in cases of summary or immediate arrest that the excise officer could proceed as he had done:—Held, first, that the detention at the police-office was reasonable. Evans v. M'Loughlan, 4 Macq. H.L. 84; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1253; 4 L. T. 31.

Held, secondly, that the justices had jurisdiction. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that there was no necessity for an information, as the arrest was an immediate arrest. Ib.

—— Effect on Conviction.]—The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 87 (Smuggling Act), s. 58, enacted (for the purpose of giving time to prepare informations, convictions, &c.), that when any person shall have been detained by an officer for any offence against this or any other act relating to the customs, and shall have been taken before a justice, if it appear to such justice that there is cause to detain, he is thereby authorised and required to order such person to be detained a reasonable time, and at the expiration of such time to be brought before any two justices, who are thereby authorised and required finally to hear and determine the matter:—Held, that although the justice detains for an unreasonable time, if the offender is then brought before two justices, and convicted, the conviction is still valid, the jurisdiction to convict depending on s. 50, and not being affected by the improper proceeding under s. 58. Van Boven, In re, 9 Q. B. 669; 16 L. J., M. C. 4.

Delaying to hear Case.]—Two constables, on a Monday morning were taking the plaintiff before a magistrate, on a charge of misconduct, when they met the magistrate, who desired them to take the plaintiff back to the lock-up, and bring him up for examination on the Tuesday. They did so, when the magistrate fined him 1*l*.:—Held, that the magistrate was liable to an action of trespass for sending the plaintiff back to the lock-up; and that it was the duty of the magistrate either to have gone into the case on the Monday, or to have desired that the plaintiff should be taken before another magistrate. Edwards v. Ferris, 7 Car. & P. 542.

G., licensed to sell tobacco in his house in the city of N., was found hawking and selling at a public-house in the county division of T., four miles distant, and was arrested and conveyed before justices at N. next day, but as no justices were then sitting he was, on his own recognizance, remitted to justices who sat in T., seven days after the offence, and was convicted. G. objected to the jurisdiction, as the justices were not acting forthwith, nor near the place within 5 & 6 Vict. c. 93, s. 13:—Held, that whether G. was illegally arrested and detained or not, the justices of T. having jurisdiction, and he being charged before them, the conviction was valid. Gray v. Customs Commissioners, 48 J. P. 343.

Pending Distress Warrant.]—Where a person was convicted under 13 Geo. 3, c. 80, s. 4, and a warrant issued to levy the penalty on his goods, the magistrate might order him verbally to be kept in custody until a return was made on the warrant. Still v. Walls, 6 Esp. 36; 7 East, 533.

6. Warrants.

Search Warrant.]—A search warrant by which a party is arrested, must be founded on an information which discloses a charge of felony, or contains a statement of facts from which it may fairly be inferred that a felony has been committed. M'Donald v. Bulwer, 13 Ir. C. L. R. 549; 11 L. T. 27.

A justice of the peace has jurisdiction to issue a search warrant for stolen goods, although the sworn information on which the application for the warrant is made does not allege that a larceny has been committed, if the fair intendment of the allegations made in the information is that the informant has reasonable grounds to suspect, and does suspect, that a larceny has been committed. Jones v. German, 66 L. J., Q. B. 281; [1897] 1 Q. B. 374; 76 L. T. 136; 45 W. R. 278; 18 Cox, C. C. 497; 61 J. P. 180—C. A.

A secretary of state is not a conservator or a justice of the peace under 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, and has no jurisdiction to grant a warrant to break open doors to search for libellous papers; and such a warrant is illegal and void. Entick v. Carrington, 2 Wils. 275.

A mandamus will not be granted to compel the justice who signs a search warrant to produce the informations on which it was issued, and to permit a copy of them to be taken on the ground that there was no real ground for suspicion, and that the applicant believed that whoever swore the information was actuated by malice and ill-will. Reg. v. Browne, 4 Cox, C. C. 1.

—— Licensed Premises.]—Complaint having been made under s. 11 of the Betting House Act, 1853, a search warrant was issued thereunder, and certain licensed premises searched by the police:—Held, that the justices had jurisdiction to issue the warrant in respect of licensed premises: and that the powers of the police under such warrant were not restricted by the words of the section, "all such persons found therein," to all such persons as were actually engaged in contravening the Betting House Act, or in aiding and abetting the contravention thereof. Anderson v. Hume, 46 J. P. 825.

Distress Warrants—Recovery of Rates.]—The Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), does not affect or apply to proceedings for the recovery of poor-rates and other rates recoverable in the same manner as poor-rates; and a distress warrant in respect of such rates may be issued as before the act. Reg. v. Price, 49 L. J., M. C. 49; 5 Q. B. D. 300; 42 L. T. 439; 28 W. R. 615; 44 J. P. 248.

—— To Levy on Overseers.]—Upon an application to justices under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 91, s. 9, to issue their warrant to levy the amount due from the assistant overseer of a parish, the evidence prescribed by the above section was adduced, but the justices refused to treat the certificate of the treasurer as conclusive, and allowed the overseer to prove payments made by him between the date of the certificate of the auditor and that of the treasurer:—Held, that in issuing their distress warrant, the justices had not a mere ministerial act to perform, and were right, as the section made the treasurer's certificate primâ facie, but not conclusive, evidence. Reg. v. Fordham, 42 L. J., M. C. 153; L. R. 8 Q. B. 501; 22 W. R. 85.

The adjudication of magistrates, under 50 Geo. 3, c. 49, s. 1, upon the accounts of churchwardens and overseers rendered by them at the expiration of their office, is in the nature of an award, and cannot be reopened by those magistrates for the purpose of correcting a supposed mistake in the settlement of the accounts. Barrons v. Luscombe, 5 N. & M. 330; 5 A. & E. 589; 1 H. & W. 457.

Where magistrates are empowered to settle and allow the accounts of a public officer, and in case of a neglect or refusal by such officer, for fourteen days after the allowance, to pay over the balance found to be due from him, are directed, upon application of the parties interested, to issue a distress warrant for such balance,—they cannot, after issuing a warrant in conformity with the power given to them, but before execution of it, order that the execution be suspended, on the ground of an error in the settlement of the accounts, unless the parties interested consent to such suspension. Ib.

—— Public Health.]—Where the proceedings under the Public Health Act, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, are regular, the local inspectors are entitled to a distress warrant from the justices for the payment of money required for carrying out in the district the provisions of the act. Reg. v. Southampton JJ., 18 Jur. 494; 2 W. R. 231.

—— Discretion.]—On an application to a justice, under 35 Geo. 3, c. 101, s. 3, to issue a warrant of distress for non-payment of charges incurred by the suspension of an order of removal where the charges are under 20*l.*, the justice cannot inquire into the propriety of the order, but is bound to enforce it by issuing his warrant. Reg. v. Higginson, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1176.

Under two local acts, by which the rates of a parish were regulated, an appeal was given against any rate to the next quarter sessions, and it was to be enforced by summons before two justices, who were to order the payment, and (if necessary) grant a warrant of distress, if the person summoned "did not prove to them that he was not chargeable with or liable to pay such rate":—Held, that this only gave the justices a power similar to that in enforcing a poor-rate, and that they had no jurisdiction to inquire into the validity of a rate, good on the face of it, and that they had no jurisdiction to determine anything in a summary way, so as to give power to state a case. May, Ex parte, 2 B. & S. 426; 31 L. J., M. C. 161.

Where, by an act, power is conferred upon justices to issue a distress warrant, "if they shall think fit," they must not refuse to issue it merely because they think the act of parliament does an injustice in giving such power in the particular case. Reg. v. Boteler, 4 B. & S. 959; 33 L. J., M. C. 101; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 798; 12 W. R. 466.

Justices refused to issue distress warrants against the goods of defendants fined for the non-attendance of their children at a board school, without affirmative evidence that the defendants possessed goods upon which distraint could be made:—Held, that the justices were, in their discretion, entitled to require affirmative evidence that the defendants possessed goods primâ facie distrainable, and, in the absence of it, could not as of right be called upon by the prosecution to issue distress warrants. Reg. v. German, 61 L. J., M. C. 43; 66 L. T. 264; 56 J. P. 358.

—— Power of Justices to delay Execution.]—Justices, in issuing a distress warrant for the recovery of poor-rates, have no power to order that there shall be any delay in the execution of the warrant. Reg. v. Handsley, 7 Q. B. D. 398.

—— Time of Sale—Church Rate.]—The 27 Geo. 2, c. 2, which directs that in every warrant of distress the justice shall limit in such warrant, a time of sale, so as such time be not less than four days, nor more than eight days, is applicable to cases of distress for church rates (except those directed against persons called Quakers). Reg. v. Williams, 4 New Sess. Cas. 137; 2 Car. & K. 1001; 1 Den. C. C. 529; T. & M. 235; 19 L. J., M. C. 126; 14 Jur. 115.

—— Default of Payment — Imprisonment under Licensing Act.]—By the Licensing Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 94), s. 3, a person who sells beer without a licence is liable for a first offence to a penalty of 50*l.* or imprisonment with or without hard labour for a month. By s. 51, where a court of summary jurisdiction has ordered a distress to be made in default of payment of a penalty, the court may order, in default of the said sum being paid as directed, that the person liable to pay the same shall be imprisoned for a period not exceeding six months in cases where the penalty amounts to 50*l.* B. was convicted before justices for selling beer without a licence, and fined 50*s.* He confessed himself unable to pay, and was forthwith committed by the justices to prison for six months without any distress having been made:—Held, that the justices had exceeded their jurisdiction, inasmuch as the issue of a warrant of distress was necessary in all cases to make s. 51 applicable. Brown, Ex parte, 47 L. J., M. C. 108; 3 Q. B. D. 545; 38 L. T. 682; 26 W. R. 757.

To Bring up Accused.]—Where an act of parliament gives a magistrate jurisdiction over an offence, it impliedly gives him power to make out a warrant and bring before him any person charged with such offence. Bane v. Methuen, 2 Bing. 63 ; 9 Moore, 161 ; 2 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 121 ; 27 R. R. 546.

Form of Warrant.]—A justice's warrant, commanding a constable to apprehend and bring before him the body of A. B., to answer all such matters and things as, on her majesty's behalf, shall be objected against him on oath by C. D. for an assault committed on C. D., is bad, as not shewing any information on oath upon which the warrant issues. Caudle v. Seymour, 1 Q. B. 889 ; 1 G. & D. 454 ; 10 L. J., M. C. 130.

A warrant issued by a justice of Tipperary for the apprehension of J. N. stated that he "stands indicted in the peace office of the county," and commanded the police of the county to apprehend, and "him in safe custody keep, so that you may have his body before her majesty's justices of the peace at the next sessions," &c. :—Held, bad, as the words "peace office" were without definite meaning, and did not disclose in what court the indictment had been preferred. Nesbitt, In re, 1 New Sess. Cas. 366.

Held, secondly, that a magistrate had no authority to order the police to keep the prisoner in custody. Ib.

In order to protect justices from an action of trespass in issuing a warrant of distress, all those facts must appear on the face of the warrant which are necessary to give jurisdiction to the justices over the subject-matter. Day v. King, 5 Ad. & E. 359 ; 6 N. & M. 845 ; 5 L. J., M. C. 130.

Conviction upon Warrant illegally issued.]—H., a police constable, procured a warrant to be illegally issued without a written information or oath, for the arrest of S. upon a charge of assaulting and obstructing him in the discharge of his duty. Upon such warrant S. was arrested and brought before justices, and was without objection tried by them and convicted. H. was afterwards indicted for perjury committed on the said trial of S., and convicted :—Held, that H. was rightly convicted, notwithstanding that there was neither written information nor oath to justify the issue of the warrant, and that the justices had jurisdiction to hear the charge though the warrant upon which the accused was brought before them was illegal. Reg. v. Hughes, 48 L. J., M. C. 151 ; 4 Q. B. D. 614 ; 40 L. T. 685.

Backing.]—The backing of the warrant under 24 Geo. 2, c. 55, s. 1, by a justice, is purely ministerial, and the justice who issues the warrant is responsible for an arrest under it, although it is backed and executed in a county other than that in which it was issued. Clark v. Woods, 2 Ex. 395 ; 3 New Sess. Cas. 253 ; 17 L. J., M. C. 189.

C. was convicted of an assault on two police constables of the county police of Worcestershire in the execution of their duty, who were apprehending him in the city of Worcester under a warrant issued by two justices of and for the county of Worcestershire for his commitment to prison for default in payment of a fine, but not backed by any justice of and for the city of Worcester. Worcester is a borough having a separate commission of the peace with exclusive jurisdiction, and a separate police force. C. was not pursued from the county, but found in the city :—Held, that the conviction was wrong, and that the constables were not acting in the execution of their duty in so executing such warrant. Reg. v. Cumpton, 49 L. J., M. C. 41 ; 5 Q. B. D. 341 ; 42 L. T. 543 ; 28 W. R. 539 ; 44 J. P. 489.

Evidence to Support.]—A warrant issued by a justice founded upon an information which discloses no criminal offence, cannot be sustained by proof that there was in fact parol evidence on oath given, which conveyed a criminal charge. Lawrenson v. Hill, 10 Ir. C. L. R. 177.

7. Orders.

"Order," what is—Compensation—Settlement by Two Justices.]—The "settlement" of compensation by two justices for lands taken or injuriously affected under s. 22 of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, is not an "order" within Jervis's Act, and the complaint need not be made within six months of the matter arising ; neither is it a decision by which "damages are directed to be paid" enforceable by distress within s. 140 of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845. Reg. v. Edmundson, In re (17 Q. B. 67), overruled. Reg. v. Edwards, 53 L. J., M. C. 149 ; 13 Q. B. D. 586 ; 51 L. T. 586 ; 49 J. P. 117—C. A.

Construing.] — The court will make every reasonable intendment in favour of an order of justices. Rex v. Aire and Calder Navigation, 2 Term Rep. 665 ; 1 R. R. 579. And see Rex v. Farringdon, 2 Term Rep. 471.

Evidence to Contradict.]—It is competent to an appellant to shew by evidence that an order was not actually signed on the date which it bears. Reg. v. Flintshire JJ., 15 L. J., M. C. 50.

Form.]—An order is void if it does not appear on the order itself that the justice had jurisdiction to make it. Rex v. Hulcott, 6 Term Rep. 587. And see Day v. King, 5 Ad. & E. 359 ; 6 N. & M. 845 ; 5 L. J., M. C. 130.

An order, made by two justices under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54, s. 16, for payment, by way of contribution, of a proportion of a rent-charge on a close, after stating that complaint on oath had been made before one of the said justices, of the several matters giving them jurisdiction to make the order, proceeded as follows : "and now at this day the said" (complainant, and the party summoned), "appear before us the undersigned justices, and we having examined into the merits of the complaint, do in pursuance of the statute in that case made and provided, determine, that the just proportion," &c., "to be contributed by E. W." (on whom the order was made) "in respect of the close" is, &c. The order then declared the amount of the proportion payable, and ordered payment :—Held, that the order, upon the face of it was insufficient, inasmuch as it did not shew any adjudication, express or implied, of the truth of the matters of complaint. Reg. v. Williams, 21 L. J., M. C. 150 ; 18 Q. B. 393 ; 16 Jur. 1065.

An order to stop up a highway must state that it is made "upon view" of such highway. Rex v. Rogers, 6 L. J., M. C. 106.

To reimburse themselves the amount of expenses incurred in respect of duties cast upon them by the provisions of a statute, the parish authorities of W. obtained a magistrate's order upon the county treasurer for payment. The order did not shew on its face matters from which the jurisdiction could be inferred, and omitted to specify the nature of the expenses incurred sufficiently to indicate that they were incurred under and by virtue of the provisions of the statute, but merely contained a reference to the year of the reign in which the statute was passed:—Held, that the order was bad, and that a mandamus ought not to issue to enforce it. Reg. v. Kent (Treasurer), 58 L. J., M. C. 71; 22 Q. B. D. 603; 60 L. T. 426; 37 W. R. 619; 16 Cox, C. C. 583; 53 J. P. 279.

An order of sessions must adjudge and determine the matter, and not merely state the evidence of the case. Rex v. Luffington, 1 Wils. 74.

A magistrate's order under 17 Geo. 2, c. 5, s. 1, for the payment of money to a person for apprehending vagrants, must be unconditional, and not merely to be paid on the order of the constable. Rex v. Rushworth, R. & R. 317; 1 Stark. 396.

—— Apprentices.]—The act of justices in ordering the binding a pauper child apprentice under 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 1, is judicial, and it must therefore appear on the face of the order that the justices made it within their jurisdiction. Reg. v. St. George, Bloomsbury, 4 El. & Bl. 520; 3 C. L. R. 550; 24 L. J., M. C. 49; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 231; 3 W. R. 170.

So, for binding a parish apprentice, under 43 Eliz. c. 2, it must appear on the face of the allowance of the justices that they were, at the time of granting it, acting within their jurisdiction. Staverton Overseers v. Ashburton Overseers, 4 El. & Bl. 526; 3 C. L. R. 562; 24 L. J., M. C. 53; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 233; 3 W. R. 173.

An order of a justice for discharging a servant from her master's service under 5 Eliz. c. 4, was void, and not merely voidable, because it did not appear on the order itself that she was a "servant in husbandry." Rex v. Hulcott, supra, col. 600.

Order of Petty Sessions Affirmed on Appeal to Quarter Sessions—Order of Quarter Sessions Quashed on Certiorari.]—An order made in petty sessions is not affected by the quashing on certiorari of an affirming order by quarter sessions. Suffolk County Lunatic Asylum v. Stow Union, 76 L. T. 494; 45 W. R. 620; 61 J. P. 328.

Order or Conviction.]—An instrument in which a magistrate states that a party was brought before him, and is to be punished in pursuance of an act of parliament, is a conviction and not an order. Gray, Ex parte, 1 New Sess. Cas. 354; 8 Jur. 1049.

Absence of Party.]—No order can be made in the absence of the party whose interests are to be affected by it. Reg. v. Totnes Union, 2 New Sess. Cas. 82; 14 L. J., M. C. 148.

Void in Part.]—An order may be good in part, and void for the residue; the court directed an order to be confirmed where good, and quashed where defective. Rex v. Fox, 6 Term Rep. 148.

An order of justices, bad in part, may be enforced as to the good part, provided that, on the face of the order, the two parts are clearly separable; and it is not necessary in such a case to quash the bad part of the order before enforcing the residue. Coley, Ex parte, 2 L. M. & P. 130; 15 Jur. 128. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Green, 20 L. J., M. C. 168.

Sealing.]—It is not necessary that an order of justices should be sealed with wax. An impression made in ink with a wooden block in the usual place of a seal is sufficient when the document purports to be given under the hands and seals of the justices, and is in fact signed and delivered by them. Reg. v. St. Paul, Covent Garden, 7 Q. B. 232.

Signing.]—Justices need not sign their christian-names at full length to an order of removal. Reg. v. Worthenbury, 7 Q. B. 555; 2 New Sess. Cas. 13; 14 L. J., M. C. 144; 9 Jur. 510.

The signature by the adjudicating justices is an essential part of their order, and the order cannot be considered as made until it has been reduced into writing and signed by them. Reg. v. Flintshire JJ., Roden, In re, 3 D. & L. 537; 15 L. J., M. C. 50; 10 Jur. 475.

The twenty-four hours within which notice of appeal must be given to the mother of a bastard child begin to run from the time of the oral adjudication and order of the justices in petty sessions, and not from the time of the formal drawing up and signature thereof, Johnson, Ex parte, 3 B. & S. 947; 32 L. J., M. C. 193; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1128; 8 L. T. 275; 11 W. R. 620.

A party having been rated to a church-rate, and refused to pay, a complaint was made before justices and duly heard, and on the 6th of May a verbal order was made for payment by him of the amount of the rate and costs. This order was not formally drawn up till some days afterwards. On the 7th a minute of the order was served upon him, and he refused to pay. After such refusal the order was formally drawn up, dated the 6th of May, and a warrant issued by the justices, dated the same day, which was not executed until October, when a cart was seized for the distress. It did not appear whether the warrant was drawn up before or after the order dated the 6th of May, nor did it recite the order:—Held, that it was not necessary before issuing the warrant that an order should have been formally drawn up under hand and seal, but that the pronouncing of the order on the 6th and the service of the minute of the order on the 7th were sufficient to justify the issuing of the warrant, and that the non-recital of the order in the warrant, and that it had issued subsequently to the disobedience of the order, being all only matters of form, the justices were entitled to the protection of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 1. Ratt v. Parkinson, 20 L. J., M. C. 208.

Correcting.]—Justices may supersede their own order when improvidently made. Rex v. Norfolk JJ., 1 D. & R. 69; 5 B. & Ald. 485.

If two orders are made by mistake at the sittings of magistrates, it is competent to them at the time to declare which is the right one. Wilkins v. Hemsworth, 3 N. & P. 55; 7 A. & E. 807; 1 W. W. & H. 10; 7 L. J., M. C. 28; 2 Jur. 94, 301.

An order by two justices, described therein as "acting in and for the county of S." for the removal of a pauper from B. in that county to H., also in that county, was on the same day suspended by them in consequence of the illness of the pauper. On his death a second order was made, by indorsement on the first, by two other justices, for the payment, by the parish officers of H., of the expenses incurred by the suspension of the first order. In this order the justices described themselves as acting "for the borough of B." This order contained no statement, in the margin or the body, of the particular locality in which the justices were sitting. The last-mentioned order having been brought up by certiorari, the court amended it, without costs, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 7, by altering the words "for the borough of B." to "in and for the borough of B."; holding that there were necessarily sufficient grounds in proof before the justices, sitting in their judicial capacity, of the locality in which they were sitting, to have allowed of their drawing up the order as amended. Reg. v. Hellingley, 1 El. & El. 749; 28 L. J., M. C. 167; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 626; 7 W. R. 413.

The justices at sessions may alter their judgment during the continuance of the sessions. Rex v. Leicestershire JJ., 1 M. & S. 442; 14 R. R. 494.

An order of affiliation omitted to state that the mother's residence was within the petty sessional division; but the summons, a copy of which was in evidence before the justices, alleged this fact, which was not otherwise proved:—Held, that the justices had sufficient grounds before them to have drawn up the order without the omission, and that on a certiorari to quash the order the court might, therefore, amend it. Reg. v. Higham, 7 El. & Bl. 557; 26 L. J., M. C. 116; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 691; 5 W. R. 507.

Delegating Powers.]—Justices at sessions appointed a committee of twelve magistrates to inspect the state of a county bridge, and to make any new contract for repairing or rebuilding, to be executed by the clerk of the peace on behalf of the county; afterwards they made an order, adopting a contract for rebuilding proposed by the committee, and directed it to be prepared by the clerk of the peace, which contract having afterwards been executed by the clerk, the justices at a subsequent sessions confirmed all the resolutions of the committee, and ordered the clerk to perform their directions in respect to the contract; the acts of the committee so confirmed are the acts of the sessions, and the authority given to the committee, and exercised by them, is not such a delegation of power by the sessions as will invalidate their orders. Rex v. Glamorganshire JJ., 5 Term Rep. 279.

Proof of Service.]—An order of sessions on the dismissal of an appeal against a poor-rate, that the appellant shall pay costs "immediately upon service of this order or a true copy thereof," is valid; for the order is a judgment of the sessions, and, therefore, service of the original, or production of it on service of a copy, cannot be required. Reg. v. Mortlock, 7 Q. B. 459; 14 L. J., M. C. 153; 9 Jur. 621.

On an indictment for disobeying such order, with an averment that a true copy of the order was served on the defendants, and they had notice of the order, and of the contents thereof, the prosecutors produced in court the minute-book of the sessions in which the order was entered, and a copy of the order on parchment, which was an authentic extract of the minutes, and they offered parol evidence that a true copy of the order was served on the defendants, and the contents of the parchment at the same time read over to them:—Held, that (whether the parchment was original or not) parol evidence as to the copy served was admissible, without notice to the defendants to produce the copy itself, for the object of the evidence was only to prove notice of the order, which notice the copy was, and, therefore, notice to produce it was unnecessary. Ib.

Effect in Evidence—Repair of Highway—Boundaries.]—By 34 Geo. 3, c. 64, where the boundary of two parishes lay along the centre of a highway, justices were empowered on information of the fact to summon the surveyors of the respective parishes to hear parties and their witnesses, and finally determine the matter by order apportioning the highway between the parishes for the purpose of repair. By an order, the justices recited an information laid before them that one side of a highway was in and repairable by parish H., and the other side in and repairable by parish W., praying an apportionment; that they had summoned the surveyors, who attended, and that they had examined witnesses, and they ordered that the highway should be apportioned between H. and W., dividing it by a transverse line. The order contained no direct finding that the sides of the highway were respectively in H. and W., but the statute form was correctly followed. On an indictment for non-repair of the part allotted to H.:—Held, that the justices must be taken to have considered the question whether or not part of the highway was in H., and to have decided by their order that it was; and that the fact could not be questioned on the trial of an indictment, the subject-matter being within the jurisdiction of the justices, and their finding of the fact conclusive. Reg. v. Hickling, 7 Q. B. 880; 2 New Sess. Cas. 117; 14 L. J., M. C. 177; 9 Jur. 1075.

—— Adjudication that Street is a Highway.]—An application to justices by a local board under the Public Health Act, 1875, for the recovery of a proportion of the expenses of sewering a street from the owner of premises abutting thereon, was dismissed by the justices, on the ground that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. The local board some years afterwards made an application against the same person for the recovery of a proportion of paving expenses subsequently incurred in respect of the same street, and a stipendiary magistrate made an order for the payment of such expenses:—Held, that the adjudication of the justices that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large on the first application was beyond the jurisdiction of such justices, which was only to make or refuse the order for the expenses claimed, and that, therefore, such adjudication on the first application did not estop the local board from claiming the expenses they claimed on the second application, and consequently that the magistrate might make the order which he made for their payment. Reg. v. Hutchins, 50 L. J., M. C. 35; 6 Q. B. D. 300; 44 L. T. 364; 29 W. R. 724; 45 J. P. 504—C. A.

—— Awarding Damages.]—W. was injured by the furious driving of the defendants' servant. The driver was summoned by the police, and W. attended as a witness. The driver was fined, and was ordered by the magistrate to pay to W. 5*l.* by way of compensation under the provisions of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 86, s. 28. He was asked by the magistrate if that sum would compensate him, and he said it would not, but nevertheless he took it. In a subsequent action for damages by W. against the driver's employers:—Held, that the order of the magistrate was a bar to the action, inasmuch as W. must be taken to have accepted the 5*l.* in full satisfaction of his claims in respect of his injuries. Wright v. London General Omnibus Co., 46 L. J., Q. B. 429; 2 Q. B. D. 271; 36 L. T. 590; 25 W. R. 647.

Enforcement of Order—Order to pay Costs—Default of Distress—Order for Committal.]—B. preferred an information against a company for not keeping a register of members. The charge was dismissed and B. was ordered to pay costs, but made default, and in default of distress, on a judgment summons, upon proof of means, an order was made against him for committal:—Held, that s. 47 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, applied, and that the order for committal was rightly made. The fact that at the date of the hearing of the information the company was in voluntary liquidation, that before the date of the order for commitment the liquidators had been removed and no others were appointed, did not invalidate the order of committal. Reg. v. London (Mayor), Boaler, Ex parte, 63 L. J., M. C. 29; [1893] 2 Q. B. 146; 5 R. 554; 57 J. P. 633.

—— Vaccination.]—Sect. 6 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, repeals s. 18 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, only so far as the latter gives justices jurisdiction to enforce by distress and imprisonment an order directing the payment of money when such order was made on a complaint that a sum of money was claimed to be due. W. was summoned under s. 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867, to shew cause why he should not have his child vaccinated, and an order was made on the summons directing that he should have the child vaccinated within a given time, and also directing that he should pay the costs of the order, and on his failure to do so that there should be distress, and in default of distress he should be imprisoned. On certiorari to quash this order:—Held, that it was good under s. 18 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848. Reg. v. Burrows, Wilson, Ex parte, 77 L. T. 338; 46 W. R. 29; 61 J. P. 724.

8. Convictions.

a. Effect and Nature.

Quashing at Sessions.]—Justices in quarter sessions, having by an order good on the face of it quashed a conviction made under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 8, there was a conflict of evidence as to whether the conviction was quashed on a point of form, but it appeared that the order was made after hearing the opening statement of the counsel for the respondent:—Held, that the court could not quash the order. Reg. v. Colam, 26 L. T. 561; 20 W. R. 331.

—— Matter of Form.]—Quashing a conviction on a penal statute, for mere matter of form at sessions, is not an acquittal of the defendant, so as to conclude the case against any further inquiry in the Court of K. B. Rex v. Ridgway, 1 D. & R. 132; 5 B. & Ald. 527; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 53.

Amending at Sessions.]—W. was convicted by justices for sending a diseased cow by railway, and fined 20*l.*, and the clerk, in drawing up conviction, inserted a clause, that in default of payment, W. be imprisoned for three months. W. appealed to quarter sessions, the grounds of appeal being, that the justices had no power to order imprisonment for more than two months, and the respondents asked the quarter sessions to amend the conviction and insert two months, which was done:—Held, that the quarter sessions, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 7, if satisfied that the word "three" had been inserted by mistake, had power to direct the amendment. Reg. v. Walker, 45 J. P. 682.

Defect in—Right of Justices to substitute Fresh Conviction.]—When justices have convicted for an offence unknown to the law, and have returned the conviction to the clerk of the peace, the court will allow a rule for a certiorari to go, notwithstanding that the justices in shewing cause against such rule return a corrected record of the conviction, shewing such conviction to have been properly made. Austin, Ex parte, 50 L. J., M. C. 8; 44 L. T. 102; 45 J. P. 302.

—— Before Filing with Clerk of the Peace.]—K. was charged with opening his premises for sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday within the prohibited hours, and was convicted and fined 5*l.*, and also 13*s.* 6*d.* for costs. The conviction, when drawn up, contained no clause of distress, but ordered imprisonment in default of payment. Semble, the justices might draw up a fresh conviction containing the clause of distress, any time before filing it with the clerk of the peace. Kenyon, Ex parte, 45 J. P. 303.

—— After Filing with Clerk of the Peace.]—Magistrates drew up a conviction and returned it to the clerk of the peace, and an action being brought against them, they put in the conviction returned (which was open to some formal objections) and also another conviction drawn up afterwards in a more formal shape. Semble, that there was no impropriety in their doing so. Selwood v. Mount, 9 Car. & P. 75.

Change of Opinion.]—Two justices convicted A. of trespass in pursuit of game. B. was afterwards charged with the same offence, and acquitted by two of the magistrates who decided the former case and a third. The former conviction was then reversed by two of the three justices. No conviction having been drawn up:—Held, that there was a locus pœnitentiæ in the justices, which they took advantage of when they changed their opinion. Jones v. Williams, 46 L. J., M. C. 270; 36 L. T. 559.

Validity—Offence not known to the Law.]—A conviction is bad where the charge does not in terms shew a legal offence, although the meaning of the charge was understood by the party charged, and was in a form used time out of mind in the court before which the party was so charged. Hopkins, Ex parte, 61 L. J., Q. B. 240; 66 L. T. 53; 17 Cox, C. C. 444; 56 J. P. 262.

—— Warrant illegally issued.]—H., a police constable, procured a warrant to be illegally issued, without a written information or oath, for the arrest of S., upon a charge of "assaulting and obstructing him, H., in the discharge of his duty." Upon such warrant S. was arrested and brought before justices, and was, without objection, tried by them and convicted. H. was afterwards indicted for perjury committed on the said trial of S., and convicted:—Held, that H. was rightly convicted, notwithstanding that there was neither written information nor oath to justify the issue of the warrant, and that the justices had jurisdiction to hear the charge, though the warrant upon which the accused was brought before them was illegal. Reg. v. Hughes, 48 L. J., M. C. 151; 4 Q. B. D. 614; 40 L. T. 685.

—— Two separate Offences charged.]—On the 11th of March, 1871, an order of justices was made on E. and his partners, in the trade of a dyer, to cease to send forth black smoke from a certain chimney, under the Nuisances Removal Act, 1855, s. 12, with liberty to the informant to enter on default and do what was necessary to execute the order. On the 14th of March, 1874, a further order was made under the same section that they should discontinue the nuisance, and that its recurrence should be prohibited. On the 1st of May, 1875, E. was convicted under s. 13 for disobeying the order of abatement of the 11th of March, 1871, and on the same day was also convicted of disobeying the order of prohibition of the 14th of March, 1874. Both convictions proceeded on the evidence that on one day black smoke issued from E.'s chimney:—Held, that both convictions could not be maintained. Eddleston v. Barnes, 45 L. J., M. C. 73; 1 Ex. D. 67; 34 L. T. 497.

An adjudication "for the said offence," where there are two distinct offences charged in the information, is bad. Rex v. Salomons, 1 Term Rep. 249; 1 R. R. 194.

D. was charged contrary to by-laws with emitting smoke and steam from a tramway engine, and contended that these were two separate offences, and the summons was contrary to 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 1:—Held, that the justices were right in overruling the objection, as emitting smoke was not the less an offence because steam was mixed with it. Davis v. Loach, 51 J. P. 118.

Where justices had convicted a person in one penalty for two alleged offences, and the conviction was bad as to one of them:—Held, that it was bad altogether. Bettesworth v. Allingham, 16 Q. B. D. 44; 34 W. R. 296; 50 J. P. 55.

The appellant was charged by two informations with two offences under ss. 3 and 4 of the Indecent Advertisements Act, 1888, at the same time and place, the evidence being substantially the same in both cases. Upon the conclusion of the hearing of the first information the justices reserved their decision until they had heard the charge contained in the second information; and, having done so, proceeded to convict the appellant on both charges, and sentenced him to a separate term of imprisonment on each charge:—Held, that the convictions must be quashed, inasmuch as the justices should have disposed of the charge contained in the first information before proceeding to deal with that contained in the second information. Hamilton v. Walker, 61 L. J., M. C. 134; [1892] 2 Q. B. 25; 67 L. T. 200; 40 W. R. 476; 17 Cox, C. C. 539; 56 J. P. 583.

Cumulative Penalties and Sentences.]—A conviction under 19 Geo. 2, c. 21, s. 1, that the defendant did "profanely curse one profane curse" (setting it out) "twenty several times repeated," and adjudging him "for his said offence" to forfeit the sum of 2*l.*, being a cumulative penalty at the rate of 2*s.* for each repetition of the oath, is good. Reg. v. Scott, 4 B. & S. 368; 33 L. J., M. C. 15; 8 L. T. 662.

When a party is summarily convicted at one time of several distinct offences, the justices have power, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 25, to award that the imprisonment under one or more of the convictions shall commence at the expiration of the sentences previously pronounced. Reg. v. Cutbush, 8 B. & S. 319, sub nom. Paine, In re, 36 L. J., M. C. 70; L. R. 2 Q. B. 379; 16 L. T. 282; 15 W. R. 742; 10 Cox, C. C. 489.

Several Offenders.]—A conviction of A. and B. for an offence, several in its nature (as an assault under 9 Geo. 4, c. 31), adjudging that they, A. and B., for their offence, do forfeit the sum of, &c., and in default of payment be imprisoned for the space of, &c., is bad, inasmuch as the penalty ought to be imposed on the parties severally and not jointly. Morgan v. Brown, 6 N. & M. 57; 4 A. & E. 515; 1 H. & W. 717; 5 L. J., M. C. 77.

A conviction under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 30, included four persons, and adjudged each of them to forfeit and pay the sum of 2*l.* each, &c., and if the said sums be not paid, that each of them, C., B., W. and S., so making default, should be imprisoned for one month, unless the said several sums, and the costs and charges of conveying each of them, C., B., W. and S., so making default, to the said gaol, should be sooner paid:—Held, that the conviction made each defendant liable to be imprisoned until he had paid the penalty, and the expense of conveying, not only himself, but the other persons convicted, and was therefore bad, and that this was not a case in which to exercise the power of amendment under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 7. Reg. v. Cridland, 7 El. & Bl. 853; 27 L. J., M. C. 28; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1213; 5 W. R. 679.

Conviction under Statute other than that under which Summons issued.]—A person was summoned under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89 (Towns Police Clauses Act), s. 29, on a charge of drunkenness and riotous behaviour. The justices held the riotous behaviour not proved, but convicted him of drunkenness, and fined him, under 21 Jac. 1, c. 7, s. 3:—Held, that the conviction was bad, and the defect was not one which could be cured under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 1. Martin v. Pridgeon, 1 El. & El. 778; 28 L. J., M. C. 179; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 894; 7 W. R. 412; 8 Cox, C. C. 170. S. P., Soden v. Cray, 7 L. T. 324.

Defect in part.]—After a rogue and vagabond had been committed under 17 Geo. 2, c. 5, to the sessions, and they, adjudging him to be a rogue and vagabond, had ordered him to be further imprisoned and kept to hard labour for six months, and to be publicly whipped during that time, and that after the expiration of his imprisonment he should be "sent and employed in his majesty's service, pursuant to the statute," &c.:—Held, that the whole formed one sentence, and such order being defective in the latter part for want of adjudicating whether the party was to serve his majesty by sea or land, as discriminated in the statute, the conviction was quashed, though the former part of the sentence, adjudging the "rogue and vagabond to be whipped," was valid. Rex v. Patchett, 5 East, 339; 1 Smith, 547.

—— Excess.]—A conviction by two justices under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, upon complaint of the overseers of a parish against the late overseer for refusing and neglecting to deliver over to them a certain book belonging to the parish, convicting him of the offence, and adjudging that "he should be committed to the common gaol, to be safely kept until he should have yielded up all and every the books concerning his office of overseer, belonging to the parish," is void as to the adjudication respecting the imprisonment, for excess, the same extending beyond what was previously required of the person convicted; and a warrant of commitment founded on this conviction, and directing the gaoler to keep him, in the terms of the adjudication, is void in toto. Groome v. Forrester, 5 M. & S. 314; 17 R. R. 333.

A judgment upon a conviction, to be imprisoned for a month, to ask pardon and advertise it, is void. Rex v. Collier, 1 Wils. 332.

Collusion—Certificate, effect of.]—Where a maltster had by collusion, and for the purpose of exonerating himself from penalties under the revenue laws, procured a conviction of one of his servants, for the same offence which he had himself committed, and a certificate of two justices, which operated as a discharge of himself, the court, upon certiorari, quashed the conviction. Reg. v. Gillyard, 12 Q. B. 527; 17 L. J., M. C. 153; 12 Jur. 655.

Award and Distribution of Penalties.]—Where justices are required by a penal statute to distribute the penalty on conviction among certain persons according to their discretion, an adjudication that the forfeiture "be disposed of as the law directs," is bad, and the court will quash the conviction. Rex v. Dimpsey, 2 Term Rep. 96.

The 42 Geo. 3, c. 119, against illegal lotteries, directing the penalty to be distributed, one-third to the king, one-third to the informer, and one-third to "the person apprehending or securing the offender," a conviction directing the penalty to be distributed as the "law directs," without ascertaining to whom the last third is to be paid (the person being uncertain), was bad. Rex v. Seale, 8 East, 568.

In summary convictions by justices of the peace, if any discretionary power is reserved to the justices relative to the application of the penalty, the conviction should shew in what manner they have exercised it; but where the application of the penalty is fixed by law, it is enough to say that they award the penalty to be applied as the law directs. Boothroyd, In re, 2 New Sess. Cas. 251; 15 M. & W. 1; 15 L. J., M. C. 57; 10 Jur. 117.

A conviction, adjudging a distribution of part of a forfeiture (which a statute says shall be paid to the overseers of the poor of the parish, for the use of the poor of the parish) to the overseers of the poor of a township, cannot be supported. Rex v. Priest, 6 Term Rep. 538.

Where, in a conviction, the evidence stated that a theatre was in the parish of Lambeth, and the adjudication of the penalty was to the poor of the parish of St. Mary, Lambeth:—Held, to be no variance, it not appearing that there were two distinct parishes so named. Rex v. Glossop, 4 B. & Ald. 616.

An adjudication by police magistrates, under 12 Geo. 2, c. 28, that the forfeiture shall be distributed as that act directs, i.e. one-third to the informer and the rest to the poor of the parish is good, notwithstanding the 32 Geo. 2, c. 53, s. 5, directs penalties levied before them, except the informer's share, to be paid to an officer appointed by that statute; for it presupposes a conviction under the old act. Rex v. Liston, 5 Term Rep. 338.

A conviction following the form given in 39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 15, was sufficient, though the name of the informer (to whom, by the statute, half the penalty imposed is payable) nowhere appeared therein. Reg. v. Johnson, 2 New Sess. Cas. 170; 8 Q. B. 102; 15 L. J., M. C. 7; 9 Jur. 1010.

A conviction under 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 41, adjudged that "B. had forfeited for the said offence 2*l.* 2*s.*":—Held, that it was not necessary that payment of the penalty should be adjudged. Barnes v. White, 1 C. B. 192; 1 New Sess. Cas. 504; 14 L. J., M. C. 65; 9 Jur. 181.

The 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 27, directed that a fine which may be imposed by the convicting justices for the offence against that act shall be paid to some one of the overseers of the poor, or to some other officer of the parish, in which the offence was committed, to be by such overseer or officer paid over to the use of the general rate of the county in which such parish shall be situate:—Held, that a conviction, which directed the fine to "be paid to the treasurer of the county of C., in which the offence was committed, to be by him applied according to the direction of the statute in such case made and provided," was bad. Chaddock v. Wilbraham, 3 New Sess. Cas. 227; 5 C. B. 645; 17 L. J., M. C. 79; 12 Jur. 136.

A conviction under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, directing the whole penalty to be paid to the overseer, to be by him applied according to law, is bad. Griffith v. Harries, 2 M. & W. 335; 6 L. J., M. C. 29.

A conviction for killing a pheasant contrary to 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 3, following the form in schedule (I 2) to 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, adjudged the offender to forfeit and pay a penalty, "to be paid and applied according to law." By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 37, and by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 20, the penalty is directed to be paid, one-half to the informer and one-half to some one of the overseers of the poor, or to some other officer (as the convicting justice or justices may direct) of the parish in which the offence shall have been committed:—Held, that the conviction was sufficient by virtue of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, ss. 17, 32, being in the form given by the schedule referred to in s. 17, though it did not in terms distribute the penalty, nor name the informer or the overseer to whom the penalty was to be paid. Reg. v. Hyde, 7 El. & Bl. 859, n.; 21 L. J., M. C. 94; 16 Jur. 337.

—— Borough Justices or County Treasurer.]—In the borough of O., a borough having a separate commission of the peace, it is provided by a local act that any penalty recovered upon the information or complaint of any peace officer or constable within the borough is to be paid by the treasurer and carried to the borough fund or to the police superannuation fund, as the corporation may decide. In an action by the treasurer of the county of L. to enforce the provisions of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43 (Jervis's Act), s. 31:—Held, that the effect of the provisions in the local act was, so far as the borough of O. was concerned, to repeal the provisions of the general act; and that penalties imposed by the borough justices for offences against the general law under statutes containing no directions as to the application of the penalties, were payable to the treasurer of the borough. Alison v. Charlesworth, 49 J. P. 294.

Committal on Nonpayment.]—The justices need not, upon the conviction, adjudge that if the penalty is not forthwith paid the offender shall be committed, &c., but may, after affirmance of the conviction upon appeal, commit the offender for refusing to pay the penalty. Rex v. Helps, 3 M. & S. 331.

The penalties imposed by the 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 118, s. 40, were directed to be distributed, one-half to the receiver therein mentioned, and the other to such persons as the convicting justices shall direct; and it gave no appeal to the sessions. Where, therefore, a prisoner was committed under a warrant of execution, which recited that he had been convicted, for two months, or until he paid a penalty of 5*l.* for an offence under s. 33, without stating how the penalty was to be distributed and to whom paid, the court refused to discharge him out of custody, as the warrant did not require the same certainty as a conviction; and the court was bound to presume there had been a legal conviction to found the warrant. Rex v. Rogers, 1 D. & R. 156.

A party was summoned to answer a charge of assault, but did not appear according to the exigency of the summons, and thereupon the justices heard the evidence in support of the charge, and convicted the party, adjudging him to pay a fine and costs immediately. The conviction, which was in the form given in 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 35, ordered the party to pay the fine to the overseer, to be handed over to the county rate. The fine and costs not having been paid, the justices, on the same day, before any demand, ordered him to be committed to the house of correction:—Held, that inasmuch as 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 27, empowered the justices to commit if the fine "shall not be paid either immediately after the conviction, or within such period as the said justices shall appoint," and they had ordered it to be paid immediately, they were authorised, upon nonpayment, to order the committal of the party before any demand, and without a summons to shew cause why he should not be committed. Arnold v. Dimsdale, 2 El. & Bl. 580; 22 L. J., M. C. 161; 17 Jur. 1157; 1 W. R. 430.

—— Civil Debt—Wrongful Arrest—Money paid to obtain Release.]—The plaintiff was arrested on a committal warrant signed and issued by the defendant, a justice of the peace, for nonpayment of a debt made up of a certain sum of money alleged to be due from the plaintiff to the local sanitary authority, under an order made at quarter sessions, and of the costs awarded:—Held, that such warrant was altogether bad, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant, as special damages, the whole amount paid by him to obtain his release from gaol. Clark v. Woods (17 L. J., M. C. 189) followed. Norton v. Monckton, 43 W. R. 350.

Imprisonment for Nonpayment—Hard Labour.]—The 5th section of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, authorises the infliction of imprisonment with hard labour for default in payment of a penalty adjudged to be paid by a summary conviction where the act on which the conviction is founded authorises the infliction of imprisonment with hard labour as a punishment for the offence. Reg. v. Tynemouth JJ., 55 L. J., M. C. 181; 16 Q. B. D. 647; 54 L. T. 386; 16 Cox, C. C. 74; 50 J. P. 454.

Whether a statute which authorises the punishment of an offence with a penalty, or in the discretion of the court, with imprisonment with or without hard labour, is an act which authorises the punishment of imprisonment with hard labour within the meaning of the exceptions in s. 5 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, quære. Reg. v. Tynemouth JJ., supra, not followed. Reg. v. Turnbull, 16 Cox, C. C. 110.

—— Fine—Criminal Prisoner.]—A. was committed to prison in default of distress for nonpayment of a fine of 1*l.* adjudged to be paid by a court of summary jurisdiction on an information under s. 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867:—Held, that the order imposing the fine was a conviction as distinguished from an order in its technical sense, and that A. was properly treated in prison as a criminal prisoner. Kennard v. Simmons, 50 L. T. 28; 15 Cox, C. C. 397; 48 J. P. 551.

Drawing up and Filing.]—Justices are bound by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 14, to lodge with the clerk of the peace all summary convictions which take place before them, in order that the same may be filed among the records of the quarter sessions. Hayward, Ex parte, Prall, In re, 3 B. & S. 546; 32 L. J., M. C. 89; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 820; 7 L. T. 622; 11 W. R. 259.

A mandamus does not lie to their clerk for this purpose, even though he may have received the fees for drawing up such convictions. Ib.

A justice cannot draw up and return to the sessions a corrected record of a summary conviction, after the first record has been quashed by the court. Chaney v. Payne, 1 Q. B. 712; 1 G. & D. 348; 6 Jur. 79.

Effect in Evidence.]—Upon the trial of an indictment for a nuisance at common law in carrying on a trade, a summary conviction under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 128, s. 1, for carrying on the same trade so as to occasion noxious effluvia, "without using the best practicable means of preventing or counteracting the smoke or other annoyance," is not admissible. Reg. v. Fairie, 8 El. & Bl. 486; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 300; 6 W. R. 56; 8 Cox, C. C. 66.

Trespass for pulling down a cottage. The plaintiff was convicted by justices for an encroachment on a highway. The defendant, who was a surveyor of the highways, pulled down the cottage, which was what the conviction referred to, but which was not in fact an encroachment within the meaning of the act. No warrant issued directing defendant to do the act:—Held, that the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 69, requires the surveyor to execute a conviction under that act by pulling down the encroachment, though there is no warrant, and that consequently the conviction, though not itself correct, was a defence to this action, as the defendant was shewn to be in the position of a person bound to execute the judgment of a tribunal of competent jurisdiction. Keane v. Reynolds, 2 El. & Bl. 748; 18 Jur. 242. 2 C. L. R. 245. See also Reg. v. Hickling, 7 Q. B.

880; 14 L. J., M. C. 177. Reg. v. Hutchins, 50 L. J., M. C. 35; 6 Q. B. D. 300; 44 L. T. 364; 29 W. R. 724.

b. Form.

Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43.]—The forms of convictions given in the schedule of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, apply to all cases, and convictions drawn up in such of the forms as are applicable to the particular case are sufficient. Reg. v. Hyde, 7 El. & Bl. 859, n.; 21 L. J., M. C. 94; 16 Jur. 337.

Before this Statute.]—The 3 Geo. 4, c. 23, gave a general form for all summary convictions where no form was given by the acts themselves, but it did not cure an omission in a conviction of the statement of a circumstance necessary to constitute the offence. Rex v. Walsh, 3 N. & M. 632; 1 A. & E. 481; 3 L. J., M. C. 100.

Following Statutes.]—Where an act of parliament gives the form of conviction for any offence prohibited by the act, that form must be followed; and a warrant granted on a conviction drawn up in any other form is illegal, and the justice and those acting under it are trespassers. Davison v. Gill, 1 East, 64. S. P., Goss v. Jackson, 3 Esp. 198.

A conviction stated that the defendant "unlawfully by threats endeavoured to force one J., who was then and there a workman hired in his trade and business of a mason by P., to depart from his said hiring, contrary to 6 Geo. 4, c. 129": —Held, that, as the offence was stated in the words of the act creating it, the conviction was valid by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 48, and that it need not set out the threats, or shew to whom they were addressed. Perham, In re, 5 H. & N. 30; 29 L. J., M. C. 33; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1221; 1 L. T. 106. S. P. and S. C., 29 L. J., M. C. 31; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1212; 1 L. T. 91; 8 W. R. 44.

A conviction on a statute, on the face of it not pursuing the provisions of the statute, nor shewing that any offence has been committed, is bad. Gimbert v. Coyney, M'Clel. & Y. 469.

If a conviction on a penal statute does not negative all the exceptions in the statute by which the defendant might be protected it will be insufficient. Rex v. Mallinson, 2 Burr. 679; 2 Kenyon, 384.

In an action against a justice for false imprisonment, who justified under a conviction under the Vagrant Act (5 Geo. 4, c. 83):—Held, that the conviction was not vitiated by the omission of the word "part" before "of Great Britain" in the recital of the title of the statute, as directed in the form given by the act. Nixon v. Nanney, 1 G. & D. 370; 1 Q. B. 747; 10 L. J., M. C. 134; 6 Jur. 389.

Held, also, that pursuing that form, it was not necessary to state the evidence on which the conviction proceeded. Ib.

The description of an act in a conviction, as having been passed in the 25th year of the king's reign, when in fact the parliament in which the act was passed was continued by prorogation from the 24th to the 25th year of the reign, is not a misdescription nor a ground of objection. Rex v. Windsor, 2 Chit. 513.

A conviction is sufficient if it describes the offence in the words of the statute creating it; and a conviction under 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4, was therefore held good which stated that the defendant "did play in a certain highway (to wit) the river Thames, with certain instruments of gaming (to wit) cards, at a certain game of chance." Grant, Ex parte, 5 W. R. 289.

The words of a conviction under a private statute (by which the right to a certiorari was taken away, and by which it was enacted that the burning certain offensive substances should be a nuisance) specifying the substances burnt, were such as might by evidence be shewn to include the substances mentioned in the statute, but left it doubtful whether they were within the act:—Held, that the conviction was good on its face, and did not shew a want of jurisdiction, but that a rule to quash the conviction would be granted if it appeared upon the affidavits that the substances specified in the conviction were not within the statute. Reg. v. Strong, 3 C. L. R. 76; 3 W. R. 65. Ib., 3 W. R. 73.

"Intent."]—Where an act is made punishable by statute on summary conviction, which act may be lawful if performed under certain circumstances, those circumstances ought to be negatived in the conviction. When the proof must negative such circumstances, the allegation in the conviction ought to do the same; and in such cases a statement of the offence in the terms of the act creating it is not sufficient. Fletcher v. Calthrop, 1 New Sess. Cas. 529; 6 Q. B. 880; 14 L. J., Q. B. 95; 9 Jur. 205.

The 9 Geo. 4, c. 69, s. 1, gives a summary conviction if any person "shall by night unlawfully enter or be in any land, either open or inclosed, with any gun, &c., for the purpose of taking and destroying game." A conviction setting forth that C. did by night "unlawfully enter certain inclosed land, with a net, for the purpose of taking game, to wit, partridges and pheasants, contrary to the form of the statute," is bad, for not stating the intent to be to take game there Ib.

The 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 106, enacts that al agreements, in writing or not, by any journeymen manufacturers, for controlling any person carrying on any manufacture, in the conduct thereof, &c., shall be illegal; and it gives a summary form of conviction, in which the offence is required to be stated:—Held, that a conviction alleging generally that the defendants were concerned in entering into a certain agreement for the purpose of controlling A. without stating what the agreement was (even if a departure from the words of the statute in stating the agreement to be "for the purpose of controlling," &c., instead of "for controlling," &c., would not at any rate have been a fatal variance), was bad. Rex v. Neild, 6 East, 417; 2 Smith, 417.

The 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 106, s. 4, enacts that all persons who shall attend any meeting had or held for the purpose of making or entering into any contract, &c., by that act declared to be illegal, or of entering into any combination for any purpose declared by that act to be illegal: —Held, that a conviction for attending a meeting "for the purpose" of carrying on a combination "for the purpose" of obtaining an advance of wages, correctly described the offence by the words "for the purpose," though the description of the offence referred to in the 4th section was described in the 3rd section to be "any combination to obtain," the words "for the purpose" and "to obtain" being synonymous.

Rex v. Ridgway, 1 D. & R. 132; 5 B. & Ald. 527; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 53.

"Knowledge."]—The 36 Geo. 3, c. 60, s. 2, directs that no person shall expose to sale metal buttons marked with the word "gilt" (the same not being really gilt), knowing the same not to be gilt, under a certain penalty; a conviction, charging that the defendants did the act unlawfully and fraudulently, contrary to the form of the statute, was bad, without an express charge that they did it knowingly; and such defect was not aided by a proviso in the statute, "that no conviction for any offence in the act should be set aside for want of form, or through the mistake of any fact, circumstance or other matter, provided the material facts alleged were proved"; for this, in effect, required all material facts to be alleged, and knowledge was a material fact to constitute such an offence. Rex v. Jukes, 8 Term Rep. 536; 5 R. R. 445.

Uncertainty—Alternative Offences.]—A conviction, stating an offence to have been committed in the alternative, is bad. Rex v. Sadler, 2 Chit. 519.

Therefore, a conviction on 6 Geo. 4, c. 108, s. 49, for being on board a boat liable to forfeiture by s. 3, and having casks attached thereto, "of the description used, or intended to be used, for the smuggling of spirits," was quashed for uncertainty. Rex v. Pain, 7 D. & R. 678; 5 B. & C. 251; 29 R. R. 231.

A defendant may be convicted of several offences in the same conviction. Rex v. Swallow, 8 Term Rep. 284.

A conviction on the excise laws against H. & Co. could not be supported. Rex v. Harrison, 8 Term Rep. 508; 5 R. R. 424.

A conviction under 48 Geo. 3, c. 143, for selling beer or ale without an excise licence is bad. Rex v. North, 6 D. & R. 143; 28 R. R. 538.

A by-law of the Board of Trade for the regulation of a steam tramway provided that "no smoke or steam shall be emitted from the engines so as to constitute any reasonable ground of complaint to the passengers or the public," under a penalty:—Held, that an information and conviction for permitting smoke to escape from an engine "contrary to the by-laws of the Board of Trade," was bad. Cotterill v. Lemprière, 59 L. J., M. C. 133; 24 Q. B. D. 634; 62 L. T. 695; 17 Cox, C. C. 97; 54 J. P. 583.

Surplusage.]—Surplusage does not vitiate a conviction. Rex v. Jefferies, 4 Term Rep. 767.

If a conviction under 31 Geo. 3, c. 21, s. 4, which enacts that all convictions against that act may be made out "in the form or to the effect following" (giving the form), contain all the substantial parts of that prescribed, it is good though it also contains something more. Ib.

If a convicting magistrate gives a proper date to the time of the conviction, upon the face of it, and afterwards adds an impossible date to the time when he set his hand and seal to the conviction (being before the offence committed), the latter may be rejected as surplusage. Rex v. Picton, 2 East, 195.

Conviction or Order.]—An instrument, in which a magistrate states that a party was brought before him, and is to be punished in pursuance of an act of parliament, is a conviction, and not an order. Gray, Ex parte, 1 New Sess. Cas. 354; 8 Jur. 1049.

Conviction or Warrant.]—The return to a habeas corpus to bring up B., shewed as the cause of B.'s detention a warrant by a justice which recited in the past tense that "B. was this day convicted before me" of an offence against the 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, "and I the same justice adjudged that B. should be committed for two months with hard labour," and the warrant then in the present tense commanded the constables to take and the gaoler to receive B. The warrant did not set forth the evidence nor state that it was taken in the prisoner's presence or on oath:—Held, that under the 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, the conviction and warrant might be in one instrument, but might also be separate; that the instrument was not a conviction but a warrant founded on a previous conviction, and was therefore good in form. Bailey, In re, 3 El. & Bl. 607; 23 L. J., M. C. 161; 18 Jur. 930.

Statement of Information before 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43.]—It might be stated in a conviction, that the informer "came and gave the justice to be informed," in the past tense. Rex v. Hall, 1 Term Rep. 320.

It was not necessary, in a conviction under 39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 15, that the information should be in the name of the attorney or solicitor general. Reg. v. Johnson, 2 New Sess. Cas. 170; 8 Q. B. 102; 15 L. J., M. C. 7; 9 Jur. 1010.

On an information for vagrancy, a conviction stated, that the plaintiff, having been brought before a justice of the peace, upon an information charging him with having unlawfully returned to his parish, without a certificate, from which he had been legally removed, confessed himself guilty of the offence:—Held, that the conviction was good upon the face of it, without stating in it an express act of vagrancy, it being necessary for the party convicted to shew in his defence that he had a sufficient excuse for returning, and that he did not return in a state of pauperism. Mann v. Davers, 3 B. & Ald. 103.

Evidence.]—It was necessary to set out the evidence upon a conviction, that the court might judge whether the justices had done right. Rex v. Killett, 4 Burr. 2063.

And a conviction was bad, unless it set forth the evidence. Rex v. Read, 2 Dougl. 486.

And the whole of the evidence both for and against the defendant. Rex v. Clarke, 8 Term Rep. 220.

But in a conviction under the Vagrant Act (5 Geo. 4, c. 33), which purports to pursue the form given by that act, it is not necessary to set out the evidence. Nixon v. Nanney, 1 G. & D. 370; 1 Q. B. 747; 10 L. J., M. C. 134; 6 Jur. 389.

The justice is the sole judge of the weight of the evidence given before him; and the court will not examine whether or not he has drawn a right conclusion from the evidence; but if no evidence appeared on the conviction to support a material part of the information, the court would quash the conviction. Rex v. Smith, 8 Term Rep. 588.

Oaths of Witnesses.]—It was not necessary to state how the witnesses were sworn. Rex v. Selway, 2 Chit. 522.

The conviction need not state that the magistrate had authority to administer the oath. Rex v. Picton, 2 East, 195.

A conviction stating, after the appearance and plea of the defendant, that divers credible witnesses, to wit, A., B., C., &c., came before the justices, upon their several oaths to them severally and respectively, and in the presence of the said A., B., C., &c., duly administered, substantially shewed that such oaths were administered to the witnesses in the presence of the justices. Rex v. Glossop, 4 B. & Ald. 616.

In a conviction for causing to be acted, at the Coburg Theatre, a certain entertainment of the stage called "Richard the Third," for gain and reward, the evidence stated that the defendant was seen once or twice at the rehearsals of that play, that another person was stage-manager, and that the defendant engaged a person to perform that character, and gave him a cheque for the amount of his benefit:—Held, that this was sufficient to warrant the justices to conclude that the defendant caused the play of "Richard the Third" to be performed there. Ib.

A conviction, after stating the evidence, stating, "thereupon the defendant, on, &c., at, &c., before me, &c., by the oath of one credible witness, according to the form of the statute, is convicted," is an adjudication of the justice that he was convicted of the offence. Rex v. Thompson, 2 Term Rep. 18.

Where a conviction under 3 Geo. 4, c. 110, stated that A. was duly convicted before the justice of having been found "carrying and conveying" brandy liable to seizure, without stating that he had been convicted of that offence "upon the oath of a credible witness":—Held, that the conviction was bad. Aldridge, Ex parte, 4 D. & R. 83; 2 B. & C. 600.

By 1 Jac. 1, c. 9, s. 2, an innkeeper permitting an inhabitant of the parish to tipple, was liable to be convicted on the oath of two witnesses; that act having expired, it was provided by 21 Jac. 1, c. 7, that the conviction might be made on the oath of one witness; the 1 Car. 1, c. 4, extended the same penalty to the case of strangers, but required proof by two witnesses, as in 1 Jac. 1, c. 9:—Held, that a conviction appearing to have been made on the oath of one witness, against an alehouse-keeper, for suffering tippling in his alehouse, was bad, for not stating whether the persons found tippling were inhabitants of the parish or strangers. Rex v. Dove, 3 B. & Ald. 596.

Defendant's Presence.]—A summary conviction was bad which did not shew that the evidence was given in the presence of the party charged. Reg. v. Tordoff, 5 Q. B. 933; D. & M. 693; 13 L. J., M. C. 145.

But if the defendant appeared and pleaded and the evidence was given on the same day, the court would intend that the evidence was given in his presence. Rex v. Thompson, 2 Term Rep. 18. And see Rex v. Lovet, 7 Term Rep. 152.

Even though it was stated that the appearance was at A., and that the evidence was given at B. Rex v. Swallow, 8 Term Rep. 284.

It was also necessary to state that the witnesses were sworn, as well as examined, in the defendant's presence. Rex v. Crowther, 1 Term Rep. 125; 1 R. R. 162.

It was not sufficient to read over the depositions in his presence. Ib.

But if the defendant confessed the charge, the irregularity was cured. Rex v. Hall, 1 Term Rep. 320.

Statement of Time.]—Where a penalty is to be sued for, before justices of the peace, within a certain time after the offence committed, it must appear on the face of the evidence stated in a conviction for such offence that the prosecution was in time. Rex v. Woodcock, 7 East, 146; 3 Smith, 286.

Where it appeared on the face of a conviction for an offence against the excise laws, that the plaintiff had been summoned on the 20th September to appear before a justice on the 30th September; and he not appearing on that day, that the magistrate proceeded to hear evidence, and convicted him in a penalty of 5*l.*:—Held, that the conviction was null and void, and the magistrate liable to an action for issuing a distress warrant, as the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 51, s. 19, required that "ten days notice at least" should be given to the party to appear; and the rule is inflexible to construe such limitation of time as ten clear days. Mitchell v. Foster, 4 P. & D. 150; 12 A. & E. 472; 9 D. P. C. 527; 5 Jur. 70.

—— Where continuing Offence.]—An information charged A., under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 119, s. 3, for that on the 5th of October, A.D. 1860, and on divers other days and times between the 5th of October and the time of laying the information (November 16), being the occupier of a house, he knowingly and wilfully opened, kept and used the same for the purpose of his betting with persons resorting thereto. He was convicted of opening, keeping and using the house for the purpose aforesaid on the 8th November:—Held, that whether or not the information correctly laid the offence as being done on the 5th of October and on divers days and times, yet that the defect, if any, was cured by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 1. Onley v. Gee, 30 L. J., M. C. 222; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 570; 4 L. T. 338; 9 W. R. 662.

—— Occupation.]—A conviction on 42 Geo. 3, c. 38, s. 30, stated that R. P. informed the justices "that, at the time of committing the alleged offence, the defendant was a maltster, and that he, on the 12th May, then last past, surveyed the malthouse of the defendant, and found a floor of malt in operation very wet, &c., and the witness merely said that he surveyed the said malthouse with the said R. P." Upon its being objected that this evidence did not prove the defendant to have been a maltster at the time of the offence committed, inasmuch as the statement that the defendant was a maltster might refer to the day of examination:—Held, that such statement was sufficient primâ facie evidence that the defendant was at that time a maltster, for otherwise it could not properly be called his malthouse, nor had the officer any authority to survey. Rex v. Crisp, 7 East, 389; 3 Smith, 377.

Statement of Place.]—A conviction purporting to be made by a justice "at the public office in Great Marlborough Street, in," &c., did not sufficiently denote it to have been made by one of the police magistrates under 42 Geo. 3, c. 76. Rex v. Seale, 8 East, 568.

—— Jurisdiction.]—A conviction of a journeyman calico printer upon the 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 106 and 41 Geo. 3, c. 106, and 41 Geo. 3, c. 38, for refusing to work, &c., was bad, for want of stating that his refusal to work, &c., was made within the jurisdiction of the convicting magistrates. Rex v. Hazell, 13 East, 139.

The 12 Car. 2, c. 24, s. 45, giving summary jurisdiction in offences against the excise, committed within the limits of the chief office of excise in London, to the chief commissioners, &c.; and "within all or any other the counties, cities, &c., within this kingdom, &c., to two or more justices of the peace residing near to the place where such offence shall be committed"; must be understood to be confined to justices of the peace of the county, &c., wherein the offence was committed: and therefore, if a person was convicted by two resident justices of the peace under 19 Geo. 3, c. 50, s. 2, for having in his custody and possession a private and concealed still for illicit distillation, and the evidence only shewed that his house was in the county, and that the still was found concealed in the garden of the house, such garden not appearing to be in the same county, the conviction was bad. Rex v. Chandler, 14 East, 267.

Adjudication.]—If a conviction does not state an adjudication, it cannot be supported whether the punishment is or is not freed by statutes. Rex v. Harris, 7 Term Rep. 238.

c. Costs.

Payment of Parties.]—The 18 Geo. 3, c. 19, only applied to cases where there was a party complaining and a party complained against, and the complaint had been heard and adjudicated on by the justices. George v. Chambers, 11 M. & W. 149; 2 D. (N.S.) 783; 12 L. J., M. C. 94; 7 Jur. 836.
